To the INHABITANTS OF THE TOWN OF PLIMMOUTH in DEVON,
Who were the late Charge and Auditory of the once laborious and now happy Author.

Tis my affliction and it may be yours, that a work both soundly delivered and composed should be imperfectly published and presented to you. Had the same hand compleated it, though the matter would not have been mended by it, yet the expression might. However as curt and plain as it is, it will not be the lesse profitable or instructive to you. It may be and it is the Churches comfort that its Head hath made a provission for it, its Prophets may cease personally to preach, yet they shall not cease to teach it, their voice may be heard when their face is no more seen, & although they die they may live & speak for its furtherance and help for ever. The same Spirit may breath in and actuate their work which did their persons, and make the perusal of it as powerfully to strike the heart by the eyes as when it past thorough the ears to it. In the confidence of this, was you able and of you tender Pastor, not only declaring to you the whole counsel of God while he lived, but desiring and endeavouring that after his decease you might have all these things alwayes in remembrance. That you have seen and enjoyed no more of those helps he had designed and fitted for you, is both his misfortune and yours, the same envy persecuting.

ting his memory which did his person, and if it were possible (when what blunts the edge of it to others sharpens it here) would pursue him, though past its reach, into the other world. This hath not however neither shall it discourage me from the perfecting of his resolution, if the great Lord open a way to it. Until that be, you will I hope candidly accept what is here presented to you as the fruits of his love and of your desire, and I trust, not take it unkindly if I mind you of the progresse of his work among you; which though some have peevishly pickt at and impeached, yet have not had the happines either by Scripture or reason to better it; accusing thereby themselves of not being over wise or Able workmen, who fall a demolishing of an others apprehended defective building, and yet neither prepare nor indeavor to raise more proper and fitt super-structures of their own.

You are his witnesses that he was serving the Lord among you with all humility of mind and with many tears and temptations, that he kept back nothing which was profitable for you, but hath shewed you and taught you publickly, and from house to house, testifying repentance towards God and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ as the only means by which you could obtain salvation, and laying it as the foundation work among you. He thence cleared to you the whole mystery of Godlines, and raised thereon an edifice which may abide the trial, when the hay and stuble which others have built may be consumed. He largely opened the state of the Covenant, the excellency of the mediator of it in all his offices, shewing how every way fitt and able he was for the work and his faithfulness in it, in ruling, defending preserving the Church as their King, by a law and rule becoming him, discovering both the advantage and obligation of it with as great plainnes and accuracy (without disparagement to any) as any work of that nature doth pretend to. He was as full in clearing up Christs satisfaction, in the excellency and extent of his sacrifice, and administration of his Priestly office, as far as the word did lead him, and beyond that bound he did not adventure, least he should seeme to cite at his barre to give an account of his work, him, whose understanding is infinite. He likewise demonstrated how this great Prophet had, according to the promise, taught the Church all that which the father did command, in the power, truth and extent of what it ought to beleve and doe. As likewise the provision he made for succeeding ages, by the ordinances he instituted to be received by it. As Preaching. The Sacraments, Baptism and the Supper of the Lord. Prayer. And that of order and Government in the Church, as matters of its present concernment. As for the things referring to the future state of the Church till the Lords coming again to judgement, His master only gave him liberty to designe it, resolving to acquaint him more with them above. All which work though he did politely & largely deliver, yet he concisely and catechetically digested it, for a memorial to you and a help to your feed after you to be built up in the holy faith. This being a considerable part of his employment on the Lords day did not disingage him from providing you other helps for the understanding of the written word, which he labored to fasten on you as your onely rule for faith and work, so far were you from being troubled with or imposed on by the new coynd Antinomian, Socinian, libertin, &c. errors of these times out of his Pulpit. Your selves I call to witnes with what vehemency he indeavored to prevent sin in practise, and to fence you against error in judgement; The one by the Patherical discourses wherewith he entertained you on those Topicks which concern the aggravation of sin. The other by those those elaborate onesevincing the testimony given by the Prophets and Apostles, concerning Christs being the Messiah, and the light that God gave the Church thereof thorough out all ages. Bending his main force to dismantle those fortifications raised both by Jewes and Romanists against its intertainment, and for the defence of their own position that there is no typical Doctrine of Christ in Moses and the Prophets, no not a word of him in all the Old Testament; So that he not only laid among you but made good the foundation work thereby. All which peeces for the instructing and confirming you in the faith which was once delivered to the saints may be your quickning entertainment when God permitts. What light he gave you for the understanding of several portions of Scripture, and some whole Books, and making you knowing in them, may be imputed to you by his master as no small crime if you forget. What should I mention his opening those excellent truths treasured up in the Book of Psalms, which it is the Churches unhappines after his going thorough it with you, he had not the liberty to compleat according to his own model, of which if providence crosse not the work, you may have a specimen subjoynd His weighty discourses on the whole Epistle to the Romans which perished before he fell himself. His Lectures on the Epistle to the Hebrewes which he finished with you. I mention not his occasional work, which is well known to have taken up not lesse of his time, then others (who think much of themselves) constant work hath done. I designe not this to magnify him or to depretiate them, but to shewe you the advantages you have had above many other Churches, and wherein then were you inferior to the best? I pray God your fruit be proportionable to it, and comfortable to him in the day of his meeting you before the Lord.

What should I now adde to you, but this humble and hearty desire and request. That you would peruse this work not barely for your recreation or diversion but for your profit, it may display and blow up to a flame those sparks which lay as in embers concealed in your hearts; and think it your concernment not only to be acquainted with truths but to use them. Continue followers of him only as he was of Christ, and cleare up by your conversations you have not received the grace of God in vain. Live as great things as you know, and convince the world that knowledge as well as charity doth not puff up, but edify. By your holy, harmles and heavenly communion demonstrate that the communion of saints is not a bare Article of faith, and a thing only beleaved to be, and not to be seen in this world. Remember that your body's and souls are not your own, but the Lords, for they are bought with a price, and use and preserve them, as those which are indeed the Temples of the holy Ghost; so made by his solemn possession as by your presentment of them to him. Honor all his own ordinances by your attendances, and try the Spirits and words whether they are of God. Let the simplicity of the truth in Jesus be your rule for faith and manners. Hold fast that which by the word of God you are confirmed is good. Value prayer, though this degenerate age laugh at it, and earnestly begge the Father to give you that Spirit, which he hath promised the Son to bestow on all his seed, and to those who ask him. Let the awe of God be alwayes in your hearts, and labor with him that vain thoughts may no longer lodge within you. The lying lip and false work keep far from you. In all your wayes adorn the Doctrine and Gospel of God your Saviour. Remember to keep holy the Lords day, and follow both the example and directions your pious Pastor hath in order to it furnisht you with. Make conscience of family prayer, and let it not be the aggravation of your sin that the more that duty was preſt on you, the more you neglect it. Charge your children and houſholds after you that they keep the way of the Lord in doing juſtice and judgment. Reproove the ſins of others with wiſdom and love, and where you are not capable of that, mourn and forrow for them. Judge not, that you be not judged. Love your enemies, bleſſe them that curſe you. Doe good to them who hate you, pray for them that deſpitefully uſe you and perſecute you. Render to Cæſar the things that are Cæſars and to God the things that are Gods, walking with a conſcience void of offence towards God and man. Live as thoſe who would be alwayes fit to dye, to die being ſent for and not legally ſummoned, becauſe you deſire to be diſſolved, not becauſe you muſt. This is all the evil rule that I ever heard taught you. And as evil as ſome men think it, if you truly walk according to it, peace ſhall be on you and mercy, as on the whole Iſrael of God. The God of all grace who hath called you to his eternal glory by Chriſt Jeſus after that ye have ſuffered a while, ſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, ſettle and perfect you for his own heavenly Kingdom. This he alwayes moſt importunately begs for you, who in him is obliged to be.

Yours to love, honor and ſerve you.

To the READER.

T was the judgment of the great Hottinger, Theſaur.
that, if two things in this age were obtained, Philolog.
there remained nothing, in order to the per- ad Lectur.
fecting of Theology, for the Admirers or Promoters of Oriental learning further to deſire.
Theſe were. 1. A Scriptural vocabulary Alphabetically ſo diſpoſed that the primitive and proper ſignification of each word might be ſiſt reſiſt register'd, and examples of its uſe thorough-out the whole context of Scripture ſubjoyned; which the figurative and improper ſignifications of it with its Inſtances ſhould ſecond and ſucceed. A work which required a due proportion of judgement, reading and leaſure. 2. The other was a judicious comparing of the diſfe-rent verſions, eſpecially Oriental, and principally of thoſe which were moſt depending on and genuinely iſſuing from the Hebrew, being followed with a collection of ſuch Practical inſtructive truths as did naturally flow from them.
And inſtancing in this Book of Geneſis, he wiſheth the expoſitor thereof would. 1. Succinctly give in the argument of each Chapter, in the entrance of it. 2. Follow it with the logical Analyſis of its reſpective parts. And that 3. With a Critical diſquiſition of the import of the more difficult words, comparing them with their different verſions, Calde. Syri. Arab. Samar. Greek. 4. Then ſetting of that interpretation which was moſt con-gruous to the context, to parallel Scriptures and to the Analogy of ſaith. Laſtly, Inſerring and deducing from the Emphaſis of each word, either as to its ſelf or context in due order what inſtruction was lodged in it. How agreeable the thoughts of our Author were with thoſe of this learned weighty and uſeful man will in the peruſal of this Book ſeem ſtrangely ſurpriſing to them who knew him utterly unacquainted either with his perſon or works. His Maſter had bleſſed him with judgement and reading enough to have ſuſtained the Church with the ſiſt help, yet his miniſterial imploymēt was ſo great as to allow him only the liberty of an eſſay in it. The other being of preſent uſe he did moſt induſtriouſly promote, both in the advice he frequently gave to others, and in his own exerciſing it, being not diſheartened by the contempt and neglect that this age caſt on it from concluding, the beſt Textuary to be the beſt Divine, reducing not onely his own knowledge but his practice too, to the law & Testimony. Had the neceſſary work of his office diſpenced with him, he would have been well contented that this Tallant should have ingross'd his time, and all might have been spent in the improving of it, but that his Lord had intrusted him with others. The fruit which yet abide's below discover's his employment of them, nor doubt I his accounts being as well pass above, as theirs may who so much envy the sweet savour of it here, whilst they lay up their own Tallant in a Napkin and work lesse. This is too evident in their frequent snarling at many truths he taught while he lived, and at some he bequeathed to the world when he died, which he delivered and hath left recorded (what-ever they publish) with lesse passion then argument; nor hath their reason as yet, of which they are so great masters, done themselves or the Church that right to convince it of the contrary. This Orphan can promise itself from such no better a treat than his former had, for so they threaten; to endeavor to satisfy whom as to what they may object against it, would be a vain attempt, they being before resolved not to receive any. But for the sober and unprejudiced Reader we shall desire to answer him as to some things he may on the perusal of the work suggest, and so prevent them. It is true the style as far as the matter would bear is quick and sententious. The omission of some little particles of speech may render it to the rhetorical peruser rugged, but to the plain not at all cryptical or obscure. It was his misfortune when he entred on the work to be unfurnished of some helps which afterwards he did obtain. Upon that account it is that for 46 Chap. in Genesis he pleased not the critical reader with the Arab. Syr. Samar. Versions and some Targums, which afterwards as any significant word did occur in them he did subjoyne. He had not then the happiness of enjoying the so much applauded Parisian Heptaglott, and that which was useful to him in it was only the Spanish Bible. By that time he had reached the 46 Ch. that laborious work of our own Polyglott Bible was published to the no little pleasure and profit of the learned world. He had his share in it, and the Church its part in the remaining Chap. of Genesis, and as many of Exod. as God gave him liberty to finish & are now extant. When therefore he adde's the epithite of Onkelos to the Chald. it is not that he had not made use of that version before, but to distinguish it from the Hierusalem Targum, and that of Ben-uzziel which he did consult and compare with it after. In the use of all which any person that peruseth his work will find that he studied how to profit and benefit his people, and as to any ostentation of it to conceal himself; on this account was it that he interlarded not his discourse with those learned languages, but only the genuine sense of them; and the reflections he makes on the Rabbinical fables, is not to disparage the usefulness of these Authors in other things, but to warn his Reader duly to judge of and to improve them. It is the publishers affliction that he could not attend the press, & though there be lesse faults committed then he expected, yet there are more then he was willing the work should suffer by, could he have possibly prevented it. He is not mistrustful of the Readers charity; for the misplacing of some Hebrew words in the margin, which are not many, and the general printing the English (X) for the Hebrew letter (V) in most proper names and words, with the miscarriage of some comma's, foliots &c. it, and he hopes it will ingage him rather to excuse such slips then quarrel with them. Other Errata's are subjoyned to the close of each Book to which the reader is referred for the removing. (If he think fit before he begin his perusal) these these Tillemmas he may meet with in it. If it fall into the hands of a supercilious Philosopher he may think it strange, and possibly be angry too that the author should passe over the 3 first Chap. and not produce his Cabbala, and vent some new Hypothesis to the world, or side with & plead for some already started in it, determining which of them had most right to rule it, whether the Prolometick Copernican or that of Tycho; as likewise what body of Physicks should by a divine right take place and be entertained, either the elementary, Globular, or the newly revived Corpuscularian. And that great Phainomenon be resolved whether Moses were not altogether Cartesian; It is certain he did believe, and would frequently in his discourse inculcate it, that the Philosophy which had so much puffed up the gentiles had lighted his Torch at the holy Lamp; and he was glad to see our own and foreign champions had put it beyond any further attachment, that that wherewith they made their flourish they borrowed of the Church, and least it should be found to be so, did by their mixtures debase and corrupt it, and that even the worthy's of this last age were not discouraged from rescuing it, and returning the Honor and Crown where 't was due. But in the mean time he never imagined that either these Chap. or the books of Job, the Psalms and proverbs, &c. were designed by the Spirit to furnish the world with a body of Physicks. He was convinced that they were capable of making those who would dare to converse with them, more wise and good, if not, to take the word vulgarly, more Philosophical, then they were; and was ready to submit his thoughts in this matter to those of the great rescuer and promoter of useful learning, who had before proclaimed it, that to seek philosophy here was to seek the dead among the living. Our author therefore meddled not with the threefold Cabbala to make the word more profliscall of mysteries then either the Spirit or Moses intended it, but hath as plainly & beneficially opened it for the use & edification of that part of the Church wherein he was concerned, as Moses had recoured it for the whole. The atheist, and Antiscripturists may complain, that he hath denied them their due in forbearing to answer their Sophisms, and to discourse of the Ark mathematically. That he was not positive and dogmatical in clearing what that Gopher wood was of which it was made, as likewise of what form and fashion it was, and what was the cubit by which Noah wrought in the rearing of it, that a vessel of 300 Cubits (not of many 1000 as some prate) in length, 50 in breadth and 30 in height should be capacious enough to entertain a world of animals and inhabitants with their years provision in it. The truth is he thought such a lecture altogether improper for his auditory, and though it might have pleased the curiosity of some shipwrights, it would have been as the speaking in an unknown tongue to the rest that heard him. And therefore as he was satisfied by what both critics and mathematicians had demonstrated about it, especially Buteo, (whose notion hath been since happily improved, perfected and published by the Rev. and learned Bishop of Chester, to the utter silencing of all their exceptions) he wholly waved it, having that special use of it as of all Scripture in his eye, that it was not designed to make men perfect in all natural or mathematical knowledge, but in that which might make them wise for salvation, and perfect and thoroughly furnished to every good work. And how much he hath followed this direction of the Spirit in it, I humbly leave to unprejudiced persons to determine. For others that may carp at pretended defects in the Scriptural chronology and geography phy as handled by him, we shall leave to them, if they can, to manage what he hath done with more reason and mend it. In summe next to the glory of God, his designe in penning and delivering this, was to help mens understandings in this part of Scripture and better their hearts by it. To shew them that if they think that Religion to be the best which can plead the greatest antiquity in the world, it is but as their interest and duty so their judgement to entertain the Christian. That that is the eldest what ever either Heathen, Jew or Mahometan can pretend. That there is but one way and tenour of salvation in the world since Adam by his fall made both himself and his posterity to need it. That the Gospel did not first shew itself in the reign of Augustus, but was as Old as Noah, and beyond him, for it was preached by God himself to Adam. That this one way to save souls had various degrees of manifestation. That Religion was not a State-invention to decoy persons into subjection and to keep them in it, but an institution of God to save them. That the regulation of it thorough all ages hath been directed by God himself. That man hath presumed to alter nothing in it, either by adding or diminishing, which if God himself did not injoyne him, he did reject. That he hath given the Christian Church as plain, fair, and full a rule by Christ whereby to manage all, as it can desire. That it is best to be as much wise and Religious as God would have us and not above or beside it. This was his designe in composing this work, and whatever any may suggest to the contrary, I assure thee was the weighty and onely one of publishing it.

The AUTHORS PREFACE:

here needs no armed prologue to guard the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. It is all-sufficient to defend itself against the powers of hell, and to secure those also who betake themselves to the protection of it. Only some things are fit to be premised & foreknown in order to the due explication of the whole body of Scripture.

I. The Division of Scripture.

The whole Book of Scriptures is usually divided into two integral parts. 1. The Old Testament. 2. The New Testament. Again the Old hath two known parts of it. 1. The Law. 2. The Prophets. All these together do but make up the revelation of one intire will of God concerning the way of mans salvation; and therefore called one foundation, or fundamental revelation of the Prophets and Apostles. Ephes. 2: 20. Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone held out by them. 1. The law, contained in the five Books of Moses, is the first copy of Gods will committed to writing, wherein is delivered. 1. The history of the World and Church, from the creation, for the space of 2500 years. 2. The Covenant of God then manifested to man. 3. A Prophecy of a clearer discovery of all this mind of God in Christ. Who was their Prophet whom God would raise up unto them like unto Moses, Deuter. 18: 5. 2. The Prophets are but a larger commentary on this Law, sent of God in several ages, to make out more of this will of God unto the Jewes, and to testify against their iniquity violating this law.

The New Testament likewise called the Gospel (because the glad tidings foretold by the Law and the Prophets are actually declared to be accomplished in them by the Apostles) is but the full discovery of Gods mind at first written in the Law. So is it said John. 1: 17. The Law came by Moses, & grace and truth by Jesus Christ. Which revelations of Moses and Christ are not contrary but subordinat. Gods Law is his will for salvation. Moses gave this at first more darkly, but Christ in the evidence of truth and the sweetnes of grace. We are entering upon the reading of the copy by Moses, which we shall better understand having such help from Christ.

II. Of the division of the Law.

As the Law hath been divided into three parts for the contents of it. History, Covenant, and Prophecy; so as to the form of compiling, it is divided into five books. 1. Genesis. So called by the Greek Interpreters, as declaring the generation or rise of all things. 2. Exodus. Which notes the going out of Israel from Egypt. 3. Leviticus. So called for that it concerns the Law of Sacrifices for the sonnes of Levi. 4. Numbers. Because therein are numbered the tribes of Israel, their journeyes, and stages in the Wildernes. 5. Deuteronomy. Which contains a repetition of the Law of God formerly written. All these are called the Law by the Holy Ghost in the writings of the Apostles. If any Book should not beare the name, the first of Genesis were most like to be unfit, but that also is called the Law. Gal. 4. 21. In the opening of all which, in this order we shall proceed.

III. Of the Author.

The Author of this Law was God himself who by his Spirit spake in Moses. Sufficient evidences of which are the following truths. 1. Gods visible appearance on mount Sinai. Exodus. Ch. 19. and 20. 2. His writing upon the Tables of stone with his own finger; as is expressed Exodus. 31, 18. 3. The Testimony of the Prophets that God spake unto Moses, and delivered his law to him.

Psalm.

Pſalm. 103. 11. 2. Chron. 34. 14. Daniel. 9. 11. Malach. 4: 4. 4. The witnes of Chriſt unto Moſes and the Law of God delivered by them. Mark. 7. 9. 10. and 12. 26. Luke. 16. 29. 31. John. 5. 46.

IV. Of the Penman.

The Penman of this firſt part of Scripture called the Law was Moſes, who is deſcribed in ſacred Scripture. 1. By his Genealogie. He was the Son of Am-ram, who was the Son of Kahath, who was the Son of Levi, who was the Son of Jacob, who was the Son of Iſaac, who was the Son of Abraham, and ſo the ſeventh from Abraham. Exodus. 2. 1. Numb. 16. 59. 1. Chron. 6. 1.
2. 3. 2. By the place of his birth, and that was Egypt, and of his education, Pharaohs court, being drawn out of the water by Pharaohs Daughter and ſo brought up in all the wiſdom of the Egyptians 40 years. Acts. 7. 23. 3. By the condition of his exile, 40 years he was a ſtranger in the land of Madian, being diſcovered for killing the Egyptian. Acts. 7. 29. 30. 4. By his call from God to be the Ruler of his people, and to bring them out of Egypt and to rule his Church in the wildernes. 40 years he received the lively Oracles of God. Acts.
7. 37, 38. 5. By ſpecial favour vouchſafed him by God to come up into the mount, and ſpeaking with him face to face. Exodus. 24. 12. and 33. 11. 17. Deuter. 34.
10. 6. By his faithfullnes in bringing the law from God, and ruling his houſe.
No ſervant could be more faithful, only the ſon ſurpaſſeth him. So witneſſeth the Spirit. Hebr. 3. 2.

V. Of the time of writing the Law.

This Law was written by Moſes when he was above 80 years of age, and as is conceived from the creation above 2500 years. The way of Gods revealing his will before, was by immediate apparition, and extraordinary manifeſtations of himſelf in viſions in the night. Why God did not give out his Law in writing ſooner, which contained his will formerly revealed, and is now to be the ſtanding rule of learning God, no reaſon can be given, but Gods own will. But that now the Law and the Teſtimony in holy Scriptures, is the only continent of the Oracles of God, the Prophets and Chriſt largely confirm, beſides what the matter itſelf largely demonſtrateth, Iſai. 8. 20. John. 5. 39.

VI. Of the Language.

The ſpeech or Language wherein this Law was written, all muſt grane to be the Hebrew, that which was natural unto and underſtood by Gods Iſrael, unto which all other Tranſlations muſt be ſuited; and from thence as needful that the will of God by Tranſlations ſhould be made out to all people in their own Languages; for which end, when God brake down the partition wall betwix Jew and gentile, he gave his Spirit in Tongues to make his Law known to all, Acts. 2.

VII. Of the uſe of this Law.

The ſcope and uſe unto which God intended this Law (univerſally concerning not the Jew only but the Gentile, not only for times of old but for ever Rom. 15. 4.) is, 1. To be a ground of faith, to hold out all things to be belee-ved unto life, concerning God and mans ſelf. All is written for faith. 2. To be a rule of walking unto all fleſh that they might order their wayes directly unto God, and ſo to be a ſufficient revelation for perfecting ſoules to life. So that this Law was not given to Iſrael only, but to all that ever have hope to God-wards. Theſe things being noted, in general, we ſee the Law is much our concern to ſtudy.

GENESIS. GR. LAT. ENG.

THE firſt Book of the Law of Moſes is called in Hebrew by the firſt word בְּרֵאשִׁית, in the Greek Chron. Noting it to be the Book of the Generation and beginning of all things. It containeth an Hiſtory of the riſe of the World, and the Church in it, together with the Doctrine revealed, Religion exerciſed, and the Government of all for the ſpace of 2369. Years, from Adam to the death of Iſaiah. The general reſolution of this Book is into ſo many Parts, as we find the ſeveral ſtates of the Church.

1. That which concern's the ſtate of inſtitution of all things, and the Church in it.
Chapters 1. & 2.
2. That which relates the ſtate of deſtitution of it, and corruption by ſin. Chap. 3.
3. That which point's at the reſtitution of it after the fall into ſin, and ſeveral providences in ſucceeding times. Chap. 3. v. 15. Chap. 4. &c. Many particulars will be noted in theſe Generals.

The firſt General hath two main Heads.

1. A relation of the being of all Creatures and of Man the ſubject of the Church. Ch. 1.
2. A deſcription of the World being of him by ſeveral additions. Chap. 2.

CHAP. I.

THE firſt Chapter containeth the Hiſtory of the beginning of the World, & the Church, finished in ſix dayes, is beſt divided into ſo many parts, each declaring one dayes work.

We therefore begin with.

1. The Hiſtory of the firſt dayes work, to open the ſpecial matters therein contained.

Ver. 1. In the beginning God created the Heavens and the Earth. Hebr. Text.

ings agree.

V. 2. And the Earth was without form (or was deformity) and void (or emptineſs) and darkneſs was upon the face of the deep; and the Spirit of God (or God the Spirit) moved (or did ſit) upon the face of the waters. Hebr. —
The Earth was inviſible, and unprepared, &c. upon the deep; &c. was carried upon the waters. Septua. Vers. — Wilde and waſt, &c. breathed on the waters. Chald. Paraph.

V. 3. And God ſaid, Let there be Light, and there was Light. — Sept. and Chald. agree.

V. 4. And God ſaw the Light that it was good, and God divided between the Light and between the Darkneſs. — Septuag. and Chald. ſame.

V. 5. And God called the Light Day, and the Darkneſs he called Night, and the Evening was and the Morning was the firſt Day. —
Septuag. and Chald. ſame.

In this narration of the firſt Dayes work are theſe particulars obſervable.

1. The Time is here pointed out, in the beginning, ſo it is to the letter; which expreſſion according to the ſubject ſpoken of hath a various acception. 1. As ſpoken of the uncreated Son of God it notes eternity, John 1. 1. 2. As ſpoken of the Creature which ſometimes was not, it muſt mean the beginning of being in time. So Chriſt notes the beginning of the World and of the creation, Matth. 24. 21. Mark. 13.
v. 19. In Wiſdom, Prov. 3. v. 19.
Pſal.

Ver. 1.
בְּרֵאשִׁית

Plal. 104. 24. Some apply this to Christ, by whom all things were made, John. 1. But it is strange to the letter.

2. The Creator is God, Elohim, a word plural, yet joyn'd with a singular verb. It notes the Almighty, & is a name of Power. Sometimes we have Eloah, and El, in the singular number. Some gather from this the Trinity of relations or persons in the Godhead. So sometimes is God called Creators, Eccl. 12. 1. Isai. 54. 8. It is a pious conjecture, but no great streffe is to be laid on the term. It is true there are three that bear witness in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost; and these three are one, 1. John. 5. 7. And every one createth The Father, Ephes. 3. v. 9. the Son, Coloss. 1. 16. the Spirit, Plal. 33. 16. &c. But the plural especially notes Majesty.

3. The Act Created, that is gave being to, or made to be out of nothing, or that which was contrary, or as good as nothing; Mightily and wonderfully made, such is the weight of the expression. Concerning which act note, That Creation is twofold, 1. The making of something out of no pre-existent thing. So (as to the material creation) nothing was in that strict sense created but the Chaos, or masse, out of which other things were made. Or 2. The formation of the several sorts of material beings out of that masse. Creation must be taken here in the latter sense; of the former, the Text gives no account (though it cannot but be supposed.)

4. The object of this Act, what God created, expressed in these three terms, Heaven, Earth, and Lights, of which in their order.

1. Heaven preceeds, The Heavens. The word is plural, and emphatical, intimated in the letter prefixed. In the plurakty are contained all the Heavens that are created, with all the Creatures that are contained in them. So that truly it is conceived Angels and the Heavens invisible were all the work of this day, Col. 1. 16. Acts 17. 24. These were not before.

2. The Earth, so expressed emphatically, whereof consider. 1. The state created, it was then the Earth, and it was not so before. 2. The state before creation, 1. It was deformity, or an informed thing, a suspensious heap. 2. It was emptiness itself, void of all good, nothing but confusion; Therefore when God createth, it is, that it should not be empty, Isai. 45. 18. 3. Darknes was upon the face of the deep. This noteth the sad condition of all before creation, there was an universal want of all that was good. Nothing but abyss or horrid deep. Therefore God is not said to create the Darknes, that is but the privation of Light, only God orders it, that it should not prevail to the discomfort of his Creatures which were to be created. It is hard to say any thing of this Abyss, but a confused nothing. The surface of the waters is conceived by this as some read, Plal. 104. 6.

3. The Light was created, it is a most excellent creature, whose Name God himself owneth. It is most comfortable to the creatures, the excellency whereof is scarce attainable to our knowledge, Job 38. 19. It cannot be honored more then to be a resemblance of God and Christ, 1. John. 1. 5. John. 1. 5. The elementary fire ordained to be uppermost (if there be any such thing) is conceived here by some (Junius) Light from it. 5. The manner of creation is expressed two ways. 1. The Spirit moved on the face of the waters, or fate upon them as a bird. 1. The subject of the proposition, the Spirit of God, this is God the third Person, Plal. 104. 30. Isai. 40. 12. Not any wind which is the motion of the aire, for that was not yet created. 2. The Act of this subject, moved, or covered over, or fat upon the waters, as Eagles over their young, Deuter. 32. 11. Brooded or hatched to use the metaphor. 3. The object of this act, The face of the waters, that is the Abyss mentioned before, or waters flowing over that confused matter. 2. God said, Let there be Light, and there was Light, where in is discovered, the Agent God, 2. The way of his production by his word. Plal. 33. v. 6. 9. and 148. 5. Hebr. 11. 3. 3. The effect, immediately it was done, and there was Light upon his saying it. This made that Orator say, he spake like a God indeed.

6. Gods Judgement upon this work done. God saw the Light that it was good. 1. Gods sight here is seen with effect, he did provide it should be good. He needed not review his work: But he saw and approved it. Verba sensus devotant affectum. 2. Goodness here is derivative, and stands in conformity to Gods will; Light was such as God would have it, that was its goodness.

7. Gods discrimination of Light from Darknes, that is, he put a distance between them; that they should succeed one the other, and be at their appointed times; Plal. 104. 20. 22.

8. Gods nomination of both, He called the Light Day, and Darknes Night, that is by his own institution he made Day and Light reciprocal; and so Darknes and Night.

9. The issue of all in the constitution of the first Day, one Day, to the letter. But read first: Evening and Morning are taken synecdochically for all the darkness and all the light, which maketh a natural Day; called one day, 2. Cor. 11. 25. The time of light, or that which is said to consist of twelve houres is the civil Day, for labour continuing from Sun-rising to Sun-set. Plal. 104. 22. John 11. 9. The former is meant in the text, And Evening is put before Morning, because darkness was first: The Jews thus begin their Dayes from Evening. The Chaldeans from Sun-rising: the Egyptians from Noon: the Romans from

The History of the second Dayes Work.

Ver. 6. And God said, Let there be an Expansion in the midst of the Waters, and let it be dividing between Waters to waters. Hebr. Text. אֶת־הַמַּיִם, a firm body, &c. dividing between water and water. Sept. Inter. אֶת־הַמַּיִם, a Firmament. Chald. in the rest the same.

Ver. 7. And God made the Expansion, and divided between the Waters which (were) under to the outspread Firmament, and between the Waters which (were) above to the outspread Firmament; and it was so. Hebr. וַיַּעַשׂ, Septuag. and Chald. the same. Only the Septu. leave out (it was so.)

V. 8. And God named to the Expanse Heavens, and the Evening was, and the Morning was the second Day. Heavens, and saw that it was good. The Sept. adds. Chald. agreeth with the Hebrew.

In the History of the second Dayes worke are related these three things.

1. Gods causation of the work intended V. 6. In the which occur.

1. The force he puts to it, God said let there be, &c. It is the word of his Power, coming from Father, Son and Spirit. Hebr. 1. Vers. 1.

2. The work it self, an expansion in the midst of the waters, an outspread thing. So to the letter. Suitable to this is that phrase of stretching out the Heavens, Plal. 104. 2. Isai. 40. 22. In the Greek it is εκτασεις. A solid firm thing. Whence the Latine calls it Firmamentum, and we Firmament. Now though the original word do not signify, yet such is this vast expanse, a mighty strong Partition. Job 37. 18. Pro. 8. 28. So that it is a firm expansion. An that extension is meant here, which is between us and the waters in the clouds, Amos. 5. 8.

3. The use of this work, It was to separate between the waters above, and the waters beneath it. Here begins order in the world to distinguish things; and we know, what a sad confusion there was, when God opened the windows of Heaven, and the fountains of the deep in the flood. This was to be a perpetual division or partition in the midst of the waters, viz. those forenamed, or the deep as it is called, V. 3. Some of these were gathered above in the clouds. Job 26. 8. Pl. 135. 7. The other under were gathered into one Place, as, Vers. 9.

2. The effect is related as God commanded it to be done, Vers. 7. wherein. 1. The cause is repeated, God made, that is, by his word. 2. The effect done, the expanse was completed. 3. The use and end of it to divide and separate the waters above from those beneath. Those are above the Firmament wherein fowl flye, Psalm. 148. 4.

3. The nomination of this work, he that made the expanse, named it, Heavens. By this is meant the subinary Heavens, where Aire, Clouds, Winds are, and Fowls fly, Dan. 7. 2. 13. Sometimes it notes the upper-Heavens, where Sun, and Moon, and Stars are placed, but not here; yet afterwards in this Chapter it is so. V. 17. Unto this is added the constitution of the second Day, and the evening was and the morning was the second Day. Both together made the second natural Day.

So that we may take these Notes hence.

4. The end of their Creation, and setting there, which is various in Gods expression. Ver. 18.

1. To distinguish night and day. The time of the Suns appearing in the Hemisphere of the Heavens is day, and the season of his absence, and of the appearance of Moon and Starrs is night. Ver. 16:2. To be for signes and seasons, for dayes and years; For signes, sometimes Miracles, as the standing of the Sun. Josh. 10. Its going Back. Isai. 37:8. Sometimes naturall as Eclypses. Psal. 65:8. Luk. 21:25. For seasons as to order Summer, Winter, Spring and Autumne. Gen. 8:12. Psal. 104:19. Arcturus riseth in September, and beginneth Autumne, Orion in December, and beginneth Winter, Pleiades in the Spring. As the Dog Starre in the Summer. But for any such signes, as some wicked Astrologers make of the Starrs, to do their work in foretelling voluntary Acts and events, they serve not. Such a Trade God utterly prohibits. Jerem. 10:2. By this likewise are constituted dayes Natural and civil, as years by the revolutio of the Sun. And these are established. V. 14:3. To be for light upon the Earth. ver. 15. which is a sweet comfort to all the creatures; before, God made Light, now, he sets it in these bodies, which are receptacles of Light, to yeeld it forth unto this world, as God doth order them, which indeed is the Life of it. 4. To give their Influences by day and by night, The Sun mainly ruling in the day, and the Moon and the Starrs in the night, all giving their several Influences for the good of the Creatures, and this is the Rule and Dominion which God hath given them.

Ver. 15.

4. The approbation of the work, God saw that this work was Good also, conformed to his will, and Great Idea, as he fore-determined it, so he made it, and now he commends it. V. 18. Then followeth the constitution of the fourth day, this work being done, from Evening to Evening, the Evening was the Morning was the fourth day. ver. 19.

The History of the fifth dayes Work.

Vers 20. And Elohim said, let the waters make to creep the creeping thing of a living Soul, and let fowl fly upon the Earth towards the face of the Expansion of the Heavens. Hebr.

Chald. The same. — Let the waters bring forth creeping things of living Soules, and Fowles flying, &c. And it was so. This added. Sept.

V. 21. And Elohim created the great Whales, and every living Soul creeping, which the waters made to creep in their kind, and every winged Fowl after its kind, and Elohim saw that it was good. — Chal. Same with Hebr. — Every living Soul of creeping things, &c. That they were good. Septu.

V. 22. And Elohim blessed them in saying, Increase and multiply, and fill the waters in the Seas, and let the fowl multiply in the Earth. — Septu. and Chal. Same.

V. 23. And the Evening was, and the morning was the fifth day. — Septu. Chal. Same.

In

In the History of this dayes work, these Particulars are recorded.

1. The Creator the same Elohim as before.

Ver. 20.

2. The Creatures this day framed, set forth.

1. In a general notation which is twofold. 1. Creeping things of a living Soul. Or Creeping thing and living Soul by way of opposition. The Creeping thing, the word used is from the active verb שרץ, which someread, Let the waters abundantly bring forth; to the letter it signifieth, let them make to creep, which notes both their being and motion, and the abundance wherein they were Created. So is it used. Exod. 1.7. and Ch. 8.3. Where speaking of the increase of Israel, and the frogs, the Spirit useth the same word. Now this creeping is applied to all creatures, moving without feet, or with very short ones, either in the waters or in the Earth. Levit. 11:29. Whiles wormes make their progress by the virtue and force of their mouths, the Serpent by his belly, the fish by their finnes, and Lits and such like things by shorter feet. Here properly it is used for Creatures in the water. These are said to have a living Soul, not the Life of plants, as on the third day was opened, but living by a Soul sensitive and locomotive, yet falling farre short of the living Soul of Man afterward spoken of. 2. Let the Fowl fly, under which a second General sort of Creatures are noted, whose being and moving is in the Aire; Now as Creeping thing in the singular notes all kinds, so here also the Fowl that flieth notes every bird of wing, and in this expression they are not only produced in being, as when they are hatched from Egges, but brought forth in perfect state and motion.

2. In their location or situation, which is twofold. 1. Waters, for the swimming Creatures called Creeping here is a general name; God only speaks these Creatures to be there, not that the waters had any causality in their being; And this sentence, let the waters make to creep, is equivalent with what followeth, let the Fowl fly on the Earth, which is only the place of these Creatures, not the Cause. 2. Earth and superficies of the Heavens, here hath God fixed these Creatures also, the expanse under the Moon is the place of their Flight.

Ver. 21.

3. In their specification. 1. Great Whales, sometimes noted by the same name. God made them great. See how he sets out this work to Job. Ch. 40. and 41. 2. Every living Soul that creepeth or swimmeth in the waters. This is another word of a larger signification than the former שרץ. Levit. 11.44. All the kinds of this and every of them were made with their motions. This is more proper to the watry Inhabitants, yet extended to Amphibious creatures also. Psal. 148:10. 3. Every winged Fowl in their kind from the Eagle.

to the Wren together with all their motions and properties.

4. In their propagation, created also. 1. To creeping or swimming Creatures, God said, Increase, multiply, and fill. (The v. 28.) the waters in the Seas. Three words set out their abundant propagation, and of all Creatures none multiply like to these, as is visible in their spawn. 2. To the Fowl or birds, he saith only let them multiply in the Earth, he saith not fill the Earth; and however by the decree of God these much increase, yet farre inferior to the former. 3. Gods Acts about these Creatures, by which only, without help they were produced, these are four.

Ver. 22.

1. God said, the waters shall bring forth, or swimming things shall be made to swim in the waters. It was by the word of his power. Verbum est Impetus Voluntatis. saith Basil. V. 20.

2. God created. V. 21. That is, made all these of nothing to be of their several measures, qualities and motions. They were not produced out of any preexistent matter of waters, as some vainly enough conceive making them to concur with God.

3. God blessed them, saying, &c. V. 22. That is, God spake good effectually concerning them, and not only put these creatures into being, but into the way of continuing their kinds, so that they now abound by virtue of that word of blessing. Gen. 24.60. Psal. 128.3.4. This was not given to the former dayes works. The Lights they were not to increase.

4. God saw that it was good. Here is his approbation as of his other works, as being all conformed unto his own mind. Ver. 22.

4. The Constitution of the fifth day upon this work ended. The Evening was, and the morning was the fifth day. Ver. 23.

From all which we conclude.

- D. 1. Fish and Fowl are not of themselves, their being had a beginning.
- D. 2. Abundance of these swimming and flying Creatures were made at the beginning.
- D. 3. All these Creatures were at first produced in full strength for motion.
- D. 4. Every kind from the Whale to the Shrimp, from the Eagle to the Wren were made at first.
- D. 5. Gods Word alone made these of nought without concurrence of any other cause. V. 20.
- D. 6. The water for fish, and the expanse over the Earth for fowl are places of sustentation.

D. 7. All

"D. 7. All these Creatures are good in their Creation. God calleth them so. V. 21.

"D. 8. Gods blessing in creation makes the propagation of these Creatures abundant now.

"D. 9. Every fish and bird is a demonstration of Gods wisdom and power and goodness, &c. Why then should they not lead unto him?

"D. 10. The fifth Day with the work thereof is Gods Creature. V. 23.

The sixth dayes Work.

Ver. 24. And Elohim said, the Earth shall (or, let the Earth) bring forth the living Soul after his kind, Cattel and Creeping thing, and wild beast of the Earth after its kind, and it was so. Chal. the same with. Hebr. —

The Sept. adds Tetragramma, and all Creeping things of the Earth.

V. 25. And Elohim made the wild beast of the Earth after its kind, and the Cattel after their kind, and every Creeping thing of the ground after its kind, and God saw that it was good. Chal. the same, — That they were good. Septin.

V. 26. And Elohim said, let us make Adam in our Image, according to our likeness, and let him have Dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the Fowl of the Heavens, and over the Cattel, and over all the Earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth on the Earth. Chal. the same. — Let them rule.

&c. over all things of the Earth, &c. Sept.

V. 27. And Elohim created Adam in his Image, in the Image of Elohim created he him, male and female he created them. Chal. the same. — The Sept. hath the Image of God but once here.

V. 28. And Elohim blessed them, and Elohim said unto them, Increase, and multiply, and fill the Earth, and subdue it, and rule over the fish of the sea, and over the Fowl of the Heavens, and over every beast (or living thing) creeping on the Earth. — Be strong over it for Subduing. Chal. — And God blessed them, saying, &c. And rule over it. Sept.

V. 29. And Elohim said, behold I have given unto you every herb seeding seed, which is upon the face of all the Earth, and every Tree which (hath) in it the fruit of a Tree seeding seed, to you it shall be for meat. Sept. and Chal. the same.

V. 30. And to every wild beast of the Earth, and to Every Fowl of the Heavens, and to every creeping thing upon the Earth, which hath in it a living Soul, every green herb, for meat, and it was so. Sept. and Chal. to the same.

V. 31. And Elohim saw all that he had made, and behold it was very good, and he Evening was, and the Morning was the sixth day. — Sept. and Chal. Same.

In this History of the sixth dayes Work are considerable these Particulars to be opened.

1. The efficient Creator.
2. The creature Produced, and that of two kinds.

1. Beast. V. 24: 25.

2. Man. V. 26: 27.

3. The Acts of God about all these.

1. Creation.

2. Benediction.

3. Provision.

4. The Approbation of his work, and constitution of the sixth day.

1. As to the Creator, it is the same Elohim, of whom we have discoursed before.

2. The Creatures produced of which we will treat distinctly according to the two parts of this dayes Work.

The first Part of the sixth dayes Work.

In the first Part of this dayes Work, which was the Creation of the Irrational Creatures on the Earth we may observe.

1. The work it self, and that is set forth two wayes.

1. By the Genus, (or generally) Living Soul. This is the general nature, under which Marine and Terrene Creatures are comprehended. This name is not given to plants, though they have a kind of life; but only to sensitive and locomotive Creatures. So that one general nature contains under it the living soul belonging to the waters, which comprehends multiplicity of species or special kinds. And the living Soul belonging to the Earth, of which also several kinds in special are here numbered.

2. By the species which are named and they are 3. 1. Some are of a tamer sort, used among men, that belong to herds and flocks, for plough, carriage, &c. these are meant especially by the name Oxen, Sheep, Horses, Swine, &c. 2. Some are creeping as if they did swim upon the Earth, as fish in the sea. The same word here used for both רמש. As Worms, Serpents, Pismires, &c. Creeping things of the ground.

V. 25. 3. Some are wild roaring in woods and wildernesses, and places remote from men, these have their name from life חיה. Because most lively, active and stirring. As Lions, Wolves, Bears, Foxes, Hares, &c. These in perfect strength, and in all their several kinds were the work in part of the last day.

2. The way of production of all these, Gods Word, and therein Gods Almighty Creation. He said, and saying Created, that is, made to be, and subsist without any concurrent help.

3. The Object.

Solut.

3. The place wherein, or matter out of which these creatures were produced, this is said to be the earth. It is here questioned whether the earth hath no causation, seeing Jehovah saith, let the earth bring forth? Unto which it is returned, No more causality is in this then was in clay and spittle to open eyes. If earth or ground were the matter it was extremely indisposed to bring forth such creatures; it was the same as to bring life out of death: so that we may look upon ארץ the Continent. ver. 24. and אדמה the indisposed matter of these Creatures. ver. 25.

4. The efficacy of this word creating, which put the Creatures in being, it was so. At Gods word these were produced, nothing resisted, but every Creature in every kind stood up.

5. The approbation of this part of the work done, God saw that it was good, that is as before. All was consonant to the will of God decreeing and commanding these Creatures so to subsist; and for good uses.

Quest. If question be, whether all creeping things that come out of purefaction, were created at first?

Answer. It is answered. 1. They may be said to be in the bodies potentially out of whose corruption they proceed. 2. It may be said, God did make their kinds at first; had determined the way of their generation; whether from corruption; or by conception. Either God sheweth he can do still.

Quest. Again, if it be inquired why God reserves these to the same dayes work with Man?

Answer. His will is reason enough to satisfy his creature, but yet farther, God respects a congruity of the general nature of things; so there was between Fish and Fowls, who where to be in places much agreeing in their general nature, and so their natures fitted to the places where they where to live. No less here, these creatures and Man being to possess the earth and live there, God was pleased to make all the inhabitants of the earth this day, as he did of the waters in the day before the; order of speaking of these creatures is changed in 2. Verses, which may shew not one after another, but all were produced together.

From all which we note.

D. 1. Elohim is the only Creator, or Alpha of being to the most irrational creature on Earth.

D. 2. By an Almighty word doth God create all the bruties upon the earth.

D. 3. Cattel, wild beast, Creeping things, from the Elephant to the Tisnire, are of one living Soule.

D. 4. These living Soules God commands to come out from the Earth, which is dead it self, as the originall, not as the cause of them. So he gives bread from heaven. Exod. 18. It is not so with Man.

D. 5. The Earth is the appointed place for beasts. V. 24.

D. 6. Not only individuals of creatures, but kinds are made of God.

D. 7. Its Gods peculiar to say and have it done.

D. 8. The poorest worm is Gods creature as well as Man. Sprung of the same womb of Omnipotency, we call them sisters. So doth Job. (Ch. 17: 14. and 25: 6.) challenge them.

D. 9. All these living Soules were good in nature, and in use created. Sin corrupts all.

D. 10. Much of God is to be seen and known in and by brutish creatures. V. 25.

The second part, of the sixth dayes Work.

Now followeth the last and great work of God, even the master pece of his Creation, Man. Though last in order of execution, yet the first in Gods intention, for him all the things were made as is evident by his commission over them, therefore it was no neglect of God to forbear his making until the last, In which History observe.

1. The Creator, the same Elohim, Father, through the Son, and by the Spirit, that doth this.

2. The Consultation about his making, V. 26. where in may also be noted.

1. The Consultation it self, let us make. God speaks thus in the Creation of Man only, wherein he seems to consult for the making of this Creature; which he doth not about any els, but only saith let them be, and they were. Much a doe men have made to obscure the light, about this plural expression, by whom, and to whom it is used. Most grant it to be the speech of God, as indeed with out impiety, it cannot other wise be conceived; as some yet have done by glossing it to be Moses words, which cannot be unless he were Creator. Some think the plural number is used as an expression of Majesty, as Earthly kings use to pronounce and write themselves, We, &c. But that stile was not in the World then. In truth comparing one Scripture with another, the Father, Son, and Spirit are in consultation here, and no other but God in Trinity of Persons, as he more clearly hath discovered himself, can be understood in this: the truth of which assertion appears by this second argument. 1. All here are equally workers, yea all must be the same God, for no creatures are called upon here to contrive or expedite it. 2. Whose Image here is one, their nature is one, but it is said our Image, go they must be one who speak. If it be replied. The plural number takes in all, as well as the number of three? It is answered, it doth so, but when God hath determined plurality to three, it is time then to settle and be certain, that there are no more, Matth. 28, 18. 1 John. 5, 7.

2. The Act consulted on, making, בעשה, let us or we will make. 1. Wisdom is carried in it by consultation. 2. Power, in that it puts in being. So that a wife and powerful effect is this.

3. The object of this act. Adam. Which is the name of the kind, common to both sexes Man and Woman. This name notes the original of man's materials, Red Earth, of which his body was framed, Gen. 2, 7. But carrieth in it the whole man, matter and form.

4. The form and condition wherein God made Adam, in our Image, according to our likenes. That is in our Image, most like to us. It is an Hebraism noting a superlative Image. Therefore needless is the dispute about the difference of Image, and likenes. This Image stands in representing God. 1. It is a made Image. 2. It is a true Image. 3. It is a very near and lively Image. Which appears. 1. In the spiritual and immortal nature of it. 2. In the rectitude of mind, will, affections, members, all pure and righteous conformed to Gods will, Ephes. 4, 24.

5. The end of this creature, and that is to be Lord and Ruler of all creatures els made, in the seas and earth. Herein consider. 1. The act of privilege, let them rule, or have dominion. 1. It notes power despotical, as of the master of a family over all in his house. 2. Subordinate and stewardly, not absolutely to do what he list with Gods creatures. 3. Plenipotentiary all just and due power is consigned him. 2. The object of the rule, the inventory of them, is Fish, Fowl, Cattel, creeping things, Earth, all the inferior Globe. but not the celestial one, Ver. 26.

3. After the Consultation is related the Execution of that counsel taken for mans creation, wherein.

1. The Creator repeated, Elohim who consulted.

2. The Act consulted, three times here repeated and the object variously specified.

1. Elohim created Adam in his Image, according to what he resolved, we will make man such, as before opened. 2. In the Image of Elohim he created him; that it might not be mistaken whose image it was, he doth plainly call him Gods image. This is in the place of likenes, so that, these be synonymous. 3. Male and female he created him; that is one man and one woman; no Herim; hrodit as some wicked Jewes gloss. Nor multitudes of these sexes as in other creatures, but one man and one woman, which Christ urged against divorce. This God did to make all men of one Original have a holy seed; other wife he had enough of the Spirit to make more. Mal. 2, 15. Act. 17, 26. Note heic.

D. 1. God hath made himself known in Trinity of Relation, as well as unity of being from the beginning.

D. 2. God the Father, Son and Spirit, put forth Wisdom, Power and goodnes eminently in making man.

D. 3. Man in his first estate, was a creature bearing the most exact Image of Gods rectitude.

D. 4. The Image of God in man was made, and created, not begotten, as in the eternall Son.

D. 5. Man in this Image was the best of terrestrial creatures, for whom all the rest were made.

D. 6. The Image of God resting upon man did fit him to rule over all the Creatures subjected. V. 26.

D. 7. God himself created this man, and no helper was with him. Vain such thoughts of any.

D. 8. One man, and one woman alone, did God create to make an holy originall of man.

D. 9. Mans originall should be his Copy for being, and conjugall condition. V. 27.

4. The benediction bestowed upon this creature now followeth. V. 28. wherein may be observed.

1. The greatness of him that blesteth, it is the Creating Elohim, that hath power enough to blest, as he had to make. This is the glory of a blessing, when it commeth from a mighty hand.

2. The form of blessing, he doth by his word, as also he created by the sameway, He speaks good unto the creature, and commanded it upon them, which was not without effect.

3. The matter of the blessing described two ways.

Mat. 19, 6

Ver. 28.

1. Tc

1. Generally, he blessed, which is a notation of good, he superadded some good to these excellent creatures which he had made.

2. Specially, and so the matter of it is in two heads.

1. Propagation, and that in three expressions, Increase, Multiply, Fill the earth.

The first word giveth power to propagate their kind, It is not Increase in stature but in number, and this was the blessing of the Creator upon man, that the one Adam, Male and female in a pure state of marriage should produce a seed for God. The fruit of the womb is his reward. This would not have failed in innocency, but mans sin brought in barrenness. The second word, is an enlargement to the first, That this propagation in a pure conjugall state should produce multitudes, as the stars of heaven; but God would have all these to spring from one root, and did not create multitudes at first, that man might be united within himself, and all nations being of one blood might be endeared, however sin hath now made one man a Wolfe against another. And however adulterous conjunctions bring forth a numerous seed, yet the blessing was given to the creature, not to the sin, however the wife God see good so to permit and order it to the hurt of the sinner. The third word enlargeth the multiplicity unto fulnes. Fill the Earth. 1. The compass where in they should multiply, is the whole earth. 2. The measure is to the filling of the habitable world. Sin makes inhabitable the world.

2. Dominion expressed in two words. 1. Subdue it. In this: 1. The limits of his dominion are the earth, in the utmost extent. 2. The act of dominion here, Subdue, be strong over it, as Cald. It is the bestowing of the end of his creation on him, spoken of before; Subduing is by plowing, tilling, and making use of it, as is more expressly spoken, Chap. 2, 2. Rule over, &c. Where. 1. The object of Rule, fish, fowl, beasts, and creeping things named, all those God made ready to his hand. 2. The act expressed, is to rule over them; wherein he giveth man a right to them, an use of them, and a command over them, This order of one creature above another is Gods own blessing upon man. If it be questioned whether such order of rule should have bin in innocency between man and man. No doubt but there was order created between Husband and wife; in which sense the Apostle calleth the woman the Image of the man, for in nature, they both had the Image of God. Neither is it to be conceived, that the God of order, would leave such a creature disorderly. Order is of God, Disorder of sin. And doubtles naturall power of parents on children, and of Husband over wife, &c. must needs have bin, but without all irregularity, and oppression.

5. The sweet provision which God made for Man and all other living soules, wherein are considerable.

Ver. 29.

1. The Provider, it is the same great Elohim, the Father of the family of the whole earth. Eph. 3.

2. The parties provided for, Man and beast, unto you, unto the beast, fowl, and creeping thing, all wherein is a living soul, an animal life to be preserved. He preserveth man and beast, and feed's ravens, &c.

3. The matter of provision, herbs and all their issue. Trees and all their fruit. Although here is no mention of feeding upon the slain creatures, yet if sacrifice were, as it was after the fall, as appears in Abel, there must be eating flesh then, however it did not appear before: Grass for beasts. Herb and tree for man.

4. The manner of making this provision, God gave it. It was all the sweeter out of his gift and from his hand, and this cometh with the blessing. And it is a great one to be fed by the hand of God. Behold, &c.

5. The last head in the history of this dayes work, is the approbation of all Gods works and the constitution of the sixth day. 1. The approbation as it respects all the works of God, but especially man, It is repeated here with an Emphasis, behold it was very good. Nothing evil or hurtfull in its own nature, but all exactly good. 1. In being. 2. In End. 2. All this done, the sixth Day is now constituted. The Evening was, and the morning was the sixth day.

D. 1. Elohim onely is the pure fountain of blessing He is mighty to do good. Hence God blessed.

D. 2. Man was not onely a good Creature, but a blessed one.

D. 3. Gods word brings home blessing. The word of power.

D. 4. Gods blessing is the cause of propagating man from man; not to detract from the dignity of the Creature.

D. 5. Gods blessing make's multitudes of generations.

D. 6. Gods blessing make's the earth mans habitation.

D. 7. Gods blessing is the cause of order among creatures.

D. 8. Gods blessing puts the earth and creatures under man, V. 28.

D. 9. Right to use and rule the Creatures is Gods blessing upon man. The world subjected by God, Man had need to rule a right. He is but trusted in this blessing.

D. 10. God would have man know him to be his feeder, & wait for meat from him, as be thankful to him

D. 11. Creatures are made food to man meely by the blessing of God V. 29.

D. 12. Beasts, fowl, and creeping things have meat from God.

D. 13. God provide's better for man than for beast.

D. 14. Gods real blessing certainly follows his verbal. It was so. V. 30.

D. 15. All creatures, but especially man, were very good in nature and End, as made by God.

D. 16. God would have men convinced of the Eminent goodness of his works, six times he repeats. God saw it was good.

D. 17. The sixth day, as well works in it, is Gods creature.

D. 18. In days and works man should study to know God fully. Therefore is all this revealed. V. 31.

Thus farre the History of the World in its Original, and the Sixe first dayes.

CHAP. II.

Ver. 1. And the heavens and the earth were finished and all the hoast of them. Chal. Same, and all the beauty of them.

Ver. 2. And Elohim finished in the seventh day his work which he made, and rested in the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God was delighted on the seventh day in his work. &c. Cal. And God perfected on the sixth day his works, which he made, and God rested on the seventh day, &c. Sep.

Ver. 3. And Elohim blessed the seventh day and sanctified it because in it he rested from all his work which Elohim created by making, Junius, or created and made, or created to make, that is ordained to make, as some read. which God created to make. Chal. from all his works which he began to make Septuag.

IN this second Chapter is contained the history of the World for one day longer, even the seventh day, which gave a summation, to all Gods precedent works; and make's up the first full week; whence some conclude even the perfect number. Its true, God make's use of this number many times not without a mystery, Here it is certain, he make's a full account of a week in seven dayes; which after single dayes is the next known distinction of time.

Two main heads are in this chapter.

1. A summary repetition of the precedent works and a constitution of the seventh dayes Rest. V. 1, 2, 3.

2. A larger Explication of some particulars in the former works, especially of the third and sixth dayes, which Moses add's as an appendix to the former history.

1. Of the wonderfull fecundity of plants before any raine. V. 4, 5, 6.

2. Of mans Creation, the male, V. 7.

3. Of his habitation, the description of it. V. 4, 5, 6.

4. Of his Covenant with man in this state. V. 16, 17.

5. Of the occasion of creating the woman, and ordaining marriage. V. 18, 24.

6. Of their sweet state in innocency. V. 52.

In the first generall are considerable.

1. The summe of Gods former works. V. 2.

2. The term or the full End of them, on the seventh, &c.

3. The speciall constitution of the seventh day to its proper use expressed, by three Acts of God.

1. Cessation from working. V. 2.

2. Blessing the seventh day. V. 3.

3. Sanctifying. V. 3.

4. reason of its constitution, because God rested. V. 3.

1. The summary relation of works past. And the heavens and the Earth were perfected, and all the hoast of them. 1. The subject in this proposition is all these works, 1. Heavens by which is meant all those bodies high and low, from the highest created heaven to the region of the aire, the very lowest of the expanse, therefore, the whole celestiaall globe is intended here. 2. The Earth here also notes all the inferior globe, consisting of sea, waters and dry ground.

3. The Hoast or army in both these are Angells. Luk. 2, 13. being those sonnes of God singing when God laid the foundations of the earth also. Job. 28, 4, 6, 7. So Starres also are the hoast of heaven. Deut. 4, 19. Jud. 5, 20. So all Creatures in the Sea, and Earth created, are Gods hoast in them. All and every thing that God saw was good. And they are called Hoasts. 1. From their multitude, and abundance, 2. From their strength, when God will use them. 3. From their order all being ranked as an Army, and each keeping his place: before sin disorderd all.

2. The attribute here is, they were finished perfected, or to the word, they were made all out; no defect at all.

Is it not said, thorns, &c. Gen. 3, 18.

Q. 1st. Answ.

It seems then they were not now made.

1. All that was good was perfected, so farre these.

2. Some creatures God make's as judgments on sin as he did fire to consume at Taberah. &c. Numb. 11.

3. These creatures, as good, were made, but the evil of them came in by sin: take hence these notes.

D. 1. Absolute and perfect is the frame of heaven and earth as it commeth out of Gods hand.

D. 2. Jehovah hath his Hosts in Heaven and Earth, many and mighty

D. 3. Gods Hosts should keep order in every part, and be subject to their Lord. V. 1.

Ver. 2:

The second thing observable is the term which put this perfection unto those works, And Elohim perfected in the seventh day his work which he had made. 1. The perfecting; is the same Elohim, who was efficient of all, He had no helpers to finish; to shut out those vain conceits of Assistants. 2. The act of perfecting is the same with the word. V. 1. He made all out. 3. The effect perfected, his work which he had made, which is comprehended in that Host of heaven and Earth, before named with addition of the good of them. 4. The time or term, of perfecting on the seventh day. The 70 read it on the sixth, it may be to take of some seeming objection, which might be made, that God saw all very good on the sixth day, therefore they were perfected then, so this seems to say it was not done until the seventh. But it is the seventh day expresse in the Hebrew, and doubles a mistake in their translation. As to the cause of scruple, that all creatures were finished day the sixth. It is true, quoad esse, as to their full being, Man and the rest were finished; but quoad bene esse for mans well or better being, in acquainting him more with his creator, and adding some spirituall good unto him, this is perfected in and with the seventh day. So God is said to perfect the work he had made by superadding to its being already finished.

The second particular sheweth more how God added to the well being of his creatures by constituting the seventh day unto mans speciall benefit. Sabbath for man. Mark. 2, 27. Where in three acts are recorded.

Ver. 2.

1. He rested in the seventh day from all his work which he had made, wherein. 1. Act, Rested, a word in the Hebr. whence Sabbath come's, noting rest, and notes not a rest from wearines, but a voluntary cessation from creating and bringing forth any more kinds, the Cald. readeth, he was delighted, or pleased; which may be an harmles paraphrase; only this is Rest from works not in them. The Gr. 70.

Ver. 2.

2. He sanctified it. This act is conceived to be swallowed up in the former, and onely an explication of that, being the way of blessing. Now as Gods act immediately, may very well be so; but looking to the end of it, which is, that it should be called holy by man, and sanctified, and the name of God sanctified by man in it, he having sanctified or set it apart for that purpose; It note's a ground of duty from man, upon Gods blessing of it, and making it a good day to him. So that his sanctifying is a setting it a part to be sanctified by man: that is spent in all holy remembrance of God & worshiping of him. According to that of the Prophet. Isa. 58, 13, 14.

Ver. 2.

use a word that note's resting, which also the Apostle taketh in citing this place. This word in that chapter is taken also actively V. 8. If Joshua had given them rest, &c. Whence, it may be, some have read here, that God made a rest for man in the seventh day from his works, but the word and other circumstances will not bear it in the Hebr. However, this act of God is exemplary to man in his proportion; and so carrieth some efficiency of this rest toward us. 2. The term from whence of this cessation, from all his works which he had made, that is from making any more Heavens or Earth, but not from propagating kinds and ruling and governing all creatures in the world. So the Father & Son work still. And this too, work and rest onely spoken after the manner of men. 3. The time of this Rest, which is the seventh day Emphatically set forth in Hebr. Of the former dayes is expresse onely the sixth; as pointing out an eminent day. The order of constituting this from evening to morning is not here recorded. The reason is unknown. But doubles the naturall course of this day must goe along with the rest, otherwise they would be interrupted. It is a pious conjecture of a never ending Sabbath. All light in this day.

Ver. 2.

2. Elohim blessed the seventh day. In this act there is something from God passing upon the time. That is a blessing. The blessing Elohim, he that made it. 2. The Act, blessed, which from God always notes some good upon the object, so that, Gods blessing made this a good day upon man, to bring him good, more communion with God, manifestation of him, perfecting those abilities given him. So the Church called dayes of saluation, deliverance, &c. good dayes. 3. The object, the seventh day, 1. Not onely that in the individual, but that day in its kind unto man for ever, which therefore he styles by the name of his rest, his Sabbath. This was blessed, is above all dayes made a good day for man.

Ver. 2.

own rest is the reason of blessing and sanctifying the Sabbath unto man, That when he had perfected all his works of creation, Man might now rejoyce in him. Gods ceasing in the perfection of his works is the ground of setting Sabbath unto man. Whereas it is said, that God created his works to make, it must be understood, to perfect, or he ordained to make, as the word will carry it.

Some queries would be answered here.

Quest. 1. 1. Hath this Constitution the force of a Law towards us? Was it immanent in God?

Answer. No. 1. God had no need of resting. But transient, for all these acts were exhibited toward man, and the day made for him. Mar. 2. 29.

Quest. 2. 2. Doth not Moses relate this by way of anticipation, meaning it onely to be given in the Law?

Answer. No, It cannot be by way of anticipation, 1. It is the very first seventh day created; therefore not meaning one in Moses his time. 2. It concerned man in innocency, not under the dispensation of Moses. 3. Its reason is from Gods immediat cessation from his works.

Quest. 3. 3. Was not this a Signe to Israel. Ezek. 20. 21. Are not such vanished?

Answer. 1. It was not a Ceremonial signe in it self, such as others were.

2. It was long before those ordinances which were peculiar to that Church.

3. It was a token of a people belonging to God, as all morall duties are.

4. God may take ancient ordinances, to be tokens of future grace.

Quest. 4. 4. Is not this Constitution broken, by putting this seventh on that which was the first day?

Answer. No; 1. Gods seventh is still continued.

2. The reason of Gods resting in Christ from the work of redemption, and perfecting that in the resurrection, is the cause of the change to this seventh.

3. Christ and his Apostles give evident pattern for setting that apart, 1. Cor. 16. 2. Take these notes hence.

D. 1. The seventh day brings Gods perfecting work to the well being of his Creation.

D. 2. The seventh day is Gods Creature.

D. 3. Gods cessation was voluntary Rest, not necessary to him.

D. 4. God rested from creation of kinds, not from propagation and providence.

D. 5. Gods six dayes labour inteyns us labour, and seventh dayes rest injoyneeth us rest. V. 2.

D. 6. Gods blessing made the seventh day a good day unto man.

D. 7. Gods seventh day is sanctified and set apart for man for ever to sanctify God in.

D. 8. Gods resting from works of creation is the full reason of making the Sabbath, by blessing, and sanctifying the seventh day. V. 3.

The second generall followeth which is a further declaration of the former works of God, especially of the third and sixth day; that which is next in order is. 1. The wonder of the earths fecundity without influence from the heavenly bodies thus set forth.

These the generations of the heavens, and of the earth in their being created, in the day that Jehovah Elohim was making the Earth and the heavens. Cal. Same. — This is the book of the generations, &c. Sep.

2. 5. And every plant of the field, before it was in the earth, and every herb of the field, before it grew up, for Jehovah Elohim had not made it to rain upon the Earth, and not a man to till the ground. — And every green thing &c. and all the grasse &c. for God rained not &c. and there was no man to work it. Sep. — And every tree &c. Cal.

2. 6. And a vapour ascended from the Earth and watered the whole face of the ground. — But a fountain &c. and drenched the whole face of the earth. Sep. — And a cloud, &c. Cal.

In these Moses giveth an appendix to his former relation of the being of the universe, but specially to the third dayes worke, wherein may be observed.

1. A generall assertion of the first being of the heavens and of the earth repeated, wherein are again affirmed.

1. The first being or birth of heavens and earth, for the word is used to note the fruit of the womb, which by throwes is driven out; a sweet Metaphor. The heavens and earth here are synecdochically, to be understood, for all creatures in them, These are the births of the heavens and the earth.

2. The manner of their production and perfecting, they were created of nothing, and made, that is finished with ornaments. These two words עשה ברא create and make, do seem so to intimate.

3. The author or Creator, Jehovah Elohim. It is the first place where the name Jehovah is read, and fitly here, it noting the fountain of all beings, to be the Creator, he that is also the mighty God. Earth here is named before heaven.

4. The time, which notes the very term of their beginning, in that very day, wherein God by his very word made them to be.

2. A speciall assertion about the third dayes work, where in are observable.

1. The subject put into being this third day, under two titles, 1. The plant or fruit tree, which the Cald. nameth so: the Sept. reads green thing. 1. The herb of the field mentioned. 1. 11.

2. The time of their production, before the tree was in the earth, & before the herb grew, so that these helped not to their own being when they were produced in their full perfections. Under these some conceive all other creatures on Earth contained; these named onely, because they be the first.

3. The wonder of their production set out by noting the absence of those subordinate causes, which now concur to their propagation and perfection.

Ver. 5. 1. Jehovah Elohim had not made it to raine upon the Earth. Now we see rather thresheth the seed in the Earth; and without it no creatures produced of these kinds, yet without rain, were plant and herb made, and perfected.

2. Not a man, nor Adam was not on the third day to till or manure the ground, without which, now nothing but briars and thorns are to be expected from the earth; yet when Adam was not, and clouds and rain were not, then trees and herbs were.

Ver. 6. 3. Not a vapour to water the earth, so some read, There was not a man to till, or vapour ascending which should water the face of the ground, making the copulative particle disjunctive, whereas, some read, And, some but as Sep. and so understand it to make out another way of making plants fruitful, by causing a vapour to arise from the earth, and fall down again as dew; but indeed it will be hard to distinguish this dew from raine in its nature, and it is evidently said, God did not make it raine; now if God made a dew sufficient for it, this is the same in kind with raine; Therefore I conceive more congruous to the context, and the scope of Moses here, in removing subordinate causes from helping God, is this reading disjunctively, as Junius. &c. or Vapour ascended or watered the whole face of the earth. So that this remove's the help of a mist or dew, in making plants fruitful, They were at first the fruit of Gods own womb the excursions of his power. Such use of the copulative particle is found Exod. 11. 15. Take some notes here.

D. 1. It is hard for man to believe the true Creation and beginning of the world. The repetition of the spirit argue's it.

D. 2. By faith onely can be truly understood the Creation of Heaven and Earth, therefore is it revealed by God. Heb. 11. 3.

D. 3. Jehovah Elohim, the onely

Almighty being, is the true God.

D. 4. The being of Heaven and earth created, and made is from the being of God. V. 4.

D. 5. All this being was produced in Gods day, that is, the sixe dayes. If all in Heaven and Earth be taken.

D. 6. Plants and Herbs of the field are not of themselves, but made of God before they grew in the earth.

D. 7. No second causes neither rain, tilling or dew did concur to those Effects. Thus if all negative.

D. 8. God alone causeth rain and maketh all subordinate causes of earths fruitfulness.

D. 9. God hath and can preserve his creatures without ordinary meannes. V. 5. 6.

The second generall in the Appendix of the History of Creation, is about the Creation of Adam, the chief work of the sixth day.

V. 7. And Jehovah Elohim formed Adam dust from the ground, and breathed in his nose or nostrils a soul of lives; and Adam was for a living soul. Heb. — man, taking dust from the Earth, and breathed upon his face the breath of life, and man was made to a living soul. Sep. — and made unto a Spirit speaking. Cal.

In this Historicall appendix, are three things related about Adams creation.

1. The creation of his body, Jehovah Elohim formed Adam dust of the ground. wherein are repeated. 1. The Creator under two titles, of Being and of power as was noted, v. 4.

2. The Act repeated in another word from the former, He formed, and this used here onely about the man, and the woman afterward. The two words before were ברא to create עשה to make, and this here is יצא to form; the distinction, of which some have made as between. אלוהים, אדם, אשה, Junius. And here, the first may note making of nothing, the second the effecting or finishing, the third the forming and fashioning the outward and the inward parts, as a potter doth his vessel on the wheels. So here by creating and making God fashioned and formed the body of Adam, that is, straight and upright, with all his lineaments in their due places, with veins and arteries, ventricles and bowells within: the meditation of which makes David cry, I am wonderfully made. 35. 139

3. The Object or matter thus formed. Adam dust of the ground, So rather to be read by opposition, than man of the dust of the earth; dust is the lightest and driest of the earth. So it is said, dust thou art. Gen. 3, 19. Sometimes also called mud, or clay, as if it were dust moistened. Job, 4, 19. Itai. 64, 8. All this sets out the vileness of the matter upon which God put this frame of man, as to his body. If men ask why God chose no better matter to worke on. His will is the best reason; but doubtles God would have man for ever to remember his originall. That his word teacheth. 1. Cor. 15, 47.

2. The creation of mans soul is here described; breathed in his face a soul of lives. In which doubtles, the state of the internall form of man and the creation of it is declared by Moses. Herein.

1. Gods act, he breathed. 1. The order of it in this relation is observable, after God formed his body, from himself he gives in the soul, He doth make bodies and soules together, as in other creatures which he called living soules, he maketh, sea and airc and Earth yeld them, or created them all together matter and form in these places. But Moses in this history re-latech first the forming of his body, and then the making of his soul. 2. The nature of Gods act, breathed, it is spoken after the manner of men, for God hath no hands to form, nor mouth to breath, but hereby must be meant, Gods powerfull creation and infusion of this soul; which he doth as easily, as one breaths; and I conceive to let man know, it is by breath and respiration he holds his soul within him.

2. The form it self induced breath of life, as some, but I chooseth rather the letter a soul of lives. The word here used for breath as the Hebrews observe, is used properly to signify the soul of man, the word is נשמת חיים It is specified a soul of lives plurally, to note, it was not onely life of vegetation or sense but of reason competent to a man alone; and must note a more excellent soul, than in any other creature, which is here the form of man, some have conceived it, the Holy Ghost superadded. But that cannot be, for he speaks of the one part of man. Others have called it a particle of divine being. But that is impossible to mingle God with creature: therefore it must be, that soul, which informeth the body of man.

3. The place of this inspiration is the face, or nostrils, which synedochically notes the whole man whose soul it was; for so this soul of lives did in form and animate the wole body.

3. Here is related next the whole man subsisting of these parts, and Adam was for a living soul, or a living foul, that is, this creature being thus formed in body and having this spirit of lives within him, is now a living soul or creature, eminently so; and according to the Image of God as before expressed.

Some questions do arise here and must be answered.

1. Whether the soul of lives whence Adam is called a living soul, be the same with fishes and beasts, mentioned in the foregoing chapter?

Unto which in short we reply, it is not, but in its whole kind distinct. As may appear. 1. From the manner of creation different. 2. From the intrinsecal nature of it as it was made after Gods Image; which make's it differ from all creatures. Its properties and operations clear this before the sun, there is no living soul like it.

As to the suggestions made against it, because the same attribute is given to beasts &c. In short we may answer.

1. There is multiplicity of signification in words, and here lieth the fallacy. Spirit sometimes signifieth God, sometime the wind; no good inference thence, therefore they are the same.

2. Again where as it is said; that here onely the Animal life is meant for. 1. The rationall was before, therefore in vain here repeated. 2. The 70 read by לחיה not לחיה.

3. The same name is ascribed to creatures before. 1. It is no vain repetition, for, in the former was related what was made, here how it was made. 2. As to the words, both in greek and Heb. though they note sometime inferior, yet sometimes superior, and rationall, and spirituall life. Therefore the argument is equivocal.

3. Whether Adam was mortall as created? Unto which. 1. As to his soul, He was immortal, to made of God that none can killit. 2. In his body, if he had not sinned, though it were of changeable materials, yet by Gods covenant it should have lived.

4. Whether God make's the soules of men still as he did then? The Scriptures do affirm it strongly. Ps. 34, 15. Zech. 12, 1. Job, 33, 4. And God truly is the Father of spirits. Heb. 12, 9. Num. 16, 22. 2. The faculties of mans soul are not generable, as in beasts.

From this we gather.

D. 1. Eminent form did God give to the body of Man.

D. 2. Vile and mean matter is mans originall by Gods will, dust of the ground.

D. 3. Mans soul is the spirit of lives, the most excellent.

D. 4. God immediately made and breathed mans soul into his formed body of the dust.

D. 5. By Gods institution man was not onely

The second head in this historical appendix unto the creation is the habitation which God provided for man before he made him, which though made before, yet was not expressed in the brief discovery of the third dayes work, unto which it doth belong, now Moses supplieth it.

V. 8. And Jehovah Elohim planted a garden in Eden from the earth, and put there the Adam, whom he formed. The Lord God planted paradise in Eden, &c. and he put the man there, &c. Sept. planted a garden in the place of pleasure from the beginning, and there put the man, whom he created. Cald.

V. 9. And Jehovah Elohim made to spring up out of that ground, every tree desirable for sight, and good for meat, and the tree of life in the middle of the garden, and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. And God made to rise, &c. tree of life in the midst of paradise, and the tree of knowing, that which was to be known, of good and evil. Sept. And the tree whose fruit they who eat shall know between good and evil Cald.

V. 10. And a river goeth out of Eden to water the garden, and from it is divided, and was into four heads, to water Paradise, thence is it divided into four beginnings or principles, viz. Of rivers. Sep. Came out of the place of pleasure, &c. and it was into four heads of rivers, Cald.

V. 11. The name of the first Pishon, it doth compass the whole land of Chavilah, where there is gold. Cald. fame.

The name to one is Phison, this compasseth all the land Evlat, there where is gold. Sept.

V. 12. And the gold of that land is good, there is Bdelium, and the Onyx stone. Cald. fame. The Carbuncle, and the prasine stone. Sept.

V. 13. And the name of the second river is Ghichon, it compasseth the whole land Cush or Ethiopia. Cald. fame. And the name to the second river Geon, &c. Sept.

V. 14. And the name of the third river Chid-ikel, it goeth to the east Assyria or Aschur, and the fourth river is Perath or Euphrates. Cald. fame. The third river is Tigris, this goeth against Assyria, &c. Sep.

V. 15. And Jehovah Elohim took Adam and placed him in the garden of Eden to till it, and to keep it. Garden of pleasure. Cald. The man whom he formed, and put him in the paradise of pleasure to labour it, or to work. Sept.

In which passage are related these particulars

1. The Constitution of mans habitation Ver. 8.

2. A description of the beauty of it, in two heads.

1. In its furniture with the best of trees. Ver. 9.

2. In its addition of rivers. V. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14.

3. The end of mans placing there. V. 15. 1. In this providing mans habitation two things are observable.

1. The plantation of the place, This belongs to the third dayes work, before man was created; here. V. 8.

1. The planter, Jehovah Elohim the Creator.

2. His Act, he planted, this is spoken after the manner of men, it was done by his powerful creation. When he said let the earth bring forth, &c. Gen. 1. 11.

3. The object, a garden Heb. a general word for gardens, from a word noting protection, so a garden is hedged Paradis the Greek, from Pardas Heb. an orchard or place of pleasure; an emblem of heaven and its pleasure. Luk. 23. 43.

4. The situation both for place and point in the compass. 1. It was in Eden.

2. It was eastward. 1. Eden note's the country or great continent where this garden was, the Cald. calleth it the place of pleasure; the word it self note's pleasure in the Hebr. It was not the whole earth, but a portion, neither such a small portion, as common gardens but a Region, which is spoken of as a choice part, the very garden of God. The best things are set out by Eden. Ezek. 28. 13.

2. The special part of its situation, it is said to be from the east, or eastward which distinguisheth plainly the part where it was, and that it was not the universe of the earth as some have said. Eastward is onely one part.

It was a corrupt reading, from the beginning; for it note's not time but place here, and the same word note's sometimes the east wind.

Where was Eden? Surely in the east. But after sin, Gods extermination of Adam and the flood; no finding it by man.

2. His location or setting Adam there, 1. Gods Act. He put or by his grace and power set him there, it was Gods prerogative. 2. The object placed, Adam, whom he formed. He provides the most excellent place for the best creature; yet this is to be noted. The creator set's his creature there in subjection; not to be absolute,

2. The beautifying this parcel which was Adams habitation, with trees, wherein. 1. The provider Jehovah Elohim. 2. His act, made to bud or grow up; that is, By his word as in the third dayes creation. 3. The place where, out of that ground, where the garden was, not as if the ground concurred to their being, but God made it and them them in it. 4. The matter of furniture, which was twofold, that God giveth.

1. For natural and civil use, which served.

1. For pleasure and sight, every tree desirable for sight, no such lustre was ever in the state of sin, God would have the eye filled this way purely.

2. For taste, and nourishment, and maintenance of life; and good for meat. This God provides, no such excellency nor sweetness in fruit, since the fall; nourishment and pleasure God provides for his innocent creature.

2. For spiritual use, God adds two trees more.

1. And the tree of life in the midst of the garden. 1. The nature of it general a tree like others, 2. Nature special, of life or of perfect life; which is questioned why so called. A. Not from any virtue in it self, but by ordinance from God; which is conceived likewise.

1. To have a virtue of preserving life naturally or medicinally, considering. Gen. 3. 22. 1. Man did not eat, 2. Eating would make to live.

2. To have virtue sacramental, 1. Shewing the fruit of obedience, 2. Shewing eternal life, 3. Shewing Christ, who is set out by it. Pro. 3. 18. Apoc. 2. 7. Apoc. 22. 2.

2. And the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. 1. The general nature, it was a tree like others, of what kind not expressed, and therefore is it foolish to determine. 2. The special use of it was to be sacramental, and to reach the avoiding of sin, and that sad experience which came from forsaking good, and doing evil. This therefore was forbidden, afterward. The 70 reads, a tree of knowing what was to be known between good and evil, the Gald. whose fruit they who eat shal know between good and evil, that is, the difference of obeying God and disobeying. This sacrament was a visible tie from sin unto obedience. This was not neither in the nature of the tree, but by the ordinance of God.

The observations from these two things follow.

D. 1. Mans habitation in innocency was Gods work, as well as his Being.

D. 2. Gods love provide's an habitation furnished, before he make's the man.

D. 3. The most absolute place of pleasure, that earth contained, was set an habitation for man. Garden, paradise. Eden, pure pleasure for a pure creature.

D. 4. Jehovah set man in that sweet place as a tenant at will, not as Lord.

D. 5. Mans form from God sheweth his homage to Jehovah in his pleasant seat.

D. 6. All excellency of delights Jehovah make's for man after his image, in his innocency. V. 8.

D. 7. Best of food Jehovah provides for man the best of creatures.

D. 8. Jehovah ordained man for worship in his habitation as well as to maintain life.

D. 9. Sufficient means of life did God give to Adam for eternal life. Tree of life.

D. 10. Jehovah provided to keep Adam from sin in his habitation. Sufficient monition in the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.

D. 11. Adam had need of means of stability in his purest condition. Ver. 9.

The second ornament of Adams habitation is the watering of it, described with some other advantages, to the 14 verse. In which description these heads are considerable.

1. A position of the general head river, with its division into parts. Ver. 10.

2. The nomination of those particular rivers. 1. Of the first. Ver. 11. 12. of the second. Ver. 13. 3. of the third and fourth. Ver. 14.

1. In the description is declared. 1. The benefit which God added to this habitation wherein. 1. The good created, a river indefinitely spoken but conceived to be Euphrates, of which the four arms are mentioned afterward, and the last especially carrying this name. It is evident it was the head river, 2. The existence and motion of it, is going out or went out, that is by Gods word it arose and sprung out. 3. The term from whence it is, out of Eden, which was the Region where this garden was. 4. The end of this boon to water the garden that is to supply every thing there with water to make them thrive. This is noted the most prosperous place planting trees And thereto the spirit alludes, in describing the new Church in Christ Reu. 22. 1. R. 46. 5.

2. The partition of it, & from hence it is divided, is divided, and it into four heads. That is from Eden God cut it into four arms, which are called heads because they were the several beginnings of other rivers.

2. The nomination of the fourth head followeth with some note's of the advantages of the places, where they ran.

1. The former head is described. 1. By name, as the name of the first was Pishon. Some have thought his ganges, others finding that amiss thought it was that which was called by some Pasitigrit, but more rightly Pishon, compounded of Pilo and tigris, because it fell into that great river. 2. By its course, it doth compass the whole land of Charilab. 1. Its act, it compasseth, note's not a full circle, but a course by places. 2. The land of Charilab by this place its course is described; this is conceived to be the country of the man of his name who was the Son of Cush, the Son of Cham the Son of Noah, Gen. 10. 8. His country was called by his name, Gen. 25. 18. where the Isaacitis are said to live; some call it fustina bordering on Persia.

3. It is described, by the riches of that land. 1. Where there was gold. 2. A commendation of that gold, and the gold of that land is good that is fine or precious. 3. By sweet gummies there is Bdellium, this is conceived to be a tree aromaticall, and so one kind put for more; others think it to be a kind of pearle.

4. By precious stones, and the Onyx stone. Some read it the Carbuncle, some the Emerald, sometimes translated the Berill by the Sep. Exod. 28. 20. It is here also, one for many kinds; in such spices, &c. the Isaacitis did trafficke Gen. 37. 25.

2. The second head of this river is described. 1. By name, and the name of the second River is Gihon Geon as; 70. This hath bin thought to be Nilus by some, Naber-Sares, by others. 2. By its course. This compasseth the whole land of Cush or Ethiopia, the midians country and the region conterminat with Arabia, is by the best conceived to be here meant, whence the wife of Moses was called an Ethiopian, she was hence, the name of Cush comprehended diverse nations.

3. The third head is also described. 1. By its name. And the name of the third river is Hiddekel. By some called Tigris, not as it is strictly taken, but as mixt with the upper part of Euphrates. 2. By its course, it is going eastward to Ashur or Assyria that is from the East toward Assyria.

4. The fourth head is set out onely by its name, and the fourth river is Euphrates. It is the middle river which runneth thorough Babilon, between the second and third, which is notorious in scripture records.

3. The last thing in this discovery of Adams habitation is the end of Gods placing of him there, wherein. 1. The disposer, Jehovah Elohim. 2. The subject disposed Adam. man in both sexes male and female. 3. The acts of God, two, 1.

He took, that is, from the place where he made him, whether by any visible way, or by his word, or secret instinct of spirit it matters not. 2. And he put him or he placed and constituted him there in the garden of Eden that is the place described before, 4. The end, twofold. 1. To work it or to till it by plowing, sowing watering, &c. 2. To keep it, which may note alliduity of care to preserve the garden in the state in which God wade it and also to keep his own interest therein by observing Gods covenant.

These rivers seem not at this time to be thus sited, as Moses describeth.

Doubtles Moses speaketh as they were known in his time, and what variety of alterations of names have bin since cannot prejudice his relation.

But was not labour a part of the curse on sin?

No; but painfull and distracting labour; work in innocency would have bin all pleasure. Note hence.

D. 1. Adam in innocency had his habitation watered with rivers of pleasure. It was fit for that estate. Ver. 10.

D. 2. Very rich in earthly treasure was the habitation of innocency. Ver. 11. 12.

D. 3. Topography is one work of Gods Spirit and needfull to be known. Ver. 13. 14.

D. 4. Though Eden was not the universe, yet it was very large. Ver. 14.

D. 5. Jehovah Elohim is mans Lord, he but his Tenant.

D. 6. Paradise was of gift from God, man had it not by nature.

D. 7. Man in innocency was not made for idleness but labour. Among all, husbandry is his worke.

D. 8. Gods end in placing man in Paradise was that he should keep that portion pure, and his interest in it. Ver. 15.

The fourth head now followeth in this appendix made by Moses to the former short history of mans creation viz. The covenant then made with him, in the two next verses.

V. 16. And Jehovah Elohim commanded to the Adam in saying, of every Tree of the garden eating thou shalt eat. — Cald. same tree, that is in paradise thou majest eat for meat. Sep.

 — But of the tree, whose fruit they that eat shall know between good and evil, &c. Cald.

In these is the first covenant which the Creator made with his innocent creature, wherein we have.

Ver. 16.

1. The party making Covenant. Jehovah Elohim the Almighty Creator; concerning his covenanting it is adjoined by a connective particle to the precedent matters belonging to creation.

2. The party covenanted, The Adam which God created on the sixth day. Male and female, not the man only, so she confesseth. Gen. 3. 2. 3.

3. Form of covenanting by word of command וְיָצַו a definite for וְיָצַו from וְיָצַו he commanded, the future for the preter pos. Tenfe, which note's continuance of it in that condition. So that the very form of first covenant is precept; Junius, reads interdicted, but that note's only a negative command, yet here something in the affirmative seem's to be expressed about eating, unto which this command must be referred.

4. The matter of this command which to me seems to be twofold.

1. A firmative, of every tree of the garden, eating thou shalt eat; the whole contains, 1. The matter, to be received, set out, 1. In its nature, tree metonymically taken for the fruit of the tree. 2. Universally every tree, the command is no burden it giveth enough. 3. Specialty of it, of the garden, that is of that very garden of Eden. 2. The act of reception, which to me seem's to be, not only permitted, but commanded for preservation of life, Eating thou shalt eat, as well as thou maifest eat, it is true, God leaveth him to his liberty in that universality, but this was a duty. When it is said by one, that it is a reason from the liberality of God to prove the equity of the following Law; doubtles it is truth, but withal it carrieth in it the force of a command, whereunto Adam was bound, for surely he had transgressed, to have refused to eat.

1. The act prohibited, thou shalt not eat of it. This doubtles is a positive Law, superadded to that written in Adams heart; for though obedience were universally written there, yet that in this particular God would have it expressed depend's only upon his positive will. Whereunto he add's no promise of further assistance, but expects exact obedience, that he should do it in the strength received: And herein is exemplified, the Law of works, as it stands in opposition to grace and promise.

3. The reason of the prohibition, For in the day of thy eating of it dying thou shalt die. Where. 1. The crime repeated. Thy eating, which was the act forbidden. 2. The penalty, dying thou shalt die, wherein the nature of the punishment was death, viz. of all sorts temporal and eternal as other Scriptures do affirm to be the penalty of sin. Rom. 5. 12. Rom. 6. 23. &c. 3. The time of it. In the very day of eating, no sooner should he sin, but feel the judgment. Some doubts arise hence.

1. Should a law be given to a righteous man? 1. Tim. 1. 9.

Doubtles yea; neither doth the Apostle make a doubt of it, for the commanding and regulating power of it, which is essential to the Law of God; though not for condemning power, which is only accidental upon mans sin.

2. But should such a killing law be prescribed? 1. Cor. 3. 7.

The killing property is not essential, but accidental only; the threatening is intended to keep alive, not to kill.

3. But they did not dye that day?

Surely they were made in every sense mortall that day, bodies exposed to death, separation from God and eternal torment. It was only the intervention of Christ, that kept from execution in full.

4. Is this Law just?

Yea absolutely just, upon that nature so indowed by God, and yet afterwards so rebellious to him for. 1. It was most caules. 2. It was most free. 3. It was most malignant apostasy from God.

The scope of al this passage is to supply what was wanting before concerning the womans creation, about which we have these particulars related.

1. The occasion of making the woman wherein. 1. The judge of it, Jehovah Elohim. Adams creator, he knew best his condition, and his wants.

2. The act of judgment, he said, he gave out sentence concerning mans estate.

3. The matter of that sentence, It is not good. &c. Wherein.

1. His state is described to be solitary or alone, whereas all other creatures were made with mates.

2. The matter of Gods judgment, that it was not good for Adam so to be. What good was defective in this condition may be guessed by the indowments of of the man.

1. He was made in natural being. & to multiply, as well as other creatures, this good could not be had alone.

2. He was made for civil society to build families, and polities, subordinat to the supream King, this could not be done alone.

3. He was made for Church society in the Image of God, to exercise all all his Spirituall judgments, and to bring forth and build generations unto God, neither could this be, while he abides alone.

2. Gods resolution upon this defect, I will make for him an help as before him. Wherein.

1. The act resolved, I will make, something is curiously noted here, that God doth not say, Let us make, as Chap. 1. As if there should be lesse care in the womans than in the mans creation; but it is vain: For that consulation in the first Chapter, concerneth Man and woman, as the work there evidenceth: And here in this Chapter God speaketh singularly, both in the mans and in the womans creation, however the 70. read here, Let us make. All persons in unity of being are in this work, it note's working to effect.

2. The matter resolved to be made; which doubtles is a companion; set out. 1. By the name of an help, noting the main end of her creation to assist him for natural, civil, and spiritual good.

2. It is such a one, as is before him, according to him, as the 70. or as himself a second self, as to the Cald, Paraphrase. 1. It notes an help at hand, in sight. 2. An help subvenient in his eye. 3. An help every way meet and fit for him.

3. The reason which puts God upon this resolution and this work, viz. The want of such an help among all other Creatures. Ver. 19, 20. Where in are related.

1. Gods work, in forming all the creatures of living soules, and Jehovah Elohim formed out of the ground, every wild beast of the field, and every fowle of the heavens. 1. The agent Jehovah Elohim. 2. The act formed med, as much as created. 3. The place wherein they were created, out of the ground, nor in paradise, but without was all this done, by Gods mighty arme; 4. The work, every wild beast of the field, and every fowle of the heavens, as opened, Chap. i. Ver. 20. 24.

2. Gods act in bringing all these to Adam. 1. The act itself, God by his word set them in order before Adam, this was before the womans Creation, as will appear in the sequel. 2. The end of the Act. That Adam should see or consider what to call creatures after their nature. 1. Mans act of Consideration לראות to see or consider. 2. The scope of that act, the fit naming of creatures ליקרא what he should call it, that is to give a name proper to the nature of every creature which doubles then was exact.

3. A constitution upon this naming the creatures, And all that Adam called it even the living soul, that was the name of it, wherein. 1. The Authority of the imposor of names. God transfer's it on Adam. 2. The vast wisdom vouchsafed him that every thing was known in its nature, that he might call it. 3. The sanction or Constitution, That was its name, and no other.

Ver. 20. 4. The execution of all this according to Gods will by Adam wherein we have.

1. Adams obedience to God, & his power exercised over the creatures.

And Adam called name upon every beast or all cattle & upon the fowl of the heavens, and upon every wild beast of the field. So Gods word was obeyed, so Adam exercised his dominion over them, as naming of all things doth import; & doubles, had we that first pure nomination, we should have a mighty help into the knowledge of things, which we know in the confusion of tongues & severall corruptions since, suffered much losse. Multa renascuntur, &c.

2. The issue that among all no name or nature was fit to his own, & so to be his help: but for Adam, or Adam found not an help at before him, that is, Adam found not out a creature, among all, worthy of a name to be his yokefellow, & such an help at hand, as before.

The notes from these particulars are

D. 1. Jehovah Elohim mans Creator knoweth what in every kind is good for man.

D. 2. The judgment of the great Gods, That it was no way good for man in respect of naturall, civill or spiritual relations, to abide alone.

D. 3. Man was not made for a solitary but a sociable life, & so to begin communion toward God.

D. 4. God in goodness makes that good for man which he stands in need of.

D. 5. The woman is Gods workmanship as well as the man.

D. 6. The man was created first, & then the woman. A ground of her inferiority. 1 Tim. 2. 19.

D. 7. The woman was created for the man, to be helpful to him. 1 Cor. 11. 9. therefore subject.

D. 8. The aim of God in the womans Creation is to give a ready, sweet & every way suitable help to man. Even as himself, or a second self. v. 18.

D. 9. Jehovah is the maker & will have Adam be the Namer of all the Creatures in the earth.

D. 10. Adam in naming the Creature did exercise power & Sovereignty over them. Num. 32. 38. So parents giving names. Gen. 35. 18. Gen. 26. 18. v. 19.

D. 11. Adam had a vast knowledge of all the natures in his innocency.

D. 12. God did not appoint neither did Adam find any creature of nature or name fit to be a sociable help like himself. v. 20.

4. The Creation it self of the woman, & the manner of it followeth in this relation made. Wherein these particulars are obvious.

1. Gods casting Adam into a sleep, And Jehovah Elohim caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam & he slept, 1. The efficient, Jehovah Elohim, no lesser hand. 2. The action made to fall a deep sleep, an existence, as the 70. read, The same word is used concerning Abraham, when God gave him the vision of future providences to his seed, & discovered how he would gather his Church out of him. Gen. 15. 12. It was doubles such a binding of the senses, that no evil, nor change indeed was felt in himself: such is called the sleep of Jehovah upon Saul, &c. 1 Sam. 26. 12. 3. The object upon whom this sleep fell, was Adam על האדם the first man, the Head or husband. 4. The effect of this, and he he slept, that is, his senses were so bound, that he felt nothing. Why God should cast Adam into this sleep, however it becomes a scorn to infidels, and a ground of more curious than pious disquisition, yet is ought not to appear, as a slight or fabulous thing, for as much as the will of God determined this way, & his wisdom is manifested in it. Doubtles it was not to ease any pain, for it is incredible, that Adam was then capable of it, & as sure that God could have taken away his rib waking without pain. But thus God would have it, whether to figure the Church to come out of the death or sleep of the second Adam, or to give some evidence how a mans change should be made in innocency from earth to heaven, we leave as pious conjectures: but the literal truth must stand. This sleep was of Gods making.

2. Gods culling out the matter of which he would make the woman. And he took one of his ribbes, and closed the flesh for it, and supplied flesh for it, as the 70. 1. Gods Act, And he took, not by any hand or instrument as the Anatomists make dissensions, but by his word commanded it out. 2. The object taken One of his ribs. Herein lay mans strength, It is also to be understood, it was bone & flesh together, for both Adam acknowledgeth her to be in the sequel vers 23. The impious scorns of infidels about this must be abhorred, as well as their mouths stop. They except. It is incredible to great a body to arise from so little a bone.

It is answered. Nothing can be incredible of Omnipotency, we know our God can make an handfull of meal, abundance, &c.

Again, it seems something was redundant in man, and then he was a Monster: Seeing God takes away, or now something is defective, having lost of his integrity?

Neither of these will follow, He was intirely made, neither upon taking this rib, did God take away of his integrity but made supply and thereby sheweth the true union of man and woman in the principles of nature; as well as it is mystically used. Eph. 5. 3. The supply made, and he closed the flesh for it, that is, either in the room of it, or supplied the empty place with flesh and skin upon it.

3. Gods forming this matter to its intended state, And Jehovah Elohim built the rib which he had taken from Adam to a woman. 1. The same efficient. 2. The same matter. 3. The forming Act, he built, which phrase the 70. and Caldee keep. It is certain this word is not used before in the history of creation. Created, made, formed, we had before concerning man, but not he builded until now. Some curiosities there are in mens conceits, that the body of the woman should be in some respects more like an edifice; but I conceive it groundles, doubtles it carrieth as much in it as to say God created the woman: yet it may be denied but God may intimate in the creation of the woman the ground work of houses & families, was now more fully laid; A mystrie is here piously conceived by some, of Christs building his Church. Mat. 16. 4. The creature formed, woman, this bone was built to a woman, that is, the female sexe consisting of the same kind of nature in body and soul with Adam, and stated in that very same image of God with him as, Gen. 1. 27.

4. Gods giving her in marriage to be an help to Adam which was the end of her creation, wherein we have exemplified the three great causes of marriage. 1. The fathers consent in God. 2. The womans consent in coming. 3. Adams consent in receiving. The two former are in the close of vers. 22. And he brought her unto Adam. 1. The cause bringing. Jehovah Elohim her creator and Father; who gave her being. 2. The cause of this marriage, coming, she the woman is not forced, but as her father gave command, so she willingly obedieth, and in her coming freely contents to be in that place for which she was created. 3. The third cause making up this marriage was Adams consent, wherein we have related. 1. Adams judgment of this work beyond all other the works of God, And Adam said, as this turn were is bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh. In these words is Adams concurrence to accept of this gift from God to be an help before him, and in them are intimated.

1. The thoughts of his mind concerning her. Now or at this turn bone of my bone, that is, he judged her to be of the same nature. 2. The consent of his will approving and liking her to be a conjugal mate, never before now saw I a creature bone of my bone, &c. She must be the fittest, I willingly love and embrace this, no man can hate his own flesh, Eph. 5.

2. The expression of Adams place and power yet in naming her, though she were a second self, yet in order inferior, therefore Adam give's her a name as to other creatures. Upon her shall he called woman, because she was taken out of man, the 70. may be understood, wife from her husband, or because taken out of her Lord. 1. The name is as noble as mans, onely a derivative from it, which notes inferiority. 1. Adam imposed it. 2. The woman was the object of this imposition. 3. This imposition of the name is self, woman, from man. 2. The reason of this imposition because she was taken out of man, He, her originall materially, though God her maker, who gives him to be her head. Where we have 1. The woman made principium 2. The man, principium. 3. The necessary issue of the one from the other. And this is a reason of her subjection. 1. Cor. 11. 8.

CHAP. III.

In all the precedent, we have seen Man in the state of Institution in his primitive purity & glory, when there was no shame upon him. Now followeth the history of his sad delitiation, wherein by sin his glory was turned into shame, and thence confusion spread upon all succeeding generations. All the foregoing relation is but the History of the seven first dayes of the world, and the events in them; Now Moses is making way to the history of succeeding times.

Quest. Once in this Chapter where he reports the dismal fall of Man from his first state. It is questioned, in what point of time, this sad change fell out?

Answer. Mens thoughts are divided about it, whether upon the sixth day this happened or the seventh which was the Sabbath? Such as determine for the sixth give these reasons. 1. If Adam and his wife had continued in innocency the night before the seventh, it is probable, seeing there was no cause to hinder it, they might have the blessing of an innocent seed; but that they had not; therefore they were fallen; before we read, Adam knew his wife. Gen. 4. 1.

2. An expression Psalm. 40. 12. Adam being in honour did not lodge a night, as some strictly read it to the letter, and thence inferre his fall upon the day of his creation.

Others that determine for the seventh, see not any force in the former consequent, neither will yeeld such a strict reading to that Text; and therefore considering the severall passages of the six dayes work, and that at the end of them Moses shuts up the history of that day, they conclude it to be more probable, that he fell in the former part of the Sabbath, supposing also, that expression, the cool of the day to note the evening, or latter part. The truth is, Moses speaketh not punctually to it, neither seems there to be any real inconvenience, which way soever it be taken, but beyond the seventh day, it could not be; for that was the last day that was mentioned; and unto that Moses seemeth to relate, ver. 3. Of this chap.

In the chapter there being an intire History of Mans fall we have two generals.

1. The temptation with the issue described, ver. 1. 6. &c. wherein are these particulars.

1. The tempter described.
2. The assault made at first. V. 1. By him in the serpent.
3. The reply made to that. V. 2. 3. By the woman.
4. The rejoinder by the serpent. V. 4. 5.
5. The issue in the yeelding of the tempted. V. 6.
2. The consequents of this sad issue V. 7. to the end. Wherein are many things considerable in their places. To begin with the Tempter and his assault.

Ver. 1. And the Serpent was subtiler above every beast of the field, which Jehovah Elohim had made; and he said to that Woman, Yea because Elohim hath said, ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden. But the Serpent was the wisest of all the beasts upon the earth, &c. And the Serpent said to the woman, what because God hath said eat you not of every tree, that is in Paradise. Sep. — Was wiser &c. Is it true that God hath said, Eat ye not? &c. Cald.

In which text we have, 1. The tempter described, and that. 1. By name. The Serpent; the same title the Apostle useth in mentioning this sad event, the Serpent beguiled Eve. 2. Cor. 11. 3. By whose help we may safely conclude, under this name two Agents in this worke. 1. The Devill principal. 2. The Serpent instrumental, to which creature under divine permission he united himself; and therefore sometimes he is described by apposition of both together, The old Serpent the Devill. Rev. 20. 2. As to that quere, why God by Moses doth not plainly name the devill. I shall only say.

1. Gods will is to speak thus. 2. It is usual to expresse the chief cause by the Instrument and adjunct. 3. Darker expressions were for darker times, God reserving the clearer discoveries for Christ, which is enough to stop the mouth of that apostat Iulian, that make's this a fable.

2. By his quality. He was subtiler above every beast of the field which Jehovah Elohim had made. Herein the wiliness and subtilty of this tempting instrument is discovered, how fit he was for a wily devill.

1. Here are two words that set out his subtilty positively. 1. נחש Which cometh from a word noting auguration, or prediction, &c. Which is a name setting out the true nature of the creature; however in the Latin it is called serpent from creeping. 2. The Adjunct. ערום Which note's cunning, craftines to overreach; such as the wiles and devices of Satan are. 2. Cor. 2. 11. Some render it by מאמץ, which word the Apostle also useth, to note's all wayes of working to bring devices about. 2. Cor. 11. 3.

2. By comparison, Moses subtiler, than every beast of the field which God had made. Some, that write of the nature of Creatures res, speak as much of the Serpent, but others gain say, and maintaine more subtilty in other creatures. But to stop more strife, it is evident, that this creature was cursed, and so might loofe something of his naturall instinct; yet this lessneth not his primitive subtilty. God made this creature and the rest, and did severally indow them

2. The temptation discovered in the first assault? Wherein we have to note. 1. The way of assaulting, It was speech, and he said, what voice this should be which the serpent useth, troubleth many also, and how it could; doubtles it was a voice which the woman understood, and as clear, that not the serpent of it selfe, but the devill in him did use that voice which under Gods permission is no unusual thing in creatures as unlikely as the serpent; why the woman also should not fear to hear such a creature speak. It is enough, there was not that enity then as now, to startle at a snake or serpent.

2. The object assaulted; and that is the woman which God lately made and gave to Adam. 1. She was the weakest 2. She was alone. 3. She was unexperienced in such trials, therefore the devill wilily sets on her. 1. Tim. 2. 14.

3. The temptation itself, Yea, because Elohim hath said, eat you not of every tree of the garden. 1. It is a speech in form giving at any such word of God, and making it despicable in her eyes. The 70. render it interrogatively, What? because God hath said &c. the Cald. also, Is it true that God hath said? &c.; tempting her to call it into question. This expression hath bin opened three wayes. 1. As a negative, God hath not said so. 2. As an Ironicall rejection, yea indeed; do ye think, God looks after that eating. 3. As a charge of it to be an unjust word, as afterward he speaks more plainly. Yea, because God hath said, therefore will ye forbear, hath he made all for you, and now forbid you to eat? 2. In the matter, he doth like the devill. 1. Falsly urge this command, for God said in his Covenant, ye shall eat of every tree &c. he urges, hath God said eat ye not? The negative was not in that first part. Gen. 2. 16. 2. Fallaciously; suggesting that Gods prohibition of one tree, was also of all; for the word מכל is sometimes every one, sometimes anyone, sometimes of uniuersall, and sometimes of speciall signification; Therefore he labours to take her with a wile, as if God had restrained all. The scope of this first assault is to weaken Gods word & make it vile in her eyes, and so labour to infect her judgement and understanding.

Note hence.

D. 1. Mans fall is as needfull to be known, as his prime and best estate. From the connection. And the, &c.

D. 2. Vnder Gods ordering providence, Satan incarnat in the serpent, is the tempter to destroy man.

D. 3. The devill chooseth the fittest instruments to overreach, and deceive poor man.

D. 4. God maketh those excellent instincts in his creatures, which Satan abuseth to destroy man.

D. 5. The devill may give forth an humane voice unto dumb and speechless creatures.

D. 6. Weaknes, solitarines, and supinenes give great opportunity to Satans temptations.

D. 7. It is the devills great plott in tempting man to destruction, to corrupt the mind.

D. 8. Its a main designe of Satan to make the word and command of God vile with man.

D. 9. Fallacious and false corruptions of Gods word Satan makes to deceive poor soules.

D. 10. Such corruptions usually beget strong delusion in men. Ver. 1.

The third thing related in this history is the womans reply, ver. 2. 3. as followeth.

Ver. 2. And the woman said unto the serpent, of the fruit of the tree of the garden we may eat, or shall be fed. Cald. same. Of every tree of paradise we eat. Sep.

Ver. 3. But of the fruit of the tree which is in the middle of the garden, Elohim hath said ye shall not eat of it, nei. her shall ye touch it, least ye dye. which is in the midst of paradise, God hath said, eat not of it neither touch it, that ye may not dye Sep. — Not eat, nor come neer to it, least peradventure ye may dye. Cald.

In this reply we have considerable. 1. The replicant, the same woman assaulted.

2. The tempter, to which she replieth, the serpent.

3. The readines of her to entertain partly with him, she speak's to him by way of reply.

4. The matters of her answer, wherein she vindicates God from Satans insinuation, that he should deal hardly with them.

1. By concession of what God allowed them, We may eat of the fruit of the tree of the garden. Wherein. 1. Their license, We may eat, or do eat, or shall be fed with, that is, by Gods good will, and with his leave, he hath given us liberty for food.

2. The extent of it. Set out in the original D 2 inde.

indefinitely, of the tree of the garden, which the 70 reads of every tree of paradise, he gave them a free provision; only excepting one as afterward. 3. The meetness of their sustenance, It was fruit, and that precious too; sweet food to sustain them. This concession rejects the devils suggestion of Gods hard dealing as if he had forbidden to eat of any tree.

2. By expressing Gods prohibition something more clearly, wherein we may note.

1. The lawgiver expressed, Elohim hath said, she confessed she heard God speaking, therefore could not be ignorant of his law, which aggravated her sin.

Ver. 3.

2. The Law prohibiting, But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, ye shall not eat of it neither shall ye touch it.

Wherein she make's two parts: 1. A prohibition from eating the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil which she paraphraseth here by its place (In the middle of the garden) therefore near to the tree of life spoken of Gen. 2. 9. Herein she acknowledgeth the reception of this Law, and faithfully relate's it. 2. A prohibition from touching the tree, of which no mention was in the former description of this Law. Gen. 2. 17. Variety of conjectures are hereabout. 1. As if the woman did wickedly in adding to Gods command. 2. As if she gave the serpent an occasion to deceive her further, if God have seen you touch it, and ye dye not, no more shall ye dye for eating. I confesse it seems not to me to be such an addition to Gods law as is forbidden; for that is only such as adds more over to Gods mind; but addition of words for explication of the same thing may doubtles be. Such I suppose this to be, that the womans meaning was, they should not touch for eating that which God had forbidden.

3. The reason of the Law she also repeats, but therein, not so punctually. God said dying ye shall dye, ye shall surely dye, but she said, least ye dye, she puts it upon a peradventure and determine's not, the certainty of it, when God was peremptory. However some look upon it not as a term of doubt, but certainty of the danger following, that ye dye not.

Now take the observations hence.

D. 1. It is dangerous and inexcusable to give the Tempter a parolee, she should have returned, Get thee hence.

D. 2. The goodness and bounty of God to man is a sad aggravation of sin.

D. 3. The fence of goodness and despoiling of it, make's sin very sin full.

D. 4. Acknowledgement of Gods law will more heavily condemne the soul that sinneth.

D. 5. Creatures must vindicate Gods goodness, though Satan detract from it. V. 2.

D. 6. Faith of the bitter and certain wages of sin in death, must aggravat all transgression against Gods law.

D. 7. The least staggering about the truth of Gods threatnings make's the soul more bold to sin. Ver. 3.

4. The rejoinder now followeth from the serpent, in the two next verses.

Ver. 4. And the serpent said unto the woman, dying ye shall not dye. — Ye shall not dye the death. Sep. — Cald, to the same.

Ver. 5. For Elohim knoweth, that in the day of your eating of it even your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as Elohim, or Gods knowing good and evil. — That in what day ye eat of it. &c. Sep. — For it is manifest before God &c. Ye shall be as princes knowing between good and evil. Cald. In which passage these particulars do occur.

1. The party rejoicing, The serpent said, the same tempter as before.

2. The party assailed, to the woman, the same also as before.

3. The rejoinder it self, which is a positive denial of Gods word, gainsaying of the same. Dying ye shall not dye. This is conceived by some not to be a denial of Gods former sentence upon eating. Chap. 2. 17. But a subtill insinuation to confound the womans doubtfull peradventure, denying only the certainty of dying. Iun. But I see nothing in the words but a plain opposition to Gods threatening to wound the womans conscience and take of her faith, from making evident this will of God. It is therefore a pure lye, in every title opposing Gods truth. And so is it rightly said of the devil, he was a liar from the beginning Joh. 8. 44. Dius affirmavit, Muler dubitavit, Diabolus negavit.

4. The reason whereby he back's this Rejoinder, is a suggestion of the knowledge of God concerning some events upon this eating, whence he would persuade her, that she should not dye. Wherein.

1. An assertion of Gods knowledge, for God knoweth. This knowledge of God is two wayes conceived. 1. By some, as if God should know and approve that they should eat, and the effects following therein, and so they make the tempter to be understood as if he would persuade her, that it was Gods will and liking, therefore they should not dye; 2. By others it is knowledge of dislike, as if God envied the good effects of eating to his creatures; this is most likely, for the devil is an accuser of God to man, to make him become vile before his creatures.

2. The effects, the objects of Gods knowledge are three, if distinctly viewed.

1. That in the day of your eating then your eyes shall be opened. Herein. 1. The time stated, the very same that God threatens death unto them, in that moment the devil pretendeth something better. 2. The cause of Gods sentence repeated, when ye eat of it, that which God make's the cause of death the devil makes the cause of good. 3. The effect it selfe, God said dying ye shall dye, Satan saith, your eyes shall be opened, which may be a doubtfull speech wherein one thing is pretended, and another intended. The opening of the eyes pretended was for greater light, and abilities in knowledge and wisdom; so the woman understood it; as in the next verse. The opening of the eyes intended was to see and have experience of their greater shame, as we know it fell out. Ver. 7. So that the devil speaks double.

2. An other effect, and ye shall be as Gods. This term of Gods is also dubious, 1. It note's the most High. 2. The Angels Principalities as the Cald. readeth which 3. May be the devills. Col. 2. 15. In pretence doubles it was a parity unto God himself herepromised, Gen. 3. 22. But in intent it was a parity with the devil himself.

3. The last effect of eating mentioned by Satan, Knowing good and evil. Here the tempter sheweth his subtilty to deceive from the very name of the tree, for the reason of that name was the sad event upon disobedience in eating, they should change their condition, from good to evil, and so have experience of bitterness by their sin; here Satan urgeth it as a divine privilege, a kind of an omniscience only which he pretendeth under these two heads of good and evil. This he pretends, but yet intends the sad subversion of them, and the bitter experience of their change from good to evil. These suggestions are so many fiery darts struck into the woman, whereby at last he prevaileth,

Note hence.

D. 1. Once yeelding to the tempters charm gives him boldnes to greater violence.

D. 2. It is the devills method to draw soules from doubting of Gods truth to deny it.

D. 3. It is a strong delusion of Satan to persuade a sinner that he shall not dye.

D. 4. It is the initiall property of the Tempter to be a liar, to deny what God affirms, V. 4.

D. 5. It is Satans wile to deceive by urging God against God, and so make him vain.

D. 6. It is Satans falshood to persuade that God either allow's mans sin, or envies mans good and comfort.

D. 7. The Tempter dealeth in equivocations with double words and senses.

D. 8. The time and cause of misery set by God is made the time and cause of good by Satan. That days eating shall bring you good.

D. 9. It is a strong temptation on man to persuade inlightning by sinning.

D. 10. In all the light pretended, Satan intends nothing but experience of nakednes and shame.

D. 11. Parity to God in place, not in nature, is a shrewd argument for Satan to tempt with.

D. 12. In such arguments the devil intends to make sinners like himself.

D. 13. Knowledge of all states and things is a powerful engine to draw man to sin. V. 5.

D. 14. Experience of all evils, and miseries is the marke that Satan aims at in it.

The fifth thing noted in the temptation now followeth, the sad issue of it on man.

Ver. 6. And the woman saw, that good was the tree for food, and that this was the desire of the eyes, and a tree desirable to get understanding, both she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also to her husband, and he did eat. — And pleasant for the eyes to see, and beautiful for understanding, and the woman taking that fruit did eat, and gave also to her husband with her, and they did eat. Sept. — And that it was healthful in the eyes, and a tree delightful to look upon it, &c. and he eat with her. Cald.

indefinitely, of the tree of the garden, which the Lord said of every tree of paradise, he gave them large provision; only excepting one as afterward. 3. The meekness of their sustenance. It was fruit, and that precious too; sweet food to sustain them. This concession rejects the devils suggestion of Gods hard dealing as if he had forbidden to eat of any tree.

2. By expressing Gods prohibition something more clearly, wherein we may note.

1. The lawgiver expressed, Elohim hath said, she confessed she heard God speaking, therefore could not be ignorant of his law, which aggravates her sin.

2. The Law prohibiting, But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, ye shall not eat of it: neither shall ye touch it.

Wherein she makes two parts: 1. A prohibition from eating the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil which she paraphrases here by its place (In the middle of the garden) therefore near to the tree of life spoken of Gen. 2. 9. Herein she acknowledgeth the reception of this Law, and faithfully relate's it. 2. A prohibition from touching the tree, of which no mention was in the former description of this Law. Gen. 2. 17. Variety of conjectures are hereabout. 1. As if the woman did wickedly in adding to Gods command. 2. As if she gave the serpent an occasion to deceive her further, if God have seen you touch it, and ye dye not, no more shall ye dye for eating. I confess it seems not to me to be such an addition to Gods law as is forbidden; for that is only such as adds more over to Gods mind; but addition of words for explication of the same thing may doubtless be. Such I suppose this to be, that the womans meaning was, they should not touch for eating that which God had forbidden.

3. The reason of the Law she also repeats, but therein, not so punctually. God said dying ye shall dye, ye shall surely dye, but she said, least ye dye, she puts it upon a peradventure and determines not, the certainty of it, when God was peremptory. However some look upon it not as a term of doubt, but certainty of the danger following, that ye dye not.

Now take the observations hence.

D. 1. It is dangerous and inexcusable to give the Tempter a parlee, she should have returned, Get thee hence.

D. 2. The goodness and bounty of God to man is a sad aggravation of sin.

D. 3. The fence of goodness and despoiling of it, makes sin very sin full.

D. 4. Acknowledgement of Gods law will more heavily condemn the soul that sinneth.

D. 5. Creatures must vindicate Gods goodness, though Satan detract from it. V. 2.

D. 6. Faith of the bitter and certain wages of sin in death, must aggravate all transgression against Gods law.

D. 7. The least staggering about the truth of Gods threatnings makes the soul more bold to sin. Ver. 3.

4. The rejoinder now followeth from the serpent, in the two next verses.

Ver. 4. And the serpent said unto the woman, dying ye shall not dye. — Ye shall not dye the death. Sep. — Cald. to the same.

Ver. 5. For Elohim knoweth, that in the day of your eating of it, even your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as Elohim, or Gods knowing good and evil. — That in what day ye eat of it. &c. Sep. — For it is manifest before God &c. Ye shall be as princes knowing between good and evil. Cald. In which passage these particulars do occur.

1. The party rejoyning. The serpent said, the same tempter as before.

2. The party assailed, to the woman, the same also as before.

3. The rejoinder it self, which is a positive denial of Gods word, gainsaying of the same. Dying ye shall not dye. This is conceived by some not to be a denial of Gods former sentence upon eating. Chap. 2. 17. But a subtil insinuation to confirm the womans doubtfull peradventure, denying only the certainty of dying. I am. But I see nothing in the words but a plain opposition to Gods threatening to wound the womans conscience and take of her faith, from making evident this will of God. It is therefore a pure lye, in every title opposing Gods truth. And so is it rightly said of the devill, he was a liar from the beginning Joh. 8. 44. Dixit affirmavit, Mulier dubitavit, Diabolus negavit.

4. The reason whereby he backs this Rejoinder, is a suggestion of the knowledge of God concerning some events upon this eating, whence he would persuade her, that she should not dye. Wherein.

1. An assertion of Gods knowledge, for God knoweth. This knowledge of God is two ways conceived. 1. By some, as if God

God should know and approve that they should eat, and the effects following therein, and so they make the tempter to be understood as if he would persuade her, that it was Gods will and liking, therefore they should not dye; 2. By others it is knowledge of dislike, as if God envied the good effects of eating to his creatures; this is most likely, for the devill is an accuser of God to man, to make him become vile before his creatures.

2. The effects, the objects of Gods knowledge are three, if distinctly viewed.

3. The effect it selfe, God said dying ye shall dye, Satan saith, your eyes shall be opened, which may be a doubtfull speech wherein one thing is pretended, and another intended, The opening of the eyes pretended was for greater light, and abilities in knowledge and wisdom; so the woman understood it; as in the next verse. The opening of the eyes intended was to see and have experience of their greater shame, as we know it fell out. Ver. 7. So that the devill speaks double.

2. An other effect, and ye shall be as Gods. This term of Gods is also dubious. 1. It note's the most High. 2. The Angels Principalities as the Cald. readeth which 3. May be the devills; Col. 2. 15. In presentie doubtles it was a parity unto God himself here promised, Gen. 3. 22. But in intent it was a parity with the devill himself.

3. The last effect of eating mentioned by Satan, Knowing good and evil. Here the tempter sheweth his subtilty to deceive from the very name of the tree, for the reason of that name was the sad event upon disobedience in eating, they should change their condition, from good to evil, and so have experience of bitterness by their sin: here Satan urgeth it as a divine privilege, a kind of an omniscience only which he pretendeth under these two heads of good and evil. This he pretends, but yet intends the sad subversion of them, and the bitter experience of their change from good to evil. These suggestions are so many fiery darts struck into the woman, whereby at last he prevaleth,

Note hence.

D. 1. Once yielding to the tempters charm gives him boldness to greater violence.

D. 2. It is the devills method to draw soules from doubting of Gods truth to deny it.

D. 3. It is a strong delusion of Satan to persuade a sinner that he shall not dye.

D. 4. It is the initiall property of the Tempter to be a liar, to deny what God affirms, V. 4.

D. 5. It is Satans wile to deceive by urging God against Gods, and so make him vain.

D. 6. It is Satans falsehood to persuade that God either allows mans sin, or envies mans good and comfort.

D. 7. The Tempter dealeth in equivocations with double words and senses.

D. 8. The time and cause of misery set by God is made the time and cause of good by Satan. That days eating shall bring you good.

D. 9. It is a strong temptation on man to persuade inlightning by sinning.

D. 10. In all the light pretended, Satan intends nothing but experience of nakednes and shame.

D. 11. Parity to God in place, not in nature, is a shrewd argument for Satan to tempt with.

D. 12. In such arguments the devill intends to make sinners like himself.

D. 13. Knowledge of all states and things is a powerful engine to draw man to sin. V. 5.

D. 14. Experience of all evil, and miseries in the marke that Satan aims at in it.

The fifth thing noted in the temptation now followeth, the sad issue of it on man.

Ver. 6. And the woman saw, that good was the tree for food, and that this was the desire of the eyes, and a tree desirable to get understanding, both she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also to her husband, and he did eat. — And pleasant for the eyes to see, and beautiful for understanding, and the woman taking that fruit did eat, and gave also to her husband with her, and they did eat. Sept. — And that it was healthful in the eyes, and a tree delightful to look upon it, &c. and he eat with her. Cald.

In this sad issue of the temptation are observable.

1. The previous steps unto the first sin.
2. The sin itself acted against Gods word.

The first contains several precedent steps, to the rebellious act of eating.

1. Some implied and necessarily supposed in the state of the subject tempted and overcome, which are these at least.

1. Unbelief in the word and covenant which God gave them, that they might live.
2. Rebellion of will, now resolved and set against God, through Satans suggestion.
3. Denial of all affection to God, love, fear, hope, joy, &c.
4. Pride of heart to be equal unto God, according to the temptation.
5. Universal apostasy from the original righteousness, and Gods image given them.
6. Submission to Satan as their Lord, and selling themselves to do evil. Rom. 7. 14.

2. Some precedent steps are expressed, viz.

1. And the woman saw that the tree was good for meat, or to eat. Wherein is visible.

1. An act of sense, And the woman saw, seeing here is a word of sense, but through it an act of the mind also is expressed, that is, being persuaded by the serpents reasoning, her own credulity, and the sight of her eyes, she determined, the tree was good for food, though wholly forbidden as evil by God.
2. The object whereupon this act is exercised that tree, which God forbade them, and the fruit of it, as pernicious to them.
3. The determination of sense upon this, that it was good, to eat or for food, liveliness. A judgment quite contrary unto God, for he said death was in it, but man determines after suggestion, that it was good for meat and to keep alive: mind and sense were now corrupted.

2. And that this was the desire to the eyes. Herein is the second part of mans deceived judgment and sense, wherein 1. The subject וכי הוה and that this very tree and fruit, forbidden as loathsome. 2. The judgment given of it תאוה לעינים the desire, or lust of the eyes, very properly, it being forbidden to the eye to lust for it. For the law that forbids the eating forbids the lusting of any part of man which tends to eating. See, what

God would have man loath, he loveth

3. And that the tree was desirable to make to understand. Here also.

1. The subject spoken of, העץ the same tree, which God named indeed the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; to let them know the misery of eating; that it would bring them to the experience of evil which they had not tasted; this she judgeth being persuaded by the serpent, to be a means of more universal knowledge to man. 2. That spoken of it, is, and desirable to make to understand. 1. It is judged to be desirable, by a corrupt sense, which God prohibited. 2. The end of that desirableness to make to understand, which she conceives general and such as should perfect them, which proved nothing, but to be wiser than God would have them, and to know only their own misery.

1. The actual transgression followeth upon this judgement. She took of the fruit and did eat, and gave also to her husband with her and he did eat. In which description of the sin note. 1. The act itself, ותקח מפריה ותאכל Two acts are here mentioned. 1. Taking the fruit of that tree. 2. Eating, which were both acknowledged by the woman before to be forbidden.

2. The subjects thus sinning man and woman they did both rebel and eat, and in them all the nature of man, which is propagated unto this day, and will in generations to come.

3. The order of this transgression, 1. The woman took and eat being overcome by Satan. So the Apostle notes she was first in the transgression. 1. Tim. 2. 14. 2. The man was deceived by her, and so eat and sinned with her ותתן לה לאשר So the Apostle likewise writeth, by one man sin entered into the world, &c. Rom. 5. 12. Yet this argueth not that Adam was present at the serpents parlee, but doubtless heard the summe of it from his wife, and yielded to her persuasions and sinned deeply with her, and the more considering his place.

4. The aggravations of this are many.

1. From their creator, it being against his power, wisdom and goodness. Isai 45. 9.
2. From themselves, it was against the clearest light, knowledge, sense of love as might be.
3. It was their own freewill, Satan having no power to compel. O miserrum liberum arbitrium, quod adhuc incolumem tam parum habuit firmitatis. August.
4. It was the intrinsical of a man to com-

Pride of life.

come under sin and wrath. Rom. 5. 12. Some questions here.

Answer.

1. Why did God suffer them to be tempted? And why did he not help in the temptation?

Answer.

No reason, but Gods own will, who will justify his counsels and providences, however man by his corrupt weight mak'es it seem unjust. The only wife God cannot be blamed by sinners.

Quest. 2.

Answer.

2. How come all men corrupted by this sin?
1. The nature sinned in them, and so we. 2. The just sentence of God so hath set it, that upon this sin, all should be flesh of flesh. 3. It is evident there is a loss of all original righteousness in every son of man which God was not bound to renew and an universall deprivation of our natures could not but ensue.

D. 1. Second assaults of Satan, if not resisted, overcome. So it was in the first fall.

D. 2. Man brought by Satan to unbelief and apostasy from God is prepared for any wickedness.

D. 3. Hearts fighting Gods word are given up to Satan to believe lies.

D. 4. Hearts so seduced call that good which God calles evil.

D. 5. Unbelief maketh soules judge that meat, which is poison, and death by Gods word.

D. 6. Unbelief stirs up lust in the eye, to that which we should loath.

D. 7. Forbidden things soonest stirre up sinfull desires. Stollen waters are sweet.

D. 8. An irregular desire, to be wiser than God would have us, puts man upon great evil.

D. 9. Lust persuadeth there is wisdom to be had, where there is nothing but experience of evil.

D. 10. Lust perfected brings forth sin to the highest; so man lusted and did eat.

D. 11. The woman was first in the transgression, but the man equall.

willfully, against such a God and such indownments.

D. 14. Just is it with God to suffer mento fall, that choose it rather than stedfastness in his word. Ver. 6.

The second generall contains the sad consequences of the temptation and issue of it, which are many, following to the end of the Chapter.

1. The sad apprehensions in themselves. Ver. 7. 8.

2. The proceedings of God with them, wherein.

1. The inquisition made. Ver. 9. 13.
2. The sentence pronounced.
1. Upon the Serpent. V. 14. 15.
2. Upon the Woman. V. 16.
3. Upon the Man. V. 17. 18. 19.
3. The gracious dignation of some good. V. 20. 21.
4. The ejection out of the garden. V. 22. 23. 24.

The first consequent are the effects upon themselves: and are laid down in the two following verses.

V. 7. And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew, that themselves were naked, and they sewed together figge leaves, and made for themselves girding. Covets Sept. & Cald. same.

V. 8. And they heard the voice of Iehovah Elohim walking in the garden at the wind of the day. And Adam hid himself, and his wife from the face of Iehovah Elohim in the midst of the trees of the garden. Walki ng in Paradise at noon day, & Adam & his wife were hid from the face of the Lord God in the midst of Paradise. Sept. And they heard the voice of the word of the Lord God walking, &c. Cald.

In this portion these sad impressions are observable to be upon themselves.

1. Opening of eyes. 2. Sense of nakedness. 3. Shifts to hide it. 4. Apprehension of Gods pursuing. 5. Study to hide from him.

The first is thus expressed, And the eyes of them both were opened. This was now the proof of the serpents word, he told them their eyes should be opened. V. 5. And he intended no other than this miserable effect; how ever shee took him in another sense. And is put for then. 1. The subject of this effect is, their eyes, which by that which followeth appears to be these. 1. Of their understanding, for they knew, &c. 2. Of their sense for they sewed. 2. The effect produced upon this subject, They were opened; were their minds shut before? Or their eyes blind? Surely, not as to the true and perfect state of mind, and sense, for they knew their happiness in Gods image; and their covering with his glory, and they saw nothing but good on every side, and that they did see clearly. So that this opening

4. His fact of hiding confessed, And I hid myself. That is, I run into these thickets, and behind these trees, where thou hast found me; This he could not deny, for he is taken in the fact.

The Notes arising from this passage are.

- D. 1. Jehovah may suffer sinners to abuse his goodness, but he will call them to judgment.
- D. 2. The eternal God only, who is the cause of every Creature who hath made, and knows man, he will be judge.
- D. 3. Adam and all his sonnes shall be made to judge themselves by the Lord.
- D. 4. God is not ignorant of the lurking places of sinners. Ps. 139.
- D. 5. Gods inquiries are invincible criminations on sinners. Where art thou? V. 9.
- D. 6. He that hides, cannot hide, and he that lieth, cannot fly from God.
- D. 7. Foolish sinners think themselves safe in hiding and flying from God, but God teacheth it must be by coming to him.
- D. 8. Gods citation will make sinners speak where they are, will they, nill they.
- D. 9. Sin deals falsely in its speaking to the Inquisition of God.
- D. 10. Sin pretends Gods voice of inquiring, or threatening, to be the cause of mans evill.
- D. 11. It is sin alone that make's Gods voice formidable, which sinners would conceal.
- D. 12. Sinners pretend their fear, rather than their guilt to drive them from God.
- D. 13. Sinners pretend their punishment, rather than their crime, to cause them hide.

- D. 15. How hard is it to bring a Soul to the true acknowledgment of sin. Ver. 10.

The second head in Gods inquisition is the further Examination of the man, together with his answer. 12:

Ver. 11. And he said, who hath shewed thee, that thou art naked? Hast thou eaten of that tree, which I commanded thee, not to eat of it? — Cald. to same. — Commanded thee not to eat this orely, &c. Sept.

Ver. 12. And Adam said, the woman which thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat. Sept. and Cald. same.

Two branches divide this, 1. Gods examination in two questions. 1. Who shewed, &c. 2. Hast thou eaten? 2. Mans reply to these questions. V. 12.

In the Examination itself, we may note. 1. The examiner, the Lord God, and he said, he that knew in his heart. 2. The Examination in two questions.

1. Concerning the way how he came to find that change, and know himself to be naked. Who shewed thee, that naked thou wert? The stem of this question is not of deubring, but of searching and reducing a person staying sinners to right thoughts of his condition. 1. He inquires of the subject. Who what is he that should shew this, can it come from many out of thy self? it must be thine own fault, or conscience pressed with guilt that declateth this. 2. Of the fact, declared, shew'd; or told unto thee that is, by suggesting this, hath convinced thee, or what thou confesseth. 3. Of the matter confessed, That thou art naked, that is miserably and shamefully naked; for innocent nakedness was his glory, that never made him fear the sight of God. It was therefore the stripping of his soul of righteousness, and his loss of its native honour, that make's him hide, and of which his conscience within convinceth him, though he yet labour to conceal it.

2. The next curie God puts to him is concerning the right cause of this shameful nakedness, which make's him fly by which was his sin, even that which yet he seem's leath to acknowledge, wherein he inquires, not as if he were to tick of what was done, but to bring the sinner to a sense of it. 1. Concerning his fact hast thou eaten, hath thy heart bin seduced and led thy sense to sin?

2. Concerning the object, of that tree, or the fruit of it, of that only tree as the Sep. The speciality of the nature, and singularity of the thing are here intended. 3. Concerning the aggravation which I commanded thee not to eat of it. So much more grievous is the sin, done against such an expresse law, where occur these aggravating circumstances. 1. The Law giver, I thy creator.

2. The form of the law, It was a peremptory command without scruple, or any hope hope of dispensation. 3. The negation of the act that thou shouldst not eat, no, by no means. 4. The punctuall nomination of that tree concerning which the command was, not to eat of it. And yet against such an expresse and peremptory law given by me thy creator, hast thou now sinned and eaten? Here, here Adam, is the cause of hiding, thy sin growes upon thy guilty conscience, and that terrifieth thee for the evils consequent, and now thou fliest from thy God. How come's this Adam?

Ver. 13. And Jehovah Elohim said to the woman, what is this thou hast done? And the woman said, the serpent seduced me, and I did eat. — Sep. and Cald. same.

In which passage, we have considerable. 1. Gods examination of the woman, and therein.

1. The examiner, Jehovah Elohim himself, he replieth no more to the man, but from his excuse passeth to the woman.

2. The examination, wherein inquiry is made of the fact, What is this thou hast done? Not as if her fact were unknown, but bringing her husbands accusation off, by this question he labourerth to make her sensible of this horrid fact, that she should so, through unbelief and pride, not onely sin against God her self, but draw her husband into the same provocation.

2. The womans answer unto this followeth, wherein. 1. She transferrerth also the burden of the evil upon another. 1. Expressely upon a Creature the Serpent The Serpent seduced me. This was true, but her sin no less, to believe him before God. 2. Implicitly on God himself also; as if she should say, If thou hadst not made this Serpent, and suffered him to be here, I had not yeilded to this evil. See how sinners are agreed, to charge God foolishly rather than to address themselves humbly to his footstool for mercy.

2. She coldly confesseth the fact upon the former evasion, and I did eat. Here is a forced confession, but no appearance of contrition or repentance. I did eat, its true, but it was not my fault.

The notes from this are.

- D. 1. The more sinners hide, the more God sifteth them. God leaveth not Adam.
- D. 2. There is some index or discoverer to make man see his shame.
- D. 3. That which makes man know his sin, declareth his shame.
- D. 4. It is worth knowing by every man what discovers sin and shame. God therefore puts the question to Adam, to turn him to his own Conscience, which told all.
- D. 5. God will bring sinners to a sense of sin before he leave them. Hast thou eaten?
- D. 6. Gods command expresse and peremptory aggravat's sin that is against it.
- D. 7. The easines of Gods Law increaseth the heaviness of sin, but one tree forbidden. Ver. 11.
- D. 8. Sin is impudent to reply against Gods conviction.
- D. 9. Sinners convicted, and not converted, are shifting of all guilt from themselves.
- D. 10. Apostat sinners make God and creature-helps causes of sin, rather than themselves.
- D. 11. Cold confession do such sinners make of sin without sense or remorse.

- D. 12. God beareth long with the provocations of sinners. Ver. 12.
- D. 13. It was offensive to God, that the woman should do such a thing as draw the man to sin.
- D. 14. Sinners are full of imitation for excuses of sin. The woman shifts it off also.
- D. 15. Sin in its doings is unwilling to appear to be sin. I eat, but the Serpent sinned.
- D. 16. Clearest convictions of sin move not souls to remorse, until grace come. Neither man nor woman are yet affected with their sin, or afflicted. As their speeches expresse. Ver. 13.

The second part of Gods proceedings, is his Sentence upon sinners, 1. On the Serpent.

Ver. 14. And Jehovah Elohim said unto the Serpent, because thou hast done this, cursed be thou above all cattell, and above every beast of the field upon thy belly thou shalt goe, and dust thou shalt eat all the dayes of thy life. Cald same. ——— cursed thou from all the beasts, and from all the cattell, which are upon the earth, upon thy breast and thy belly shalt thou goe, and eat earth. &c. Sept.

Ver. 15. And enmity will I put between thee and between the woman, and between thy seed and between her seed, he or it shall break to thee the head, and thou shalt break to him the heel. אֶתְּנֶה בֵּיןְךָ וּבֵין אִשָּׁתְּךָ וּבֵין אִשָּׁתְּךָ וּבֵין אִשָּׁתְּךָ. Sep. ——— And between thy son and her son, he shall observe for thee what thou hast done from the beginning, and thou shalt observe for him unto the end. Cald.

Ver. 14. Now in this sentence these particulars are seen. 1. The Judge, Jehovah Elohim the creator of all, and therefore of due the Lawgiver to all, and judge of all. He gives sentence. 2. The party arraigned and sentenced, being the first author of sin, here said to be the serpent, and he said unto the serpent, which both take's in the instrument, which the Devil used, the serpent, and the evil one himself who was joyned with him; thereby to deceive poor man, and bring him into bondage.

3. The indictment or fault read out, because thou hast done, wherein.

1. The evil charged, carried in the relative this, that is, seducing the woman, by her corrupting the man, and thence violating Gods covenant, breaking his command, and apostatizing from God.

2. The charge it self, that he should be the author of all this evil, the first contriver and finisher of it, by his insinuations and temptations charging God falsely, and deceiving man, because of all this which he had done.

4. The sentence, 1. Upon the instrument, in four particulars. 2. Upon the Principal.

1. Cursed be thou above all cattell, and above every beast of the field. In this and the rest, are observable, 1. The order, God beginneth with the serpent, because he first beginneth with seducing. 2. The form of sentencing, it is not by way of inquiry as with the man and woman, but a peremptory giving of judgement upon this arch enemy of mans good, wherein though it be all terror to him, yet it carrieth much of grace unto man, to see God so proceeding with him that had betrayed them; as to throw down the author of their misery for ever. There was no need to inquire of the instrument, he was a bruit, nor of the principal the Devil, for of him there was no hope, the fact therefore being plain, God proceeds to judgment. 3. The matter of the sentence in four portions. 1. Cursed be thou, &c. 1. The subject of this penalty, is the serpent; and in the letter as intended to that creature, it is easy enough to be understood of him; yet under this is implied the evil one, that old serpent Satan; and both must needs be in this tempter. 2. The penalty it self, Cursed be thou above all cattell, &c. 1. The positive penalty is a curse. 2. The superlative, above all cattell, that is, most cursed shalt thou be; now to be cursed, is to be in such a condition, as is vile and horrid, full of evil, hated by God and man, a state unto which no good can be competent: and this to be superlative above all, must make a sad state.

But some questions do arise here. 1. Why the serpent which was a brute creature should be so sentenced seeing it was Satan did the sin? 2. The answer to this is clear; it is just and usual to put some marke of displeasure on the instrument of an offence with the offender; though it may be bruit or inanimate, more fully to expresse a resentment and detestation of the offence done. Instances are obvious even in humane usages.

2. What curse was this, seeing the serpent was of the order of creeping things? The serpent was a living creature of higher ranke which is carried in the word cattell, and probably of a nobler motion.

3. How can this agree to the Devil; seeing he is not of this kind of creatures? He is a creature, and therefore as mystically applied unto him, it note's a curse beyond all an any creature.

4. Was not the Devil cursed before? Yea, but this now adde's unto that, and so make's a double curse.

2. The next part of the sentence is, Upon thy belly thou shalt goe. 1. The subject of this penalty is the same, Satan and the Serpent

pent. 2. The penalty is a distorted and painful kind of motion upon the belly. Here also are some questions.

Quest. 1. 1. How could that be a curse which was the natural motion of the Serpent.

Sol. 1. That cannot be averred certainly, that it was so, but that the Serpent had some feet: or els mooved upon his hinder part more upright. 2. Yet though it were, God can curse natural motions and properties, and make them evil; as is also evident in the womans bringing forth.

Quest. 2. 2. How can this be a curse to the Devil who hath no belly?

Sol. It cannot in the letter be understood of him, but by analogie, he is cast down from heaven, from his first place, upon the earth Rev. 11. 9. And he is reserved in chains, and a low condition, until the judgment of the great day.

3. The other part of the sentence is, and dust thou shalt eat all the dayes of thy life Wherein. 1. The subject is the same. 2. The penalty is to eat dust not grasse, or herb, as other creatures, that is to be of the vilest, and basest sort of creatures it being the worst and basest of food.

It is here question'd how can this be agreeing unto Satan?

Answer. Not in the letter, but mystically, he is condemned to unclean feeding, delights and gluttonies in sin together with the wicked. So the wicked nations are threatened in the time of the Churches restoration. Isai. 65. 25. Mic. 7. 17.

4. The last part of the Sentence, is in ver. 15. Where. 1. The subject, still the same serpent in the same sense, for it is a continuation of speech from God unto it. 2. The penalty it self, Enmity will I put between thee and between the woman, and between thy seed, and between her seed. The burden of this sentence is setting up an enmity against the Serpent. Wherein we have. 1. The setting up a fight against the serpent. 2. The success of it.

Ver. 15. 1. The vengeance taken, is setting a perpetuall enmity, which will give the Serpent no rest until it kill him in the fight. 2. The parties between whom. 1. The woman and the Serpent. 2. The seed of the woman and the Serpent; Now if we look upon this as concerning the Serpent living creature, doubtles it is seen at this day the irreconcilable hatred between the Serpent and man, so that the death of them is continually sought after. But of the Serpent devill, this must also be understood, and, therefore in such a sense, as is convenient unto him. 1. This woman here meant is the woman that had to much familiarity before, but now shall have an hostile carriage to him. Q. Is Adam here excluded? By no means. But the weaker vessel is named, because she was first deceived. 2. Here enmity is irreconcilable hatred to the destruction of the Serpent, to be manifested by the woman, who was formerly to familiar.

Quest. Answer.

1. The subject, still the same serpent in the same sense, for it is a continuation of speech from God unto it. 2. The penalty it self, Enmity will I put between thee and between the woman, and between thy seed, and between her seed. The burden of this sentence is setting up an enmity against the Serpent. But the weaker vessel is named, because she was first deceived. 2. Here enmity is irreconcilable hatred to the destruction of the Serpent, to be manifested by the woman, who was formerly to familiar.

2. Pair of combatants. 1. The Serpents seed, as all the Angels of the Devil and all the Powers of darkness, and all the generations of wicked men, Math. 25. Joh. 8. 1. Joh. 3. 8. 2. The seed of the woman. Here it is set in opposition to the seed of the Devil, and therefore cannot be meant of all men: but such as are the seed of the woman the Church.

A quere here is, whether seed be thus collectively to be taken, or not rather distinctly or peculiarly for one son?

It is certain; that one son is mainly aimed at, as the restrictive relative afterward sheweth. He shall break, &c. but consequently all that seed that belongs to him, do hate the Devil and his; and have continual conflicts with them. 1. Ph. 6. v. 12.

3. The constitution of this enmity. I will put or set it faith God, that it shall not be moved.

2. The success carrieth yet more evil to the Serpent. He shall break to thee the head, and thou shalt break or bruise to him the heel. Wherein. 1. The exploit of the womans seed, and here. 1. The victor, He, אִשָּׁתְּךָ, as Sep. which being now opposed to the serpent alone must needs eminently note one seed, which is Christ; however by participation it belong's to all of that seed. Heb. 2. 14.

2. The act shall bruise or break or strike or knocke, it notes a deadly blow. 3. The object, the serpents head, that is all the Devils power, strength, and leave him destroyed.

2. The exploit of the serpent, where, 1. It is a single combatant also the serpent 2. His act, he shall bruise or strike to for some hurt or mischief.

3. The object, the heel of the womans seed, Christ primarily, and his seed secondarily.

That this must be meant of Christ especially and the work of his redemption may be demonstrated. 1. From the singular relative masculine. 2. No other seed, nor all together could do this; 3. All this is expressly declared of Christ in the New Testament. 1. Joh. 3. 8. &c. 4. This was the office for which he was sent in the flesh to redeem us from the curse. Gal. 3. 10. 5. Christ is called the seed, and Satan the serpent, in the New Test. So that the principles of Christian faith which are given here in the description of the Devils doom, we shall lay down in the following observations.

D. 1. Jehova Elohim hath no pity on the devill, though he hath on man. He questions not him.

D. 2. God looks upon the devill as the first Author of all the unbelief, rebellion and Apostasie of man.

laid upon the old Serpent, and that irrevocably.

D. 6. Gods curse upon the old Serpent brings a blessing upon man. V. 14.

D. 7. The old Serpent hath bitter enmity to man, and man to him.

D. 8. God hath firmly set that enmity between Satan and the womans seed.

D. 9. God from the fall of man provided a way for saving some from the devil.

D. 10. One eminent seed of the woman promised is the redeemer of the womans seed from the hand of Satan. The son of God in the flesh.

D. 11. This seed of the woman Christ, hath saved his by breaking the head of the old serpent and slaying him.

D. 12. The promised seed had his heel bruised in killing the serpents head. It was by his own dying, though he rose again.

D. 13. All this redemption cometh merely from free grace. Gods own promise.

D. 14. Such grace binds to enmity with Satan and love to God. Ver. 15.

Quest.

Why doth God deliver such a purpose of spiritual grace under such terms corporal and obscure?

Answer.

God is left to use what manner of speech he pleaseth, so he did afterwards signify his mind in types to the Jewes, which he speaks clearly to us: Yet God may have his ends in it. 1. To vex and trouble Satan, to hear there is a Lord set over him, that should be of the womans seed. 2. To exercise the faith of his people, to find out Gods gracious mind unto them. 3. To glorify Christ in the flesh in bringing the clearest revelation. 2. After this sentence on the Serpent past the great Judge proceedeth on the woman, and her sentence followeth.

Ver. 16.

V. 16. To the woman he said, multiplying I will multiply thy grief, and thy conceptions in grief shalt thou bring forth children, and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee. — Cald. to same. Conception. — thy sorrowes, and thy groanings, in sorrowes shalt thou bring forth children, and thy return shall be to thy husband, and he shall be thy Lord, Sep.

The burden of this sentence is to be gathered two waies. 1. Negatively and implied. 2. Affirmatively and expressed.

It is considerable what it was not: and it is evident, God doth not say to her, curfed be thou as unto the Serpent, but having made it one part of the Devils plague, to have his head crushed by the womans seed; which also, was a gracious provision for these fallen and frighted soules. He proceed's not to curse and kill them, but to inflict chastenings, and lay humbling strokes on them, to teach them more sensibly of their fall, and make them wait for restitution in the devils fall by the promised seed.

But if it were not so, how was then the sentence performed, which God threatened the day, &c?

Quest.

1. Man was that day guilty and obnoxious unto death and lay condemned under Gods sentence.

Answer.

2. There was a partiall execution, upon them in their reſented nakednes horror of conscience, & affrightments at Gods voice.

3. That sentence did not exclude Gods shewing mercy though it expressed it not; & however he mitigates it as to them, yet he required it of the second Adam the promised seed; for which none can charge him. He was made a curse for us. Gal. 3. 13.

4. All these Evills expressly inflicted are in themselves part of the curse, however in Christ they now come to be sanctified, and turned toward the curing of corrupt nature.

2. The affirmative sentence on the woman expressed, consists of two general heads.

1. About bringing forth children. He said to the woman, multiplying I will multiply thy grief and thy conceptions, in grief shalt thou bring forth sonnes, or children. Where.

1. The Judge pronouncing sentence, the same Jehovah her creator.

2. The guilty sinner judged, the woman and all her daughters to come of her.

3. The sentence it self, which in summe is, that she shall be laden with grief. 1. Her burden is grief and groanings exceeding great as the 70 expresse. 2. The measure of it multiplying it shall be multiplied. 3. The certainty of it, indoubling the word.

4. The inflicter God himself, 5. The time of its infliction. 1. Conception. 2. Birth. Had not sin come in conception, bearing and bringing forth had bin easy, but now are they made most exceeding grievous to roots and branches; they bring forth with sin and sorrow. The sad and painfull throwes in child bearing do evidence this bitter sentence to be true. Yet is is it in some respect a cheerful pain, if we consider the end and issue of it; God hath made it the way of trial for them to passe to heaven, and it hindreth not salvation; if they believe, and continue in the faith. 1. Tim. 2. 15.

2. The other head of the sentence expressed on the woman, is about her place and state of her relation to her husband, laid down two waies. 1. From the woman to the man, and to thy husband shall be thy desire. The same phrase is used by God to note, the subjection which should have bin of Abel unto Cain, if Cain had pleased God. So here because the woman was first in the transgression, God layeth this sentence upon her of a painful subjection to her husband. Yet in Christ this is turned to a blessing, his desire is unto his Church. Cant 7. 10. The very same word as here. Aben Ezra read. th obedience for desire.

2. From the man to the woman, and he shall rule over thee. This is to be understood, with grief and trouble also, for that runneth thorough all. Otherwise in Innocency the man was ruler, but then command & obedience were sweet without sin. And all this subjection now sanctified in Christ become's a blessing.

Hence note.

D. 1. Grace works from God to sinners terrified, even when he pleads against them.

D. 2. God did not intend the first sin should undoe man, though it did lay all under the curse.

D. 3. Order in sin hath an order in punishment. The woman before the man.

D. 4. Although the womans seed break the devills head, and deliver man from hell; yet is he not exempted from sorrow.

D. 5. Sin hath made fruitfulness and child-bearing a bitter painfull thing.

D. 6. Bitternes in child bearing is the portion which God himself hath laid, as the womans way to passe thorough. Faith makes it the way to heaven. 1. Tim. 2. 15.

D. 7. Grief in marriage relations, in wifes subjection, &c. is the fruit of sin.

D. 8. Order which primitively was the sweetest blessing, by sin is turned to an heavy burden. So the rule of the husband. All this should but drive us from our selves, to eye the promised seed, whom must overcome all. Ver. 16.

3. Now followeth the sentence on the man:

Ver. 17. And to Adam he said, because thou hast obeyed the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, which I commanded thee, saying, thou shalt not eat of it: Cursed be the ground for thy sake, in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the dayes of thy life. — Cald. same. — Thou hast heard, &c. hast eaten of the tree, of which I commanded thee, of this only not to eat, of it thou hast eaten, cursed be the earth in thy works. Sep.

Ver. 18. Both the earth and the thistle it shall bring forth unto thee, and thou shalt eat the herb of the field. Sept. and Cald. to the same.

Ver. 19. In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat bread, until thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken, for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. — Cald. same. — The earth from which thou hast been taken, for earth thou art and unto earth shalt thou goe again. Sep.

In this tradition of the sentence, observe.

The malefactor sentenced, and to Adam, the husband, however as the womans head, under him she beareth a share of this lot. 2. The tradition of the sentence from God's be said, that is, the highest judge said. He giveth it, and none can reverse it. 3. The sin inflicted, in two parcels. 1. His disorderly hearkning and obedience to his wife, because thou hast heard or obeyed the voice of thy wife. God had made Adam the head of his wife, and to rule and keep her in her place; in vain therefore is his excuse, the woman which thou gavest me, &c. for this was his sin to hearken to her persuasion in any thing that withdrew from God; God therefore maketh his own answer, his crime, and arraigneth him upon this, that he left his place of rule, that he honoured his wife above God, and holds out this as his transgression, for which he must now receive judgment.

2. His disorderly carriage in his disobedience unto God. And hast eaten of the tree, which I forbad thee, saying. Thou shalt not eat of it. Where we have repeated. 1. His crime, thou hast eaten of the tree. 2. This aggravated by Gods positive interdiction, which I forbade thee that thou shouldst not eat of it, and yet that against such a God, and such a Law; and concerning so reasonable a thing, that thou shouldst refuse obedience, hear thy sin, Adam, and now thy sentence.

The sentence it self consist's in these parts. 1. The curse upon the earth in general

ולארס

Ver. 17.

כי שמעת לקול אשתך

ותאכל מן העץ אשר נתתי לך לאמר לא תאכל

אורח הארס בעבורך

rall, Curfed be the ground for thy fake, where we have, 1. The Subject, the ground out of which Adam was taken, as it is called before, Gen. 2. 7. 2. The penalty, Curfed, that is, be it made vile, hurtful, barren, &c. as in some particulars afterward is expressed, 3. The cause of it, for thy sake, that is because thou hast sinned, and that it may be grievous unto thee, who hast grieved me. Why should the earth be cursed, when man sinned? Because made for man, and therefore when man denieth his obedience to God it is but just, that he should curse the creatures to him, that they shall not give out their sweetness to man. So God did to the sinners of Sodom, Gen. 13. 10. So God threatens sinners, Levit. 26, 19. Ps. 107, 34. Deut. 29, 23.

2. The particulars consequent upon this curse. 1. Mans sorrowful feeding, in sorrow thou shalt eat of it all the days of thy life. Wherein, 1. The matter of his feeding, the ground in the product of it, not dust, which was the serpens meat. 2. The manner of his feeding, it is to be in sorrow and bitterness, whence we may read the water of affliction, and bread of affliction and sorrows. Hail. 30. 20. Ps. 127. 2. 3. The duration of this, all the days of thy life, that is, he for his life time, and every son of Adam for his.

Is not the earth said to be full of mercy, and the fain to eat with gladness? Pl. 119. 64. Act. 2. It is so in the restitution by Christ, but not otherwise to man himself.

2. The earths barrenness, Both the thorn and thistle it shall bring forth unto thee. These are the proper issue of a barren and cursed parcel of ground, which make it fit for burning, Heb. 6. 8. All hurtful, poisoning weeds are comprehended here, Job. 31. 40. Jer. 12. 13.

Were not these created before among the shrubs, &c.

Yea, but not made so hurtful or a curse before as now after mans sin.

3. Mans course feeding, Thou shalt eat the herb of the field. Here 1. The matter of his feeding is the herb of the field, that is such as grew under the curse, not in the garden which God planted; man that did not lodge one night in honour, became like the beasts that perish, Ps. 49. 13. As Nebucadnezzar cast out with beasts, Dan. 4. 13. It notes a curse, to be driven from the food of innocence. 2. The manner of his eating is the same, in sorrow, or bitterness, shalt thou eat the grass of the field.

4. Mans painful feeding, In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat bread, until thou return unto the ground. 1. The matter of his feeding here is bread, so God orders it in goodness, but this must be bruised, grinded, baked, &c. and it is well conceived all food is carried in this expression, that supporteth the heart of man. Ps. 104. 15. 2. The manner of his feeding, it is in the sweat of his face, it must be with plowing, sowing, &c. before he hath it, and then it becometh the bread of carefulness. 3. The duration, which is the space of his life also, expressed in another phrase, until thou return unto the ground, that is, the time of separation of soul from body; which was one peeces of his doom here, and now followeth.

2. The sentence upon man himself is in these words For dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return. Herein, 1. The sentence, unto dust thou shalt return, that is, body and soul shall suffer a dissolution, and that part which is of the dust shall turn unto dust again, until time of arising; but the spirit shall return to God that gave it. Eccles. 12. 7. So that, the first death, here is certainly the wages of sin, as appears by the cause fore-alleged. 2. Some considerations for the equity of it. 1. From his original, for thou art taken out of it, therefore no injustice to turn man to his own principles. 2. His fall intimated in this, Dust thou art. It is true, God made him more, when he put his Image on him, but now by sinning, that is lost, and he is become nothing but dust, unless worse now, in that he is sinful dust which subjects him actually to be resolved into his own principles. Some queries here.

1. Is not courset meat of herbs a blessing? Prou. 15. 17.

1. It may be so comparatively as Salomon affers. 2. Such hard meat, in it self is a fruit of sin. 3. In Christ, the bitterest is made sweet.

2. Do all eat bread in such labour? It is not required, that all should in one kind of labour, but in the toils of several callings.

3. Are not many full and labour not? It is the shift which many graceles foules make, that eat, and drink, and sleep, and labour not; but they drudge in their idleness for hell.

4. Is not labour a duty, how then a curse?

It is now made a duty in Christ, and a blessing too, and not a curse, when conscientiously performed; but this is by grace.

5. Why is there no mention here of eternal death?

1. That was carried in the sentence of the Devil for him and his seed. 2. God did put in, by grace, his promise for the womans seed, and for these first sinners considered in it.

6. Why then is any penalty upon bodies recorded?

1. To teach man the bitterness of sin. 2. To humble him. 3. To enforce a flight unto grace. 4. To help to subdue the flesh.

7. Was not man mortal before, being dust?

1. In his principles he was, for his materialls. 2. By covenant he should have bin immortal, if he had not sinned. 3. By

By sin he becomes actually mortal, & must dye; however God deferreth execution.

From all which observe.

D. 1. Single account must be given by every creature for single sinnes God tak's one by one.

D. 2. God himself giveth judgment upon every sinner.

D. 3. Judgment on Adams head reacheth all under him.

D. 4. Mans leaving his place to yeeld to tempters, though in his bosom, is a great provocation.

D. 5. Mans excuse of sin may prove the greatest aggravation. So the woman.

D. 6. It is very dangerous to listen unto creatures drawing from God.

D. 7. It is a sad aggravation of sin that it is committed against God.

D. 8. The expressness of Gods Law doth much aggravate sin against it.

D. 9. The reasonableness of Gods Law, justifieth him and condemneth sinners, it was but one forbidden.

D. 10. Sin brings all evil upon creatures, and makes them instruments to punish man.

D. 11. The earth is vile and loathsome to what it was in innocency.

D. 12. As justice requires sin, so grace provides to free soules from the curse.

D. 13. Sorrowful is mans life in eating and sin hath made it so. V. 17

D. 14. Thorns and thistles, and hurtful weeds are the issues of sin, and curse.

D. 15. Sin as it made man a beast, so feeds him like a beast. All hardnes the fruit of sin. V. 18.

D. 16. Laborious and painful doth sin make the course of man.

D. 17. God remembers wretched man, and alloweth him some bread, though he deserves none.

D. 18. Mans travail ends not but in the grave.

D. 19. Though eternal death be due. God letteth it not on sinners set apart by grace.

D. 20. Temporal death is the fruit of sin.

D. 21. Mans principles at first were earthly, but to be perfected by keeping Gods covenant.

D. 22. Man making himself sinful dust, maketh himself dead dust.

Now followeth the third thing observable in Gods dealings with man, which carrieth an intermixture of some goodnes in the midst of the bitter sentence pronounced. And it is expressed in these two things.

1. The new naming of the woman.
2. The new appailling of them both.

Ver. 20. And Adam called the name of his wife Chavah, because she was the mother of all living. — And Adam called the name of his wife, life, because, &c. Sep. — Because she was the mother of all the sonnes of man. Cald.

Ver. 21. And Jehovah Elohim made for Adam and for his wife coats of skin, and made them put them on. — So Sep. — Garments of honour upon the skin of their flesh, &c. Cald.

These two verses carry in them as in a parenthesis, two tokens of Gods favour in the midst of all these threatening words to man.

1. The new naming of the woman, wherein two particulars are considerable.

1. Impositio nominis. 2. Ratio impositionis; in the former are these terms to be viewed.

1. Impositum, the man, and he considerable. 1. Not as separat from God, but guided by him; 2. Not considered as at the first naming in innocency, when it is conceived by some this name also was given her, but without good ground, for it is reserved for this time, after mans sentence to raise him. Three names are given to the woman. 1. Nekbah, female, to note her sexe. Gen. 27. 2. Atschah woman or wife to shew her original and neer relation to man. Gen. 2. 23. 3. Chavah to note hope of life by her, as death came in by her. He names her so now.

2. Impositum, the name itself. Chavah, which as the Sept. renders is life and the reason following warrants so much only here it is to be noted, that it is a sweet name, life, and the sweeter, when it cometh in after the sentence and partial execution of death; that when man now was mortal, and obnoxious to eternal death, then God should give him this sign.

Ver. 20.

nal of recovery to life, in this name of his wife as he had laid ground of hope in the promise of the seed. Life natural, and spiritual may have their consideration here, for as much as God did make her the instrument not only of bringing forth the living generations of men; but of that seed, which should break the serpents head, and work eternal life for poor souls.

3. Subiectum impositionis, the woman the wife of Adam.

4. Impositio, the imposition it self, he called the name, which note's that God had not taken away the authority of man over his wife, but even in the state of grace, keeps up that order.

In the latter, which is the reason added of this name, of the whole it may be inquired.

Quest.

1. Whether this be spoken in scorn, as if she was therefore called by contrarie, because she brought in death?

Answ.

But this is a wicked conjecture of any, for it is spoken here in truth, she was the mother of the living.

Quest.

2. Whether this reason from the effect, was given by Adam or Moses?

Answ.

Surely not by Adam at that time, for then she had brought forth none, but by Moses is this reason rendered, as he that had experience of all the living which came from her to his dayes; so he speak's truly of the effect past, which giveth a just reason of the name.

In thereason. 1. The subject, she, the woman. 2. The attribute, was the mother of all living. 1. The relation the Mother, she was a destroyer before, but now a breeder. 2. The issue correlate all living, both naturally and spiritually living among men, as the instrument of conveying both kinds of life, which was a ground of faith after the fall.

2. The new clothing of the poor naked creatures, wherein occurs, 1. The making of the garments, 2. The putting them on.

Ver. 21.

In the former, we may view. 1. The author, Iehovah Elohim. It is questioned whether God of himself, or by his command did this? It is more proper to the expression, that God provided them with-out instruments. 2. The work he made coates, that is, by his own power he made these garments to be, that they might cover their nakednes, and discover more the sinfulness of sin, that brought them unto this necessity. Here Gods goodness! 3. The matter of these garments, of a skin. The curious inquisition; what skin, and where it was had, favours of more wantonnes than piety. It is sure, this could not be meant of their own skin by hardening it, as some foolishly conceive, but of such matter as was external, and adjacent, fit to cover their bodies. 1. It was a cover, which note's shame. 2. It was a close covering, not of leaves. 3. It was a low, mean, base covering, to keep humble.

Take these Notes.

D. 1. In the midst of death Gods thoughts have bin to direct sinners unto life.

D. 2. Gods thoughts are not only to give life but to reveal it in his own way.

D. 3. Gods goodness prevented sin from turning all into disorder. He keeps relations.

D. 4. Grace makes the same instrument be for life, which was for death. Ver. 20.

D. 5. God pitieth his creatures in the nakednes which sin hath made.

D. 6. God makes garments, where man makes nakednes.

D. 7. Garments are a covering of nakednes, but a discovery of sin.

D. 8. Raiment should humble and not make men proud. The mischief of sin is to forget nakednes under fine cloathes. It makes nakednes appear sinne. Si nunc Adam resurgeret, & videret hanc insaniam omnium ordinum profecto credo præ stupore tanquam lapis stare. Luther.

D. 9. Suitable clothing was Gods work for several sexes. For Adam and his wife. The Law afterwards she-meth this.

D. 10. Gracious providence put's on cloathes upon sinners backs. Mica of love. Ver. 21.

The fourth and last head in Gods dealing with these sinners is the ejection of them from their paradise, or place of pleasure.

Ver. 22. And Iehovah Elohim said, behold Adam is (or was) as one of us for knowing good and evil, and now least he be put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever. And he said to them, &c. Sep. Behold Adam is become the onely one in the world, of himself knowing good and evil.

evil. And now perhaps he will stretch out his hand, &c. Cald.

Ver. 23. And Iehovah Elohim sent him out of the garden of Eden to till the ground, because he was taken from thence. From the paradise of pleasure. Sep. Cald.

Ver. 24. And he cast out Adam, and he placed at the East by the garden of Eden Cherubims and the flame of the sword turning it self to keep the way of the tree of life.

And made him dwell against the paradise of pleasure, and appointed Cherubims, and a flaming sword turned to keep, &c. Sep. And a sharp sword waving to keep, &c. Cald.

In all which passage we have considerable.

1. A terrible exprobration of the man. Ver. 22.

2. An actual ejection from his first place. Ver. 23.

3. A securing guard against mans return. Ver. 24.

Ver. 22. In the first general, God give's the reason of mans ejection out of Eden, wherein may be noted.

1. A farcaltical exprobration of mans pride and horrid sin against God upon the serpents motion. Here.

1. The judge pleading, And Iehovah Elohim said. Their creator, their Lord, from whom man was, and to whom he should have bin for ever obedient: from whose word there is no appeal; and who infallibly speaks the truth; and if he derides sinful wretches, we to them.

2. The exprobration it self, Behold the man is as one of us to know good and evil. This sentence is read interrogatively by one, behold is the man become like one of us, &c? As if it were only a communication with him, is it so now as the serpent suggested, hath the man obtained by his eating to be as one of us? Or is he not rather fallen from our Image, and become like the Father of lies, even as one of the Devils? Junius. But this interrogative reading I find not, with the general current of interpreters. It is read positively by the most; and so it must be an Ironical conviction of the man, of his devilish pride, and self exalting against God. Wherein.

1. The demonstrative particle, behold, which points out the reason of this farcaltical reproof, as if he should say, see now the fruit of believing the serpent, and denying my word.

2. The subject scorned, and reproved. Man in both sexes, yea and man in his nature propagated to posterity, the shame of this lyeth still upon the children of men; as taken of the pride of their natures, and to put a curb upon all spirits.

3. The derision it self. He is as one of us to know good and evil. This cannot be understood plainly, but farcaltically checking man for his ambitious designe suggested by the serpent, and promoted by his own sin; the words following, being to prevent him from doing more evil, do suppose, that there is a reproof in this. Herein. 1. The sin, wherefore God deride's him is couched there, he is as one of us, so was the suggestion he should be like unto God. This plural cannot be meant of Angels, for Iehovah Elohim speaks of himself in this number, who is not to be reckoned in equipage with created Angels. Neither is Adam said properly to be one of us, but only ironically; therefore that plural must be found out within the compass of God himself, in whom, Father, Son and Spirit are coequal.

2. The instance, of this ironical derision; is that which also the serpent suggested, that they should know good and evil; the time was that man knew good by doing it, and evil by forsaking, while in his state, but now he knew evil by doing it, and good by leaving it, and so had experience of shame and confusion of face and consternation of spirit; this the serpent intended, though he pretended something els. And now God reproacheth him with this, to shame and humble him to the dust, not to drive him out of hope.

2. A preventing providence, that man might not sin more against God, in abusing the privileges of the first covenant. And now lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat and live for ever. This is all a defective speech and must be supplied by that which followeth, lest he do this, he must be cast out. Here are four things provided against.

1. That he send not forth his hand, as the woman did to the forbidden tree. No attempt must be.

2. That he take not also of the tree of life. This was the other Sacramental tree, opened before, which was proper to the covenant given in innocency and did represent and seal life to the obedient; but now it concern's not the covenant of grace; by which onely man can stand which he was now under.

3. That he eat not of this; was there any more than one tree forbidden? No, not before the fall, but afterward this was; God prohibits now the seal of the first covenant, it self being broken.

4. That he live not for ever. Doth God here exclude man from eternal life? No, for he had promised recovery by the womans seed. But he denieth it in this way.

Could the tree of life have made him live now being a sinner? Surely no, the condition being broken; but man might attempt that way if not prevented.

The Notes arise thus.

D. 1. It is Gods worke of grace to humble sinners as well as cloath them. This in order.

D. 2. Its Jehovah's prerogative to scorn transgressors, and have them in derision.

D. 3. It is a bitter state for sinners to be scorned to Jehovah and derided by him.

D. 4. Trade of man to overtop God is justly repaid with scorn from him.

D. 5. Knowledge of evil by doing it, and of good, by refusing it, deserves scorn from God.

D. 6. The Devils fairest suggestions man finds the foulest shame and misery.

D. 7. God may scorn sin, and yet pity the sinner; as here in Adam.

D. 8. Gods providence forbids mans recovery by any thing in the first covenant.

D. 9. Man is apt in his nature to cross God in the way to life. Ver. 22.

The second point observable in this last act of God upon man a sinner, is his ejection from his innocent habitation. Wherein.

Ver. 23. 1. The mission or word of command for his departure, And Jehovah Elohim sent him out of the garden of Eden. The particle connecting is illative. 1. The author of this mission, is Jehovah Elohim, the great Lord who placed man there, and therefore might displace. 2. The act he sent him out, that is by expresse word, commands him away, as if he should say, come ye sinners, ye are turn'd apostates, have lost my image, are become vile and naked, waydise every place, that received you, Away, out hence, this is no place for sinners, which was made onely for innocent ones. 2. The term from whence of their emission, [from the garden of Eden] that is, their first place fitted for their first being, & their best place fitted for the image of God, and state of innocency, and from a full place, wherethey had all to make them happy.

3. His commission charge, or burden for which he is dispossessed (to till the ground from whence he was taken) or because from thence he was taken. 1. Here is the end of his emission, that is, to endure the sentence formerly pronounced, which was with paine anguish and toil, and wear out him self. A work farre different from that which should have bin in the garden, for as much as he had to do with a cursed ground, as before it hath bin declared. 2. A consideration giving some account of this delegation of man to this hard worke, from his original, because he was taken from thence. As if God should say, I was lifting up this creature toward heaven, I put my Image on him, I gave him a law to live by, and a pleasant habitation, to fill him with delights, but proud dust is risen up against me, therefore, let him now be bound, to travail and labour in the fruit of his own sin, a cursed ground, from whence his materialls were. Thus of verse. 23.

3. The execution of all this by Jehovah himself. V. 24. And he cast out Adam. 1. The Executioner is the same with the judge. 2. The act here is present expulsion, he doth actually dispossesse him, and turn him out with some indignation. It is but a fable of the Jewes that Adam struggled with God to keep possession, and thereupon God tumbled him out. But the word notes an act of distaste, against the man that had so ill requited God.

The third Head in this last generall, is Gods setting of a guard to keep out these ejected sinners. And he placed from the east to the garden of Eden &c. Cherubims, and the edge or flame of a sword turning it self to keep the way of the tree of life. 1. Gods Act, he made to dwell or abide, he placed. 2. The place of pitching, from the east to the garden of Eden. The 70. read, that God placed the man over against the Paradise of pleasure, but that is not in the Hebr. Text. 3. The guard it self. Cherubims and the flame of a sword turning it self. 1. The guard, Angels, it may be in some visible shapes. 2. The weapon, a flame of a sword, or a sword of fire, such in appearance, terrible unto sinners, as God also speaks of himself a consuming fire. 3. The activity of this guard, always watching, and turning their weapons, against sinners, that might assault, to sin in returning. 4. The end of this guard to keep the way of the tree of life, which in short was to lence up that way against sinners, that they should no more attempt to sin there, as they had done, and to drive them from all those adjuncts of the first Covenant, to beleve the way of Gods restoring life to them by the promised seed.

Some Queries are made about particulars in this passage.

1. About the time, when was man cast out? Vain are many conceits, of yeers and dayes, the nearest to truth, must be, that it was either the same day he was created, or on the Sabbath for beyond the seventh day, this history of Moses doth not extend thus farre. It is not revealed, therefore resolution can be but conjectural; and either may be conceived without danger. Yet that it was immediately upon mans sin, and that he sinned in the day he was created may probably be collected, from the context, and reasons thence gathered, & Ps. 49. ver. 11. David expresseth it, Man lodged not one night in honour.

CHAP. IV.

Thus farre we have had the history of the seven first dayes of the world, and of all the memorable works and events therein, even to the ejection of the first man and woman out of Eden, their pure habitation. Now the order of divine History leadeth to consider mans further progress in the world, and the execution of Gods purposes in the various issues of this and the following generations.

Some general precognitions will not be unfutable for the better use of the following History.

1. The manifestation of the counsaile of Gods will for putting all the generations of men into being.

1. He creat's no more but propagates. 2. He ordereth propagation from man in sin. 3. He causeth all nations to come from one man and so makes them of one blood. Act. 17. 26.

2. The execution of his purpose concerning man now fallen from his first estate.

1. Making a difference between man and man, by actual separation of some for his Church, and rejection of others, In the state of innocency, all should have bin Gods Church. See I in Cain and Abel.

2. Ordering men in divers wayes according to the difference made, Abel to faith, leaving Cain to unbelief.

3. Confirming his former sentence of putting enmity between the Serpents seed and the womans. As in this Chap.

3. His constant providence in preserving himself a Church or people called by his name in all ages, notwithstanding all the attempts of the Serpents seed.

These things may be still observed in the whole line of sacred History.

In the present Chap. we have these memorable occurrences which fell out within the compasse of above 1000. yeers.

1. The nativity of Adams two first Sonnes with their trade of life, Ver. 1. 2.

2. The Religion of these both, and the various respect they had with God. Ver. 3. 4. & 5.

3. The Apology of God to Cain. Ver. 6. 7.

4. The sad issue in Cains sin of murder. Ver. 8.

5. The proceedings of God with Cain about this murder. Ver. 9. 10.

6. The description of Cains posterity. Ver. 17. 24.

7. The nativity of Seth, &c. Ver. 25. 26.

F 3 The

The first memorable event is the nativity of Adams two first Sonnes, which followeth.

Ver. 1. And Adam knew Chavah his wife, and she conceived, and brought forth Cain, and said, I have gotten a man of Jehovah. — A man by God. Sep.

Before the Lord. Cald.

Ver. 2. And she added to bear his brother Hebel, and Hebel was a feeder of sheep, and Cain was a tiller of the ground. — Abel was a shepherd of sheep, &c. Sep.

A man tilling the ground. Cald.

In this whole narrative is declared.

1. The conjugal injoyment, Adam, &c.

2. The issue and fruit of it in two particulars.

1. Of the first born, whereof. 1. Conception. 2. Birth. 3. Name. 4. Reason of it.

2. Of the second birth, she added, &c.

3. The several trades of life given to these. 1. Hebel a shepherd. 2. Cain an husband man.

1. The conjugal injoyment is thus described. And Adam knew Chavah his wife. This is the first mention of the marriage benevolence, and for as much as it is mentioned here it is probable, if it had bin done, it would have bin mentioned before. It seems sin fell in quickly, and brought errors, and put man from that commerce, until God had discovered some favour in the midst of all threatenings. The expression is proper to the Spirit of God, denoting the conjugal work for propagation, for is used. Luk. 1. 34. Mat. 1. 25. This is yet after sin.

2. The first fruit is set out. 1. By conception. She conceived according to the word of blessing in innocency. Be fruitful, which God did not take away, but by grace overcame sin, and yet continued it with grief. 2. By birth. She brought forth that is doubtles, with throwes and bitter pangs, as was judged. Yet, she hath power to bring forth. God lets not sin make barren, not stay the birth. 3. By the name. It was Cain. 4. By the reason of the name, and she said. Or (for) I have gotten a man of Jehovah. The meaning of the name then was a possession. Herein, 1. She speaks, not doubtles without her husband in giving the name. 2. The reason of it is because now she possessed a seed, a man, she calleth him possession. 3. The principle to which this is referred is, Jehovah, and as rationally conceived, because his blessing gave it although with bitter pangs. I have gotten a man, with the Lord, that is with Favour, or from the Lord, that is, from his love, or by the Lord. But as for that, which is conceived, as if it were read by apposition, a man even Jehovah, it is altogether refuted by the man himself, who was farre otherwise; and that it should be Chavah mistake to think him so, I conceive it is here groundles, for as much as the expression notes nothing but gratulation for the fruit of the womb, as she doth afterward. Ver. 25.

3. The second birth is expressed. And she added to bring forth his brother Hebel. The second son, is the better man, but hath the worse name. 1. It is question'd whether at her first travaile and conception as being a twinne or not? It seemeth to some, that they were twinnes, but to others, otherwise. Nothing is revealed, neither matters it any thing to edifying; we may be safely ignorant. 2. About the name it is inquired, by whom and upon what ground given. 1. It is probable by the same parents it was given, though not expressed. 2. The reason is but conjectured. 1. From his mothers pain, or frustration of former conceived hope, she calleth him vanity. 2. From his own weakness. 3. It is conceived by some prophetically, thereby noting the vanity of the creature which he should despise. This is Angustines. But nothing in this is revealed.

3. The conditions or trades of them are likewise described. And Hebel was a feeder of sheep. It is conceived this he was appointed to as inferior, being younger, but it was an honest employment. 2. And Cain was a tiller of the ground. This also is conceived to be his fathers trade, and therein Cain as the elder brother to succeed. But this difference is conjectural.

These Notes may be taken hence.

2. The next head of this chapter is the religion of the seed of Adam, with the exercise and event of their several works, thus described.

Ver. 3. And it was in the end of dayes, and Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto Jehovah. — After dayes Cain, &c. a sacrifice, Sep. — After some dayes, &c. a gift before the Lord. Cald.

Ver. 4. And Hebel, he also brought of the first born of his cattel, and of the fat of them: And Jehovah had respect to Hebel and his offering. — Of his sheep. — וְהָאִשָּׁה לָרָא and God looked upon Abel and upon his gifts. Sep. — The Lord accepted with good will Abel and his gifts. Cald.

Ver. 5. But to Cain, and to his offering he had no respect, and Cain was vehemently vexed, and his countenance fell. — וְהָאִשָּׁה לָרָא he attended not to his sacrifice &c. Sep. — But Cain & his offering he did not accept in good will, &c. Cald.

In this passage we have related.

1. The history of the religion of this time set out in these examples. Wherein.

1. The notation of time.

2. The act or exercise of religion. 1. In Cain, he brought, &c. 2. In Hebel, he brought also, &c.

3. The acceptance of this with God, twofold. 1. Of good will to Hebel, 2. Of disdain unto Cain.

4. The sad issue on Cain. His discontent.

Ver. 3.

1. The notation of the time of this History is thus set down. And it was in, at, or from the end of dayes, after dayes, as the Sept. After some dayes, — Cald. Dayes here must needs be taken indefinitely, & signify yeers, so that it must be meant after several yeers; the history necessarily so inforceeth, for they were grown men, as other actions do here discover. So three dayes is for three yeers. Am. 4. 4. So is it used in prophetes much. Rev. 11. 2. 11. And so here. Yet if it be taken literally as our Translators doe use it in the margin, the end of last of dayes must be the Sabbath, which was the seventh, the last created, wherein they offered sacrifice and worshipped God.

2. The act or exercise of religion is two fold. 1. Of Cain, thus expressed. And Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering to Jehovah. 1. The sacrificer Cain upon whom the Spirit put's that brand, to be a murderer, a child of the Devil, and an erroneous person. 1. Joh. 3. 12. Ep.

Jud. 11. Yet this, exerciseth some acts of Worship and religion; 2. He brought of the fruit of the ground, He offered, as Sep. 1. His act was surely religious, and therefore it must note offering: it is conceived by some, that they both offered their gifts by the hand of their Father Adam, who was a priest, but nothing is revealed of that, and reason more guide's to conceive, that they did offer their own gifts, as we know before the priesthood was set by a Law, it was used by several heads of families to sacrifice. 2. The matter he offered Was the fruit of the ground, of which the Law also commands a meat offering and a thank offering, and so every year, before they were to eat of the new corne they were to bring a Minchah, an offering of the first to God. Lev. 23. 14. It is the conceit of some, that Cain did not bring the first fruits, and therefore God rejected it; but that is not clear. It is evident, it was an unbloody sacrifice, and therefore may note, that Cain was not sensible of his own lost condition, neither did by faith apprehend the price of sinners redemption, held out in the promised seed. 3. The object terminating his Worship, it was Jehovah, at least in shevy, he made it so apparent, that he worshipped the Lord; but in truth, he honored not him:

2. And Hebel, or Abel, he also brought of the first born of the sheep, and of their fat. He offered. Sep. Where also occurs 1. The sacrificer, Abel of whom the Spirit noteth, that he was a beleever, that he was a righteous one, &c. Heb. 11. 2. His act of religion, He offered of the first born of his sheep or flock and the fat of them. It is likely it was by his own hand. 1. His act was an offering by faith; 2. The object was blood and fat for a part by Gods Law for himself, the one for remission, the other for a favour of rest, wherein Abel seeth himself a sinner, and looketh by faith to the blood of the lamb, of God. Leu. 3. 16. 17. Num. 11. 22.

3. The object is the same Jehovah in truth, upon whom his faith and service were terminated.

It is questioned, upon what ground these sacrifices were performed, whether upon Gods command?

Doubtes yea, though Moses mention it not, and the Law of ordinances was not then given as after at Sinai, God had wayes of revealing himself then.

1. Abel offered in faith, therefore he must have a word from God, without which faith cannot work.

2. God accepted him, therefore it must be his command, otherwise God abhorres sacrifices. 1. Sam. 15. 22.

3. God did take care of saving them, and therefore must needs give them a rule to walk by.

4. Gods giving the same Law more solemnly afterward, sheweth it to, be his mind to them.

Now

Now we shall take some Notes hence.

D. 1. Sin, however it made man Apostat from God, yet it did not extinguish the religion of God. This is grace.

D. 2. God and nature teach parents to nurture children in the religion of God.

D. 3. Set and stated times there have bin for Gods Worship from the beginning. The Sabbath. Cap. 2. 3.

D. 4. From the fall of man God did teach their recovery by sacrifice.

D. 5. Wicked ones even the children of the Devil have made shew of religion from the first fall. Ver. 3.

D. 6. Hypocrites come without blood, even without sense of their own deserts, and self abasement and faith to serve God.

D. 7. Sincere worshippers have bin in Gods Church below from the beginning.

D. 8. True Worshippers do give a full offering to God suitable to his mind, by faith in the promised seed. Ver. 4.

3. Now followeth the various respect, or acceptance which these two sacrificers found with God.

Ver. 4. 1. Gods respect to the younger is here related first. And Jehovah had respect to Abel and his offering. Now begins the difference to be manifested between these Worshippers.

1. They were brothers of the same womb and original. 2. They were educated alike. 3. In outward shew they are not alike accepted of the Lord, he put a difference. Herein. 1. The agent who make's this difference. Jehovah, he that only is, and he whose favour only can make life, and in whose displeasure is death, no matter who despiseth if he favour's, nor who favour's if he despiseth. That is true religion whose praise is of God.

2. The act which make's the difference he had respect. וישע from שע which is to look upon one in favour, when it is spoken of God. The 70 only read, he looked on, the Caldee, he received with good will. It note's a looking of faith in the creature. Isai. 17. 7. That this acceptance was made known by some visible signe from God, is more than probable, because Kain did observe, which he could not do in a spiritual way, the word also which the Apostle useth, that God did testify of Abels gift doth plainly import that it was by some special work of God which gave this testimonial of his acceptance of him. Heb. 11. 4. It is likely it might be by fire devouring the sacrifice, as God did several times to others; so some translate, God flamed upon Hebel. Theodotion. Lcu. 9. 2. 4.

3. The object of this respect is under two expressions. 1. The person, Hebel. He of whom it is said that he was righteous, and offered by faith, with all self-denial, resting upon grace, such a poor beleaving soul is here respected, before his worke. 2. The offering, and to his offering, the same word is for Kains offering, but here it note's burnt offering; This is accepted for the person, els God careth not to smell, upon the fat burning, and the person is accepted by grace in beleaving. 1. Grace on Gods part, 2. Faith on Abels maketh this great difference.

2. Gods respect unto the elder, is thus related. But to Cain and his offering he had not regard. 1. The discernor is the same Jehovah, he that cuseth whom he will, and none can resist. 2. His act is here negative, לא שער that is he accepted not in love, neither was pleased, but turned away his face, neither would give a visible token of favour. 3. The object, is also under a double expression, 1. Of the person Kain, him God rejecteth, 2. Of his worke which was his offering, first his person is distasteful and then his offering.

4. The sinful issue of this difference upon Kain. And Kain was vexed vehemently and his countenance fell. His sin is fretting against God, and envying man, it is set down, 1; in his affection. Kain vehemently burned with anger, his spirit boiled.

2. In expression, his faces fell, it is plural, and it may note several ways of expression, by looks, speech, gesture, surely great was his passion against God.

Whence we conclude.

D. 1. From the first generations of men some have bin true, some false Worshippers of God.

D. 2. Jehovah himself is the first cause of difference among men.

D. 3. God regards no privilege in the flesh in accepting of men, no primogeniture.

D. 4. Grace only accepts a soul in beleaving, or made righteous by faith.

D. 5. Persons are accepted before duties.

duities, and these in respect of them.

D. 6. Unbelief and hypocrisy make souls despised in the eyes of God, though fair with men.

D. 7. Now work of man can of it self gain favour with God.

D. 8. It is proper for hypocrites to be angry with God about his non-acceptance, but never with themselves for their ill performance. Ver. 5.

3. Now followeth Gods expostulation with Kain about his discontent, and anger at the non-acceptance of his person and sacrifice.

Ver. 6. And Jehovah said to Kain why art thou angry with thee? And why are thy countenances fallen? And the Lord God said unto Kain, why art thou over-grieved? &c. Sep. Why art thou angry. Cald.

Ver. 7. If thou do well (is) there not acceptance, excellency, or forgiveness? And if thou dost not well, at the door is sin watching, and unto thee is his desire, and thou shalt rule over him. If thou hast offered well, but not divided well, hast thou not sinned? Be quiete unto thee is his turning, and thou shalt rule him. Sep. If thou dost thy works well, shall it not be forgiven thee? And if thou shalt not do well, thy sin is kept to the day of judgment, wherein it will be, that he take vengeance on thee, if thou shalt not be converted, but if thou shalt be converted, it shall be forgiven thee. Cald.

This expostulation is reprehensory upon Kain, for his envy to his Brother, and fretting against the Lord. Herein these particulars are observable.

1. The party reprehending, with the person reprehended. And Jehovah said to Kain.

The unbelieving sacrificer, Kain is here reproved, the just God, Jehovah himself raketh him up in these sharp expostulations. And that not by Adam as some conceive, but in the same manner as he spake to Adam himself. Gen. 3. 9.

2. The matter of this reproof, his anger, envy and discontented carriage, expressed in 2 questions.

1. Why art thou angry with thee? This was his evil affection toward God and his brother, discovered before; this God could bear no longer, and therefore now plead's with him.

2. And why are thy countenances fallen? This was the wicked expression of his wrath that he could not bridle, but of face and gesture, scornful looks, grinding teeth, spiteful demeanour he maketh it out.

3. The reason of this reproof is the equity of it, thus discovered, 1. By the good return which God maketh unto well-doing. If thou do well (is) there not acceptance? Wherein we have, 1. The work supposed, If thou shalt do well; This act though a general expression, yet is intended particularly, to sacrificing, wherein he was formerly conversant; now to do well in that kind, however it is easily known, what the word signifieth, yet not by all what the thing is; the Apostle fitly expresseth it, in Abels offerings; by faith he offered a fuller sacrifice, &c. Heb. 11. 4. So that to do well in this matter, is by faith in the mediator to offer unto God, comming with self-denial, and depending upon grace, through the mediator for acceptance.

2. The reward of this הנותן שכר This is concluded to be an infinitive put for a substantive, from נשן which hath various significations, whence some difference hath bin in rendering the sense of it in this place. 1. It notes lifting up, and thence some read, should there not be lifting up of thy face, which is now fallen? 2. It notes making or receiving, and thence it is rendered, is there not acceptance? 3. It notes excellency, or preeminence, so it is read, shalt thou not have the excellency? 4. It notes lifting away of sin, or forgiveness. Num. 14. 19. Ps. 32. 1. So some read, Is there not forgiveness? viz. To a beleaving sacrificer, who doth well. Those two senses of acceptance, and forgiveness, are most proper to this place, and they do concur, for God accepts a soul by not imputing sin, or by forgiving it, so that here upon God rebukes Kain; no cause hast thou to be angry, didst thou believe, and believably offer, sure forgiveness or acceptance should be unto thee.

2. By the due return to evil, doing. But if thou dost not well sin is watching at the door. Where.

1. The act supposed, if thou dost not well, this is but the negative of the former if thou believe not, nor offer believably, such were the evil works of Kain opposite to his Brothers good, as the Apostle notes, 1 Joh. 3. 12.

2. The return due, is not sin watching at the door, or sin is watching at the door. Herein. 1. The evil itself returned, sin both in the guilt and punishment of it, which is rejection, contempt and vengeance from God. 2. The readiness of it, in that it leth, and watcheth, damnation slumbers not as the Apostle. 2. Pet. 2. 3.

3. The earnest of it, in being at the door which is a proverbial speech used by the spirit to note the nearness of judgment. Matth. 24. 33. Jam. 5. 9. However this is applied, to the openness of judgment, that it shall not be hid, as that out of doors, leth open to view. Or, by the doors some conceive an unquiet place, that although sinners would be quiet within, yet sin will be at the door to trouble, and distress them; but the former interpretation is most natural. The Septu. did much mistake the words here. The Cald. paraphrase. Thy sin is kept to the day of judgment.

ואחר תמשל בו
3. By the respect of his brother unto him, God sheweth the equity of his reproof for his anger expressed. 1. By his brothers subjection, And to thee is his desire. It is the same speech which God used to express the subjection of the woman to her husband. Gen. 3:16. As if God had said, why so angry with thy poor brother? he is subject to thee, he hath not lifted up himself against thee, he hath done thee no wrong, his desire is unto thee, willing to keep his place, my respect to him, is no fault of his to thee. 2. By his own preeminence, and thou shalt rule over him. God giveth him here the right of primogeniture in the flesh; As if he should say, Abel striveth not for mastery, thou hast outwardly the rule, and thy duty is to love, and preserve those who are under thee, and not to be angry, and seek their ruine, because they are better unto God than thy self; its horrible iniquity that pastors and rulers should destroy their people. The relative in both sentences by some is translated unto sin, as if the desire of sin should be to him, and he should rule over it; but the syntax will not admit it, nor indeed the scope of Gods reasoning bear it.

Now the Notes.

- D. 1. Jehovah take's notice of the wrath of the wicked against his saints, and their fretting at them, and doth reprove it. So with Laban. Genes. 31:24.
- D. 2. God is a just reprover of unbelieving Hypocrites and sinners, Ver. 6.
- D. 3. God's suppositions of duty to sinners, proves not their full present ability for it but the justice of the required duty. A son of Adam cannot do well of himself.
- D. 4. Doing well unto God is onely effected by faith in the Mediator.
- D. 5. Forgiveness and acceptance God allows to such sacrificers.
- D. 6. Unbelief doth nothing but evil against God.
- D. 7. Guilt and judgment will come speedily and surely upon the heads of such evil doers. It lingers not.

D. 8. Honest subjection of saints to wicked ones in power, satisfieth not, they are angry notwithstanding.

D. 9. Outward rule God giveth sometimes to wicked ones, over his saints.

D. 10. Soveraignty contents not such wicked ones, but onely tyrannie to destroy the saints. Therefore God chides here with Kain.

D. 11. God warneth wicked ones against such iniquity. Ver. 7.

The fourth head remarkable is Kains carriage to his brother after Gods reproof, which was very doleful, and the character of a reprobate mind.

Ver. 8. And Kain spake to Abel his Brother and it was in their being in the field, and Kain rose up against Abel his Brother, and killed him. Let us go into the field, and it was, &c. Sep. Cald. The same with Heb.

In which passage may be observed. 1. The connexion of this act with Gods precedent reproof. 2. God had convicted him; there was no just cause of his fretting against him, because nothing but justice was done. 3. That his envy was causing against his Brother, he no way having done wrong, but keeping his place of subjection to his Brother, did desire onely to Worship God purely. The copulative, and, joineth that with this act of Kain following, which adde's a most heavy aggravation. 2. The carriage toward his Brother expressed two wayes.

1. In word, Kain spake to Abel his Brother. wherein. 1. The saluted Kain, full of burning anger and envy, fired by Hell. 2. The saluted Abel, a poor innocent humble believer, and by his relation, naturall Brother unto Kain. 3. The salutation itself, he spake unto him, what he said is not expressed, but a great and unusual pause is made in the Hebrew ext. The 70 read, as if it were let us go into the field, which is congruous enough to that which followeth: the Rabs feigne along discourse between them, upon occasion whereof they falling out, Kain rose up & slew him. But this is among their fables. Nothing certain can be said, where the matter is not revealed; yet very probable is, that Kain here dissimuled his anger, and spake kindly to get him into the field, for it is to be conceived, that if he had threatened, or chafed, Abel had not gon with him, but have fled from his face, therefore we take this speech for some feigned salutation as most upon good reason do.

2. In deed, wherein are observable, 1. The opportunity, And it was in their being in the field. Time and place now serve his cruel purpose. 1. He hath him singly. 2. Remote from help. 3. Secret to his thinking that none should find out his worke. 2. The act is twofold. 1. Assault, And Kain rose up against Abel his Brother. The assailant ran full of rage and cruelty, the assailed Hebel, full of simplicity, and harmlesnes, as a lamb before the shearer: And the assault, he rose up against him, that is with violence, fury, and bloody revenge. 2. Victory to satisfy his bloody thirst, and killed him. Here is the sad issue of his unbelief, fretting against God, envy to his Brother, and his dissimulation.

יקם יחרנו
That is, unnaturally murdered him, with what circumstances, it is not expressed, but nothing would satisfy but his blood, and to take him from this earth. The spirit giveth the right reason of this, which aggravat's more, wherefore did he kill him? because his own works were evil, and his Brothers good. 1 Joh. 3:12. This is the heart of malignity to hate and destroy for goodness sake.

Now wee Note.

- D. 1. Gods convictions and reproofe's upon the wicked, occasion but greater hardnes, and rage in sin.
- D. 2. It is usuall with wicked ones to dissimule their rage toward God and his saints.
- D. 3. The simplicity of the saints oft times make's them a prey to the hypocrisy of the wicked.
- D. 4. Hypocritical enemies, though they be restrained for a time, opportunity revealeth them.
- D. 5. Occasion, advantages, privacy and remotenes from lets, make discovery of Hypocrisy.
- D. 6. Nearest relations escape not the violence of Hypocrites. Hypocrisy is unnaturall.
- D. 7. Hypocrites rise with power, and not with justice against the saints, so Kain.
- D. 8. Nothing but blood of saints will satisfy cruell dissemblers, and that for goodness sake.

D. 9. The method of the Devil is to draw men from boyling malicious thoughts unto murder, V. 8.

The 5th head is Gods proceeding with Cain about this fact; wherein occur these particulars.

1. Gods inquisition for blood.
2. Kains plea of ignorance. Ver. 9.
3. Gods conviction of him. 10.
4. Gods sentence on him. 11. 12.
5. The Impression of it on Kain. Ver. 13. 14.
6. Gods charge concerning him. V. 15.
7. A partiall execution of the sentence. Ver. 16.

We shall consider these particulars in order as they are here propoed, the twoe former are in the 9th Verse, as followeth.

Ver. 9. And Jehovah said to Kain, where is Hebel thy brother? And he said, I know not, am I my brothers Keeper? Sept. and Cald. same.

In this Verse are considerable, 1. Jehovahs inquisition for blood. And therein these terms.

1. The inquisitor, Jehovah, the all-knowing God, who made all, and whose eye is in every place. He by himself and not another. It might be by voice or by sting of conscience.
2. The person examined, he said to Kain this unbelieving Hypocrite and murderer.
3. The inquisition itself, where is Hebel thy Brother? The question is not here, of one ignorant or doubting, but of one judging and convincing a malefactor, to bring to the sense of evil, and calling him to an account for it. The question supposeth, 1. That Hebel was missing, 2. That Kain was found out to be the shedder and hider of his blood; therefore God inquire's of him, not of another, 3. That the sin was aggravated by his relation, where is thy Brother?

2. Kains answer to this inquiry, whereof there are two parts. 1. An impudent lye, in pleading ignorance, he said I know not. See the spirit of wickednes, how sottish, perverse, and hard it make's a soul; see the horror of guilt, sinners would not own it; see the power of the Devil in wicked ones, to maintain evil against so plain a light. He knew too well, but yet impudently faith to God I know not. 2. An arrogant contempt of Gods authority questioning, and rejection of the Law of nature binding him. Am I the keeper of my Brother? 1. Herein is pride of heart against God, as if he had said, what aske you me for him, 2. Rejection of Gods Law written in nature, that he should preserve and seek the good of his Brother; he owned no such duty, but resolved rather to be his Brothers destroyer, and murderer. 3. Unnaturalnes, he professeth that he hath no regard so much as to preserve his Brother, the son of his mother, and one who willingly was subject to him. Speakest thou to me of my Brother, what is my Brother to me?

אי הכל איהו

ויאמר לא ידעתי

השמר אחי אנכי

The third particular is Gods conviction of him, which followeth in these words.

Ver. 10. Ver. 10. And he said what hast thou done? The voice of thy Brothers bloods crys unto me from the ground. — And God laid, why hast thou done this? &c. Septuag. — The voice of the blood of the generations which where to succeed of thy Brothers, cryeth before me from the earth.

וַיֹּאמֶר In this passage are. 1. The charge laid home upon him; And he said, what hast thou done? Wherein. 1. The accuser, God himself, and he said, viz. Jehovah, who examined him before. 2. The crime charged in this expostulation, what hast thou done? Which is a question of accusing, and reproving, and sharp curbing of him, not of one ignorant or doubting. Why hast thou done this, the 70. that is, in plain terms. Thou hast murdered thy poor Brother, whom I accepted, and thoughtest to cover his blood in the earth; O thou wretch, what hast thou done? What an horrid, unheard of wickedness is this? The querie aggravat's the sin abundantly.

2. The testimony which make's good the charge, There is the voice of the blood of thy Brother crying unto me from the ground.

אָדֹנָי The witness, Abel his murdered Brother, the fact itself upon him, whence that, Abel being dead speaketh, Heb. 11.

רַמֵּי 4. 2. The evidence materially produced, his bloods, that is wickedly and cruelly shed, the Cald. adds, the blood of generations, which should issue from him, or rather the bloods of all the seed of the woman, as Christ put's all upon one score, from the blood of Abel to the blood of Zechariah, &c. 2 Chron. 24. 22. Mat. 23. 25. 26. Much blood. 3. The expression of it by voice, such as God heard. 4. The importunitie, the voice of these bloods crying, the noise of it giveth God no rest night nor day, till vengeance come.

קוֹל 5. The term of its appeal, God himself the just judge. 6. The circumstance of the place, confirming the charge, it was from the ground.

From whence we gather.

D. 1. Hypocritical persecutors think to bury the saints and all their persecutions out of sight. Supposed.

D. 2. Jehovah will have an account of his saints, though he leave them to be killed by such cruel ones.

D. 3. Hypocrisy and infidelity make men as impudent in denying sin, as bold in committing it.

D. 4. Hypocrisy make's sinners deal proudly, and contemptuously with God.

D. 5. Hypocrisy regards not Gods command, nor suffereth repentance for the breach of it.

D. 6. Sin make's men unnatural, even to deny bowels to brethren. Ver. 9.

D. 7. Jehovah himself is inquisitor for blood. Ps. 9. 13.

D. 8. Jehovah aggravats bloody dealings against his saints to the uttermost. What hast thou done?

D. 9. Blood is a crying sin in the ears of God, but especially that of the saints. Revel. 6. 10.

D. 10. The earth cannot cover innocent blood which is spilt.

D. 11. The whole measure of bloods from the first to the last Martyr will be charged upon wicked persecutors. Mat. 23. 35.

D. 12. Jehovah is the God of his dead Saints of Abel. &c.

The fourth particular in Gods proceeding with Kain is his sentence passed on him in the 2. next Verses.

Ver. 11. And now cursed be thou from the ground which hath opened its mouth to receive the bloods of thy Brother from thy hand. Sept. and Cald. same.

Ver. 12. When thou tillest the ground, it shall not add to give its strength to thee, a fugitive and a Vagabond shalt thou be in the earth. — Because thou shalt till the earth and it shall not add, &c. groaning and trembling thou shalt be in the earth. Sept. — unstable and a wanderer thou shalt be, &c. Cald.

In this sentence pronounced are observable. 1. The time of inflicting it, and now, that is, the very now of the murder committed, the judgment is not delayed by God. 2. The sentence itself consisting of three branches. 1. Cursed be thou from the ground, &c. Wherein. 1. The subject specified, Thou, thou Kain the murderer, thy body, thy soul, thyself bloody wretch, in laying penalty upon Adam, God said Cursed be the ground, &c. Adam in his person was not so damned out of the presence of God; for from him was to come, the promised seed, through which which he was accepted; but in him wore comprehended the portion of Gods elect to be saved. But Kain was not only a sinner in Adam, but had fold himself to do wickedness in Gods sight; therefore he is cursed in his person.

Ver. 11.
וְעַתָּה

2. The penalty inflicted in this first branch, in which. 1. The evil imposed. Cursed be thou from the ground. 1. The evil is, cursed, which carrieth in it, all spiritual & temporal evil laid by the wrath of God upon a sinner, driving him out of his presence and from hope of favour; which seem's to be the ground of that complaint of Kain, thou hast driven me from thy face. This curse is the giving of him up to a reprobate mind, to the power of sin and Satan and all the miserable consequents of the same, an excommunication or separation of him from God. 2. The specification of it, from the ground, the word here is not earth which note's the continent, where he was to wander, but that which should have given him food, & he made the receptacle of his brothers blood. That ground Moses seem's to intend, by the reason following. Some conceive it the whole continent, and so make this as a peece of the curse, supposing it a defective speech, and therefore supply it thus, cursed be thou, an exile from the earth. But first, he was not exiled from the earth, but his punishment was to wander in it; & again, that evil is expressly mentioned afterward. Fugitive. Others look upon this expression, as if it were a mitigation of the curse, as if God should not curse him from heaven but from earth; and understand it, concerning his posterity, of whom there might be hope, that some might be saved, but this is not likely. 1. This sentence was for a personal sin, and so laid on the person. 2. It is evident he was cursed from heaven, therefore this expression is not by way of mitigation. The truth therefore is this, that the ground is urged as witness in aggravating his sin, as it was mentioned before, so that the meaning is, cursed be thou, even from the ground, and its testimony, which riseth up against such an execrable murderer.

2. The reason of this is added, which hath opened its mouth to receive the bloods of thy brother from thy hand. This proveth the former interpretation of the ground that it called for this curse upon him, because it received Abels blood. Several terms are here. 1. It opened its mouth. Not favouring Kains cruelty to hide it, but to keep the blood for a testimony, and in pity to the innocent that it should not be trampled on. 2. The End, to receive the bloods of thy brother, that is, to take it into a receptacle, to keep it, and from thy own hand, to produce the murderer, and lay him out to vengeance.

2. The second branch of the sentence is in these words. When thou tillest the ground it shall not add to give its strength to thee. Herein. 1. His labour supposed. When thou shalt labour or shalture the ground. His calling was an husband man; And he is cursed in that. 2. The return expressed. It shall not add to give its strength to thee. This is a superadded curse on the earth, to that which was before upon Abels sin; and doubles carrieth a double curse unto Kain, miserable barrenness is carried in it, & with a special restriction unto him, although it have strength to give food to others, it shall not be so to thee.

The third branch of the sentence. A fugitive a vagabond thou shalt be in the earth. 1. The punishment in two words expressed; some make the one to note, one that is unsettled in place, and the other one that knoweth not where to goe, but it is hard so to distinguish, both together they note a most miserable, unquiet vexatious state, that a man can be at peace no where; So that here! ejection out of the church, and setting him to rove, with those sad companions Ochim and Zym. It notes inward and Isai. 43. outward disquietnes. 2. The certainty of v. 12, 22. it. Such thou shalt be. 3. The place of its execution, the whole earth, in every part of it, still he shall be restless. Here a question or twee.

1. Why did not God command him to Quest. dye, by that Law given Gen. 9. 6.

1. God is free for his punishment. 2. God Answ. did put him to a more terrible end; as if he did hang him in chains alive, for such was his torment all the while he lived. Ps. 59. 12. Ps. 109. 10.

Do not the Saints suffer this Penalty of Quest. wandering to and fro? Heb. 11. 36. 37.

No, not as a penalty, but a trial of graces. Answ. 2. They were never restless in Spirit, pursued with guilt. 3. Their wanderings were still to glory. This was none of Kains; he runnes up and down, till he fall into hell.

Now take these notes hence:

D. 2. The person of the sinner must bear the punishment of sin. The blood shedder, thou.

The fifth particular in these judicial proceedings with Cain, is the impression, which the sentence maketh on his Spirit, as followeth.

Ver. 13. And Cain said to Jehovah, my iniquity is great above forgiving, or my evil is great above bearing. My crime is great then to be forgiven. Sep. My iniquity is great above forgiving. Cald.

Ver. 14. Behold thou hast cast me out this day from the face of the ground, and from thy face shall I be hid, and I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth, and it shall be, every one finding me will kill me.

And thou wilt cast me out this day, &c. and I shall be groaning and trembling, &c. Sep. — and I shall be unstable and wandering, &c. Cald.

In this passage we have observable.

Ver. 3. 1. The reply of the condemned sinner, And Cain said to Jehovah.

1. The malefactor sentenced, and enraged, bloody Cain.

2. The judge, righteous and inexorable, Jehovah.

3. The reply in his own speech, which followeth. The manner doubtless was full of rage and discontent.

2. The matter of his reply shewing what impression the direful sentence of God did make upon him; and that in two dismal effects.

1. Despair, in these expressions; My iniquity is great above forgiving. Or, my evil, viz. of punishment, is great above bearing. Herein may we consider.

1. The subject of the proposition, עניי which word signifieth, both the evil of sin, and eminently of idolatry, and the guilt thence arising. Hof. 4. 15. And also the evil of punishment or affliction, but always that which is the fruit of sin, both may be taken in here, but primarily the former.

2. The attribute is here under a double acceptance also, which the word alloweth. 1. Lifting up, or taking away of sin, that is by forgiveness, so we have shewed the burden of the word. Ver. 7. Pl. 32. 1. So it is proper to the subject, sin. 2. Bearing or enduring, so the word doth note also, and if so it be understood, it agreeth with punishment: this variety we must observe; that if sin be meant in the subject, then it is above Gods forgiveness, as he apprehendeth; but if of punishment, then it was above Kains strength to bear. Both discover the deep impression of despair; from the inseparable connexion of the attribute to the subject. Sin is greater than to be forgiven, & punishment greater than can be borne, so Cain cryeth and fineth. 2. Fear and terror vexing him, from the apprehension of 4 things in the sentence pronounced.

1. Behold thou hast cast me out from the face of the ground. Herein. 1. A note of demonstration, which he expresseth from the clearness of his own sense upon whom the sentence was passed, which sheweth, that the evidence of it was upon him. 2. The evil here demonstrated, wherein.

1. Gods act, thou hast cast me out, or driven me out, execution as well as sentence. 2. Term from whence, from the face of the ground, that is the ground he tilled, his own habitation, not the whole earth for therein he was to wander. 3. The time this day, that is the day of the sentence, God suddenly removed his Tabernacle, and drove him out of his habitation, this terrifieth.

2. The next part of his sentence is, And from thy face shall I be hid. 1. The subject, Cain. 2. The sentence, hiding, turning into darkness, separation, never more to see. 3. Term from whence, Gods face, from thy face, that is thy favour and the manifestation of the same. 1. In protection, now God hath cast me from his care, and given me to myself. 2. In acceptance, neither my person nor offering shall ever more be accepted, from his ordinances and from the blessing of them am I hid, in darkness. 3. In respect of hope, I am hid, and never hope to have thy face revealed. Wo is me. This worketh terror.

3. The next cause of fear, And I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth, that is. 1. Disquieted with terrors within. 2. Unsettled. 3. Roving up and down restles.

3. The last impression which raised this terror is, And it shall be, every one finding me will kill me. This he gathers himself, from the former sentence of being cast out and hid from Gods face; 1. The certainty of apprehension, It shall be, 2. The universality of it, Every creature I meet. 3. The severity of vengeance apprehended no less than death, I shall be killed; and so he wanders under infinite deaths apprehended by his guilty conscience.

D. 5. Terrors and frightments come invincibly upon hypocritical persecutors of the saints.

D. 7. It is a terrifying vengeance unto hypocrites to be driven from the face of God.

D. 8. Sense of Gods wrath hunting sinners up and down is terrible.

D. 9. Hypocritical persecutors, of Kains race, are shut forth from Gods protection of Grace.

D. 10. Terrors of death in every place and from every thing possess such sinners. Ver. 14.

The sixth and last head in Gods dealings with Cain is the charge which he giveth concerning him, upon his apprehension of death upon every hand.

Ver. 15.

Ver. 15. And Jehovah said to him, therefore every one killing Cain, shall be avenged sevenfold; and Jehovah put a sign upon Cain, that none finding him should smite, or slay him. And the Lord God said unto him, not so, every one that killeth Cain, shall suffer revenges, &c. Sep. Vengeance shall be taken of him unto seven generations, And Cald.

This being a special word from God concerning Cain, and his condition, the true scope of it, is of much importance to be known by us. And the rather because it is by several men turned to several purposes, some carrying it toward a mitigation of the former sentence, others rather to an aggravation of it as to himself, what ever herein of good might be intended unto others. This last is most consonant to the truth, and to the context, and therefore the interpretation of the words must be suitable hereunto.

It the whole passage, occur these particulars. 1. The sovereign ruler, judge and disposer replying to Kains complaint, And Jehovah said unto him. The great Lord manageth all the business against him himself; he gave the sentence, and he giveth charge for execution, and for the circumstances, and manner, how it shall be done to the malefactor. 2. The disposal of him, and charge concerning him, with reference to his fear of being slain. Hereabout are observable,

1. The word which Jehovah giveth out, Therefore every one killing Cain, shall be avenged sevenfold. Wherein these terms.

1. The illative, therefore, which sheweth the occasion of this charge, to be Kains mistake of his sentence, when he saith, every one finding me will kill me, for God had not adjudged him to be killed; but this his own guilty conscience suggested, that it was due from every hand; where upon, God giveth him to know, that he had otherwise determined his execution.

2. The word upon this occasion spoken by God, which is by way of threatening all that shall so pervert the sentence of God given, as to aid him out of his pain. Herein the subject threatened every one killing Cain, that is any that by violence should take away his life, before the time allotted him. 2. The threatening it self, he shall be avenged sevenfold. That is, he shall be far more severely punished than Cain, many strokes of vengeance shall be laid on his back; for so the number seven is put for indefinite. Pro. 26. 25. The Cald. reads, to seven generations.

But why should he be exempt from killing who deserved not to live?

1. Gods will in punishing is not questionable. 2. His life was a continual death, nor any way given him in mercy to himself. Pl. 55. 12. 3. It is justly conceived it was likewise for the increase of the world, and serving Gods providence in them who were to be borne of him.

Why should his death be punished more than his Brothers?

1. Not that his blood was more precious. 2. It would have bin expresse rebellion against Gods own sentence, seeing he would not have him cease. 3. It was to make the sin more terrible in that corrupt age which followed.

2. The worke of God in this disposal of Cain. And Jehovah put a sign upon Cain, that none finding him should smite him. Herein we have. 1. Gods act, he put a sign upon Cain, that is he marked him out, and fastened some visible note upon him, and legible, and to be understood by such of whom he was afraid.

The great question of curiosity is, what this signe was? And many are the fabulous conceits of Jews and others about it; not worth the naming. In short, it is not here expressed by Gods Spirit, and therefore it will be rash to determine. Some piously conceive it was a trembling body from a perplexed soul; but all is conjecture. This onely is revealed and certain, that it was such a visible token, that did distinguish him from others, and discover the mind of God concerning him. 2. The end, that none finding him should smite him, that is, to death; doubtless this concerned not only Adam, and that seed of his then living, but those to be born, that in all generations, so long as Cain continued, men might see the mark of a murderer, and first bloody persecutor; and might let him alone to the Vengeance God had determined on him.

Observe we,

- D. 1. Jehovah is the sovereign disposer of the life and death of his very enemies; it hangs upon his word.
- D. 2. Jehovah's word interdicts murder upon murderers.
- D. 3. God hath made the very murder of the wicked odious to man by seven fold vengeance.
- D. 4. Jehovah may exempt persecutors from the stroke of man, but not from his own vengeance.
- D. 5. Interdiction of death to the wicked may be with designed good to others, though not to them.
- D. 6. Outward signals for delay of execution may be vouchsafed to the wicked.
- D. 7. Such signes carry terror to such horrid ones from God.
- D. 8. Mysterious is the Providence of God in continuing and taking away the lives of his saints and of his enemies. That Abel should dye & Cain live, & yet Cain be cursed of God, and Abel blessed. V. 14.

The last thing in Gods proceedings with Cain is the impartial execution of the sentence, Ver. 16. V. 16. And Cain went out from the face of Jehovah and sat down in the land Nod, to the east of Eden. — Cald. same, — from the face of God, and dwelt in the land Nod over against Eden. Sep.

In the whole is declared the execution of the sentence of banishment upon Cain; and his entrance upon his fugitive estate; and restless agitations. In the whole are these terms. 1. The subject of this execution, Cain the murderer. 2. The penalty itself wherein.

1. His motion, And he went out; this was it that God laid on him, that he should be a fugitive; that is, to wander & fly. 2. The term from whence, from the face of Jehovah. His banishment and departure hence is the sting of his judgement. The face of Jehovah doth usually note his favour and respect of love unto poor creatures. Pl. 80. 3. 7. 19. This falleth under a double consideration. 2. Of Gods invisible favour, which is given out in the face of Jesus Christ. Pl. 17. 11. 2. Cor. 4. 6. 2. Of Gods visible signal presence in his ordinances, in which sense, Gods face and presence is oftentimes used. 3. The term where unto of his motion, which is thus expressed, and sat down in the land Nod to the east of Eden. In these, 1. The manner of his approach hither, he sat down, not as if he had ease in this posture, but fixing and abiding. 2. The term it self set out, 1. By the continent the land or earth. 2. By the quality of it, it was Nod, from the name Nod a fugitive, where ever he was it was a place of fustiness, he was never quiet there, he went from Gods face, the only rest, unto Nod, that is, the place of trouble, and disturbance, and vexation. 3. By the situation of it, to the east of Eden. 1. A place distinct from the Church, whence the seeds came to be distinguished, Adam and his family were on one side of Eden, Cain and his on the other. 2. A place remote from pleasure having no comfort by its situation, but aggravation of torment to be excluded the place of pleasure.

It is conceived by some to be a place Nod-madur in the desert of Arabia bounding upon Babilon. All is but conjecture, and where Eden or that were after the flood, none can determine.

The Notes hence are these.

- D. 1. Gods threatnings of wrath ends in execution of the same.
- D. 2. Banishment from Gods favour temporal and eternal is the doom of impenitent persecutors.
- D. 3. Impenitent persecutors sit down nowhere but in the place of trouble, and restlessness, there they pitch.
- D. 4. Providence hath distinguished the seed malignant from his Church of old.
- D. 5. Pleasure may be on the side of of the wicked, but they never reach it.
- D. 6. Excommunication from Gods pleasant face in ordinances, draweth after it all vexation. Ver. 16.

This sixth head of this chap. Is the history story of the malignant race issuing from this cursed root, Cain the first bloody persecutor; wherein many observable passages of providence occur. The whole history concerns seven generations from Cain even to the time of the flood. It is concise and therefore much obscurity is in it. It may be divided into two parts

1. That which respects five descents. Ver. 17. 18.
 2. That which concerne's the two last from Lamech. Ver. 19. 24.
- The first issue of Cain in his fugitive condition is thus described.

Ver. 17. And Cain knew his wife, and she conceived and brought forth Chanoch, and he was building a city, and called the name of the city according to the name of his son Chanoc. — And she conceiving brought forth Enoch, &c. Sep. — Cald. is to the same with the Hebr.

Ver. 18. And there was born to Chanoch Yirad, and Yirad begat Mechuiah, and Mechuiah begat Methusael, and Methusael begat Lamech. Cald. to the same. — And to Enoch was born Gaidad, &c. Sep. Maiael, Mathousaja, &c.

In this partial description of Kains posterity we have five degrees, which will fitly divide this history into so many parts.

1. The first descent from Cain is thus described. And Cain, &c. Wherein are these particulars.

1. An act of Cain in order to this seed. And Cain knew his wife. The curse formerly passed on him permit's this act, and God taketh course to execute it further by this means, conjugal enjoyments are here under a curse. The phrase of knowing his wife is the favory expression of conjugal benevolence by the Spirit of God. The questions here are, who was his wife? And when he took her? To which is answered. 1. It must surely be one of Adams daughters; many vain conceits there are, that she was a twin born with him, that her name was Schave, others Calmana; but the scripture is silent of these, therefore no faith can be on them. 2. It is most probable, that he took her in marriage before the murder of his Brother, and that now both are driven out together from the Church; that the seed of these might be distinguished from the seed of the Church.

Were such marriages then lawful? Why also not so now?

1. Gods constitutions from the beginning are to be followed, where God hath not reversed them. Mat. 19. 8.
 2. The Lawgiver hath power to make just what he pleaseth, and in the infancy of the world, he so ordered it.
 3. Now God hath expressly by Law forbidden it, therefore it is but corruption to strive against it.
2. The issue of that conjugal act, 1. Conception and the conceived, the curse did not hinder that privilege of fruitfulness, 2. Production. And she brought forth Chanoch. This was the first son born to Cain. The name the same, with his, who was the holy seed, and walked with God; so other names here occur common to both seeds of Cain and of the Church, so farre God ordereth this outward increase under the curse.

2. Kains act after this first son was born to him which is two fold. 1. Edification. And he was building a city. Wherein. 1. The work aimed at, a city, which doubtless though it were not of that stately fabricke, as in after ages of the world were made, which that time could not afford. Yet in it see, what cursed man aimeth at. 1. An earthly place, no heavenly. 2. A place of earthly defence, or delight, where he meant to satisfy himself being driven out of the Church, so at Babel afterward. Gen. 11. 3. A place opposite to the Church, therefore the first visible city of the world which should be collected in opposition to the holy seed.

2. The acting about the worke. He was building, that is, an endless act as some make it, he was ever building and never finished. Sum. But that he was interrupted by God who made him wander. But be it that he did finish it, yet it no way abated his sentence.

2. Dedication, or Nomination of it. And called the name of the city according to the name of his Chanoch. In this also the curse worketh to give him up to mind his own name, and forget the name of God; A property noted among the cursed seed of the wicked, that they call their lands after their own names; and so set up their names against Gods. Ps. 49. 12.

The second descent is thus laid out, And there was born unto Chanoch Yirad. Here is nothing of note but the name of the second son; the etymologie of which with the rest is but forced and uncertain.

The third descent, And Yirad begat Mechuiah. Neither is any thing here but the name, which giveth nothing of note, though some make matters of them.

The fourth descent, And Mechuiah begat Methusael. In this also nothing is reported but the name.

The fifth descent, And Methusael begat Lamech. Thus farre the line of Cain to the fifth son of him; more is recorded by the Spirit in the following history, which we shall consider, but here some questions must be satisfied.

Why should the name or seed of the wicked be mentioned at all? Should they not dye?

1. It is not to honour them, that here the Spirit records them. 2. It is to shew their disposition and works, how they are for earth and earthly habitations. 3. It is not as the record of the Church is made, but short, and bitter to make them odious.

Why should they be fruitful?

1. To serve Gods providence. 2. To aggravate their sin.

Now take the Notes.

- D. 1. Conjugal comforts may stand with Gods curse, and serve to execute it.*
D. 2. Fruitfulness of body may be given to extend the execution of the curse of God upon posterity.
D. 3. Soules cursed from heaven are apt to seek their satisfaction and security on earth.
D. 4. The disposition of soules cast out from the Church is to build places against it.
D. 5. Such whose names are not written in heaven are very laborious to make their names famous on earth.
D. 6. There hath bin a malignant city still set up against the city of God. Ver. 17.
D. 7. Many generations may issue from the wicked under Gods curse.
D. 8. The memory of all the wicked which God maketh is to make them stink. Ver. 18.

The second branch in describing Kains line concerns the two last issues from Lamech, about whom the Spirit of God noteth something more than of the fore mentioned sonnes; the whole relation may be branched into three heads.

1. Lamechs marriage. V. 19. 2. Lamechs offspring. V. 20. 21. 22. 3. Lamechs carriage to his wives. V. 23. 24.
 1. His marriage is thus reported.

Ver. 19. And Lamech took to himself two wives, the name of the first was Yadah, and the name of the second Tzillah. Sep. And Cald. to same. Adda, and Sella.

It is of some importance sure, that the Spirit of God maketh such a special relation of this son of Kain beyond all the former, of whose marriage and seed there is no mention.

It may be he was grown eminently great in the world above the rest; it is evident he was eminently wicked; and doubtles the Spirit observeth about him eminent practices of evil, and eminent passages of providences in his issue, Which continued to the flood.

In the present these particular terms occur.

1. The Son whom this history concern's Lamech, the fifth son of Kain. 2. His act reported, he took to himself two wives. 1. The Anchor, He, Lamech. 2. The end, himself, he terminates this act as well as frameth it. 3. The act it self, he took two wives, that is, violently against Gods command, for God gave Adam but one and made the law expressly for one; he had spirit enough and could have made more, but he gave but one to raise an holy seed. This wicked man, a child of Belial will not be subject to Gods law, but against God taketh two wives to himself at one time. Behold the first Bigamist.

3. The names of his wives are recorded, the name of the first was Adah, which some think to be given her from her beauty it notes beautiful, the name of the second Tzillah, which notes a shadow; the special reason of their names is but to shew their various issues which followeth.

2. Lamechs children or offspring are described.

Ver. 20. And Adah bare Jabel, he was the father of one sitting in a tent, and of cattle, or the Father possessing tent and cattell. Jabel, he was the father of shepherds dwelling in tents. Sep. of those who dwell in tents and possess cattle.

Ver. 21. And the name of his brother Jubal, he was the Father of all that handle the harp and organs. Master of them who sing with harp and organs. Cald. That is he, that hath discovered the psalter and harp.

Ver. 22. And Tzillah also she brought forth Tubal-Kain whetting all workmanship of brasse and iron; and the Sister of Tubal-Kain Nagamah. Thobel, and he was an hammering smith of brasse and iron. Sep. He was the Master of all that have skill to worke brasse and iron. Cald.

We have here reported Lamechs seed by his two wives. 1. The issue from Adah Ver. 20. 21. Wherein note the description of them to be, by their names, and indowments. From her did issue two sonnes.

1. The elder is thus reported, [by his name. And Adah bare Jabel. There is no more here, but the mother, the son, and the birth. 2. By his occupation or indowments, wherein two inventions are attributed to him. 1. Of tent-making: He was the father of the siter in tents. The father here is the inventor, or Author, of first making tents, such as shepherds use.

2. Of pastorage, or ordering and keeping cattel more exactly by disposing them to heards and flocks, and of cattel by a metonymie. He was the Father or inventor of the art of keeping cattel.

The second son of Adah is described. 1. By his name and relation unto the former, And

And the name of his Brother was Jubal. This was Lemes second son by Adah. 2. By his occupation, He was the Father of every one handling the Harp and organ; that is he was the inventor of Musical arts and instruments, here some are named for the rest; all that are either by hand or breath to be founded.

2. The issue of Tzillah followeth. 1. A son, And Tzillah also, she brought forth Tubal-Kain, This beareth his great Grand Fathers name; Tubal-Kain. Whence some conceive the Poets Vulcan was made by corrupt tradition, because the same employment is given by them to him. 2. By his occupation is he described, he whet every artifice of brasse and iron, that is he held forth more fully the art of making instruments, for plowing, felling wood, and killing sacrifices; which doubtles must be in use in the time of Kain and Abel.

2. A daughter by this wife is mentioned. And the sister of Tubal-Kain Nagamah. There is nothing reported of her, but her name: it is conceived she was eminent for something also (some say for making linnen) but that is not expressed. This short relation of a wicked progeny we have thus farre. And that is all which the spirit noteth.

It is questioned, whether Shepheardy were not in Abels time?

Doubtles yea, for he brought of his focke for sacrifice. 2. Abels time might be extended so farre. 3. If not, yet the art was more eminently set out by Jubal, for pitching tents, and separating flocks.

Were not these arts, and indowments good things, how come they upon the family of Kain, who was accursed?

1. Common gifts may be vouchsafed to the wicked for greater condemnation. 2. They received not these as gifts from God but as self inventions. 3. They used them all to serve the flesh, not to serve God, which was a curse.

Now the Notes.

- D. 1. Polygamie is the fruit of an unclean sinner, taken up by lust against God. Ver. 19.*
D. 1. Wives and offspring may be given to the most wicked in great numbers.
D. 3. All arts and indowments liberal, and mechanical may be vouchsafed to ungodly and wicked men.
D. 4. Wicked men may be renowned for external inventions.
D. 5. All such indowments leave men without grace, & without God.

D. 6. Gods curse may and doth work through such providential privileges to the wicked. Ver. 20. 21. 22.

3. Lamechs carriage to his wives is thus described.

Ver. 23. And Lamech said unto his wives Adah and Tzillah, hear my voice ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech; for I have killed (or may hereafter kill) a man to my wounding, and a young man to my hurt.

Sep. For I have not slain a man, that I should bear sin for him, neither have I destroyed a youngman, that my seed should be consumed for him. Cald.

Ver. 24. Seeing Kain shall be revenged seven fold, then Lamech, seventy and seven fold. Because Kain is avenged seventimes, and of Lamech, seventimes seventy, Sep. For if vengeance be taken of Kain for 7 generations, shall it not be taken of Lamech for 77? Cald.

In this passage we have a further character of the wickednes of a Polygamist; for by the connexion of this speech, unto the precedent history of his marriage, the scope of this seemeth to carry some special intimation of a peevish demaour unto them, whom he doth here bespeak. Moses describe's Lamech here, by way of Apostrophe turning his speech to his wives, wherein. 1. His preface, therein. 1. The speaker Lamech and Lamech said. 2. The hearers, his wives Adah and Tzillah. 3. The invitation to hear, It is a double call to audience, which note's, his heat of spirit, and violence, with which he is transported; as if he should mean, your eares are open to others, let them listen unto me, if ye be mine. Are ye my wives? Know ye your duty to hear my voice, and hearken to my speech. A proud imperious, harsh preface.

2. The matter of his speech, wherein are two heads. 1. A narration of his act, which is read two wayes and therefore is made more obscure. 1. In the time past, and so it is onely narrative, what he had done, and unto this the letter is more punctuall. For I have slain a man to my wounding, and a youth to my hurt. In this fence it is a bold confession of some murder, which tended to his hurt and wounding. The fable of the Rabbins about killing Kain his Grand Father, when he was blind, and afterward his Son Tubal-Kain, who led him to this mischief, is ridiculous and wickedly false. They who keep this reading understand it, of some of the Church seed; which Lamech slew though not named. Being persuaded it was some more blood of that time spilt, carried in the exprellion of Christ, from the blood of Abel, &c. If it be so read, it is boasting in his bloody cruelty. Though it be to my wound or hurt, yet I have done it. 2. it is read by most of our latter writers, in the future tense potentially, such change of tenses being frequent in the Hebr. then it is an intermination or threatening, to this sense, for I may hereafter kill a man, though to my hurt, yet the most youthful and strongest, though with danger of my life, and I will do so, if ye provoke me (which was conceived to be the occasion of this threatening.)

2. A narration of the issue, proudly vented by himself in the abuse of that word which God passed concerning Kain, that none should touch him under seven fold revenge; of which he make's this cursed use. 1. Repeating Gods word, seeing God hath spoken, Kain shall be avenged seven times. As if he should say, Kain killed but one, & he was privileged with a seven fold revenge upon any that should hurt him. Thus a wicked wretch urgeth Gods word, as if he should approve of murderers, & secure them & takes heart from thence to do wickedly. 2. Inferring his own, then Lamech seventy times seven, that is I shall be secured, though I slaughter such as stand in my way, yea much more than Kain, by multiplying 77 times, thus a wicked wretch hardeneth himself in wickedness, when he perverteth the word of God to his own destruction. As he taxed the Gods to be sacrilegious, because they did not presently punish sacrilege. Or to this purpose that he would do as much for his own security as God did for Kains. I will take 77 times vengeance on such as offend me.

Hence we collect.

- D. 1. Polygamie from the first hath brought intestine vexations into families.

- D. 4. Insolent, audacious, and desperate cruelty is in the hearts of lustful men.

The seventh & last head in this Chap. Is the history of the Churches line, and of the first eminent reformation, in the verses following.

Ver. 25. And Adam knew yet again his wife, and she bare a son, and called his name Scheth because Elohim hath set unto me, one seed for Hebel, for Kain slew him. Cald. Same. Eve his wife, & she conceiving brought forth a son, &c. saying, God hath raised unto me another seed for Abel, whom Kain killed. Sep.

Ver. 26. And to Scheth also himself, was born a son and he called his name Enosh. Then was it begun to call on the name of Jehovah. He hoped to call on the name of the Lord God. Sep. Then the sonnes of men began to pray in the name of the Lord. Cald.

In which narrative, these particulars occur to note.

1. A special relation of another eminent seed of Adam, Ver. 25.

2. A report of a second descent from this eminent seed of Adam, to Scheth, &c.

3. An intimation of the state of religion in the Church at that time.

In the former these things are obvious.

1. The meane of this seed described, And Adam knew his wife yet again, or further. It is the exprellion of the Spirit, to note conjugal enjoyment, whereby God was pleased to propagate mankind, and especially his Church among them. But here one term mooveth a question, when it is said yet again, or further; unto what doth this relate? To that time of the birth of Abel, or to any other? Doubtles to the last birth, that was from the death of Abel: for it is safely presumed that Adam had other sonnes and daughters after the birth of Abel and before Scheth, though not here named; many circumstances clear that; but doubtles upon the death of Abel, the parents were not a little cast down and troubled, which for some time did keep them apart; and some time of grief being over, God now brings them together again, for bringing forth an eminent seed.

2. The birth is mentioned, and she bare a son, that is, in the due account of time following, after conception, bearing, and bringing forth.

3. The nomination of him, which is given to the mother, but doubtles by the Fathers direction; and Gods over-ruling providence, and she called his name Scheth. This son was born to Adam, in his 130th year, and the next after that sad blow upon Abel, as is to be gathered, therefore probably not long after his death. This nomination carrieth something in it.

4. The reason of this name, For Elohim hath set to me one seed for Hebel, because Kain slew him. Herein. 1. The reason of the name, a gracious act of God to her. 1. The

Ver. 26.

The author Elohim, the mighty God, 2. Act, hath set, or firmly placed, or established, note's firm, and solid, and unmovable workle. 3. Object. One seed. By seed is doubtles the on, by the numeral term one is signified an eminent one, even by whom the promised seed, should be brought forth. Luk. 3. 38. It was not therefore another common son, as she had many. Gen. 5. 4. But a most excellent one. 4. The specification of it, by that in whose stead he was set and that for Hebel, who had a precious report with God, and was the glory of his age for grace. This then was a seed to match and supply him. 5. The reason of this supply. Because Kain had killed him. This recognition is a brand on Kain, but an honour upon Hebel, he was the first Martyr, or witness to the free grace of God, for which his brother took him away. But he being gon, God will not have his Church dye with him, therefore he set's one seed, that shall abide and build his Church.

2. The relation of the next descent from Scheth followeth. Wherein. 1. The birth. And to Scheth himselfe, or to him also was born a son. This is noted afterward, C. 5. 6. To be in the 105th year of Scheth, and 235th of Adam. 2. The nomination of him, he called his name Enosh. Here is no reason of this name added, by the Spirit, it note's a weak, frail and miserable man, of such God beginneth the best frame of his Church, but that is not expressed here, as God speaketh of other names. 3. The last thing here is the history in brief of the state of the Church at this time, Then began men, or was it begun to call upon the name of Jehovah.

1. The time here is pointed. Then, that is, when Scheth was thus set up of God, & his family increased; This point of time is not to be slighted, it imports before some strange evil and remissions in the matters of God, which doubtles was brought about by the wickedness of the Kainite family, and their corruptions.

2. The worke, wherein. 1. The degree of it; A beginning. It was begun or men began; the variety of this signification of this word hath made some difference in reading; some taking it from Chalal, which sometimes signifieth to profane, read it, men profaned to call; and to this sense some of the Rabbines read. But considering this is the line of the Church, and that the history sets them in opposition unto Kains family, it must not be here so understood, as if they did profanely call on God. Others more rightly take it, as signifying to begin, The 70 seem to take it from another word, to hope and so read, He hoped to call. But it is more naturall to the word and scope here, they began, or men began.

But was this the beginning of religion, did not Adam and Abel pray before? Yea doubtles; but 1. more privately as some say. 2. I conceive this beginning was not of the worke properly, but of the Reformation of the worship, which was corrupted by Kain, &c.

2. The worke itself, to call on the name of Jehovah, the Cald. to pray, doubtles this is a synecdochicall exprellion, noting the whole busines of religion, both declaring the name of Jehovah, praising of it & praying to it. And this was the work of the Church, while Kain and his, mind earthly things.

CHAP. V.

The summary contents of this Chapter is a Narrative Genealogically, and Chronologically concerning the line and state of the Church from Adam unto the flood. The scope of it is to make out the special Providence of God toward his Church for the space of all those years, in contradistinction unto the Kainits families, and generations of the wicked.

It giveth onely the direct line (without mentioning the Collateral, which was manifold) enough to draw out the line of Christ the promised seed so farre, which is the main matter of use intended in it. As Luke makes it, Luk. Chap. 3.

The parts of the Chapter generall are three.

1. The title, this is, &c. 2. The brief history of mans creation repeated. Ver. 1. 2. 3. The speciall Narrative of the descents. Ver. 3. &c. The two former are thus set down.

Ver. 1. This is the book of the generations of Adam; in the day when Elohim created Adam, in the likeness of Elohim he made him.

— This is the book of the generation of man, in which day God made, &c. Sep. — Cald. Same with Hebr.

Ver. 2. Male and female he created them, and blessed them, and called the name of them Adam in the day of their being created.

— Cald. Same — Named his name Adam, &c. Sep.

Ver. 1.

1. The title of this Chapter sheweth its contents. The terms carry no difficulty in them. 1. The subject here is in the relation, This, that is, This scripture, or chapter here recorded. 2. The attribute, the book, so it note's a writing compiled of several leaves, a catalogue, a register or record, it commeth from a word signifying to number. 3. The specification of this attribute, Of the generations of Adam. This word generation, sometimes noteth, the succession of descents from the same stock. So it is. Matt. 1. 1. Sometimes it carrieth in it not onely the progeny descended, but the events and conditions proper to the same. Gen. 2. 4. And. 6. 9. Prov. 27. 1. It may very well import both here. Here being joyned with the genitive of the efficient, it must be understood actively, that is, the record of those succeeding children, seed, and their conditions, which Adam begat, or brought forth; This name is usually understood of the man, but no prejudice can be, if it be of the woman also; as afterward it is given.

But doth this expresse all the line of Adam, as an intire genealogy?

Surely no: for it is evident he had many sons and daughters, who are not here named; this therefore must be restrained to the line wherein the Church was propagated, which the spirit thought sufficient to reveal for edification.

2. The brief of mans creation is repeated. Wherein is laid forth the state of creation in respect.

1. Of the main discriminating property of this creature from all the rest; in which description. 1. The time is touched, In the day of Elohim creating Adam, that is, in the sixth day when God created Adam.

2. The excellent specifying property is declared, in the Image of Elohim he made him. That was not a dead image, as of Cesar upon his money, no such can be of God. But a living, active form, which made man know God aright, will what he willed, &c. A rectitude conformed to Gods will, as before it hath bin opened; this goodness of God is repeated to his glory and mans shame.

2. The sexes are declared, male and female he created them. Gen. 1. 27. That is, in such a state as from them should issue the generations, of men, unto which both sexes must concur.

3. The blessing is recorded, which is spoken of Gen. 1. 28. וַיְבָרֶכְהוּ אֱלֹהִים The summe of that, was much good superadded to their being. 1. In propagation. 2. In dominion. 3. In allowance of all necessities abundantly for life, &c. No cause had man to sin against his God.

4. The naming of them. And he called the name of them Adam in the day of their being created. The name, though sometimes proper to the husband, yet here is common to man and woman.

The Jewish fables, that it is the name of a man onely who hath a wife, and so of a woman who hath an husband, is too vain to touch upon.

Now take the Notes from hence.

D. 1. Providence hath made a sufficient Register of the Churches rise and growth and state, for faith, not for curiosity.

D. 2. Genealogies of the Church revealed by God ought to be known and believed by men.

D. 3. Gods will is made out, that his Church was to be propagated by generation, not creation.

D. 7. Gods blessing make's man onely fruitfull to propagat his Church.

1. The third generall of the chapter is a narrative of ten descents from Adam, and the propagation of the Church from the creation to the flood, which will divide it self into 10 portions.

1. The History of Adam for his time.

Ver. 3. And Adam lived 30 and 100 years and begat in his likeness, in his image, and called his name Scheth. — Cald. same. Son must be supplied. — Adam lived 230 Years &c. Sep. a mistake.

Ver. 4. And there were dayes to Adam after he begat Scheth 800 years, and he begat sonnes and daughters — seven hundred yeers, &c. Sep. Cald. same with Heb.

In this narrative of Adams course, for passages are remarkable. 1. The time of his life before Scheth. 2. The time after Scheth was born. 3. The summe of all his years. 4. His conclusion.

1. In the first head, these particulars occur. 1. The number of his forepast years. And Adam lived, 30 and 100 years; the Hebr so number years from the less to greater, no other father can be reckoned of Adam but God himself, he the first man created, with whom beginne's the history of the world, the years were Solary, as long as we enjoy, however some have laboured to make this history vain by feigning years for months, the constant distinction of the words which signify Year and month by the Spirit of God will teach us what Moses meaneth by years in this place, and besides this the description of years about the time of the flood, which questionles upon the same account as here, will clear the exprellion, to not Solary years. The right acception of this is needful to take a true chronology, which the Spirit is pleased to give us.

2. The birth of Scheth at the end of those years, wherein is declared, 1. His production he begat, nothing els is in the original, but the act, yet by what followeth, a son must be added, he begat a son, such defects are usual, where the supply is carried evidently in the context. As 1. Chro. 18. 6. David put in Syria. That is, a garrison though not exprest, for that was proper to keep footing in the enemies country. 2. Sam. 8. 6.

2. His condition, Adam begat him in his likeness, in his image. The very same words which God useth to expresse the condition of mans creation, it was in the image and likenes of God. But here it referre's to Adam, he begets a son in his own likenes and image, not onely in substantialls of nature, but in the accidental corruption; for as Gods image was rectitude to his will, so Adams image being fallen, was Lust, corruption, and perversities against God. 3. His nomination, And called his name Scheth. Here the Father name's him, in the former chapter, it was the mothers act, but doubtles guided by her husband, The reason of this name was touched before.

2. The calculation of Adams time after this. 1. The number of his year. And there were dayes to Adam after he begat Scheth, 800 years. These are to be accounted proper solary years, and by them is begun the true Chronology of the world which Pagan histories knew not. 2. One special end of his long continuance, which was, And he begat sonnes and daughters; Doubtles providence did so continue for the increase of the world; whence also the age of Chauvah may be guessed, though the time of her expiring be not mentioned, she being mother of all these, as Adam father.

3. The summe of all his time. And all the dayes of Adam which he lived were 900 years and 30 years. So that he continued to the 800th year of Scheth, to the 695th year of Enosh, to the 650 year of Kenan to the 505th of Mahaleel, to the 470th of Jared to the 308th of Hnoch, (whom he saw not translated; but died 57 years before,) to the 243 of Methuselah, and to the 48th of Lamech, 726 years before the flood. So that nine generations of these ten he saw, and doubtles all this while, taught his seed the wayes of God, what state that was in innocency, what misery came in by his transgression, what remedy was to be expected in the promised seed; so God kept him to be a sufficient witness of his dealings from the very first unto the world for for their due conviction, and after him, continued of the seed of his Church to glorify him.

4. His conclusion is here declared, and he died, this catastrophe of all these aged patriarchs, which shuts up the longest time, must be meant of bodily expiration; their bodies returned unto the dust, and their spirits unto God, who gave them, only this came on them, as a fruit of sin, yet as overcome by the promised seed, and as a step to the resurrection.

The Notes hence are.

- D. 1. The spirit of God hath taken care to give a sufficient chronology unto the Church from the first.
- D. 2. Some distance of time may be in delaying the reforming seed of the Church, but it shall come.
- D. 3. Sinful Adam begets his seed in his full image sin, ul as himself.
- D. 4. Grace can make a sinful seed of man to be a settled Church-reformer. Ver. 4.
- D. 5. Providence gave out large progenies, and long time, to the first fathers.
- D. 6. The Spirit willingly hath silenced the history of all the first times but of the Church.
- D. 7. Gods pleasure hath bin to give the world a full witness of his creation, &c. by Adam. Ver. 4.
- D. 8. Death though overcome by Christ shutteth up the time of the greatest saints below, in way to a resurrection. So farre Providence hath ordained. It is good so to dye. Ver. 5.

The second part of this narrative of the Churches line concerneth the second Patriarch Scheth, of whom it is thus written.

Ver. 6. And Scheth lived five years, and 100 years, and begat Enoch. Cald. fame. Seth lived 205 years, &c. Sep.

Ver. 7. And Scheth lived after he begat Enoch seven years, and 800 years, and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. fame. 700 and 7 years. Sep. mendose, but this makes the full number, with that before.

Ver. 8. And all the dayes of Scheth were twelve years, and 900 years, and he died. Sep. and Cald. fame.

Herein may be taken to observation these periods. 1. From Scheths birth to the next seed wherein the line of the Church is continued, wherein. 1. The number of years. And Scheth lived five years, and 100 years, in 235th of Adam. 2. The seed produced he begat Enoch. This was the seed of the Churches line, but not to be conceived to be the first born of Scheth, as neither he was of Adam.

2. The term of life after, wherein. 1. The number of year. And Scheth lived after. &c. 807 years. 2. His race indefinitely spoken of, and begat sonnes and daughters. The number not named, nor his wife of whom, though some are to bold as to say, her name was Hixura.

3. The final summe of his dayes, 1. The number. And all the dayes of Scheth were 12 year and 900 year. 2. The conclusion, and he died. He lived lesse than Adam in the whole, 18 year, he survived Adam 112. His death is to be understood as before, as the fruit of sin, and yet as hopeful in the Church toward a resurrection. It may be demanded.

Why is there no more mention of Scheths acts?

It is the pleasure of Gods Spirit to be silent, yet enough was touched before, that he was a sure, and firme restorer of religion instead of Hebel.

The Notes here are.

- D. 1. Succession of Gods witnesses in his Church is the Constitution of his Providence.
- D. 2. The distance and end of them on earth are surely determined by the Lord; yet death hath its peculiar consideration in the Church, they dye not like other men, Ver. 6. 7. 8.

The third portion concerneth Enoch, the third from Adam, of whom thus.

Ver. 11. And all the dayes of Enoch were five years, and 900 year, and he died. Sep. and Cald. Same.

to his name though it note a miserable man, yet it is not observed by the spirit, that the reason of his name was from thence; yet good use may be of it. This fourth seed was born. 195th year of Scheth, the grand Father, in the 325th of Adam the great-grand Father. Enoch lived lesse years than his Father 7. He survived his Father 08 year. He lived to the 161 of Lamech, 84 of Noah. 156 before the flood.

D. 1. Miserable poor creatures may the seed of the Church be in the world. Worms, and nomen.

D. 2. Death puts an end to their misery and lets them into joy. Ver. 9. 10. 11.

The fourth history is as brief of the fourth Patriarch.

Vers 13. Ver. 13. And Keinan lived after he begat Mahalalel, 40 years, and 800 year, and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. Same. 740 year. Sep.

Vers 14. Ver. 14. And all the dayes of Keinan, were 10 years, and 900 year, and he died. Sep. and Cald. Same.

The same periods of time occur here in the history of this Patriarch. His name also signifieth lamentation. He lived in whole, five year longer than Enoch, he survived him, 95 year, he lived, to the 909 of Noah 1235. Of the world.

D. 1. Lamentable may be the state of Gods Church.

D. 2. The Church groweth under such state, and in time that endeth. Ver. 12. 13. 14.

The fifth from Adam Mahalalel is the next.

Vers 15. Ver. 15. And Mahalalel lived, 5 years and 60 year and begat Jared. Cald. fame. 165. Sep.

Vers 16. Ver. 16. And Mahalalel lived after he begat Jared, 30 year, and 800 year, and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. fame. 730. Sep.

Vers 17. Ver. 17. And all the dayes of Mahalalel were 5, and 90 year, and 800 year, and he died.

The same periods are remarkable here, the name of this founds the praise of God.

He begat his son Anno. 65 of his own, of Keinan 135, of Enoch 235, of Scheth 330, of Adam 460. He lived lesse in number of years than his Father, 15. He survived him. 55 year. He died. 234 of Noah. 1290. An. Mundi.

D. 1. Some times of praise to God may succeed in the Church on earth.

D. 2. All earthly praise must have its end below. Ver. 15. 16. 17.

The sixth portion describe's the sixth from Adam.

Ver. 18. And Jared lived 2 and 60 year, and 100 year, and begat Chanoch. Ver. 18. Sep. and Cald. Same.

Ver. 19. And Jared lived after he begat Chanoch, 800 year, and begat sonnes and daughters. Sep. and Cald. Same.

Ver. 20. And all the dayes of Jared were 2 and 60 year, and 900 year, and he died. Sep. and Cald. fame.

The same distinctions of time are observable about this Patriarch. He survived his Father 132 years. The number of his years were, 67 more than his Father. He lived to the 306 of Noah, 234 year before the flood. His name some derive from a word signifying dominion. These notes may arise from that conjecture.

D. 1. The Church seed may be in dominion sometime here below. Jared from Radah.

D. 2. The dominion of the Church below hath its period. Ver. 18. 19. 20.

The seventh part of this history of the line of the Church concerneth the seventh from Adam Chanoch of whom it is thus written.

Ver. 21. And Chanoch lived five and sixty year and begat Methusalach. Cald. Same. 165. Sep.

Ver. 22. And Chanoch walked earnestly with the Elohim; after he begat Methusalach 300 year, and begat sonnes and daughters. And Chanoch walked in the fear of God, &c. Cald. And Enoch pleased God, and Enoch lived after he begat Methusalach 200 years, &c. Sep.

Ver. 23. And all the dayes of Chanoch were 5 and 60 year and 300 year. Sep. and Cald. to fame. 365.

Ver. 24. And Chanoch walked earnestly with the Elohim, and he was not, because Elohim took him. And Enoch pleased God, and he was not found, because God had translated him. Sep. And Chanoch walked in the fear of God, and appeared.

appeared not, neither also did God kill him. Cald.

In this narrative occur these particulars.
Ver. 21. 1. The period of time unto this eminent seed, wherein. 1. The number of years, And Chanoc lived five and sixty year. 2. The issue, and begat Methushalach.

Ver. 22. 2. The period of time after the birth of this seed. He was after he begat Methushalach 300 years and begat sonnes and daughters. Wherein we have, 1. The manner of his life, and Chanoc walked with God. Of which we shall speak hereafter. 2. The number of years. After he begat Methushalach 300 years. 3. The progeny added, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Ver. 23. 3. The term of his life on earth. And all the dayes of Chanoc were five and sixty years and 300 year. So long he converted among men.

Ver. 24. 4. The course or manner of his life is recorded, and Chanoc walked with God. The verb in the conjugation Hithpaal, note's so much, and the notable mark which the Spirit of God hath put upon Chanoc, teacheth a more than ordinary walking with God. In which these particulars are eminently observable.

1. The kind of his life expressed in the term or scope of it. God, it was with God, or to God, that is, a life from God the principle, unto God the Lord and end of it, and by God, as the mediator and rule of it, for so the Apostle writes it, by faith Enoch had a testimony that he pleased God, which must be, by believing in him, in whom God is only well pleased. So that this was the life of Christ in faith and holines called here a walking with God. Hebr. 11. 5. Pleased. Sep.

2. The reality of life in the motion, or operation of it, he walked, it was no sedentary or speculative life, but a moving, walking, working life. It is an usuall phrase to set forth the life of God. To walk before God. Gen. 17. 1. To walk in his law. Ex. 15. 16. It notes, 1. Reality of life which giveth action, 2. Progress or growth in walking, 3. Perfection of it in his way. In fear of God. Cald.

3. The eminency of intention, noted both by the conjugation, which notes a repeated act, with more violence, and by the doubling of the testimony, he walked with God.

And again, He walked with God, which doubtless teacheth, that he Eminently, and zealously and more powerfully bestowed himself for God than others of the holy Patriarchs. So the Spirit witnesseth, That Enoch the seventh from Adam, witnessed more against sin, and prophesied saying, The Lord commeth &c. Jud. v. 14. 15. He was Eminent in exercise of Faith, of the duties of his calling, of conversation in Holines. It is observable the opposition of this to Chanoc the third from Adam, his name is upon Earthly titles and fabricks, but this hath his name only with God. He did the work of God, and walked with him in a full Spirit and all his might.

4. The Continuance of this manner of life, it was so long as he had continuance on Earth, after the time of his Calling; he began his course and ended it with God while he was below; This crowned his walking with God, even Perseverance.

5. The Conclusion of his time on Earth, wherein 1. The manner of it, He was not, that is, he vanished, and ceased to be here below, but not by death for then Moses, would have said of him as of the rest, he died, but here he faith, He was not, or he disappeared, he converted not any longer among those holy Patriarchs on Earth; but having finished his Testimony, he was not found. It is a grosse fable that God should take him, because he was given to lust, as some Jewes imagine; and it seemeth to be favoured. Wild. 4. 11 And no less a groundless conjecture, that the Patriarchs should think him to be slain by some of the Kaimites, Enemies to the Church; for the reason of his disappearing followeth. 2. The ground of his not being any longer here below; He was not, because God took him. Translated him, faith the Apostle with the Sept.

Either with the Lord say him, so the Cald. Doubtless this was Gods miraculous art, exempting him from the common lot of the rest, changing him in a moment, and assuming or taking him to himself, as he did Elijah in the Law, and Christ in the Gospel. It is foolish to say God took him by death. Miraculous was this act of grace. His translation was Anno mundi 587, before the flood 669. Why God should make this saint more eminent in respect of his change than Adam, or any other of those Patriarchs, no reason can be given but the free grace of God, who giveth what he pleaseth; when he pleaseth and to whom he pleaseth; who also hath revealed that in all times some special witnessers are needful.

I learn hence.

D. 1. God of his own will hath chosen some eminent witnessers to bear out his name in all ages Enoch, Elijah and CHRIST.

D. 2. God alone is the terme and scope of life to gracious saints.

D. 3. Eminent conversation with God becommeth them who are eminent witnessers to him.

D. 4. Exact walking with God must discover the life that is from him.

The History of Methushalach the eighth from Adam now followeth.

The name of this Patriarch seemeth to be Prophetical to some. It signifieth, He died and the emission, or dart then came, viz the flood, which was the year of his death. Or it may be the sending out of death, which is conceived Enoch foretold to come in the flood after this son.

The history relates nothing of him, but the usual periods of time.

Ver. 25. 1. The space of years before the next seed of the Church. 187 year. Ver. 25. And Methushalach lived seven, and eighty year, and an hundred year and begat Lemech. Cald. same. 167. Sept.

Ver. 26. 2. The remainder of his time, ver. 26. And Methushalach lived after he begat Lemech two and eighty year, and seven hundred year and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. same. 802. year Sept.

Ver. 27. 3. The summe of all his time and his conclusion, ver. 27. And at the dayes of Methushalach were nine and sixty year, and nine hundred year, and he died Sep. and Cald. same.

These Notes may be from this longest liver.

D. 1. God sometimes may Prophecy of vengeance unto his enemies in the very names of his servants. So in Zerubbabel, &c.

D. 2. The longest life on earth will not perfect man, it will cease and yield to change. The 1000 year is short of perfection.

9. The history of the ninth from Adam carrieth in it more and is thus related. Ver. 28. And Lemech lived two, and eighty year, and an hundred year, and begat a son. Cald. same.

180 year. Sep. --- V. 29. And he called his name Noach, saying, this shal comfort us from our work, and from the grief of our hands from the ground which Jehovah cursed. Cald. same. --- Sept. ---

Ver. 30. And Lemech lived after he begat Noach five and ninety year, and five hundred year and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. same. 565 year. Sep. But falsely. Ver. 31. And at the dayes of Lemech were, seven and seventy year, and seven hundred year, and he died. Cald. same. 753. year. Sept.

In this narrative are observable these particulars. 1. The space of time between Lemechs first being and the next eminent seed of the Church, wherein we have, 1. The number of years, 182. 2. The issue he begat a son. 2. The nomination of this son, wherein we have, 1. The imposition of the name, And he called his name Noach. 1. Imponitur, the Father, doubtless not without the instinct of Gods Spirit, forasmuch as we see the event sure aimed at by it. Therefore it is strange to think that Lemech was deceived, as Chavah concerning Kain. It is a groundless conjecture that Lemech should think this son to be the Messiah; as Luther. 2. The name imposed signifieth rest, Noach, And although the word which giveth the reason of it signifieth comfort Nacham, yet no necessity it should be derived from that word, but it is sufficient that by comfort rest is given. 3. The reason of the name. Saying, this shal comfort us from our work, wherein, 1. The subject prophesied of, Noach the son of Lemech. 2. The good prophesied by him, which is Comfort, now this Noach is said to bring in Typically as representing Christ, or initially, for in his dayes God performed something of the comfort here spoken of. Gen. 8. 21. And by that means brings in rest in some measure to the Church. 3. The sad conditions against which this comfort is promised in this seed. 1. Against their works. Such were doubtless the hard travails and burdensome labours unto which the first sin had subjected them. This son is prophesied typically to bring in some remission and ease against such fore travails.

2. Against the grief of their hands. --- This is an aggravation to the bitterness of those afflictions which sin had brought upon them. So sweat and weariness are great sorrows, or, concerning these, he shall give us more rest, he typically setting out the Mediatour, who was to give rest indeed; and sanctifie all labours to make us more partakers of Gods holines, by which comes true rest. So we read God smelt a savour of rest in Noachs offering. 3. Against the curse which was the cause of bitterness in both the former, God laying that upon the earth for mans sake, Under which curse the whole state of misery below in mans destitution is certainly carried; of the redress whereof Noach was not Fourthly, the space of Lemech's life after ward with his progeny. He lived after he begat Noach 595 years, and begat sonnes and daughters.

- Ver. 31. Fiftly. The summe of all, and his conclusion, all his dayes were 777 years, and then he dyed, that is, in the Faith, as the other eminent members of the Church; Anno. M. 1651. 5 year before the flood.

These Notes.

- D. 1. Outward names may be the same to the righteous and the wicked; so it was to this seed, and that Digamist of Kains family. Ch. 4. 18. Ver. 28.
- D. 2. God hath set times for eminent refreshings to his Church. Act. 3.
- D. 3. God makes the names of his seed propheticall of the peace of his Church.
- D. 4. The first times before the flood had real and typical discoveries of Gods rest in Christ.
- D. 5. The rest, in Christ onely, being seen, can give comfort against Gods curse in temporal and spiritual things. So it was here in the type.
- D. 6. Faith must fetch out the comforts of Christ both before and after his coming. So Lemech, This shal comfort us. He speaks in faith. Ver. 29.

- D. 8. Soules may foresee the comforts of the Church, and yet dye before the accomplishment of them. So Lemech. Heb. 11. ult. Ver. 31.

The history of the tenth from Adam is continued from the last verse of this Chapter to the close of the ninth Chapter of this book, wherein many memorable passages are related of Gods providence in the acts of justice and of grace, which we shall take notice of in passing over this narrative.

- Ver. 32. All recorded in this Chapter is in the last verse. Ver. 32. And Noach was the son of five hundred year, and Noach begat Schem Cham, and Jepheth. ——— Cald. same. ——— And Noe begat three sonnes, &c. Sept. In this is related onely, 1. The age of Noach to the springing of his Family. ——— He was the son of 500 years that is, before this progeny was, which were preserved with him in the Ark. That Noah abstained all this while from marriage is a groundless conjecture, or whether he might have any Children before is uncertain, the scripture is silent, and therefore is it rash to determine; onely so old he was, a son of 500 year, that is current; as the son of a year with the Hebrews is of the first year current. 2. His Progeny, ——— And Noach begat Schem Cham and Jepheth.

Two things are here considerable. 1. The act of Noach, he begat, which is questioned how to be understood, whether of time past, as if he had begotten them all already, which cannot be by what is revealed: or of time present, which is more than probable that he began to beget and had one of them that year, or of time to come, from that time he begat afterward, which must be meant of Schem, and Cham.

2. The order of these sonnes, Schem is here named first, &c. The question is whether he were the firstborn; which the Scripture afterward declareth he was not, for Jepheth is said to be the elder, Gen. 10. 21. Again it is evident that Schem was born in the 502^d year of Noach, for he was of 100 years when he begat Arphaxad, two year after the flood, Gen. 11. 10. Jepheth therefore must be begotten first, in the 500 year of Noach, Schem the second; and Cham the third, Gen. 9. 24. So that the method here in naming is not naturall as they were born, but personal, Schem being first for dignity, because God made him the Eminent Father of his succeeding Church. It is certain they were all grown up and married before the flood; for they went and their wives into the Ark. Gen. 7. 13.

Note.

- D. 1. A stated and full time of warning doth God vouchsafe to his, of his judgments to come on the world. So the 500th year of Noach is here mentioned.
- D. 2. The time is stated by God of bringing forth soules either to common; or speciall Salvation.
- D. 3. God accounts not of any, as man accounts upon outward privilege; he is no respecter of persons.

- D. 4. To whom God giveth preeminence, with him it must stand. So with Schem.
- D. 5. It is a blessing upon the holiest to have families, and progeny.
- D. 6. The Scripture record of persons is not alwayes naturall, as men are born, but gratuitous to whom God vouchsafeth; as Jacob also before Esau: sometimes historical, leading to a further narrative. Ver. 32.

CHAP. VI.

Hitherto in the whole fifth Chapter is finished the digression, which Moses made to set down the line of the Church from Adam to Noach from the creation to the flood. Which genealogy could not well be spared, it helping much to understand in what times the events following in the history were extant. The beginning of this sixth Chapter, seemeth fitly to be joynted to the end of the fourth, it giving the narrative of the sad Apostasie of the Churches seed, after Scheth was set as a reformer, even from his time and forward unto Noach's time, when wickedness was so much expiated, and piety confined within one family.

In this whole Chapter these general heads occur.

1. The state of Apostasie of many in the Church, from that state of faith and holiness renewed by Scheth which was the provoking cause of the flood; from ver. 1, to the end of ver. 8, where the Hebrews cut off the first paragraph or lecture of the Law.
2. The state of the true Church in that time, from ver. 9. to the end of this, and in the following Chapters to the end of the ninth.

In the former general are observable. First, the occasion of this Apostasy. Ver. 1, 2.

Secondly, Gods resolution hereupon previous. Ver. 3.

Thirdly, the state of Apostasy itself, set out 1. By the character of the men Ver. 4. 2. By the observation of God. Ver. 5. 3. By Gods turning his respect. Ver. 6. 4. By Gods resolution for vengeance. Ver. 7.

Fourthly, an exception of one in whom the Church was preserved. Ver. 8. First, the occasion of this Apostasy is thus given Ver. 1. And it was when Adam began to multiply upon the face of the ground and daughters were born unto them. ——— sonnes of men began, &c. Cald. ——— And it came to pass when men began to be many upon the Earth, &c. Sept. ——— Ver. 2. And the sonnes of Elohim saw the daughters of Adam that they were good (in form) and they took to themselves wives of all which they chose: ——— Sonnes of God seeing, &c. Sep. ——— And the Sonnes of the Princes Law, &c. Cal. the occasion of this great Apostasy as is here expressed, was the marriage of the Churches seed, such as are called the Sonnes of God, with the wicked idolatrous daughters of the world. In which passage these particulars are obvious. 1. The term of connexion, and continuation of the history unto that mentioned in the close of the fourth Chapter. And it was, or came to pass, ——— which immediately connected unto that memorable record of Scheth's time (that then men began to call upon the name of Jehovah, or to mind truly the things of God) this must be the meaning, and then upon this, when men began to multiply in the Church, did the mystic of iniquity work, by the means afterward expressed to make this great Apostasy from pure religion set up by Scheth. 2. The events supposed in this history as previous & occasional to the following evil. First, When Adam or men began to multiply upon the face of the ground, ——— Wherein note.

1. The time hinted when they began, viz from the daies of Scheth.

2. The subjects spoken of, Adam as being now a common name to all his seed, and in speciall, noting the seed of Kain who were out of the Church. So Adam, is taken in opposition to the sonnes of God, in this place. Sonnes of men Cal. — Men Sep. 3. The effect concerning them, they were multiplied, so was their ambition to exceed the Church in number, therefore took they more wives as Lemech did. 2ly & daughters were born unto them, ——— Here note 1. The subject of whom it is spoken, daughters, these became nets and snares to destroy soules, 2. The subject to whom, to them, viz the Cainite Familie, who never look to the education of their daughters in the fear of God; like Fathers, like children. ———

3. Their production, they were born, and came out into the world under Gods providence, to be such temptations unto the Churches Seed, 3ly The first fall of the sonnes of the Church toward that great Apostasy which vexed Gods Spirit: wherein are discovered two great evils.

1. The lust of the eye, and the Sonnes of God when saw the daughters of men, that they were fair, good, that is, of countenance Gen. 24. 16. ——— wherein, 1. The subject falling, the Sonnes of God, which doubtless is a term in opposition to Adam here, sonnes of men, as Sep. And it must note the seed of the Church such as came of the holy fathers, and for their professions sake are called sonnes of God, The Caldee reads sonnes of Princes, unto which signification fication Elchim may sometime be applied, and if so, here it must note, these holy Patriarchs named; but the first is better; that it be referred to God himself. 2. The lapse or fall itself, which was the lust of the eye. 1. The act, they saw, that is, they lustfully looked after, their eyes were full of adultery. 2. The object, the daughters of men with the specification of them, that they were fair and beautiful, or good of countenance; this drew their eyes, no goodness or fear of God; only carnal beauty, fit to take lustful eyes.

Ver. 2. The lust of the flesh, And they took to themselves wives, of al which they chose.

Herein. 1. The act of these declining soules, they took to themselves, They were, as if, sui juris, authors of their own acts, they desired no guidance, neither did they expect them to be given from God or by Gods will, but they took them, and they are the End of this too, for they took them to themselves, making their own carnal pleasures the end of all their actions.

2. The object wives, that is, women of an idolatrous, and wicked disposition to lie in their bosoms, and take away their hearts from God: that now they become altogether their wives, none of Gods. Deut. 7. 3. 4. 3. The rule of their action their own will, of al which they chose, which they would faith the Caldee; neglecting counsel from God, and advice of the holy Fathers then surviving; their lust is their rule, therefore they take such yolk fellows whether God will or no.

Now take these Notes.

D. 1. In the highest times of reformation there have bin secret workings to apostasy. So in Seths time, so in Christs.

D. 2. In the multiplying of the world usually abounds corruption, more infection among men and defection from God.

D. 3. It is a forerunner of an evil time of defection from God, the multiplication of the corrupt daughters of Adam. Ver. 1.

D. 4. The worst of women may be most beautiful in the flesh, so it was now.

D. 5. Such being daughters of Adam or corrupt men only, become dreadful snares to catch and destroyem next soules in the Church. So the Midianitish women. Num. 25.

D. 6. Men as Adam are opposit to the sonnes of God, in disposition & profession.

D. 7. Eminent sonnes of God by profession may be carried by the lust of the eye upon the beauty of corrupt and idolatrous women.

D. 8. The lust of the flesh may cause such sonnes to take such wives to them neerer then God. So with Salomon. 1. Kings. 11. 1. 2.

D. 9. Mens lust or will of flesh regulate them only in this against God.

D. 10. Carnal sensuality and uncleanness in the flesh, disposeth to all spiritual adultery and defection from God. Such was the issue.

The second head in the former general, is Gods resolution of forsaking them in their own lusts, which is previous to the full vengeance following. Ver. 3. And Jehovah said, My Spirit shall not strive with man or Adam, in that also he is flesh, and his dayes shall be an hundred and twenty year.

My Spirit shall not abide among these men for ever. Gr. Sept. This most wicked generation shall not abide before me for ever, because they are flesh, and their works most wicked; and an end shall be given unto them, an hundred and twenty years, if perhaps they be converted. Cal. In this resolve we have considerable;

1. The manner of its expression, And Jehovah said. Wherein, 1. The discoverer, Jehovah himself, the Creator.

2. The discovery, He spake, i. e. made out by revelation. 3. The subject to whom he said it, which, though not expressed, yet doubtless, Noach especially is intended, who was a Preacher of righteousness. 2. Pet. 2. 8. To him God made known his resolution, and by him to these Apostate Children: However the other surviving Fathers of the Church Lemech & Methuselah, might also hear the word from God. 2. The matter here resolved and expressed. My Spirit shall not strive with Adam for ever. This is a spiritual judgment threatned, making way for the devouring deluge; it is in short Gods prohibition or restraint of means, which should have done them good; Wherein,

1. The Agent prohibited, My Spirit, of which are several understandings. 1. Some conceive it put for the natural soul which God gave them, as if it were, My Spirit or life which I have given them, to which the Caldee seem's to bend, rendering it, wicked generation. 2. Some look on it, as Gods Spirit of Anger, as if it should be that God would not alwayes restrain his anger but unsheath it. 3. By others and as the truth is it is taken for Gods Spirit which by Ministry, as well as secret operation did convince, rebuke, exhort, these backsliding children. By this spirit Christ is said to preach in Noach unto the spirits which were disobedient and now are in prison. 1. Pet. 3. 18. 19. This is Gods Spirit indeed proceeding from the Father and the Son, which is promised also by Christ to come and convince the world of sin, &c.

Anger

Ver. 3.

רוחי

2. The act prohibited shall not strive; taking it from a word signifying a sheath, and so read, my spirit shall not be sheathed, or in a sheath, viz. The soul should not continue in the body, but God would kill them, making this and the following judgment all one. The Sept. and Caldee read, Shall not abide, My Spirit shall not abide. Sept. This wicked generation shall not abide. Cald. But both different from the letter of the Text, Shall not strive is most natural in this place; and then the meaning is, That Gods Spirit in ministry, and otherwise, should no more labour, teach, convince, reprove, exhort, by which means it had a long time by all the holy Fathers of the Church striven to keep this Apostat seed close unto God. Now faith Jehovah, it shall no more reason nor dispute, nor work upon them. This is a dismal sentence, and a sure forerunner of destruction. Nehem. 9. 30.

The Spirit testifieth in the Prophets, 1. The subject of the prohibition for Adam, with Adam, or in Adam, so it is read by several men; Adam doubtless notes these backsliding soules who were fallen from the faith and holiness of the Church, and they are men in opposition to it; Now God faith, his Spirit shall not strive for them, that is to do them good, nor with them, that is by preaching in the Ministry, &c, nor in them, by enlightning, checking or convincing them, but they should be given up to their own reprobate spirits. 4. The time of this prohibition, it shall be for ever, that is, God will break of the strivings of his spirit, and it shall no more for ever bestow paines upon these lustful creatures. It is a long day of revenge. 3. The reason of this severe resolution from God, In that also he is flesh. Because they are flesh. Sept. That is, not flesh natural, nor flesh weak and infirm, but flesh corrupt, wicked, sinful, extremely opposit to the spirit of God. This man is in himself only and fully. Flesh is enmity to God. Rom. 8. 7. Lust the very being of a sinner. 4. The respite, or limits of time, which yet God vouchsafed to these Apostat soules, And his dayes shall be an hundred and twenty year. Where may be noted. 1. The matter limited, that is, mens dayes, even the time granted to these wicked ones to repent, before the overflowing scourge shall come. For it cannot be of the dayes of mens lives after the flood, because some lived much longer, but these dayes were doubtless belonging to that wicked seed. 2. The limitation, 120 years, this therefore was spoken so long before the flood and then it must be about the 480th year of Noach, and the 662, of Lemech, and 840, of Methuselah. Thus did God extend his patience to a wicked generation, A term, &c. Cald.

It teacheth us,

D. 1. God may hold his peace at the lustful uncleanness of sinners some time, but he will speake with terror.

D. 2. It is Gods word of threatning which is through revelation made out by his Preachers.

D. 3. Gods Spirit striveth for and with, and in men by the Ministry for their salvation.

D. 4. God may prohibit his Spirit anymore to labor with rebellious soules.

D. 5. The impetuous lustings and uncleanness of flesh inforceeth God to forbid his Spirit striving with man.

D. 6. God will not alwayes labour in vain by his Spirit with corrupt man.

D. 7. Usually God forbears sinners through patience in their resistings of his Spirit.

D. 8. There bath bin, and so is a term set to Gods patience towards sinners and then followeth his vengeance on them, 120 years. Ver. 3.

The third head in the first general is a description of the state of these Apostats four wayes. 1. By the Character of the men in themselves. Ver. 4. There were Giants in the earth in those dayes, and also after that the sonnes of Elchim went in to the daughters of Adam, and they brought forth unto them, These were mighty ones; who from old were men of name. 2. Sep. men of name. Sep. The sonnes of Princes &c. Cald. In this character we have these particulars to note. 1. A proposition of the state of these men, what they were with whom the Almighty hath this contention There were Giants in the earth in those dayes wherein may be conceived. 1. The nature of them, They were Giants. The word in the Hebrew comes from a root noting to fall, נפל and it is read by some Apostates, such as were fallen from from God — by the Caldee, mighty ones, men of stature and strength, which made others fall before them, by tyranny and cruelty. The Greek calleth them Giants, men of huge stature and of fierce, wicked, cruel dispositions, such as afterward would scale heaven if they could, it notes an excessive growth in wickedness, and disposition, and power to execute it. Num. 13. 33. 2. Their place, in the earth, there where God had placed them to learn righteousness and do good and so to provide for heaven, but here on earth they forget God, and grow mighty in wickedness. This must needs be imputed, for the bigness of their bodies on earth could not of it self provoke God; but herein the habitations which God gave them, they wrought wickedness with an high hand. 3. The time is noted also, in those days, that is, the very days of Gods striving with them, and waiting for their repentance, in this time they exercised their giant-like lusts, rapines, adulteries, cruelties and idolatries. This aggravates. 2. A proposition of their original, wherein we may note, it was from promiscuous marriages of Gods seed, with the seed of Adam, And also after that the sonnes of Elohim went in unto the daughters of Adam, and they brought forth to them, or they begat to themselves, as some read. Herein note. 1. The parents, sonnes of God and daughters of Adam; These were sonnes of the Church and of those holy fathers, and so in profession sonnes of God, and these daughters idolatrous, whorish women of Rains family. 2. There acts, 1. Congression, they went in, that is, not rightly as in Gods way, but lustfully, promiscuously, adulterously. 2. Production, they brought forth to them, that is, the women bore the children to them, or the men begat children to themselves, both wayes it may be understood, so that unclean association and production are the causes of these Giants. 3. A proposition of their repute in the world, these were mighty ones who from old were men of name. Herein is reported. 1. Their power נְבִירִים so Nimrod is called, that is, earthly might, and an arm of flesh to execute lust. 2. Their fame, they were men of name that is, renown, as ours read, but this is in the account of themselves, and their generations, but infamous in the Church and with God himself. 3. Their antiquity, from of old, that is, from Kain, Lamech, &c. they got them this repute on earth, but not from the beginning. So boast the wicked of their Ancestors, but it is all vile with God.

Note from this.

D. 1. Giants in natural might and power, may be also Giants, might men in sin, mighty to drink, &c. Ifai. 5.

D. 2. Gods earth is made the habitation of all impiety and wickedness by mighty sinners.

D. 3. The greatest might of sinners is but earthly.

D. 4. Giants in sin are most violent with God when he strives to save them.

D. 5. Vngodly, adulterous, and lustful mixtures of men and women bring forth these Giants.

D. 6. Sinphansteth a mighty power, Antiquity, and Renown to it self.

D. 7. It is but a contemptible name and power with God which the mightiest of sinners have.

D. 8. The spirit records these names of sinners that they may sink and rot. Ver. 4.

The second character of these Apostats, Ver. 5.

is made by Gods observation of them as it followeth. Ver. 5. And Jehovah saw that much was the wickedness of Adam in the earth, and every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil at the day, or every day.

But the Lord God seeing that the maliciousness of men were multiplied in the earth, and that every one imagineth in his heart carefully upon evil things every day. Sept. — And it was open before the Lord that much was the wickedness of man in the earth, and every imagination of the thought of his heart was evil every day. Cald. In this second discovery of the old world which perished by the waters, are considerable.

1. The order of it, and that must needs be consequent upon the former warning, after the 120 years determined, and probably it was something near the expiring of this term, when it was observed, that there were notwithstanding such Giant sinners, and an universal depravation of all flesh.

2. The particulars in it, which are these, 1. An ally God, and Jehovah saw, &c. 2. The object of that act is twofold (1) External, that the wickedness of man, &c. (2) Internal, And every imagination, &c.

Or els thus, First, the provoking cause of the vengeance following set out two wayes. (1) By outward wickedness, (2) By inward filthyness of man. Secondly. Gods animadversion thereupon.

3. The meaning of the words is to be declared. 1. Gods act of animadversion, — And God saw. 1. The copulative particle is read by some, as noting time, when, &c. And so this verse runneth into the next that followeth, which no way varieth the sense, for the vengeance expressed after, is consequent on this. 2. The act is Jehovahs seeing, which carrieth in it, as it is used after the manner of men.

1. Forbearance while he looked on all this. 2. Indignation against that evil which he saw. 3. Animadversion to meet with the workers of iniquity. God is not as those atheists said. Pla. 10. 11. Job. 22. 13. 4. Certain conviction by Gods sight, that mans evil was in himself and from himself.

2. The evil which Jehovah observed hath a double character here. 1. External, That much was the wickedness of Adam in the Earth. In which these terms are observable. 1. The subject of this evil, it was not a small number of men, but man in universal, only Noah and some few excepted by grace; Adam as Adam in himself considered without the manifestation of grace is the subject here spoken of.

2. The evil it self seen, wickedness, this word is comprehensive of all evil of sin, but being here contradistinct to the sin of thought, it must in reason note the external practice of all abominable prophaneities and ungodliness, and the audacious acting of their villanies before the sun. 3. The adjunct of this evil, It was much, (1) multiplied in number. (2) Aggravated in weight. (3) Heightened in degrees, it was numberless, unmeasurable, and overflowing wickedness after all the warnings given from the holy Patriarchs. Fourthly. The extent for place, it was in the earth, that is spread over all the face of the earth where ever a man was there was this wickedness; so that the whole earth was corrupted, as ver. 11. Fifthly. The truth and certainty of this, it was no false report brought upon man, but God himself saw it, and observed it. So that from all these may appear. (1) Universality and (2) Bitterness of evil; (3) Multiplicity, weight and impudency of sin. (4) Overspreading (5) Certainty of his cause. 2. Evil internal, which added to the cause of this vengeance threatened, and which God observed is thus described. And that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart were, only evil at the day — In these is a deeper search and more emphatical discovery of the provoking evil of man even from overflowing sin in their inward parts. The subject of this evil is also the universality of man in himself [only such excepted whom grace changeth] of all the rest the observation of God here is true,

Ver. 5.

כו

1. The part depraved set out in three expressions. 1. His heart, which in scripture sense comprehendeth the whole inward man, Mind, Will, affections, conscience, &c. Prov. 23. 26. 2. Thoughts of heart, these note inventions, determinations, purposes and resolutions, all the workings of the heart from חשבו Ch. 8. 21. Deut. 31. v. 21.

3. Imagination of those thoughts, which notes the very first forming, rise, or fiction of those thoughts in the bent and inclination of them. 2. The Universality added unto this part, all or every imagination, not one excepted. 3. The depravation it self, it is evil, that is cross, perverse, maliciously working against God; universally opposite to that which is called good, which is the pure and holy will of God. רע Tediuous, and irksome things to God, so the Greek rendereth it, every one thinketh or studieth in heart these evil things. 4. The aggravation of this evil, from the limitation of the heart to it, only evil, sometime רע is taken by way of extenuation. Gen. 19. 11. But added here to sin, only evil, it is a most heavy aggravation, every imagination of the thought of mans heart is only wicked and nothing else. The greek is emphatical, καταλογίζετο, diligently. 5. The aggravation from continuance, thus it is all the day, that is, not a moment excepted, or every day, not one day better then another with them. And all this truly charged on them from Gods owne knowledge.

Q. Doth not Moses speak of the Giants sinners only and not of man generally?

A. 1. That he speaketh of them is no doubt. 2. Yet he speaks of them as Adam, as in their own estate without grace and therefore what he saith is competent to every man as such.

Q. Is not the speech hyperbolicall?

A. No. But a charge of very truth from Gods own knowledge; and which man will confesse when God openeth his eyes to see it. Every word here is spoken plainly and in truth, and nothing less can be found in man.

Now observe.

D. 1. God seeth otherwise than man, such as are men of name here are men of shame with God. This from the Connection.

D. 2. Increase of sin after warnings from God, is full of provocation.

D. 3. Adam as Adam, that is, a creature fallen from God is nothing els but sin.

D. 4. Universal, bitter, multiplied, aggravated, outspreading wickedness among men, falls under the most strict and severe observation of God.

D. 5. All the inward parts of man as man with all the first motions and operations are onely and alwayes evil, perverse, and crost to God.

K and

D. 6. Gods eye beholdeth mans inward as will as outward wickedness. None is hid.

D. 7. Inward and outward wickedness allowed by man must needs make Gods eye evil to them.

D. 8. Gods eye giveth the true judgment of mans wickedness, and none can reverse it. No shifts, &c. Ver. 5.

The third character of the Apostate world, is that their wickedness turned the heart of God against them, as followeth, Ver. 6. And it repented Jehovah because he had made Adam in the earth, and he was grieved in his heart. And God thought within himself because he had made man upon the earth, and thoroughly considered. Sept. — And it repented the Lord in his word, that he had made man in the earth, and he said in his word, that he would break in peeces their strength according to his pleasure. Cald. In these is presented a further character of the old world by that provocation, which causeth God to turn his heart against them. Wherein we have. 1. An act attributed unto God, twofold: (1) Of repentance (2) Of grief. 2. The ground of it, that he had made man. 1. An act of repentance נחם And it repented Jehovah, the first act or affection here attributed to the Lord is repentance; which being such a thing as necessarily supposeth a change of mind and will, upon want of fore-cast or frustration of ones end, seemeth very unreasonable to be spoken of God. It is therefore worth observing, what is spoken properly and what improperly of God. Properly it is thus written, God is not a man, &c. Numb. 23. 19. 1. Sam. 15. 29. This is convertible with God; to be in a state not subject to repentance, and to be God; no ignorance, no mistake is with him, no impotence, therefore no repentance. Improperly, and after the manner of men, God is said to repent in several places, as well as here, 1. Sam. 15. 29, &c. But this must be understood in such sense as is competent to God; now his being is not capable of such a change as repentance is. Repentance therefore in scripture use is twofold. 1. Efficientis, when the agent is of such mutable principles that he is forced to change counsels, and will, and wayes, to avoid evil unseen, and obtain good. This is peculiar to creatures, not to God. 2. Efficientis, when events are changed among men besides and against their expectation; evil is sent of God when they expect good, trouble for peace, &c. This in respect of several events is affirmed and denied concerning God. So God is said to repent of making man, that is, he was resolved to destroy them and as they secured themselves in vain thoughts of peace, God turned it into trouble. So Gods repenting that he made Saul King, is as much as that he resolved to unmake him: it was a change with Saul, but not with God; and sometimes, God saith, he will hide repentance from his eyes, and his gifts are without repentance, to note the immutable state of his redeemed and called, that they shall not be changed, because he changeth not. Hosea. 13. 14. Rom. 11. 29. וְיִשְׁמַחַתִּי

Sept. Inward thought and purpose to visit man's work. 2. The other act or affection attributed is grief, and he multiplied grief, or grieved much in his heart, as the conjugation Hithp. beareth. This also after the manner of men is spoken of God. For properly God is impassible & cannot suffer from creatures. 1. The act then is to be understood of such kind of effects upon the creature which use to arise from grief (1) Departure from (2) Opposition to (3) Destruction of the thing that doth grieve. So in God. 2. The earnestness, frequency, and thoroughness of this grief is imposed. Pla. 95. 3. The intimacy and depth, in his heart, which is the deepest in man, and noreth the deep displeasure taken against these sinners. Hebr. 10. 38. This phrase is synonymous, my soule shall have no pleasure, &c. אֵינִי מְשַׂמְחָה

Sept. thoroughly pierced his mind. 2. The ground of these affections so expressed, Because he had made man on the earth. This may not be understood as if God mistook his own work, but looks upon it as corrupted by sin, and so sets his heart against it. Herein therefore note. 1. The object, that Adam, spoken of before, apostate and corrupted, who was great in wickedness, and all inwardly polluted at all times. 2. Gods act about him, that he made him, not such a one, but his creature bearing his image, that God now resolves to unmake him or destroy him; that is to be understoodly grieving and repenting. 3. In the earth, the place which God created for pure creatures, but now it was made a cage of uncleanness; this God resolves to rid away, and therefore distasteth: and turneth from them.

Take some observations from it:

D. 1. Attributes of God after the manner of men are given to help us, not to debase him.

D. 2. Gods antipathy of sinners and opposition to them are acts inseparably united.

D. 3.

D. 3. Jehovahs repentance of dispensing good to the wicked is no change of his mind, but a bitter change of their condition.

D. 4. Gods grief from Apostats is no passion from them, but acts of Abhorring, opposition and destruction of them.

D. 5. Deep and double, and fervent is Gods distast of corrupted Adam, overwhelmed with sin.

D. 6. Gods workmanship upon Apostate sinners will not exempt them from the woful change of his repentance

D. 7. Adam apostat, and wholly corrupted, is the onely grief to Gods heart, and repentance of his eyes, even to destroy them.

D. 8. God will not suffer the earth to give comfort to sinners Apostate from him. Sin makes the sweetest habitation the place of vengeance. Ver. 6.

The fourth character of the Apostate world is from the resolution of vengeance against them, the issue of Gods grief and Repentance, ver. 7. And Jehovah said, I will blot out Adam whom I have created from the face of the ground, from Adam unto the beast, unto the creeping thing, and unto the fowl of the heaven, because I repent, that I have made them — And God said, I will blot out man, whom I have made from the face of the Earth, from man unto beast, and from creeping things unto the fowl of heaven because I am troubled in mind that I have made him. Sep. — Because it repents me in my world that I have made him. Cald. In all this it appears that sin was come to an high pitch, to give such provocation to the most high. Here these particulars are observable. 1. The expression of his purpose. And Jehovah said, 2. The vengeance resolved, I will blot out &c. 3. The extent of his vengeance from Adam, &c. 4. The reason again repeated, because it repents &c.

1. The expression of Gods purpose is in these words, and Jehovah said — To whom, and by whom? Doubtless by Noah the preacher of righteousness unto the old world, and the other Patriarchs, who had received the counsell of God. This word was no other then the execution of his decree, to powre out wrath upon the world of the ungodly. 2. The reason decreed and resolved on, I will blot out Adam, whom I have created from the face of the ground, — Wherein are considerable.

1. Gods act, I will blot out from the face of the ground, The expression is metaphorical, taken from washing away of filth with water, as in cleansing of dishes. 2. King. 21. 13. Used sometimes for blotting out sin, (1er. 18. 23.) by pardon, and houses by destruction, (Ezek. 6. 6.) In this place it notes (1) bitter destruction, such as cometh from displeasure (2) Utter destruction, destruction without repair. 2. The object of this is Apostate Adam. 3. The term from whence he is thus wash away, the surface of the ground, (1) The place of being, (2) The place of hope, al aggravate this act of vengeance. 3. The extent, From Adam to the beast, to the creeping thing, and to the fowl of the heavens — In summe the vengeance reacheth to every thing that might be helpful unto man. 1. The ground, the solid, whereon man could live, he is washed from that. 2. Labouring beasts, that were for use of man, perish with him. 3. All other usefull creatures of earth and heaven.

Quest. Why must these perish? Answ. (1.) To aggravate mans sin. (2.) To increase mans punishment; as when house and goods and sinners are made to perish together.

4. The reason; because it repents me that I have made them. — In all these are the aggravating causes of their sin. 1. That God had made them & given them being. 2. That yet they had turned Gods heart justly against them. 3. That all the confluence of creatures were abused by them to sin, and therefore to perish with them.

Note hence.

D. 1. Gods conceptions of wrath are not long without expressions of it. From the connexion.

D. 2. God alone is the onely avenger of violence offered to his own glory. None for him. Isa. 63. 3.

D. 3. Bitter and utter destruction is determined upon an Apostat ungodly World.

D. 4. Adam Apostate cannot keep his foot upon the ground.

D. 5. Adams sin brings ruine upon his comforts, as well as on himself.

D. 6. The whole Creation feelth vengeance for the sin of man.

D. 7. Gods creating goodness is a deep aggravation of the sin of such, as rise against him.

D. 8

D. 8. Gods being contrary to wicked creatures brings full destruction upon them and theirs. Ver. 7.

The fourth head in the first general is the exemption of one family from the common deluge in which God preserved his Church, as followeth, ver. 8. But Noah found grace in the eyes of Jehovah. But Noe found grace before the Lord God. Sept.

But Noah found mercy before the Lord. Cald. In which passage of Noachs exemption from the common deluge on the ungodly World.

These terms occur as considerable,

1. The adversative particle of connection, which puts his state opposit to the World. (1.) Which must be read here, But, shewing the diversity of his condition. Jehovah resolves to blot out the World of Apostates, but not Noah. 2. The cause of his exemption. Grace in the eyes of the Lord. Wherein 1. The principle of this good, Jehovah himself, He that was, and is, and is to come, He who made all flesh, and is the only self sufficient cause of all good to his creatures; This most High God, of himself and for himself maketh this difference. 2. The goodness from this God, which works this exemption. That is, Grace.

Now this is Gods free motion of his goodness unto sinners, blotting out iniquity, which otherwise would blot out them. Exod. 34. ver. 6. 3. The way of communicating this Grace, and that is, by Gods eyes, which notes the special respect God hath to Noah, through which he brought home that grace for his exemption: God hath properly no eyes, but by them is noted, that respect of souls is had by God, and through that eye, giveth grace, for acceptance, justification and deliverance. 3. The object of this exemption, Noah: (1.) A single person. (2.) A son of Adam a sinner. (3.) An head of a family; with his. 4. The way of applying this grace & the fruit of it, He found it.

So this phrase is used. Gen. 19. vers. 19. about Lot, and Exod. 33. v. 12. of Moses. Of Onesiphorus. 2. Tim. 1. ver. 18. Of believers, Heb. 4. ver. 16. (1.) A reception of faith. (2.) A real reception. 3. A free reception without desert, only God freely cast's respect on souls, and they have it; It is not sought nor acquired by mans paines, but found in the way as a gift from God. It is gross therefore that the Jesuit, makes it a mercenary finding of grace, that is, by Noah living a single life 500 year which yet was not so and if it had, what could that deserve of God? or as much as he changed this condition also, and lived in marriage as other holy Patriarchs; It is evident God was pleased with his estate, and did respect his family Quest. Did not Methusalach and Lamech, &c. find grace as well as Noah?

Ans. Yea, no doubt, unto justification, therefore this is not to be exclusively to any other believer, but only to the wicked World.

And again as to one special effect of this grace to be delivered from the waters he alone enjoyed, and not others who were ceased from the earth.

Wee learn.

D. 1. States and natures of gracious ones stand in opposition to the ungodly World. But from the connection.

D. 2. Jehovah only is the allsufficient principle of his peoples good.

D. 3. Jehovah by free grace only makes a difference between his saints and the world in saving.

D. 4. Gods respect unto poor soules, doth alone communicate grace and salvation to them.

D. 5. Gods gracious eye singlenth out soules, whom he delivereth from the worlds destruction.

D. 6. Faith must be the finder of grace with God, and no work nor price of man. Ver. 8.

Here endeth the first lecture of the Law, called Bereishith. Marked with three פפפ.

The state of the ungodly world being declared with the vengeance determined on it in an universal ruine, the first general of this Chapter is shut up with the exemption of one person and family, in whom the Church must be preserved. Secondly. Now followeth the description of the state of the Church in this time of Gods taking vengeance on the world, continued to the end of the ninth Chapter. All which is taken up in three main heads. First. The state of the Church in that time of Gods warning before the flood came. Ch. 6. ver. 9 to the end. Secondly. The state of it at the time of the flood. From the first ver. of the seventh Chap. to the 12th ver. of the eighth Ch. thirdly. The state of it after the flood for the term of Noachs life, from Ch. 8. ver. 13 to Ch. 9. ver. 29. The first head is comprised in the residue of the sixth Chapter. wherein are these branches.

1. The nature of the Church, specified in Noah, ver. 9.
2. The number of the Church, in the chief members. ver. 10.
3. The occasion of Gods singlenth out these repeated, ver. 11. 12. 13.
4. The

4. The warning and rule to Noah of making the Ark. ver. 14. 15. 16.
5. The use of this Ark discovered. ver. 17 to the end of 21.
6. The obedience of Noah to Gods word. ver. 22.

1. The nature of the true Church as exemplified in Noah, is thus described. ver. 9. These the generations of Noah: Noah was a just man, perfect in his ages, Noah walked with God, or to God. These are the generations of Noe. Noe being a man, just, perfect in his generation. Noe pleased God. Sept. Noah walked in the fear of God. Cald. Here beginneth the second Pavatha, or section of the Law among the Hebrewes, called Noach, which continueth to the 12 Chap. whereof there are 54 in all, which were read in the Jewes synagoge every Sabbath in the compass of a yeere. With reference to the matter here in hand, it contains a true description of the nature of Gods Church exemplified in Noah wherein are observable.

1. The title from the Father of the Church. These, &c.

2. The description of its nature exemplified in this Father by 3 Characters. 1. Just. 2. Perfect. 3. Walking to God.

1. The title is thus. These the generations of Noah. In which note, generally, that it is prefixed to all the following history of the Church; specially consider these terms: 1. The subject in that preface, these, Which is demonstrative looking to all the events which are hereafter related concerning the Church of God.

2. The attribute, the generations of Noah. This word is used to comprehend all the works of God about the heavens and the earth. Gen. 2. 4. So all the successive issues of providence from Adam are called the generations of Adam. Gen. 5. 1. Now God putting an end to his race, he beginneth the history of all his providences in his Church and in the world, from Noah. So that, generations here doth not signifie as sometime strictly the first of the loines from one to another, but all the issues of providence attending the successive seed; for all these are reported here under this title. And these are said to be the generations of Noah, not as the genitive of the efficient, as if he should beget all these, but of the subject original, concerning whom and his issue all things following are thus reported by God.

2. The description of the nature of the Church as exemplified in one, held out to be the duty of all its members stands in 3 characters.

1. He was a just man.— This is spoken of him, after he by faith found grace in the eyes of Jehovah; so that it is consequent upon grace not precedent; therefore such as was freely given him, not any acquired by his own works; so that the Apostle calleth him the heir of righteousness, which is by faith. This gift of righteousness both by imputation from Christ, and infusion by his spirit, doth here denominate Noah a just man, such all true Church members must be; passively and actively righteous.

2. He was perfect.— Not legally so called that is absolutely conformed to every title of Gods Law by his personal obedience. So none ever was, but the son of God manifested in the flesh: But evangelically perfect, that is in another, even Christ the head, by whose spirit his heart was conformed to the Law of his God, and so sincerely subject to Gods will though by reason of flesh cohabiting, he could not act up fully to the will of God. He had respect to every command of God, though he reached it not in actings; such a one is called a perfect man. Gen. 17. 1. Psal. 119. 1. 6. So Noah here, (1) His quality, perfect. (2) The time, in his time when wickedness overflowed to provocation.

3. Noah walked with or to God.

In which Character, 1. The subject is Noah still, that gracious one who had favor and power with God, the Father of the Church from whom it's line is now drawn upon earth. 2. The motion, He walked, the seventy read, He pleased, paraphrasing rather than translating the Word. The word is metaphorical, and used here to set forth the whole conversation of the children of the Church; These particulars are to be noted in it. 1. The proper sense of it; now as walking is a motion of any creature from a principle of life within, disposing it to seek it's own good and perfection; so it notes here, a moving external of a renewed soul from a principle of spiritual life within including it to be stirring still toward it's own perfection, so that it noteth all spiritual action.

2. The extent of it, reacheth both the general and special calling of a soul, so Noah walked, as one generally called of God to be his Servant; and as specially called to be a Preacher of righteousness; In both which he did not sit still but was walking contrary to the ungodly World in righteousness and holiness, and testifying against their wickedness severely, pronouncing the sentence of destruction on them, so ministerially condemning them, as is noted of him by the Spirit. Hebr. 11. vers 7. 2. Peter 2. vers 5.

3. The intention of this act, which is carried in the conjugation Hithpael, it notes repetition of the act, fervency and pursuit of it, he walked and walked. yea he vehemently, or mightily walked. So he preached and so he wrought righteousness in the time of the inundation of wickedness and highest opposition to Gods truth. 3. The term of all this motion, To God, or with God, both rendering the preposition will abide; and so it note^s both the rule of all his motion, God, and his company in motion, God, and his end of motion, God. All this was said of Enoch before, but (as is conceived) impiety was not grown to that height of impudency, and universal reigne, as now in Noach's time: of which Christ takes so especial notice. Mat. 24. 37. 38. 39.

Take these Notes hence.

D. 1. Wickednes confounding the Church with the world makes God shut up that intervall with judgement and to begin a new account. Now he reckoneth from Noach. These are, &c.

D. 2. Grace will not suffer the Church to cease but continueth its being in the accepted ones of God.

D. 3. Grace makes a record of the Churches state and propagation for the use of future ages.

D. 4. In one person or family the Church may be preserved visible, from whence it shall grow afresh inasfer times.

D. 5. Righteousness by faith must qualify the Church of God, from the first to the last in the line of it.

D. 6. Evangelical perfection in an head (Christ) turning hearts to all Gods commands sincerely, is proper to the Church.

D. 7. In the worst of times true saints labour to be the more perfect towards God.

D. 8. External motion in sincerity, fervency, and constancy from a spirit of life, must shew the Church.

D. 9. God alone must be the rule, company and end of Church walking.

D. 10. Grace alone from God causeth this righteousness perfection and walking with God.

Ver. 10.

2. Now followeth the number of the Church, at least the chief members of it, all issuing out of the loines of Noach, who were preserved from destruction. Ver. 10. And Noach begat three sonnes Shem, Cham, and Japhet. — Sep. Cal. same. In this is recorded the immediate issue from Noach before the flood, among whom the visible Church, was preserved in being, when the world of Apostasy were destroyed in the deluge. This is repeated with respect to the foregoing title, to describe, in some part, the generations of Noach, as also to let us see the small beginnings of the Church of God after the flood, where about we may observe, 1. The number, they were but three. Such as were begotten, added to their father Noach, with all their wives, who made up the full Church. 2. The order: Japheth the eldest, Shem second, Cham third. Thereason of Shems priority was given, Chap. 5. 32. 3. The nature of these, 1. Shem the eminent seed from whom came Christ. 2. Japhet hopeful, in coming into Schems lot. 3. Cham of cursed sinfull disposition. Yet all these making up the professed visible Church in that time, the very worst putting on a vifor of holiness. So that however the Church in its nature is a society of saints called out of the world, and all members should be such, yet accidentally under Gods providence, and Satans malice, while it is visible, it is mixed. 4. The father of all these, Noach, a man gracious with God, and walking always to him, out of his loines they come.

We may learn.

D. 1. Fruitfulness in body is an effect of grace, to continue Gods Church.

D. 2. The holiest parent cannot bring forth an holy seed; that is born of grace. Noah could not.

D. 3. Little or small may be the visible Church; father and sonnes and wives but eight.

D. 4. In the visible Church may be such as are not saints indeed; but far from it. as Cham.

D. 5. Grace put's the last before the first, and the younger before the elder. Shem is before Japhet.

D. 6. Mixtures in the Church not destructive to its being were permitted not to divide. But to put them upon purging it.

3. The occasion of Gods singling out these, is here againe repeated, which was the cause of destroying the world. Ver. 11. And the earth was corrupted in the sight of Elohim, and the earth was filled with violent iniquity. — With rapines. Cald. — But the earth was corrupted before God

Ver. 11.

God, and the earth was filled with unrighteousness Sept. — ver. 12. And Elohim saw the earth and beheld it was corrupted, for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. — Sept. same. All flesh, every one, or all flesh of miserable man. Cald. — Ver. 13. And Elohim said to Noach, an end of all flesh is come in my sight, because the earth is filled with violent iniquity from the face of them, and behold I corrupt them with the earth.

The reason of every man is come before me, because the earth is filled with unrighteousness by them, and behold I will corrupt them, and the earth. Sept. —

Because the earth is filled with rapines, from the face of their most wicked works, &c. Cald. — In all this is but repeated the cause of Gods severe wrath against the world, and the occasion of singling out his Church. In special, these things are reported. First. The corrupt estate of the men of the world. ver. 11.

2. Gods animadversion of them ver. 12.

3. Gods sentence for judgment on them. Ver. 13. In the former these particulars are considerable. 1. The subject of the evil spoken of. The earth, — Which note's by a metonymie, the men of the earth, and properly, by reason of them, the very earth it self was the remotest subject of all provoking evil. 2. The evil it self spoken of this earth, which is two fold, 1. More spirituall intended against God. (1) The sin, it was corrupted, —

It note's such a corruption as is in death, when the soul is gon, and the carcass left to putrefie and rot. This is used properly, by the spirit to note that corruption of sin, which divides the soul from God, and takes away spirituall life, which it should have by union with him & worshipping of him. So its applied to idolatry or spiritual adultery. Exod. 32. 7. Deut. 32. 5. &c. (2) The aggravation expressed in that it was To Gods face. Gen. 10. 9. — 2. Civil, more immediately looking to man, so it is said, the earth was filled with violent iniquity, — Where. 1. The evil, is most cruel, horrid oppression, violence and wrong upon men; at unrighteousness, as Sept. or Rapine, theft & violence, as Caldec. 2. The measure it was full, mens hearts and hands full, and thereby the earth brim full; there's no room for more wickedness. Secondly, in Gods observation note. 1. In inspection, And Elohim saw the earth, — That is, took notice of sinners, and let not a sin misse his eye.

2. Demonstration, And behold it was corrupted, — 1. The note of admiration, behold, loe sets forth the evidence.

2. The corruption demonstrated is such as before, onely we may take in all the former verse. 3. The reason of this inspection and admiration, for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth, —

Where. 1. Flesh, is meant of man, as the Caldec paraphrasteth, so called from his Apostasy from Spirit and enmity to it, as well as from his frailty; and worst part, that ruled over him; the universality of this subject is to be noted, all flesh. 2. The sinful act attributed to this subject is corrupting, which notes killing, debiling by sin, making rotten and stinking. 3. The object, his Way, this borrowed exprellion notes all a mans life, bent and conversation towards God and Man; the course they did drive below. 4. The place of this evil, upon the earth, which was the habitation that God made for their comfort, and this they rendred odious by their sin. Thirdly, in Gods sentence for judgment, we have,

1. The Judge giving out sentence, And Elohim said to Noach, — God to him primarily, and by him passeth sentence on the World. 2. The sentence, An end of all flesh is come in my sight, — wherein observe, 1. The Subject is universal all flesh. The same men. 2. The evil sentenced, an end of destruction and vengeance. (3) The certainty of it, in Gods sight, or it is before him, and shall not fail. 3. The reason repeated, because the earth is filled with violent iniquity from their faces. The very Continent by the men, was filled with violent injuries, and that from their faces, opposed to Gods face before, the end was in his face, and the provocation in their faces; by them the Sept. — from the face of their most wicked works, Cald. The summe is, their faces were against God to sin, and his face against them for vengeance. 4. The execution resolved, And behold I will corrupt them with the earth — wherein, 1. The act of execution by God himself, I will corrupt, the word is the very same, with that which sets forth their sin, so the severity also do expresse it; the Caldec. I will destroy, which is the same with his corrupting; but thus God answereth their wickedness, that as they have corrupted Gods worship and name, and made it a filthy abominable thing; and corrupted their wayes, that they stink in his nostrils, so he is resolved to corrupt them in his wrath, and make them stink under his vengeance. A like exprellion we have, 1. Cor. 3. 17. 2. The object all flesh corrupted with sin, 3. The extent of vengeance, them with the earth Heb. — Them and the earth. Sept. So far as sin polluted so far shall the flood wash it, that it appear no more.

4. Gods warning and rule to Noah for making the ark now followeth, ver. 14. Make for thy self an Ark of Gopher-trees, nests thou shalt make in the Ark: and thou shalt pitch it, within and without with pitch. Of squared trees, &c. Sept. Of Cedar trees, mansions thou shalt make in the Ark, and cover it within and without with pitch. Cald.

Ver. 15. And this (is it, or the measure or fashion) by which thou shalt make is 300 cubits the length of the Ark, 50 cubits the breadth of it, and 30 cubits the height of it. And so shalt thou make the Ark, the length of 300 cubits. &c. Sept.

And so thou shalt make it, the length of the Ark shall be, &c. Cald. Ver. 16. A clear light shalt thou make to the Ark, and in a cubit shalt thou finish it from above, and the door of the Ark thou shalt set in the side thereof, with lower second and third stories thou shalt make it.

Joining together thou shalt make the Ark, &c. Sept. A window thou shalt make in it, &c. mansions lower, second, and third thou shalt make in it. In all which, we have these things considerable. 1. A command for making an instrument of salvation. 2. Direction for the matter of it, ver. 14. 3. Direction for the measure of it, ver. 15. 4. Direction for the form or fashion of it, ver. 16. 1. The command for making is in these words.

Make for thee an Ark: The occasion of this command was Gods denunciation of utter ruine upon the whole world by a deluge: at which word Noah doubtless must be astonished, and to bear up the heart of this holy one, he gives him now some visible discovery of his safety in the midst of all this desolation, by commanding him to provide this instrument of salvation. Of this command it will be fit to understand, the right sense of the letter and the due application of it. These terms are considerable.

1. The subject of this Command to whom it came, Noah primarily and by him to those that were saved, his sonnes, to whom it is probable other hands were joyned, but to him especially this warning came.

2. The Command or warning it self, Make thou, that is according to my will, goe about and finish the instrument of salvation which I shew thee. In which is a promise included that he should not make it in vain, but in his obedience he should find God working.

3. The instrument to be made, an Ark. The word here is no where used but in this place and Exod. 2. v. 3. Another word [Aron] is used for the Ark wherein the Tables were, which Moses put in the Tabernacle; this must needs signifie such an instrument that is fit to save by water; it was the first invention for living upon the waters; and therefore such a vessel, that might float on the waters; whither made square at ends, or more round as our ships, it is a needless dispute; but here is the first entrance of navigation, that ever was, and that from God instructing man. Not as the Poet, Æt circa pectus erit, &c. The Greek hath one word κρηνη, for both, Heb. 9. 4. Chap. 11. 7.

4. The end to which this must be made, for thy self, not excluding but including his house. Heb. 11. v. 7. Wherein was the Church visible at this time. 2. The application of this is to a spiritual use, as a figure of Christ in whom all soules are saved spiritually, and Baptism by water, signifying the like thing untous. 1. The matter of this instrument is twofold. 1. Principal — Gopher trees. The Caldee reads Cedar, others Pine trees, others Firre. The word is used no where but here, for any tree. We need not be anxious in this, it was such matter as was fit to float upon the waters, and keep them out. But of this the Ark was to be made, and therein several partitions. Nests thou shalt make in the Ark, that is, roomes, cabbins, mansions, for the several creatures. Numb. 24. 21. 2. The other (additional) matter was pitch, And thou shalt pitch it within and without with pitch, this this also was matter, to defend from the soaking and destroying power of the waters; the word here used for pitching sometime signifieth to make atonement, or to expiate: and such may be the application of these fit instruments (though low and base) to those means by which we are delivered from wrath to come. Thirdly. The measure of the instrument.

Ver. 14.

Ver. 15.

מדה

And this is the measure whereby. This is Gods providence to set the quantity of the instrument of salvation as well as the nature; the dimensions of which are three, which we may consider in the letter and in the application. 1. Length — The length of the Ark 300 cubits. What the measure of this cubit was, is hard to guess, onely to stop the mouths of scorers, who deride this as a fable, that so final a vessel should contain so many creatures; doubtless, God is wiser than man, and whatever length these cubits were of, yet they were sufficient to contain what God commands to go into the Ark. 2. Breadth, — Fifty cubits the breadth, so this was but the sixth part of the length. 3. Height — And thirty cubits the height, or stature, the tenth part of the length. The application of which may be the sufficient extent of means & those dimensions of breadth length, depth and height of the mystery of Christ.

Ver. 16.

פתח

Fourthly. The form or fashion of it, set out in 3 parts. 1. A window, A clear light shalt thou make to the Ark, and at a cubit thou shalt finish it, — This was for light and air, by which the creatures might be preserved; it is questioned whether more or one; the word may carry such a sense as beareth the kind of light; now more might be comprehended in this one. This is truth, it was for light and air sufficient for all the Creatures. This is applied to Christs enlightning. Ephes. 1. vers 17 18. 2. A door; — And a door to the Ark thou shalt set in the side of it; This was the entrance in for all, which were preserved by it, and applied spiritually, notes Christ the entrance into the Church. Joh. 10. 3. The several stories, which were three, lowest, second and third stories thou shalt make it. — These doubtless were for distinct places for several creatures; which were placed higher or lower is not certain, and needles to dispute; all was ordered in the most convenient way for preservation. In its application it may note, how sufficient the means is for salvation which God provideth for the Church in Christ. To be so curious as to apply each particular to its proper signification will be bootless; for as much as man can know no more than God revealeth.

Take these notes from it.

D. 1. In pouring out indignation on the wicked world, God provideth for his saints.

D. 2. God alone knoweth how to deliver the just from destruction to come.

D. 3. However God alone saveth, yet it is by means.

D. 4. Man must use Gods means in order to salvation according to his prescript.

D. 5. In Gods command of using means, there is implied a promise. As to make the Ark.

D. 6. Means of salvation to fight are but mean and despicable, A little timber and pitch.

D. 7. Several nests and mansions are in the Ark of the Church. Nests, &c. Ver. 14.

D. 8. All Church work for salvation must have its line and measure from God.

D. 9. Sufficient dimensions doth God give to the means of salvation for his people. Breadth, and length, &c. Ver. 15.

D. 10. Light must be in the means or instrument of mans salvation.

D. 11. Adoor or entrance must be for soules to come into the Ark of the Church and live.

D. 12. A due proportion of place is designed by God for all creatures admitted into the Church Arke for salvation. Ver. 16.

5. The use of the Ark here discovered now followeth from Ver. 17. to 21.

Ver. 17. And I, behold I am bringing the flood of waters upon the earth, to corrupt all flesh, to which in it is the spirit of life from under heaven, all that is in the earth shall expire.

— Shall dye, Caldee. But behold I will bring a flood of water upon the earth to corrupt all flesh, wherein is the breath of life under heaven, and whatsoever things are upon the earth shall dye. Sept. Ver. 18. But I will make my covenant stand firm with thee, and thou shalt enter into the Ark thou and thy sonnes thy wife, and the wives of thy sonnes with thee.

Sept. and Cald. same. Ver. 19. And of every living thing of all flesh thou shalt bring into the Ark, couples of all, to live with thee, male and female they shall be.

That they may be sustained, &c. Cald. And of all labouring beasts, and of all wild beasts, and of all flesh, two by two of all, thou shalt bring into into the Ark, that thou mayest nourish them with thee, &c. Sept.

Ver. 20. O, the soul after his kind, and of the beast after his kind, and of every creeping thing of the ground after its kind, couples of all shall enter unto thee, that they may live.

— Shall come in unto thee to be nourished with thee, male and female. Sept.

— Shall enter with thee that they may abide. Cald.

Ver. 21. And thou shalt take unto thee of all food which is eaten, and thou shalt gather it up to thee, and it shall be for thee and for them for meat.

Cald. fame.

Of all meat which ye eat, &c. it shall be for thee and them to eat. Sept. — In all this passage is discovered, 1. The natural use of the Ark, upon occasion of Gods purposed vengeance in bringing the flood of waters. Ver. 17. 2. The spiritual use of it, I will make, &c. Ver. 18. 3. The special pointing out the subjects, which should have benefit in the several uses of the Ark. Ver. 18. 19. 20. 4. The special care for sustenance. Ver. 21. To the first, the natural use of the Ark is discovered, by the kind of judgment, which God again threatened upon the world of ungodly, which was by water; which though the immediate means to swallow up living creatures, yet was it to bear up the Ark. Herein the terms are considerable.

Ver. 17. 1. The Author of this vengeance emphatically expressed, And I, behold I. This is God himself, set out, 1. By duplication, I, I. 2. By admirations behold, in both God let's us know, himself to be the cause of his own vengeance, not another. 2. The act, am bringing or do bring, That is, he was now upon the execution of that vengeance which he had threatened so long before, it was even now at the door, and God is bringing it on them himself. 3. The object, which is the evil brought in, the flood of waters upon the earth. 1. The evil is a violent falling flood of waters, which should make all fall before it; as the word whence it cometh signifieth; for the word here used is only for this great deluge. 2. The extent of this inundation, even the whole Earth, where ever any living creature was or might be. 4. The end, To corrupt all flesh which hath in it the Spirit of life from under the Heavens. 1. The end is corruption, the same word which formerly noted their sin, here is used to set forth their judgment, as was noted before, and it intends full and eternal destruction; to make them rot and putrify as carrion in a ditch. 2. The subject of this end all flesh, that is, all creatures made of the ground. 3. The specification, such as have the spirit of life in them, viz. natural, vital spirits. 4. The extent of this corruption, from under Heaven, viz. So far as the Heavens cast their aspect upon the earth; they should be no more under the influence of them. 5. The certainty of execution. In which note these two particulars. 1. The universality of the subject. All living on the earth. 2. The bitterness of their end, in fear, tortures, and agony shall they expire. Now this being the way of the Worlds perdition by waters God appoints Noah to make the Ark that might float and live upon them. To the second, the spiritual use of the Ark. — Expelled in the following words.

And I will make my Covenant firmly to stand with thee. The use here plainly is that the Arke must be the sign or token of this Covenant which God made with Noah. Herein, 1. Federatus, Jehovah himself, freely and from himself, 1. of my own free grace. 2. Fedus, the Covenant it self, which doubtless for the substance of it must be the Covenant of grace, however it carrieth temporal deliverance as a signal with it; and so God speaketh of it every where in the Old Testament. This is the first place we find mention of the name of Covenant; but doubtless the thing is spoken of and the Covenant given to Adam in the promise of the seed, which should break the Serpents head. 3. Federatus, God will make this Covenant of Adoption, Righteousness, and Salvation stand firm, rise up, and it shall not fall. It is a mighty making of Covenant. 4. Federatus. Noah and all the true seed of the Church with him. Not all that did partake in the common salvation from the flood and in the outward Church privileges, but only Noah and such as with him find grace in the eyes of Jehovah. To the third, The nomination of the subjects who must have some benefit of this Covenant and signe, of which you have particular enumeration in the close of this verse. 1. These are the principal subject, even the Church and men whom God preserved in all but a few, even eight souls, as the Apostle observed: 1. Pet. 3. 19. &c. Yet in these persons of several dispositions, all which, were not partakers of the best things of the Covenant, though of the temporal salvation. Thou shalt enter and so they: He puts them all into that part of Covenant for preservation. But a vast difference in the spiritual part. 2. The subjects inferior to these are twofold according to their element. 1. Periclitant creatures, Ver. 19. All living beasts, &c. 2. Aerial fowls, Ver. 20. In all which 1. The kinds in general, of all living. 2. The number of these kinds, two of a sort. 3. The sexe of that number, male and female. 4. The propensity given them for preservation, they shall come by my instinct, And thou shalt bring them into the Ark. 5. The end of entrance, To keep them alive, and to renew the earth with future generations. To the fourth, Which is Gods order for provision for Noah and all with him, Ver. 21. Wherein 1. A command. And thou shalt take to thee, &c. 2. A promise, It shall be for thee and them for for food. God shuts them not up to starve them, but makes all sufficient provision for man and beast. As to the doubts about the number, I shall clear in the beginning of the seventh Chapter.

Ver. 22. The sixth and last particular in Noahs obedience. Ver. 22. And Noah did according to all which Elohim commanded him, so did he. All whatsoever God commanded him, &c. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. In which these particulars occur, 1. The subject of this obedience, Noah, who had found grace. 2. The act, which is here emphatically set out by doubling it; He did, and he did, that is; he truly did, and thoroughly did Gods command, in making the Ark, laying hold of the Covenant, and ordering all his family. 3. The rule of obedience, according to all which Elohim commanded him. This he strictly looks upon and doth not swerve from it. Not an act swerving from the Word of God.

CHAP. VII.

Here beginneth the history of the Churches condition in the time of the coming and being of the flood upon the earth, continued to ver. 13. Of the eighth Chapter. In this Chapter these particulars are considerable. 1. Gods command to Noah for his sake. &c. ver. 1. to the end of ver. 4. 2. Noahs obedience to this command. V. 5. to 10. 3. Gods execution of his sentence with the various effects of it. ver. 11. to 24.

1. Gods command for Noahs entrance followeth. ver. 1. And Jehovah said to Noah, enter thou and at thy house into the Ark because thee have I seen just before me in this generation. And the Lord God said to Noe &c. Sep. — thou and all the men of thy house. Cald.

V. 2. Of every clean beast thou shalt take unto thee seven, seven, the male and his female: and of the beast which is not clean (of it) two, male and his female. — אישׁ ואישה — Sept. and Cald. same.

V. 3. Also of the fowl of the heavens seven, male & female, to keep alive seed upon the face of the whole Earth. — to nourish seed upon the whole earth. Sep. — that there may be preserved a seed, &c. Cald.

V. 4. For yet to seven dayes I will make it to rain upon the earth forty dayes & forty nights, & I will blot out every living body which I have made from the face of the ground. — I will blot out every living body, &c. from man to beast. Sep. — After the time of seven dayes I will make rain come down. &c. Cald.

In all which passage we have these particulars considerable.

1. Gods command concerning Noah and his house. ver. 1.

2. Gods command touching inferiour creatures. ver. 2. 3.

3. Gods reason for such injunction. ver. 4.

To the first, we have in this first command. 1. The authority injoyning the following worke. — And Jehovah said to Noah, (1) The authority is supreme. Jehovah, he that was, and is, and is to come, he that made all things and can destroy them, whose counsell must stand, and his work cannot be resisted. (2) The subject to whom he giveth command is Noah, whom also he injoynd to make the Ark. (3) The way of revelation. He spake, some say God spake by the ministry of Methuselah, who dyed but seven dayes before the flood, but this is a dream: the Apostle interprets this, that he was warned by God himself to make the Ark, and so doubtles he was to enter, as afterward also to come out. 2. The Command it self given to him which concerned himself and his. Go thou and at thy house into the Ark. (1) The subject to whom this comes, principally is Noah and his house even all the men or every one of his family, whom God purposed to save from the deluge, Noah first, his house for his sake. (2) The injunction, Go thou or enter thou. God will's him move to his own salvation, though he doth save him. Now betake thy self and thine aboard to the vessel thou hast made to secure against the waters; the terme of this motion is the Ark appointed to save them, for which God took care that it should be a sufficient means for salvation. 3. The reason of this speciall command to Noah exprest in the following words, — For thee have I seen just before me in this generation. 1. The caulall particle sheweth this to be a reason of the foregoing command, the weight whereof is to be duly scanned. 2. The act of God, I have seen, which being an expression of his providential act doth note (1) Gods efficiency, or making Noah just, so Gods sight of things puts them in being, he knoweth them to make them. Act. 15. 18. (2) Gods observation of his own grace effected. (3) Gods approbation of that which he observeth. 3. The Object, the Just, that is, with the righteousness of faith, whereof he was heir. Heb. rr. 7. This God saw, that is, looking on him, gave him, which also hath annexed inherent righteousness, or the change of the heart into the image of God: This God seeth in Noah and therefore provides for his present salvation; he had justified, and made him righteous, and now he addes further mercy to him in sending him into the Ark. This breaks that objection, which supposeth the power of Noahs own works, as if they should deserve this salvation of God above others. But this cannot be, for Gods seeing puts his very righteousness in being, and so it is an act of grace upon Noah, no desert from him. 4. The proof of this righteousness, before me; that is in Gods judgment and esteem; not such a righteousness, which appeareth to men, but indeed that which stands before Gods face and presence, and is so judged by him who searcheth hearts and trieth reimes. 5. The time of the proof of this righteousness, in this generation, what the state of that generation was, is visible. chap. vi. 2, 3, 4, &c. It was unexpressibly wicked, Apostate from God, conspiring with hell in the deeps of sin. Now that grace should preserve one soule or two, and keep them so eminently righteous in the time of such eminent wickedness, this is added to the commendation of the righteousness by grace.

From this verse these notes we gather up.

D. 1. The ever-being God gives timely warning to his accepted and obedient ones. On the eleventh day of

of the second month.

D. 2. Commands for duty Jehovah giveth, that his servants may see the performance of his promise.

D. 3. The use of means must be, as well as having meanes, in order to salvation, enter into the Ark as well as make it. So of Christ.

D. 4. All soules appointed to salvation must repair to their Ark.

D. 5. Providence of grace maketh soules righteous by looking on them. It giveth what it seeth.

D. 6. That grace, which maketh righteous soules, doth accept and save them.

D. 7. That is righteousness indeed which standeth before Gods face.

D. 8. It is eminently good to hold forth the righteousness of grace in the worst times. God seeth and approveth it as the worke of his own hands. Ver. 1.

The second part of Gods command is for the admission of the inferiour creatures into the Ark, where note these particulars.

1. The worke commanded Noah, Thou shalt take unto thee. — Thou is, as

I order them to come, so shalt thou receive them into the Ark under thy care, to see to them and give them their portions; or bring thou them in as the Sept. set them their places where they shall be. 2. The object of his care what he must receive, shewed, 1. In their kind, 1. Terrestrial Beasts, Ver. 2. Of which (1) Their quality, Clean & unclean, (2) Their number, of clean by sevens, of unclean by couples.

(3) Their sexes, male and female. 2. Celestial creatures even the fowl, Ver. 3. set out (1) By their nature, Fowl of heavens.

(2) By number, sevens. (3) By sex also male and female. 3. The end of this command, which carrieth the force of Gods promise to make seed live upon the face of the Earth. — First. The rule is thus of clean beasts. Of every beast clean sevens, sevens, male and his female. In which we may consider these particulars. — 1. The quality of these is cleanness, which is twofold. 1. Natural, so every thing which God made was very clean and good, and no difference until sin came in; which did equally pollute the whole creation; out of which God was pleased to point out, what he would have for sacrifice, which was clean, and what he rejected, which is called unclean.

Quest. How did Noah know this before the Law was given?

Ans. Doubtles God gave the same

Law from the entrance of sacrifice, which was made known to his Servants according to the revelation of that time. However all these constitutions were not gathered into one bulk in Scripture, until the time of Moses.

2. The number is seven, that is, as generally conceived, three pair and one odd; why God would have so many pair of clean preserved, is to be answered onely by his will; the reason of the odd number, it was for sacrifice, at Noahs coming forth of the Ark. 3. The sexe was male and female for propagation of the kinde of creatures which God made. Secondly. The rule for the unclean, this, And of the beast which is not clean, of it two, male and female.

Where like wise, 1. The quality is unclean, ceremonially taken, 2. The number two, which must interpret, that which was written, Ch. 6. 19. Two of all, &c. that is of all the unclean. 3. The sexe, male and female as before, and for a proportionable increase. Thirdly. The rule for the fowl, Also of the fowl of the heavens seven, seven male and female.

These were the second sort of creatures, distinguished by their place, such as flew in the air, and under heaven; of these also note 1. The number, sevens, viz. Of such as were clean, for of the unclean the rule is general, they were but two. 2. Their sexe male and female as before. 3. The end of all this order, To quicken seed upon the face of all the earth.

The performance of this promise is the end of this command of all these entering into the Ark. 1. The good promised, life of every kind. 2. The propagation of this life it was to quicken or keep a live seed. 3. The extent of this through all the earth, which God was resolved to give again to them to be inhabited.

Thirdly the reason of these commands is the execution now at hand of the fearful deluge spoken of before. 1. Herein, the last time set, enough to get all imbarqued, For yet to seven dayes, the time determined is revealed, so God graciously warneth his, that ruins fall not on them. 2. The way of executing this vengeance, I make it to rain upon the earth.

He brings down his judgment by rain. Himself alone is the cause of it. I will make it rain he that maketh the clouds and filleth them. 3. The continuance of time of rain, fourty dayes and forty nights. A due long enough for execution to drown all.

4. The effect and I will blot out every living substance, which I have made from the face of the earth. In which occurs to our observation.

1. The evil, is extinction by death. 2. The universality of the object every living substance. — All that riseth, &c. — Sept. living is not in the original, but it notes every thing that standeth up, and this must be among the living.

ving, for life alone was destroyed. 3. The aggravation of the fact, from Gods own workmanship, which they defaced, by sin, which I have made. 4. The extent of this judgment from the face of the ground, that is, wheresoever on the ground any flesh liveth; they shall be seen no more upon this earth.

These Notes arise here.

- D. 1. It is Gods prerogative only to judge creatures clean or unclean.
D. 2. The distinction of clean and unclean among creatures is from special use, not from nature.
D. 3. From the fall of man God gave the law of clean and unclean, unto a set time. To Christ, and no longer.
D. 4. Clean and unclean creatures have their preservation from the word of God.
D. 5. The certain number of creatures is given by God in the preservation of them.
D. 6. Gods aim is in seven to two, that he would have cleanness outgrow uncleanness.
D. 7. God useth the works of man in his general salvation, as in special. Ver. 2.
D. 8. Beast and fowls of heaven are Gods care; to keep them for man.
D. 9. Natural propagation by sexes is the ordinance of God.
D. 10. God giveth the quickning power to all creatures on the earth. Ver. 3.
D. 11. God warn's in season whom he mean's to save.
D. 12. Gods hand alone mak's creatures instruments of vengeance to sinners.
D. 13. Gods arm is long enough to plague the sinful world.
D. 14. God sometimes pittieeth, not the work of his own hands.
D. 15. Universal extinction by death is Gods just vengeance on universal corruption by sin. V. 4.

The next general head of this Chapter is Noachs obedience to Gods foregoing command. Ver. 5. And Noah did according to all which Jehovah commanded him. Cald. fame. And Noe did all things what ever the Lord commanded him. Sept. Ver. 6. And Noah was the Son of six hundred years; and the flood was waters upon the earth. Cald. fame. The flood of water was upon the earth. Sept. Vers. 7. And Noah went in and his sonnes, and his wife, and his sonnes wives with him into the Ark, from the face of the waters of the flood. Because of the water of the flood. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Ver. 8. Of the clean beast, and of the beast which is not clean it self, and of the fowl, and all which creepeth upon the ground. Sept. and Cald. to fame. וְהָאֲנִימָא וְהָאֲנִימָא. Ver. 9. Two, two they entered in unto Noah into the Ark, male and female as Elohim commanded Noah. Sept. and Cald. fame, שָׁנָה בְּשָׁנָה.

In this narration of Noachs obedience, Note, 1. A general description of it. Ver. 6. 2. A more special discovery of its particulars. Ver. 7, 8, 9. In the former, we have to consider, 1. His obedience described. Wherein occurs, 1. His activity recorded, as it is expressed in the words, And Noah did, that is, besirred himself to what was to be done, and laboured in this time of Gods last warning; notwithstanding all difficulties that might discourage and make him despond. 2. His rule by which he worketh, According to all which Jehovah commanded him.

In this may we read, 1. The rule it self, the command of Jehovah, who made him, accepted him by grace, and was now careful for his salvation. His word, and none but his, Noah respects, though all the World despise. 2. The universality of it, All that Jehovah commanded him, not a title or jot of Gods command is rejected. 3. The proportion which he keepeth in his work, according to all Gods will so he besirreth himself and worketh. 4. The reiteration of this again, as Chap. 6. 22. Wherein lieth much of the commendation of his faith and obedience. 2. His age is specified, whereof, 1. The number of years, And Noah was a son of six hundred year.

That is, by the Hebrew phrase, it was his 600th year current, as more will appear, Ver. 11. 2. The calamity attending upon that age, And the flood was, the waters on the earth.

Or the flood of water, came about this time on the earth; which was an amazing calamity enough to turn from all thoughts of duty. A double cause may be of noting this age, 1. For certainty of history and chronology of the world. 2. For a commendation of his obedience so active at this age. Secondly. A more special relation was followeth of returns to the command of entrance in the three following verses, wherein we have, 1. The obedience of Noah and his family. And herein 1. Their entrance, And there entered, this was an act not free from great difficulties, to bid the world farewell, leave the earth, and former possessions, and betake himself to an untried vessel never known before; meerly because God commanded him. 2. Their order Noah, and his sonnes, and his wife, and his sonnes wives with him, A few, but eight persons, and these to be as buried for a time, and shut up as in a floating cell. 3. The place of entrance, into the Ark, the instrument of salvation, which God ordained, however unexperienced by them and unknown to the world. 4. The motive to it from the face of the waters of the flood, or because of the water of the flood.

It is corruptly glossed by some, that Noah was so pious, because he looked only to himself, but took no care for the world; for he did every thing after Gods mind, he feared where God would have him tear, and so made the Ark, and so entered when Gods time of judgment was come. Gods word caused him to enter, and moved him (through faith) to tear the waters fore-old, only as yet not seen. Heb. 11. 7.

Ver. 8. 1. The obedience of all other creatures. 1. Of clean beasts. 2. Of unclean. 3. Of fowl. 4. Of creeping things, in all which the Spirit of God records. These in their kinds.

Ver. 9. 2. Their order, Two, two, That is, so marshalled by couples, and these male and female. The sexes nominated before. 3. Their entrance, they went in unto Noah into the Ark. They were not dragged or drawn, but by instinct from God came and offered themselves to Noah, and betook themselves to the places in the Ark, which Noah appoints unto them. Almighty providence must work this. 4. The ground of all this is Gods word only, so it is written, as Elohim commanded Noah.

Gods word was obeyed by Noah, and therefore it makes all creatures of contrary dispositions to come to Noah, and submit to him, and lye down quietly in the Ark.

These observations arise hence.

- D. 1. The obedience of faith is speedy unto God.
D. 2. The obedience of faith keeps propagation in purity and universality to Gods command. Ver. 5.
D. 3. Faith makes old age active in obeying the word of God.

- D. 4. Faith is not driven from obedience in the greatest time of trouble.
D. 5. Faith will use means commanded by God, though never so difficult.
D. 6. Gods will is the only cause of faiths obedience, but judgments may move it. Ver. 6, 7.
D. 7. The very beasts of most wild dispositions shall keep order and submit at Gods beck.
D. 8. Gods command obeyed by faith makes all creatures come and submit to his Church.
D. 9. Obedience of faith shall never want a due record from God. Ver. 8, 9.

The third general containeth an actual execution of the threatened vengeance of God, to the end of this Chapter, and the state of the Church in this time while indignation is pouring out upon the world.

These branches are of this head.

1. The fall of the waters, and several ways of making this flood. Ver. 10, 11, 12.
2. The entrance of Noah repeated. Ver. 13, 14, 15, 16.
3. The effect of these waters on the Church. Ver. 17, 18.
4. The sad issue upon the world. Ver. 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24.

To the first of these, that we may weigh it, Ver. 10. And it was at the seventh of the day, and the waters of the flood were upon the earth. After seven dayes, &c. Sept. After the time of seven dayes. Cald. Ver. 11. In the year, in the six hundred year of the life of Noah, in the second month, in the seventeenth day of the month, in this day, all the fountains of the great deep were broken up, and the windows of the heavens were opened. And in the 600th year in the life of Noe, of the second month, the 27th day of the month, &c. Sept. and Cald. Ver. 12. And there was rain upon the earth forty dayes and forty nights. Sept. fame. Rain descended.

Cald. In these is related the time of the waters fall for the deluge, and the inundations from the abyse below, which is two wayes described, first, generally, the instant of the floods beginning is here reported, where we have.

1. The time stated, And it was at the seventh of the day. Which is clearly translated by the septuagint, after seven dayes viz those seven dayes dayes compleat mentioned Ver. 4. given to Noah and the rest for entrance into the Ark; when those seven dayes were expired, then came the execution for the beginning of it. 2. The evil executed The waters of the flood were upon the earth.

Ver. 10.

That is, those fatal waters which swallowed up all living began to come upon the earth; so soon as Noah with all his charge was entered into Ark. Secondly, more specially the time of this judgment with the materials of it are described. Ver. 11, 12.

Ver. 11. First. The time of the floods beginning, In the six hundredth year of Noachs life, in the second month, in the seventeenth day of the month, in that very day. In these is punctually related the time of the floods beginning. 1. Theyear, even the six hundredth of Noachs life, that is, current, which agrees with the right account of years from the creation 1656, which year dyed Methuselah before the flood. 2. The month, in the second month. viz. the second of Noachs six hundredth year, and of the year of the world, 1656. But what second month this should be, whether that which was so in the sacred account, wherein the year began in the spring, which was the month Zif; or of the civil year, which began near autumn called Marchesean it is controverted among some; not to weigh reasons, which are but at best probable, I conceive the number according to the sacred account, doth best suite with Moses his account; that this should begin about the vernal equinoctial, in the month Zif, which as is computed, answer's to part of our March and April. 3. The day, the seventeenth day of that month, even that day, when the time of warning for 120 year was fully expired, even that day, determined before brought forth the execution of this vengeance.

2. The matter of this judgment discovered, that was water, described by the principles. 1. At the fountains of the great deep were broken up. It is an high expression, that the very springs of the earth, which were confined by Gods word, and the bowells of the ocean restrained, should now by his word receive commillion to swell and overtop their banks, and swallow up sinners. These were waters from beneath. 2. And the windows of heaven were opened.

This is a rhetorical expression also; windones of heaven, used, 2 Kin. 7. Psa. 78. 23. Isa. 24. 18. Mal. 3. 10. They note those flood gates as it were, or the partitions which the arm of God set, for keeping the rain in the clouds from overwhelming; all there were opened, and God gives command to the clouds fully to empty themselves, these heavens here meant must be the expanse under the moon.

Ver. 12. Thirdly. The time of the falling and swelling of these waters for continuance, there was rain upon the earth, forty dayes, and forty nights. That is, it continued raining all that time for forty nights and dayes, as God foretold, Ver. 4. Wherein we may note, 1. There was meanes enough of vengeance, water enough from above and from beneath to devour sinners. 2. Time enough to overflow houses, trees, mountains, that whither soever they should flye, yet they should not escape destruction.

These observations result hence.

- D. 1. Times of forbearance and vengeance, are surely stated by God. Seven dayes and no more.
- D. 2. Gods time of patience being expired vengeance will come. So did the flood. Ver. 10.
- D. 3. Year and month and day hath God set punctually for fulfilling his word.
- D. 4. It is the spirits purpose, that the Church should keep a true Chronology of Gods works. Ver. 12.
- D. 5. Admirable is Gods providence in keeping soules alive between waters above and beneath.
- D. 6. It's Gods word alone to break, and bind the fountains of the great deep, to shut and open the windowes of heaven.
- D. 7. At Gods word heaven and the deep are both ready to destroy sinners.
- D. 8. God weigh's his judgments by time and measure sufficiently to destroy his enemies. Ver. 12.

The second particular expressed in the history of Gods execution, is a repetition of Noachs entrance into the Ark, and all that God had a purpose to save from the flood, in the verses following.

Ver. 13. In the body of that day, on/in that very day Noah entered and Shem, and Cham and Japheth the sonnes of Noah, and the wife of Noah and the three wives of his sonnes with them into the Ark. Sept. Same. In the point of this day, &c. Cald.

Ver. 14. They, and every wild beast in it's kind, and every labouring beast in its kind; and every creeping thing creeping on the earth in its kind, and every fowle in its kind, every bird of every wing. Cald. to same. Every flying bird in its kind, and every creeping thing moving on the earth earth, &c. Septuagint.

Ver. 15. And they went in unto Noah into the Ark, two, two, of all flesh, which hath in it the spirit of life. Sept. and Cald. to same.

Ver. 16. And the goers in being male and female of all flesh, entered in as Elohim commanded him and Jehovah shut it for him.

And the Lord God shut this Ark without. Sept. And God put a guard upon him. Cald. It is not in vain that the spirit inculcates so often the entrance of Noah into the Ark, & the coming of the flood; wicked ones will scarce believe such judgments, and Gods own are backward to believe mercies acted to others and promised to themselves. In this passage, Ver. 13. The time of entrance is againe punctually noted. In that very day, or, in the body or strength of that day. It notes as some conceive, the very day and time of the day, it was the 17th day of the second month in the 600th year of Noachs life, in that very day, the word, that is as the pronoun, demonstrative, notes also strength, that it may be read in the strength of that day, which was about noon. In the very point of the day spoken of, Noah was guided into the Ark. 2. The creature entering again repeated. 1. Superior, Noah and his family, eight persons.

Ver. 13. All more distinctly mentioned, four men and their wives. 2. Inferiour, 1. Their kindes. (1) Wild beasts of every kind. (2) Labouring beasts of every kind. (3) Creeping things of every kind. (4) Fowl of every wing and kind: not a kind of living creature which God created on the earth was excluded; for out of these God resolved to fill the earth again. 2. Their motion, they freely went in by Gods instinct, without dragging or compelling. 3. Their submission they went to Noah to observe his beck and be placed by him. 4. Their order, two and two that is of all sorts clean and unclean thus were they marshalled, two and two. For otherwise in number seven of the clean came in. 5. Their specification. All flesh wherein was the spirit of life. That is such a life that water could destroy. 6. Their sexes, they went in male and female; God having a purpose by these to propagate the creature. 7. The cause and rule of all this, Gods command or word given to Noah; that gave effect to all, and a rule to walk by. 3. An act of grace from Jehovah after entrance in, And Jehovah shut upon him, viz. The door of the Ark. Or he shut his Ark on the outside, or the Ark on the outside of him, and all with him, as the Sept. may be read. Or, and God protected over him, as the Cald. 1. An act of providence, he shut or made fast against the penetration of waters. 2. The object implied, which doubtless was the door of the Ark, of no less bigness than that an elephant might go in by it. 3. The

Ver. 14. They, and every wild beast in it's kind, and every labouring beast in its kind; and every creeping thing creeping on the earth in its kind, and every fowle in its kind, every bird of every wing. Cald. to same.

Ver. 16. And the goers in being male and female of all flesh, entered in as Elohim commanded him and Jehovah shut it for him. Sept. And the Lord God shut this Ark without. Cald. It is not in vain that the spirit inculcates so often the entrance of Noah into the Ark, & the coming of the flood; wicked ones will scarce believe such judgments, and Gods own are backward to believe mercies acted to others and promised to themselves. In the very point of the day spoken of, Noah was guided into the Ark. 2. The creature entering again repeated. 1. Superior, Noah and his family, eight persons. 2. Inferiour, 1. Their kindes. An act of providence, he shut or made fast against the penetration of waters. 2. The object implied, which doubtless was the door of the Ark, of no less bigness than that an elephant might go in by it. 3. The end of providence, it was upon Noah, or for him, and those with him, which they could never have done to secure themselves, but God only, who taught him to make the vessell and now through grace makes it effectual to the end intended.

The Notes hence are these.

- D. 1. Mens hearts are backward to believe Gods acts of grace and vengeance. This from the repetition of the time, &c.
- D. 2. The Spirit strive's much to bring soules to believe the wonders of God. Therefore he so often inculcates them.
- D. 3. God keeps the point of time with his gracious ones to bring them to their safety.
- D. 4. Polygamie was not in the church saved from the waters.
- D. 5. Some of all kindes of creatures hath Gods goodness saved in the common deluge. V. 14.
- D. 6. The breath of life is in Gods hand to give and take. Compare Chap. 6. 17. with Chap. 7. 15. V. 15.
- D. 7. Gods Word or command effects and regulates the salvation of man and beast.
- D. 8. Gods gracious protection must be with his means of salvation upon his saints to make them effectual. V. 16.

The third particular in this execution, is the effect which the waters had upon the Ark and the Church in it, set down in the two following verses.

Ver. 17. And the flood was forty dayes upon the earth and the waters multiplied themselves and lifted up the Ark, and it was lifted up above the earth. Cald same. Forty dayes and forty nights &c. Sept.

Ver. 18. And the waters grew strong and multiplied themselves very much upon the earth and the Ark walked upon the face of the waters. Sept. Cald. also. In this passage we have related in order to the effect of the waters on the Ark, these particulars. 1. The time of the floods growing to its height upon the earth, And the flood was forty dayes upon the earth. Which must be understood, 1. Of the cause of the flood, the rain & waters from the the fountains of the deep. 2. Of their falling and increase, not of their continuance. 3. Forty dayes must be meant of naturall ones taking in the nights, as threatned Chap. 7. 4. So the Sept. expresseth; so long was the flood growing.

2. The increase of the waters it self once again repeated as to this effect, and again spoken of afterward with respect unto the world. (1) Ver. 17. And the waters multiplied themselves. Or the waters grew great, this is but the first degree expressed, to the lifting up of that great vessel; for this they must be very many.

(2) Ver. 18. And the waters were strong and multiplied themselves vehemently on earth.

Where note, a further degree of increase of waters to move and tols the Ark. 1. It is set out by a term of strength, the waters grew strong or mighty; that is, by the waves to move and carry and tols the Ark. 2. By a term of multitude; they multiplied also upon the earth, and that far more than formerly, when they lifted up the Ark, their heaps or height will more clearly be spoken of hereafter. 3. The effect of all this flood so strengthened and so multiplied, with respect unto the Church, which is twofold in expression, 1. Elevation from the earth, And lifted up the Ark, and it was lifted up above the earth.

Here is the distinction which grace makes, the same waters which cover and drown every thing els, keep's the Ark and the Church in it above: it throwes down houses, and palaces and high places, but lifts up the Ark above it self. 2. Motion of the Ark being lifted up, And the Ark walked upon the face of the waters.

It was carried or moved, as the Sept. and Cald. 1. The subject of motion, The Ark, wherein the Church was. 2. The motion, they were carried above death though perhaps tossed with the waves; others were laid dead in the waters, but all these live and float above death. 3. The instrument of this motion the face of the waters; such as were instruments of death to the world. This the Apostle spiritualizeth to be the Churches Baptism; when he saith. A few even eight soules were saved in the Ark by water. A like figure whereunto even Baptism doth also now save us, &c. Here was burying in the waters for a time, signifying burial with Christ; and here is rising again out of the waters, signifying resurrection with Christ: So much as the Apostle attributes to Baptism, is attributed to the spiritual use of these waters of the flood towards his Church. 1. Pet. 3. v. 20. 21. Col. 2. 12.

Take now some Notes.

D. 1. Every word of vengeance must exactly be fulfilled which God hath spoken. Forty dayes foretold.

D. 2. Gods judgments are gradual on the wicked. Step by step, day by day; until it befall.

D. 3. Multiplication and strength must be with the creature to do Gods purpose.

D. 4. Multitude and strength of waters are at Gods word, and for Gods word, measured.

D. 5. Waters of death to some, are made waters of life to others by the word of God.

D. 6. The waters lifting up, and moving the Ark, were the like figure with Baptism to the Church.

D. 7. Common salvation by water to the Ark implicth and signifieth special to the Church.

D. 8. The most unlikely meanes God alone turneth unto salvation. Ver. 17. 18.

The fourth and last particular in Gods execution is the sad and dismal issue which these waters bring upon the world, which is described in the following Verses.

Ver. 19. And the waters grew strong, vehemently vehemently upon the earth, & there were covered all the high mountaints which were under all the heavens. Cald. same. And it covered all the high mountaints, &c. Sept.

Ver. 20. Fifteen cubits from on high the waters prevailed, and the hills were covered. Was the water heightened, &c. Sept. Fifteen cubits in height the waters, &c. Cald.

Ver. 24. And the waters grew strong upon the earth fifty and an hundred dayes. The water was heightened &c. Sept. Pre.

Prevailed upon the earth. Cald. In this sad passage are fully related,

1. The measure of the waters increase. Ver. 19. 20.

2. The destructive issue upon the world. Ver. 21. 22. 23.

3. The reversion of Noah. Ver. 23.

4. The time. Ver. 24.

In the first, these particulars are obvious to us. 1. A general proposition of the increase of the waters of the flood, And the waters grew mighty or prevailed, vehemently vehemently on the earth.

This had bin enough to have set forth the greatness of the inundation. 1. The waters were, mighty, many, prevailed. 2. Vehemently, vehemently, twice, as if it were not to be uttered how much they were increased on earth. 2. A further description of their swelling to the tops of all mountaints. And there were covered all the high mountaints which were under all the heavens.

Where note, 1. Hills which were above plaines, such were then before the flood. 2. The high hills emphatically, such as were known eminent for height; over all. 3. All of them which were under all the heavens, not only under the middle region but suppose any were higher, all under the moon are here intended.

4. These were covered with waters, none did or could appear, for the flood.

Thirdly a more special note of the measure of increase, Fifteen cubits from on high the waters prevailed and the hills were covered.

That is, two hundred twenty and a half foot as some guess, so the waters did overturn the earth, as Job speaketh. Job. 12. 15. In the second particular we may observe these things. 1. A general proposition of the sad issue of these waters on the world. And all flesh creeping upon the earth expired.

(1) The subject of this ruine set out; 1. In nature flesh, that is living flesh as after. 2. In universality, all such flesh. 3. In motion, all that crept or moved from place to place on the earth.

(2) The attribute, they expired and gave up the ghost in these waters. 2. A particular enumeration of the kinds of flesh which perished in these waters. 1. All fowl. 2. All tame beasts. 3. All wild beasts. 4. All creeping thing. 5. All man.

Here is a full slaughter, it is questioned whether man was the last that perished, because in order named last; but it matter's not; it may be likely the birds were last, and yet men might use their inventions to outlive them. 3. A specification of these creatures. 1. By kind of life. All that had the breath of the spirit of life in its nostrills, that is, such as were perishable by water, for some spirit water cannot drown; these then must be such as had naturall spirits of life to breath. 2. By their places, of all which was in the dry land. That is, all whose being was given them on the solid earth. 3. The issue of these, they died, they ex- pired. Their breath was taken from them & they perished; yea not only things actually alive, but potentially, as eggs and seed, and all by which life might be propagated.

Job. 22. 16. 4. An affection of the Author of this destruction. Wherein. 1. The Author with his act, and he blotted out, — That is, Jehovah himself brought this destruction as he threatned, ver. 4. of this Chap. It is an act of despatch, contempt and abhorring; so he destroyeth them. 2. The object again expressed, in its nature and place, every living substance, which was upon the face of the earth.

If the former description were not enough, here the spirit repeats it again in others terms: Every substance which was perishable by water even all was blotted out by God. Repetitions thus press to faith. 3. The extent again mentioned, from Adam to the beast, to the creeping thing, and to the fowl of the heavens.

Thus the Spirit of God multiplieth words to imprint the faith of this execution on us. 4. The certainty of the effect, And they were blotted out from the earth. That is God ceased not the powing out of his displeasure, until he had made a full end of all determined to destructions.

In the third, we read again Gods grace upon Noah, And there remained only Noah, and they who were with him in the Ark. In which are recorded these particulars.

1. An act of grace in this powing out of wrath; yet God make's a reserve; that is, he exempts from this common desolation and keeps in life and safety. 2. The subject of this grace Noah and all with him, the eight persons mentioned. 3. The instrument of this reserve, the Ark again mentioned, as a pledge of Gods love. In the fourth and last, we have the waters increase. And the waters prevailed over the earth 150 dayes.

Here is not determined the time of the waters abode upon the earth, that was a great deal longer, but the time of their prevailing and growing to the height. Where the number of these dayes should begin is not hard to determine; for the rain began in the seventeenth day of the second month, and their fall and continuance in their height before any abatement was, must be 150 dayes from thence, which was to the seventeenth day of the seventh month; after this the decrease of waters began.

From all these particulars these instructions may be gathered.

D. 1. The prevailing of creature instruments for destruction is unexpressible, when God gives them commission to grow great. V. 19.

D. 2. The bounds of nature cannot keep water from destroying, when God makes it to overflow. V. 20.

2. We come now to the special description of the decrease of the flood, which is by severall steps; the first whereof was to the tops of the hills. Ver. 4. And the Ark rested in the seventh month, in the seventeenth day of the month upon the mountaines of Ararat. Upon the mountaines of Cardu, Cald. And the Ark fate, &c. Seven and twentieth day of the month upon the mountaines Ararat. Sept. Ver. 5. And the waters were in going, & decreasing unto the tenth month: In the tenth, on the first day of the month the tops of the mountaines were seen.

Cald. to the same. The water was lessened unto the tenth month, and the heads of the mountaines were seen in the tenth month, the first day of the month. Septuag. In this gradual decrease of the waters, we have here two steps, 1. to the grounding of the Ark. 2. To the apparition of the hills. The former is in the fourth Verse, wherein we have to consider, 1. The safe grounding of the Ark; so it is written.

And the Ark rested, (1) The subject here spoken of is the Ark, which considered, 1. As the continent carrying in it all that God made to enter in, must needs be a vast, massy vessel, which by reason of its lading, must needs carry some cubits of water according to the measure named here; when it floated, the water was fifteen cubits above the highest hills, and when it gravelled first, doubtles the waters (though much abated,) yet must be much above the highest mountain; it might have bin dangerous for such a vessel to touch upon any top of rock or mountain, had not God himself bin Pilot. 2. As taken for all contained in it, so the Church and all living creatures in the terrestrial Orbe were in this Ark, all like to perish, if providence did not undertake for them. (2) The privilege spoken of this Ark, it rested; The word used here, is derived from Noah the name of that gracious one whom God now accepted in the overthrow of the World: And it notes here, 1. The grounding of the Ark. 2. The safe pitching of it for rest and quietness and stability on such a shore, that should not indanger the vessel nor them in it. 3. Consequently it notes the quieting of Noachs heart, and the rest with him from fear of continual tolling on the waters, and in hope of a continued decrease of the waters still, until the earth became habitable.

2. The time of this abatement of waters unto the Arks rest.

In the seventh month, the 17th day of the month, viz. Of the year of the World current 1656. and of Noachs life 600. So the Spirit notes the time of every step of deliverance, not to be forgotten. 3. The place of the Arks rest, described to be Upon the mountaines Ararat.

Sept. by apposition. Upon one of the mountaines of Ararat. Im. So it must be understood, for it could not rest upon many of such mountaines. Upon the mountaines of Kardu, the Caldee reads. Thence were a people called Cordians, or Cordians, as Curtius writes, Ararat is not the name of the mountain but of the country where it was; & the same word is translated Armenia by the Septuag. Isai. 37. 38. And so it is generally understood, for as much as very high mountaines were there as Historians report; even such high places spoken of Chap. 7. 19. Josephus writes in his time were found some peeces of the Ark there, but, it is of small credit. Luther rather thinks it to be the hill Imaus, that divides India: but he varies from the general conjecture. That it was a very high hill, is not to be questioned; Thence Noah afterward perceived the waters to be abated from other hills. The latter abatement of the waters to the heads or tops of other mountaines is described, Ver. 5. Wherein occur, 1. The manner of the waters abatement, expressed thus,

And the waters were in going and decreasing. 1. The subject spoken of, the waters of the flood. 2. That which is spoken of them, (1) Their motion, they were still going. (2) Their decay, they failed in their going, and fell away. Secondly. The time of this fall and decrease, is declared to continue.

Until the tenth month, in the tenth, in the first of the month, this must be meant the tenth of the year, as before at this time the Ark stood dry out of the waters. 3. The measure of the decrease is noted. The heads of the mountaines were seen. That is, there was such an abatement in this space that Noah might see the heads of the hills dry. It is probable that these were mountaines also of the higher sort; for other steps of abatement we shall see hereafter, which are more convenient to lower places.

Two degrees of the waters abatement, the one to the grounding of the Ark, the other to the appearing of the mountaines we have considered; now followeth a discovery of further degrees of the waters fall.

Ver. 6. And it was from the end of forty dayes, and Noah opened the window of the Ark, which he had made. Sep. And Cald. same.

Ver. 7. And he sent forth a raven, and he went out going and returning until the waters were dried from above the earth. Cald. same. To see if the water was ceased, and going out he returned not until the water was dried from the face of the earth. Sept. In these is declared the decrease of the waters so far as judgement might be made by the Raven, which no doubt was some good degree, although not expressly stated. Herein may we note, 1. The time of this triall of the waters decrease.

And it was from the end of forty dayes; that is, after the appearance of the tops of the mountaines, which was the eleventh day of the eleventh month. Which being accounted in the civil or common year is conceived to be in our July. Otherwise according to the sacred year our January.

2. The triall which Noah makes, wherein, 1. The act preparatory, is particularly stated.

And Noah opened the window of the Ark which he had made. The connective particle and, is thought by some redundant and may be spared: so it may very well in our English, and so the Hebrew lets it slip in like cases. This act is but in preparation to make triall; this window was spoken of Chap. 6. 16. By this may appear the desire of Noah to see the wrath of God ceased and to know some grounds of hope for his owne deliverance; this God forbids him not, though as yet his Oracle is not more immediately declared to him, as to the time of his coming out. 2. The Emision of a messenger to try the decrease of the waters, And he sent forth a raven. This is the first creature by which Noah make's triall of the waters decrease; and there is no difficulty in the words. Onely a reason is inquired, why he should pitch upon a raven rather than any other. Severall conjectures are from severall men. It is probable, that after forty dayes space, Noah might suppose the waters to be well nigh gon and some carcasses might appear, unto which this bird naturally inclined; Noah might know either by his stay upon the prey or his return from it the decrease of the waters. As to the allegorical fence of the Law by the raven, is the meer invention of many, we have here a plain history. 3. The work of this messenger described.

And he went out in going and returning, until the waters were dried from above the earth. Where we have, 1. His motion he flew up and down, from and to the Ark; probable it is, lighting sometime upon the mountain where the Ark rested, and taking flight, and coming to the Ark again, though not offering to come in, as the dove. The greek version he did not return is not true, nor the latine agreeing with it.

2. The time of his fluttering up and down, it was until the waters were dried up.

3. The judgment of the decrease of the waters, which Noah might make by the ravens flying up and down, which is included in it, for to that purpose was it sent forth, Which was, that however such abatement were, that the raven could stay abroad, yet not so much as to give him full rest and feeding upon the earth, therefore, hath he still recourse unto the Ark.

Take some Notes hence.

D. 1. God in wisdom sometimes lengthens trialls to the proof of the faith and patience of his Saints.

D. 2. Believing Saints though God appear not, will stay contentedly forty dayes, that is, the time fit for his salvation.

D. 3. Lawful meanes believers may use for their comfort, when there is no immediate appearance of Gods. Noah open's the window which Gods forbid's not. V. 6.

D. 4. Visible experiments of the ceasing of Gods wrath may be desired, and used by his people, where the Lord sets no bars.

D. 5. Unclean, or the worst of creatures, may be of use sometimes to com-comfort the Church. As the ravens fed Elyah.

D. 6. Instinct of creatures from God teach his people of his providences to them. Ver. 7.

The third step of the waters fall we have seen in the trial made by the raven, now we come to a fourth made by the first emission of a dove, in the following verses.

Ver. 8. Ver. 8. And he sent out a dove from himself to see whether the waters were abated from the face of the ground. After it, (that is the raven,) &c. Sept. Cald. same with Hebr.

Ver. 9. Ver. 9. And the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot, and she returned to him into the Ark, because the waters were upon the face of all the earth; and he put forth his hand and took her in unto him into the Ark. Sept. and Cald. to the same. In this trial which Noah maketh by the Dove are observable these particulars. 1. The time of the emission of this second messenger, which though not here in terms expressed, yet by what followeth, Ver. 10, That Noah staid other seven days before he sent the third messenger, doth imply that one seven days he had staid before, between sending out the raven and the dove. It is mistaken therefore to say that the raven and dove were sent out together; but seven days after the raven, was the dove sent out, the eighteenth day of the eleventh month.

2. The act of mission, Noah sent out, being yet under doubts and dissatisfaction, he makes use of his dominion over the creatures, for the strengthening of faith, and establishing of his heart. 3. The messenger sent out, a dove, which was, 1. Of the kind of fowl fittest for his purpose by reason of its wings. 2. Of more natural tenderness to its mate, and nearer familiarity with man; by which trial might be made more certainty. 3. Of the clean sort of fowl, such as God also made usefull for man as toward himself. Such is the messenger. 4. The term of his mission, from whence, from himself, Not after him, as the Sept. read; meaning the raven; but here it must be understood, of Noah, who from himself sendeth this messenger for satisfaction. 5. The end of the mission, to see whether the waters were lightened from the face of the earth.

In this we have, 1. The aim of Noah, evidence of the fall of the waters and abatement of Gods wrath, it was to see, that is, that Noah might see by this messenger, have experience or understanding more clearly, how it was now abroad in the world. 2. The matter about which he seek's evidence, and that is expressed, whether the waters were lightened from the face of the ground, where we see. 1. Noahs desire, he would have wrath appeared, and tokens of vengeance cease, and mercy appear. 2. Noahs experiment, he sends his messenger to see how it was, whether an abatement of displeasure desired, did appear. 6. The return made to Noah by this second messenger; wherein, 1. Here is mentioned, what she found not, And the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot. That is, no house, or place, or receptacle below which was fit for her, to give her rest in, no not so much as to pitch upon, much less did she find a place for him. 2. The return from her restless state. And she returned to him into the Ark. Hereby she gave him notice that however abatement was made in measure, yet not so much, as brought rest either to her or him; And therefore she chooseth yet to nest her self again in the Ark, where also she teacheth Noah, it is best for him to abide. This return is her answer, which she brings. Thirdly. The reason of this return. Because the waters were upon the face of all the earth.

However a great fall was already beneath the mountaints, yet the decrease was not so full as yet to give habitation for man and beast on Earth; But universally the surface of the Earth was covered with the waters; and that it seemeth in a great depth yet, even above the trees, for at this time not a leaf could be had to bring to Noah. 4. The reception of her back again by Noah. And he put forth his hand and took her, and brought her in unto himself into the Ark.

As the return of this messenger was certain, So the entertainment is tender; Noah takes her in again when she could find no rest abroad for her self or him; to stay longer and wait for Gods good will.

Take these Notes from it.

- D. 1. Believing saints, when means answer not, will wait a longer time. [This from the time between sending.]

Ver. 9.

D. 7. Gods Providence in continuing tokens of displeasure, may obstruct the means of comfort.

D. 8. It is in such case the Saints work to take up the means again, in due time to use them. V. 9.

The fifth step of the waters decrease, which was tried by the second Emission of the dove now followeth.

Ver. 10. And he expected yet other seven days, and added to send the dove out of the Ark. Cald. same. And stopping yet seven dayes, he sent out &c. Sept. וַיִּצְטַח.

Ver. 11. And the dove came to him at the time of evening, and behold an Olive-leaf cropt off in her mouth; and Noah knew that the waters were lightened from off the earth. Which she had cropt with her mouth, &c. Cald. וַיִּבֹרֶךְ אֱלֹהִים, אֶת־פָּאָרָה. Sept.

Thus far we have the history of the fall of waters after the flood to the appearance of the trees, made known by the emission of the second dove. Herein, first Noahs patience, and expectation after the former answer returned, which gave not desired satisfaction, And he waited yet other seven dayes.

Where note. 1. His act, which carried in it, (1) Patience to stay Gods time, (2) Hope and expectation of desired mercy, & (3) Faith in Gods Covenant which maintained and made the other to subsist. 2. The time observed, seven dayes, and those other dayes, and such as followed, which importeth, that he staid the same number of dayes before between the Raven and the first dove; from thence he stayeth now other seven dayes looking for Gods goodness. This was sent, on the 25th day of the eleventh Month.

Secondly, Noahs use of means again after all this to see the cessation of Gods displeasure, which is further described.

Ver. 10. And he added to send the dove from the Ark; where we have, 1. His act repeated He added to send, or he sent again, he grew not weary of the use of lawful means, because he had not answer by the former, he sent again. 2. The Messenger sent, a dove, of which was noted its fitness and tenderness to its mate. 3. The term from whence, from the Ark, where he had his nest now almost a year, and therefore inclined to come thither again with what discoveries he could make.

Thirdly, the return made to Noah, And the dove came to him at the time of evening, and behold a leaf of an olive cropt in her mouth. Wherein. 1. The return of the messenger, And the dove came to him, doubtless by the instinct of God, who ruleth and

Ver. 10.

speareth to his Church in the motion of these creatures. 2. The time of return, at even; It matters not how early it went forth nor how long it was absent, it is probable it was the first part of the day, because the second is mentioned for her return: And of the stay of the creature we may conceive, that it was for the making out of some discovery, which she doth by her flight to an Olive tree, as well as the delighting of it self; At the time of even she comes backe, and whether the time of Noahs address to God be not carried in it, I leave to be inquired, surely it is not improbable. 3. The signal answer which she bringeth at her return, And behold; etc. Wherein. 1. A note of attention, Behold it calleth readers to consider it was not a vain answer she brought. 2. The figure, which giveth answer, a leaf of an olive-tree; the foot of the former dove could not find a branch to pitch upon, this pitcheth and brings a token with her of the uncovered trees. 3. The work unto which divine instinct did guide her, she cropt it with her bill; such as we find not usual in those creatures to pluck branches from trees. Fourthly. The satisfaction which Noah received from this return, And Noah knew that the waters were lightened from off the earth.

In which we may consider, 1. The matter about which Noah inquired is in good part answered, that the waters the tokens of Gods wrath, were lightened from the earth, and the earth was not so much burdened with them as before, though yet they were not clean gone off. 2. The intelligence and fruit which he gathers from the return about this matter. Noah knew. That is, 1. He had experimental and sensible knowledge of it by the sprigg of the olive. 2. He had certain knowledge. 3. He had hopeful comforting knowledge of the progress of mercy, in taking of all the waters of displeasure from the earth. As for the allegorical glosses upon the dove and olive branch, though they be piously used, yet by no means can they be the sense of this place.

Take Notes from hence as followeth.

- D. 1. Gods delay of answer, and his saints waiting are fitly coupled.
- D. 2. Gods gracious ones are of a contented waiting, and hoping frame.
- D. 3. Faith will expect from seven to seven, from week to week to receive answers of peace from God.
- D. 4. After waiting, faith will make trial of lawful means again and again. It will add messenger to messenger. Ver. 10.

Ver. 11.

The sixth and last step of the waters decrease now followeth in the three next verses.

Ver. 12. And he expected yet other seven dayes, and he sent the dove, and she added not to return to him any more. Sept. and Cald. to the same.

Ver. 13. And it was in the six hundred and first year (one and six hundred) in the first (month) in the first day of the month, the waters were dried from upon the earth, and Noah removed the covering of the Ark; and he saw and behold the faces of the ground were dry. — 601 year in the life of Noe, the first month, the water failed, &c. Sept. — Cald. to same with the Hebr.

Ver. 14. And in the second month in the seven and twentieth day of the month the earth was dried. — Cald. same. — And seventeenth day, &c. and on the seventeenth of the month he opened the Ark. Sept. In this passage the Spirit giveth us a relation of the final cessation of Gods wrath toward the old world, in the total falling of the waters from the earth. Herein these particulars are declared for observation. 1. The progress of Noachs patience, And he expected yet other seven dayes.

Ver. 12.

This carryeth in it the lengthning of Noachs patience, seven dayes more; in all, one and twenty dayes were spent from sending forth the raven: he believeth and hopeth and waiteth all this while, even the full time appointed by God, until it please God to give in a desired answer. This was the second day of the 12th month. 2. His taking up of the means again to make trial for Gods further answer; And he sent the dove. Wherein consider — 1. The messenger is the dove which brought him some good tidings seven dayes before, therefore he makes use of that creature again. 2. The use of this, he sends her out; as at other times, to give some experiment of Gods providence more discovered in grace, which he desired. 3. The answer which he receiveth, by the not returning of the messenger. And she added not to return to him any more.

The Hebraism, is well translated, she returned not again, the denial whereof, seeing twice before she came back, was not from the nature of the creature not apt to forget its place, especially without its mate; but was an effect of divine providence so over-ruling the creature, and so giving answer to Noah, that the waters were gone, and the dove had full scope to take her food and refreshing on earth, & that ere long it would be fit for him also to inhabit. 4. The interpretation of the dove's not returning to Noah, Ver. 13, 14. The summe whereof was, that the waters which were tokens of Gods displeasure, were all decreased, and the earth fitted for mans habitation. Two degrees of the waters cessation are here intimated. 1. To the draining of the waters from the earth. 2. To the drying of the earth. In the former occur. 1. The time punctually described.

And it was in the one and six hundred year in the first (month) in the first day of the month. In the Spirit's punctual annotation of this time, it is evident, 28 dayes was this from the sending forth of the last dove, for that was on the second of the 12th month; so long Noah waits for her return, and she commeth not: now by this Noah gathers, there was place for the dove, and take's hope there may be shortly for him. The Spirit's chronology declares, that God made the Worlds restauration and his Churches deliverance to enter with the year. It was the 601st year, of Noachs life, as Sept. Which was of the world, 1657, in the first month, that is, of that year, and the first day of that month. The time of grace appearing is exactly pointed out. 2. The event declared by the doves stay, which was that — The waters, were dried or drained from the earth. This was the mercy which Noah expected. I conceive, this beareth properly in it the draining of the water from the earth, leaving moisture and slime yet not wholly dried, because a further day is given to that. 3. Noachs attempt hereupon for further refreshing, expressed thus.

And Noah removed the covering of the Ark. His first seeking comfort was by opening the window, now the second is by turning of the covering, for more air and refreshment to himself and creatures; neither of these did he without motion from God: for he medleth not with the door to come forth before it is commisioned also. 4. The demonstration of the event to sense.

And he saw, and behold the faces of the ground were dry, that is, it was apparent to Noah and the rest, that the surface of the earth round about was drained from the waters. So far I conceive this abatement is to be understood. In the last degree of all, we have described. 1. The distinct time, in which it was accomplished.

And

Ver. 13.

And in the second month, the seven and twentieth day of the month. By which account, 56 dayes passed from the former abatement and draining of the waters, and uncovering of the Ark, until the full drying of the earth; all this while Noah waited still for full deliverance. The Sept. mistake, making it the 17th day for drying the Earth, which is expressly otherwise in the Original, taking away ten dayes from the time of his going out, which they had added to the time of his Entrance. Ch. 7. Ver. 11.

A full year then was he in the Ark. viz. 365 dayes.

2. The compleat effect of a gracious providence in removing plagues, and bringing in mercies, thus delivered — the earth was fully dried, fit for mans comfortable habitation; and Gods promise fully performed.

Take these Notes from it.

D. 1. The giving in of one step of mercymaketh Gods Saints to wait for more. From the connection of this to the foregoing.

D. 2. Gods gracious ones desire to let patience have its perfect work towards God. He expected, &c.

D. 3. The Saints disposition is to have experience of mercy by trying means, as well as to wait for it.

D. 4. In the withholding of return of means, may be the returne of mercy. Though the dove stay, yet mercy commeth.

D. 5. Providence promote's the comforts of Saints when he seem's to stop them. As in staying the dove. V. 12.

D. 6. As times of special mercie are recorded by God, so they should be remembred by the Church.

D. 7. At his appointed periods, God measures out mercy unto his Church.

D. 8. The Saints patient waiting would God have recorded, as well as his performing mercies.

D. 9. As mercies move to Gods Church, so he moveth his Saints to remove vailles, and meet them.

D. 10. Manifestation of mercies God vouchsafeth his, as well as mercy it self.

D. 11. Several periods of time God takes to perfect salvation to his Church.

D. 12. After all patient waiting, in Gods full time full and compleat mercy and salvation is given in to his Church. V. 13.

The second general of this Chapter containeth the state of the Church after the cessation of the waters, and Gods gracious providences thereunto; wherein occur observable these particulars. 1. Gods command to Noah, for going out of the Ark. Ver. 15, 16, 17. 2. Noachs obedience to this command. Ver. 18, 19. 3. Noachs sacrifice after this to God. Ver. 20. 4. Gods acceptance and answer. Ver. 21, 22.

1. Gods Command to Noah is thus related.

Ver. 15. And Elohim spake to Noah saying. — Cald. same. — Lord God. Sept.

Ver. 16. Go out of the Ark, thou and thy wife, and thy sonnes, and the wives of thy sonnes with thee. — Sept. and Cald. same.

Ver. 17. Every wild beast which is with thee, of all flesh among the fowl, and among the catell, and among every creeping thing, creeping upon the earth, bring forth with thee, and let them creep upon the earth, and grow and be multiplied upon the earth. — And increase ye, and be multiplied and fill the earth. Sept. — and let them generate in the earth, and be multiplied and grow upon the earth. Cald.

In this head we have related Noachs commision for coming out of the Ark, after his long abode there, and herein these particulars are observable. 1. The Authority giving order about this. Ver. 15. And Elohim spake to Noah saying. Wherein. 1. The Power ordering, Elohim, the mighty God, who gave him a command to enter. Chap. 7. Ver. 1. Of whose absolute authority, and gracious respect to him there was no doubt. 2. The Subject to whom this word commeth is Noah, the gracious One whom God had accepted, to whom herevalet his mind immediately, and by him teacheth the rest with him.

Ver. 15.

3. The way of expressing this order, He spake saying, whether by vision, dream or apparition, this came to him, is not expressed, but these things are clear. 1. It was an immediate discovery from God. 2. It was a clear Revelation. 3. It was a certain word, he spake saying, that is, he certainly spake and revealed his will to Noah. 2. The command or word it self given him, of which there are two branches. 1. Of duty for egress. 2. Of promise or blessing. 1. The word of duty respects. 1. Himself and family, Ver. 16. Go out of the ark, thou and thy wife, and thy sonnes, and the wives of thy sonnes with thee, wherein are considerable.

Ver. 16.

1. The matter of this command, which is egress out of his strait recluse, where God kept him from the deluge. The Ark was the Instrument of Salvation, so long as the flood continued and God pleased; all that while he was to abide there; but now that flood of wrath being ceased, God brings him out upon the Earth, and his Church with him, to keep them there, and teach them by other ordinances unto life. There have bin times of changing visible means of the Churches salvation, according to the will of God; sometimes he commands into the Ark, and sometimes out again. 2. The order here mentioned is arbitrary to the Spirit, and favours not that fable of the Jewes, as if Noah and his wife were separate in the Ark, &c. The order mentioned, Ver. 18. doth confute it. 2. The command to him, which respects inferior creatures is thus expressed.

Ver. 17. Bring thou forth with thee, every beast which is with thee, of all flesh, among fowl, among cattel, among every creeping thing that creepeth on the earth. Wherein are declared. 1. The kinds of creatures that went in. 2. The word for their egress also; that in the Churches comfort they should have enlargement to serve them, who serve God.

2. The word of blessing, which concerns immediately in this place these creatures, but consequently the outward comfort of Noah, and his Church.

The Septuagint reads it, as to Noah and his, but not truly to the text for it is, and let them breed abundantly, or be made to creep abundantly in the earth, and let them grow and multiply on the earth. It is the summe of the blessing which was given in the first Creation of them; and now God renews in the restoration of the world; all tending to the help and externall comfort of his Church. God reneweth also the blessing of fruitfulness upon his Church afterward.

Here take these Notes.

D. 1. After their Patient waiting God will certainly speak to his Saints though he was silent.

Ver. 15. D. 2. God speak's not doubtfully but certainly to his People in his returns.

D. 3. God himself must speak unto the satisfying of his Saints in their motions.

D. 4. Vpon change of providences, God speaketh change of duty to his Saints, Go out.

D. 5. It is at Gods pleasure to ordain or lay aside external means of mans salvation.

D. 6. Gods promise is compleatly good unto his Church for saving.

Every head comes forth. V. 16.

D. 7. Common salvation is given unto Creatures for the Churches sake.

D. 8. Propagation, increase, and multiplication of creatures on earth, is Gods blessing for his Church. Ver. 17.

The second particular which is Noachs obedience to Gods command for going out followeth.

Ver. 18. And Noah went out and his sonnes, and his wife, and the wives of his sonnes with him. Cald. same.

The Septuagint keep the order in the command, and let Noachs wife be fore his sonnes.

Ver. 19. Every beast, every creeping thing, and every fowl, every thing creeping upon the earth, according to their families or kindes, went forth from the Ark. The Sept. leaveth out, (after their kindes.) After their generations, &c. Cald.

In this passage occurs observable. 1. The connection of Noachs obedience unto Gods command. (1) Which is read by some as a Copulative, and so obedience is joined with Gods command, and by some as an Illative, and so it sheweth the cause of his obedience to be the command of God; both suitable enough. 2. The Act of his obedience, He went out, this was an exact answer to Gods will, for God had him go out, as sometime he had commanded him to enter in; and he returns in every title. 3. The order again repeated, which yet is altered from what was mentioned before, which sheweth that it was arbitrary to the Spirit sometimes to number one way and sometime another; which sheweth the conceits of some to be vain, that would make such collections as if Noah and his wife, &c. did not company together in the Ark. Yet something of Divine providence is to be observed in this very order; that creatures should not break out but all keep their order and rank.

1. Noah, as the Prince and Chief whom God honoreth. 2. His sonnes, those that were next him. 3. The women, follow them, even such as were in relation under, but as might be heirs of the same promise with them. 4. The bruit creatures, of whom we may note. 1. Their kindes. (1) Every wild beast.

(2) Every tame creature, such as go under the name of creeping things. (3) Every winged creature. (4) Every creature beside, noted under the name of creeping things on the Earth.

2. Their order according to their families or kindes, that is, every creature, with its name of its own nature. 3. Their motion at Gods word to Noah and in himself to them. (1) The motion, they went out, that is, answered their command, and

Ver. 19.

Ver. 20. And Noah built an Altar to Jehovah, and brought of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and he made to ascend ascensions or off-red burnt offerings upon the Altar. A whole burnt offering &c. Cald.

In this passage Noachs worship is recorded with his obedience, and that in a threefold Act expressed. 1. His building, And Noah built an Altar to Jehovah.

Wherein. 1. The Connection of this to the former work of his obedience; He obeyed Gods word and worshipped. 2. His work, He built an Altar, about which we may know. 1. The principle mooving, Gods will, safely presumed both from Noachs faith who waited for Gods word in all his undertakings, and from the law which afterward he gave to his Church about the same matter. 2. The Subject acting, Noah. 3. His Act, he built, or and moved. (2) The term from whence, is expressed from the Ark, where they had bin preserved beside their nature. (3) The term whereunto, supposed, every one to his own place appointed, Wild beasts to the woods, others to the fields, fowls to fly in the midst of heaven, &c. So doubtless the providence of God ordained.

From all which these Notes may be taken.

D. 1. Gods command and Saints obedience are and must be joyned to bring about their comforts. From the connection.

D. 2. Gods Command must be the cause of Saints obedience, and this must follow.

D. 3. It becommeth Saints to make their outgoings and incommings onely upon the word of God. V. 18.

D. 4. Providence doth appoint and maintaine order in the mooving of his creatures; but especially in his Church, one above, others under.

D. 5. Admirable is the work of Providence upon bruits to keep them in order.

D. 6. There is a kind of family order by Gods instinct among beasts.

D. 7. The motion of bruits is at the word of God to go in and out for safety.

3. After Noachs obedience followeth his sacrifice typical as to propitiation, moral as to thanks-giving.

Ver. 20. And Noah built an Altar to Jehovah, and brought of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl, and he made to ascend ascensions or off-red burnt offerings upon the Altar. A whole burnt offering &c. Cald.

In this passage Noachs worship is recorded with his obedience, and that in a threefold Act expressed. 1. His building, And Noah built an Altar to Jehovah.

Wherein. 1. The Connection of this to the former work of his obedience; He obeyed Gods word and worshipped. 2. His work, He built an Altar, about which we may know. 1. The principle mooving, Gods will, safely presumed both from Noachs faith who waited for Gods word in all his undertakings, and from the law which afterward he gave to his Church about the same matter. 2. The Subject acting, Noah. 3. His Act, he built, or framed, doubtless according to Gods pattern. 4. The Object, an Altar, or a Sacrificatory, a place on which the slain sacrifices were offered, as the word imports. 5. The end, it was to Jehovah, and to terminate onely upon him and to his praise. He is the end of all worship. 1. That his name should be called on it. 2. That he might yet be reconciled by it to the remnant of soules left from the flood; setting out Christ our Altar, who sanctifieth all that come to God by him, Exod. 20. 24. 2. His choosung of a Sacrifice, And brought of every clean beast, and of every clean fowl.

Herein. 1. The cause of his choice is supposed, to be the command or will of God, as before it was of his building the Altar. (1) It is said God was pleased. (2) It must then be by faith that Noah pleased God: (3) There must be then a word from God on which faith must work. 2. His work here is an Actual separation of a gift for Jehovah, Faith cannot come alone or solitary unto God. 3. Of Gods owne appointment he provides an offering; God onely made the distinction of clean and unclean for himself, and of the clean, Providence ordered more to enter into the Ark than of unclean, and some add ones also, which might be for this offering. This Law of sacrifice was then before the Law even from Adam as hath bin shewed, all teaching that by the blood of that immaculate Lamb of God, reconciliation must be made with God for poor sinners. The universality added; notes the readiness of Noachs heart to answer God, who had chosen all the clean, Bullock, Lamb, Kid, Turtle-dove, &c. 3. His oblation, And he offered burnt offerings on the Altar.

In this is the consummation of Noachs Worship. 1. The worshipper, Noah a priest of God typifying Christ our great High priest. 2. His Act, he offered or made to ascend, viz. in the fire. 3. The oblation, named an Ascension. Heb. Whole burnt offering. Sep. Because it ascended all night long in vapour by the fire. Lev. 6. 19. 4. The place of offering, the altar which he had built according to Gods word; This did sanctifie the gift, and so typified the God head of Christ, which sanctified his offering. All this was managed according to Gods will, which afterward by his command was recorded by Moses in scripture. Math. 23. 19, Exod. 29. 37.

Note we from it.

D. 1. Obedience and sacrifice are sweetly set together by God, and kept together by saints. Hypocrisy divide's. 1. Sam. 15. as in Saul.

D. 2. The first work due to Gods salvation vation in the setting up of his worship in truth. So doth Noah.

D. 3. Altar and sacrifice worship was from mans fall before the Law, though not written.

D. 4. The Saints in faith built Altars, and brought sacrifices to God onely upon his word.

D. 5. God would have but one Altar onely at one time in the place which he should choose.

D. 6. Altar and sacrifice-worship is most requisite for sinners to come to God. Therefore Christ is both for propitiation.

D. 7. A believing Priest, sanctifying Altar, and clean sacrifice are fittest to type out Christ in all, and please God.

D. 8. All clean things as they are Gods making so they are Gods portion.

D. 9. The sacrifice which God accept's must ascend and come up to him, to be available. So Christ offered fully.

D. 10. The sacrifice which brings peace to man giveth glory unto God. So here. So in Christ. V. 20.

The fourth head now followeth in the second general, which is Gods acceptance of him and his offering.

Ver. 21. And Jehovah smelt a smell of rest, and Jehovah said to his heart, I will not add to curse further the ground for Adams sake, because the thought of the heart of Adam (is) evil from his childhood; and I will not add further to smite every living thing as I have done. And the Lord God smelt a savour of sweetness, and the Lord God considering said, I will not add any more to curse the earth for mens works, because the mind of man is set carefully upon evil, from his youth, I will not therefore add to smite all living flesh, as I have done, all dayes of the earth. Sept. And the Lord accepted his offering in his good pleasure, and the Lord said in his word, I will not add again to curse the earth for the finnes of men; because the sense of mans heart is evil from his infancy, &c. Cald.

Ver. 22. Yet at the dayes of the earth, seed time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease. Cald. same. The seventy adde the first part of this verse to the former, and thus read. — Seed time and harvest, cold and heat, summer and spring shall not cease day and night. Sept.

In this last head we have considerable two main things about Gods return to Noah. 1. Gods acceptance of him. 2. Gods promise to him: which is twofold. 1. Generally to all: 2. Specially to himself.

In the first of these, thus expressed, And Ver. 12:

Jehovah smelt a smell of Rest. We have observable. 1. The Subject spoken of, Jehovah himself, he that is, and there is none els. 2. The Attribute, to smelt a smell or savour of rest: which is a speech altogether figurative. Here is, 1. Anthropopathia, it is spoken of God after the manner of men. 2. Metaphora, a borrowed act from man to signify something proper to God, and that is Acceptance, delight, good pleasure, so the Caldee reads plainly, the Lord accepted with good will, as men are delighted with smells that please them.

(1) All this concerns the Act attributed. So in Scripture, God is said to accept or not accept of sacrifice, by smelling and not smelling in them. Levit. 26. 31. Amos 5. 21. (2) The object of this, a smell or savour of rest. Which is to be considered. 1. Metonymically, it being to express the sacrifice which Noah offered, whereof indeed it was the effect in bringing rest and quieting of the heart to God, after his pouring out fury upon the wicked world. 2. Typically, and so it notes the sacrifice of Christ, whereof it was a type. So the Apostle writeth of him, that he gave himself for us, a sacrifice and offering to God for a smell of sweet favour. Eph. 5. 2.

The Cald. reads onely, his oblation. The Sept. a savour of sweet smell; that which is spoken of Christ. The word in the original, is from the same root with the name Noah, signifying rest: which indeed Christ the truth of that sacrifice did bring to God, that his spirit was quieted toward man, and now he could do no other but speak peace to him as it followeth in his next act.

2. Gods promise is now manifested hereupon. 1. In general, to all creatures. 2. In special to Noah, Ch. 9. The first of these is twofold. 1. Of not destroying the world again after this manner. 2. Of establishing the course of nature. The former of these is doubled under various expressions. 1. Thus. And Jehovah said to his heart, I will not add to curse the ground any more, for Adams sake, because, or although, the thought of the heart of Adam, be evil, from his infancy.

In which discovery, may we consider. 1. The serious and firm purpose of God to this matter: Expressed thus. — And Jehovah said to or in his heart. Which is spoken of God also after the manner of men; however some look on it as spoken to the heart of Noah for comfort. Yet it is more proper to God himself, who is presented as it were conferring with himself.

self. So the Sept. read, אשר חשבה, casting in his mind, which notes serious determination, heartily intended; but the phrase to others seemeth to carry a form of Gods Oath, so the Cald. The Lord said in or by his word, and God himself speaketh in the Prophet, I have sworn, &c. Isai. 54. 9. Which seemeth to be in this exprellion. So that we have a most serious, and sure preparation to the ensuing promise. 2. The promise itself, wherein. 1. The good promised. 1. Security against any such deluge as had bin, I will not curse the ground any more, that is, with that special curse of the Deluge, which prevailed over all the ground; for as for other wayes of punishment, which was taken upon man in the curse of the ground from Adam, and such as may come upon particular men and places for their sin, this is no security for any of them to do evil, but as to this last way of vengeance, God saith and sweareth that he will not add to do it again. However he hath spoken of destroying the world by fire. 2. Security against the provoking cause of it, which is mans sin, I will not so curse again, for mans sake, that is, man as Adam in the state of his Apostasy; as if he should say, I will overcome mans iniquity by bearing and pardoning; The Sept. read for the works of men.

Cald. finnes of men. 3. The reason of this promise, or occasion of it rather, for the the particle מא be understood, 1. As causal, Because the thought, &c. As if God made the continued way of mans sin the cause of his grace; this sense is retained by many, under that distinction, that though legally it be the cause of wrath, yet Evangelically God makes it so of shewing mercy. But in this sense, sin is not the cause of grace, but occasion of shewing mercy. 2. As adverbative, to this sense, I will not add to curse, Although the imagination of the heart of Adam be evil, from his first excursion from the womb; which is the clearer way of reading; so that, though it be a long race of sin from the womb, yet God hath sworn against such a deluge. 2. The same promise is doubled in other words, And I will not add any more to smite every living thing, as I have done.

Herein likewise we may note. 1. The good promised is the same security against universal destruction, God will not add to smite or destroy every living thing, or all living flesh. Sept. 2. A limitation of that promise as I have done, that is, at this time by water, but God hath fire enough to avenge himself upon the wicked again. 2 Pet. 3. 7. 2. The next promise is for establishing the course of nature, times, and seasons. Wherein. 1. The term of promise to be in force. As yet all the dayes of the earth.

That is so long as the Earth abides. 2. The good promised, Seed time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease.

Intimating all to be as it were confounded in the flood, but now God appeared in Christ lett's all in sweet order again.

Quest. But what are all these promises as to grace?

Answ. In the letter they mention nothing, but in the truth these are typical, holding out spiritual good signified by them; the certainty of which spiritual promises are avouched by God as the stability of these, Isa. 54. 9. Jer. 33. 20, 21.

These being opened it will be meet to take up the instructions that do now arise.

D. 1. Gods ordinance obeyed and Gods acceptance performed, go together. From the Connection.

D. 2. The sacrifice of the Immaculate Lamb of God, viz. the truth of all typical offerings, makes Gods heart quiet and well pleased with sinners. Rest.

D. 3. Jehovah is delighted onely with all thanks giving united to this offering.

D. 4. God pleased in Christ is resolved in heart and sweare to do good unto his people.

D. 5. Gods Covenant secures the Universe from a second Deluge.

D. 6. The finnes of Adam are from the womb evil in their principles to high provocation.

D. 7. Grace in Gods Covenant glorieth over sin and will overcome it.

D. 8. Gods curse and smiting come and go together. Where he curseth he smiteth.

D. 9. Sinners may be exempt from one kind of judgment though not from all. Ver. 21.

D. 10. Due seasons, and times successively upon creatures are Gods constitutions by Covenant.

D. 11. Such seasons are set for ever, so long as the Earth abides.

D. 12. God through these ordinances would teach souls the stability of the Covenant of Grace. V. 22.

CHAP. IX.

IN this Chapter is continued the History of the Church unto the death of Noah; the method of it dependeth upon the former Chapter; the last thing there reported is Gods return after Noahs sacrifice, which stands in four things. 1. Acceptance of him. 2. General promise securing from the flood, and establishing the course of nature, both which were in the close of the former Chapter. 3. Special blessing of Noah, &c. here followeth. 4. Renewing and sealing his Covenant with him and his Church. So that three generals take up this Chapter.

1. Gods blessing on Noah. Ver. 1, to the end of Ver. 7.
2. Gods Covenant renewed and sealed. Ver. 8, to Ver. 17.
3. Noahs seed and after life recorded from Ver. 18, to 29.

The first of these is from the first to the end of the seventh Verse, wherein are several heads. First, the blessing it self in three portions. 1. Of the increase of man. Ver. 1. 2. Of his dominion over the creatures. V. 2. 3. Of Provision for mans life with a special limitation thereof. Ver. 3, 4. Secondly, A special providence for securing mans life, and Law for requiring the loss of it. Ver. 5, 6. Thirdly, A reception of the first blessing. V. 7.

Ver. 1. First we shall consider the blessing of increase as followeth, Ver. 1. And Elohim blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them; be fruitful, and multiply and fill the earth. Cald. same. וְיִבְרַכְתִּים וְיִרְבּוּ וְיִמְלְאוּ אֶת הָאָרֶץ

In this first part of the blessing are observable. 1. The Author of the blessing, Elohim the mighty God, able to do what he speaketh; And Elohim blessed. 2. The Subject of the blessing, Noah and his sons. — doubtless upon all the men and their wives was this blessing. It is queried, how this was given to Noah, seeing after this, the Scripture mentions no children which he had? To which may be answered, that the not mentioning of his seed, doth not necessarily prove that he had none; but suppose he had not, the replenishing of the world by his sonnes, was in it self a blessing unto him. These however are considered.

he said to them. 1. As men and women, 2. As in a married estate, 3. As members of the Church: In all which respects, this blessing is given to them. 3. The matter of this blessing, which in general is fruitfulness, expressed in three degrees. 1. be fruitful, which giveth strength to beget and open the womb. Psal. 127. 2. and be many, or multiply; that is, to bear many and often; It is conceived by some that constantly they brought forth twins or more. 3. and fill the earth, this is a further degree, that from these such an abundant seed should arise, that should people the earth. This God addeth in the renovation of the world at this time, as he had given it from the Creation thereof.

4. The form of this, and that is properly in the Name of Blessing, which imports. 1. Good in its kind. 2. Application of that good. 3. Efficacy of the same.

Take these Notes.

- D. 1. The greatest desolations in the world cannot hinder God from having a people.
- D. 2. As in the Creation so in the renovation of the world, God singeth out some special good to man.
- D. 3. The Almighty God is he onely that blesteth, or can do good.
- D. 4. Gods word bringeth his blessing with whatever he will bestow.
- D. 5. Fruitfulness is Gods blessing upon marriage; a curse upon adultery.
- D. 6. Fruitfulness to multiplicity and fulness of the earth depends on Gods word.
- D. 7. The blessing of fruitfulness is especially intended to the Church.
- D. 8. Gods multiplied expression of promise is to confirm his truth, and to raise faith in his Church. V. 1.

The second part of Gods blessing is the restoring of Dominion over the Creatures, unto Noah and the Church, expressed thus; Ver. 2. And the fear of you and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the heavens, and upon all that creepeth upon the ground, and on all the fishes of the sea; into your hand are they given. I have given them under your hands. Sept. Which are delivered into your hand. Cald.

In this blessing we have considerable. 1. In general, the nature of it, which is Dominion or Rule over the Creatures, sometime given to man. 2. The parts of this Dominion expressed, which are two. 1. Reverence from the Creatures thus set out, And the fear of you, and the dread of you shall be upon every beast of the earth, &c. Wherein. 1. The Reverence itself expressed.

And your fear, or the fear of you, and dread of you, shall be, or let it be. The former expression notes A fear of reverence, and the latter terror and affrightment from coercive coercive or breaking power of the ruler. Both of them must be understood passively from man, not actively; That the beasts should be afraid of them, not they of the beasts &c. so the tamer beasts, as the ox and ass know their Masters cribb, and submit to the yoke and burdens; the wilder beasts fly from man, as terrified at his sight. 2. The object upon whom this fear is, all irrational living creatures, thus enumerated.

Ver. 2.

Genes. 1. 23. 20.

וְיִרְאוּכֶם וְיִפְּחוּ לָכֶם

Upon every beast of the earth, that is, wild or tame.

And upon every fowl of the heavens, that is, every winged creature.

And upon all that creepeth or moveth upon the ground, as Serpents and such kind of creatures.

And upon all the fishes of the sea; This dominion is over the creatures in the deep also, the fear of man is upon them. Secondly, The other part of the blessing is the use of these creatures recorded thus, Into your hands are they given; By which phrase is noted. 1. Power of man over them. 2. Possession of them. 3. Use of them to several purposes as man stands in need. 4. Conservation of them in their kinds from time to time. Im. — 3. The kind of this dominion, with the extent of its power; this is gathered from all, and must be cleared to understand this blessing aright.

Dominion therefore over the creatures is twofold. 1. Primitive and absolute, which is the Creators onely. 2. Derivative, and dependent upon Gods will, which also falleth under a double consideration. 1. As given to man in innocency, and so it was sweet indeed, every creature willingly serving man; while man kept his relation to God. This was such a blessing as we cannot know. 2. As vouchsafed to man after his Apostasy, and this grant also was twofold: 1. To the first Adam after his fall, and the generations of men to issue from him, such as was this renewed now to Noah after the deluge; which is in itself limited and conditional, such as was fit to grant to sinners. 1. A dominion of fear, not of that love in the state of innocency, when all was at peace. 2. A dominion at the pleasure of the great Lord, so long, as men rise not up in violent sinning against God, for then God, give's the beasts dominion over them. Levitic. 26. ver. 22. 3. A dominion subject to corruption by the sin of man, which maketh the creature groan to be delivered. Rom. 8. 22. 2. To the second Adam, he that is the Lord from heaven, under that mans feet God hath put all things. Heb. 2. 6. 7. 8. 9. 1. Cor. 15. 27. This is given to Christ as Mediating Lord, and by him is sanctified to his members; so the Covenant renewed to Noah, includes some special blessing in this dominion unto the Church, as it refers to the promised seed, the ground of all Gods gracious promises and revelations to his people. By these particulars pondered there is a clear answer to such objections, which seem to contradict this dominion granted unto man; as that the wild beasts and creatures, put fear upon man: surely it is not against the tenour of this grant which God alloweth; for so much the holy one hath reserved to himself, to punish sinners by these instruments, if they rise against him.

Now take some Observations from it.

- D. 1. Gods Covenant joyne's to the blessing of mans and the Churches being, the blessing of power and rule over the creatures for orders sake.
- D. 2. Gods blessing onely hath put the creature in awe, and fear, and subjection to man.
- D. 3. Universal is the fear of man imprinted upon all creatures of the heavens, and earth, and sea.
- D. 4. All power and dominion over creatures is a free gift into the hand of man.
- D. 5. Conservation and lawful use of the creatures must be by the hand of man, which doth possess them.
- D. 6. All rule and dominion of man over the creatures is but limited; they are not subjected to mans lust or sin. In such case God maketh them terrible to man.

3. The next part of the blessing is provision for mans life, food and livelyhood.

Ver. 3. Every moving thing, which it self is living it shall be to you for meat, as the green herb I have given to you all. Cald. same. And every fowl which is living, &c. Septua.

Ver. 4. Yet flesh with the soul of it, the blood thereof, ye shall not eat, Cald. same. Notwithstanding eat not flesh with the blood of the soul. Sept.

In this discovery of the third part of the blessing we have two general heads to consider.

1. Gods concession of some good for the sustenance of mans life. ver. 3.
2. Gods limitation of it for mans benefit to keep him from evil. ver. 4.

In the former of these we may ponder. 1. The matter granted, every moving thing which it self is living. In which are considerable, (1) the nature of the thing granted granted which is the creature that goeth under the name of flesh. (2) The quality whereby it is specified, life and motion. (3) The universality, all, so the terms run expressly.

2. The use of this matter as to man. It shall be to you to eat, or for meat, as the green herb. Herein note.

לאכלו

1. The use it self for meat, or food. (2) The subject to whom it is given. Noah and his sonnes, man and his Church. (3) The constitution of it, so it shall be. (4) The expression by a parallel, even as the green herb. Now that was granted for food to man and beast. Gen. 1. 29. 30. and here may admit a double exposition, (1) As I have given the herb, so I give this flesh unto you.

2. As I have given the green herb to these living creatures, so they are appointed unto you for food and nourishment. Fun.

3. The grant it self. I have given to you all. Observe herein,

1. The freeness of it, a gift. God freely bestoweth it, (2) The fullness. All.

3. The propriety, to you, meaning them as men, but especially as his Church.

Quest. were all living creatures clean and unclean granted to man for food?

Ans. this universal must be understood regularly. (1) All fit for food; therefore not mans flesh nor any that might be hurtful to the life of man.

2. All granted for food, was clean to man as nourishment; so the Apostle sheweth Gods gift, all sold in the shambles.

3. The distinction of clean and unclean seemeth to relate unto sacrifices, and a spiritual use of the creature; as was touched before, this was a law of difference of meat only to the Jewish Church.

Quest. But was this grant of food from the beginning: seeing there is no mention of it. Gen. 1. 29.

Ans. 1. It seemeth to be so, and that this is but the renewing of the grant after the flood, with special intimation to make it a blessing; for of skin's did Adam make cloaths, and killed for sacrifice. Where certainly there must be eating of flesh according to the Law.

2. The limitation followeth. Wherein observe.

Ver. 4.

1. The adverbative particle of exception, yet, but, nevertheless. (77) as if he had said. However I give you this food, yet, with the rule that I also shall prescribe you, only this excepted following.

2. The rule of exception, ye shall not eat flesh with the soul thereof, the blood thereof. Wherein we have.

1. The act forbidden. Ye shall not eat, that is beyond the bound set; he giveth man enough, keeps back only his hurt from him.

2. The object, of which (1) Its nature, flesh of all sorts formerly allowed to the utmost extent. (2) The qualification of this object forbidden, with its soul or life which by a word of apposition is unfolded, being the blood thereof; so that the meaning of this is, they must not eat this flesh so long as life is in it.

Quest. 1. What life is this which is said to be the blood?

Ans. The animal life by which such creatures move.

Quest. 2. How is this soul said to be the blood?

Ans. 1. Not properly, for blood may be when life is not.

2. Figuratively, because that life being the result of a due temper of humors, that doth reside mainly in the blood, which being shed out, the life expires with it, all bodily spirits are in it.

Quest. 3. What kind of law is this?

Ans. 1. Not ceremonial as to the Jews Levit. 17. 10. 11; for there the reason of not eating blood is, because the life in it was for attonement to sinners. (2) Here it is a moral Law, binding every man from cruelty. Such as was to eat creatures while the life was in them. That this is the scope of the rule, is demonstrable by Gods exacting life, taken away contrary to his command. verse 5.

Quest. 4. How do the Apostles judge it necessary to abstain from blood?

Ans. 1. That was spoken with respect to the ceremonial practice among the Jews.

2. It was not judged necessary in respect of the thing it self, but to avoid scandal at that time.

These observations may issue from all this.

D. 1. Living and moving creatures are not only subject to man, but all fit are meat for him.

D. 2. The life of all creatures is ordained to goe for the life of man, and Gods Church.

D. 3. A full provision from the creatures moving as from the earth is made for man.

D. 4. all sweet and abundant provision is Gods gift unto poor man.

D. 5. Cruelty God forbids to man in making use of his creatures.

D. 6. Flesh not life is the food which God appoints to man for sustenance.

2. The

2. The second head in this portion of blessing is a special constitution. [Inferred as a reason of the former limitation] for securing the life of Man from destruction; which followeth. Verse. 5. And surely your blood of your souls will I require; At the hand of every beast will I require it: And at the hand of a man (or man) at the hand of a man his brother, will I require the soul of Adam or man. — For your blood of your souls at the hand of all the beasts will I require it. And at the hand of man his brother, will I require the soul of Man. Sep.

For the blood of your souls will I require, &c. At the hand of the Man who shall spill his brothers blood will I require the soul of man. Cald.

Verse. 6. He that sheddeth the blood of Adam by Adam shall his blood be shed, because in the Image of Elohim made he Adam.

For the blood of Man his blood shall be shed, because in the image of God, I made man. Sep.

With witnesses by the sentence of the judges his blood shall be shed, &c. as Hebr. Cald.

In these, we have diligently to consider.

Ver. 5.

1. The term of connection, — And truly, surely, or indeed, moreover, Finally, and likewise Calvin. The Seventy and Cald. read it, as rational, for even your blood, &c. there may be no opposition among these, for this is inferred as a reason of the former limitation, and is a positive expression also of the care which God takes of mans life, as if he had said eat not blood, for none shall destroy yours.

2. The matter connected, which is an addition to the former blessing in Gods providence over man. Whereof are given here two evidences.

1. Gods resolution of requiring life. V. 5.

2. Gods law for securing life. ver. 6.

In the former of these are to be pondered.

(1) The matter of Gods care expressed thus, your blood of your souls.

And again, the soul of man.

Both these expressions set out the object of Gods care in this place the blood of your souls, as some.

(2) Your blood which is upon or in your souls, or which is to you for souls; or life; as others. By all these it is evident, that the animal life of man must be here intended; for that which is the soul of man indeed cannot be killed by creatures; and providence works farther as respecting that. (2) The act of Gods providence expressed by one word, three times repeated, I will require it, I will require it, I will require it.

In which observe.

1. The nature of this act, is to seek after, or make inquisition for blood, and thereupon to avenge it. Gen. 42.

Ver. 22. Psalm. 9. 12. Deut. 18. 19.

Act. 3. 23.

The trebling of the expression notes the intention of care which God hath over the life of man; as such expressions use mightily to intend the act spoken of, or heighten it.

Ver. 5.

3. The subject of whom God will require this.

1. At the hand of every beast.

2. At the hand of Adam or Man.

3. At the hand of a man his brother.

This multiplicity of expression, may be supposed the ground of distinction of Murder first invented by the Jewes, and afterward taken up of some professing Christ.

(1) Self Murder. (2) Murder by beasts. (3) Murder by suborning others to do it. (4) Murder by assault of neighbour. But this cannot be grounded here; for how should God require a mans blood of himself, when he is dead? and such requiring is here spoken of. The summe then of all in this place is to shew Gods hatred against all cruelty toward a mans life; by whomsoever acted, without commission from God. None shall be free from vengeance.

2. Upon this followeth a special law, against man, who should take away the life of man, wherein likewise we have to consider.

1. The law itself given. He that sheddeth the blood of Adam, by Adam his blood shall be; or let be shed.

Wherein observe,

1. The Lawgiver; it is the great God, Lord of life and death;

2. The crime and sinner against whom this law is made. He that sheddeth the blood of Man, that is, destroyeth his life willingly.

1. The subject is proposed indefinitely who ever it be, great or small, king or peasant. (2) The crime, wilful shedding blood or destroying life.

3. The sentence, his blood shall be shed, that is, his life shall goe for that which he hath taken away, God will require blood by blood.

4. The instrument, by whom this must be done, viz, by man, that is, such as are authorized by God, and are Magistrates, to them the sword is given to do this.

Some refer this to the foregoing, to this sense, he that sheddeth mans blood before man, that is, as a witness, others make it to be the subject of this vengeance, he that sheddeth mans blood, in man, that is in himself blood shall be shed, which is a truth, whether it be done by God or man. But the former seemeth very congruous and the latter bears it, to look upon man as the instrument, by whom blood shall be required.

2. The reason of this law expressed in the following words. — Because in the image of God he made man. These valuable considerations are here.

1. Because man is Gods creature, the loss of whom it is just to require.

2. Because man is Gods image, so the expression bears, in the image of God, &c.

So

So that the stroke is consequently upon God himself.

Quest. But is not that image lost;

Ans. Yea as to the rectitude of his frame in mind & body, but not in the essence of his soul, a Spirit resembling God. Yet, though so much be lost, God will require it, because he gave man his first being in it.

Quest. Was not this Law given before this time?

Ans. However it is not expressed in the history of former time by Moses, yet reason will conclude, that God had the same care of mans life from Adam.

1. His image was upon man then, which is the reason of this Law.

2. Although God took the punishment of Cain into his own hand, it was to make him a living spectacle of vengeance as the first Murderer.

3. Such cruelty unpunished was one of the crying Sins to bring the flood upon the World.

(3) The reiteration of the first blessing as the scope & reason of this Gods care of mans life followeth to shut up the first general head of this Chapter.

Ver. 7.

Ver. 7. And ye, be ye fruitful and multiply: bring forth abundantly in the earth, and multiply therein. — And fill the earth and have dominion over it. Septuag. — And make a generation in the earth &c. Cald.

Herein may be also observed.

1. The connection, which though copulative as read, yet sheweth the force of another reason of Gods care for mans life. viz. That they might be fruitful and over spread the earth, which could not be, if their lives should be so destroyed and spoiled.

2. The matter repeated is the blessing of fruitfulness under a fourfold expression, noting the truth and certainty of it, this security being made, the effect whereof in peopling, the World did afterward appear.

Now take the Notes from it.

D. 1. Gods care of mans life, should keep them from cruelty to their fellow creatures. From connect.

D. 2. Man hath an animal soul or life in his blood which is perishable.

D. 3. God hath an eminent respect to the life of man, to secure it from violence, he will require, requires, require it.

D. 4. Gods inquisition for mans blood will be upon beast and man. Ver. 5.

D. 5. God hath specially provided that mans blood be not shed by man.

D. 6. God hath constituted man under him to avenge mans blood.

D. 7. The law of God provides, that every man high or low, who sheds mans blood willingly shall have his blood shed by man in power.

D. 8. Murder winked at by man will be required by God.

D. 9. Gods image is smitten, when mans is murdered.

D. 10. God will require all such smiting of his image in man by death. Ver. 6.

D. 11. Gods securing of mans life is for the increase of his Church and peopling of the earth.

D. 12. The full increase and multitudes appointed, shall certainly be accomplished in the earth. Ver. 7.

The second general of this Chapter is the Covenant renewing between God and Noah. Containing the next two heads.

1. The setting up of the Covenant. Ver. 8, 9, 10, 11.

2. The sealing of it. Ver. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17.

The first is delivered in the Verses following.

Ver. 8. And Elohim said to Noah, and to his sonnes with him, in saying. Sept. and Cald. to same. Ver. 9. And I behold, I am setting up my covenant with you, and with your seed after you. — behold I make to stand, &c. Sept. and Cald.

Ver. 10. And with every living soul, which is with you, in the soul, in the carcase, and in every wild beast of the earth with you, from all that went out of the Arke, to every beast of the earth. Cald. to the same. For ever from birds, and from beasts, &c. Sept.

Ver. 11. And I have made to stand my Covenant with you, and all flesh shall not be cut of any more by the waters of a flood, and there shall not be any more a flood to corrupt the earth, Cald. to same. — And I will establish, &c. And all flesh shall not dye any more, &c. A flood of waters, &c. Sept.

In this setting up of the Covenant we may note.

1. The preface, ver. 8. (2) The work it self ver. 9.

The first thus thus.

And Elohim said, &c. Wherein are considerable.

1. The connection: and, which some read read afterward, or moreover, it here coupleth to the precedent, and continueth the speech of God thereupon, as if he should say, you continuing in your duty, I will go on to perform good

2. The preface made by Moses, to bring in God further revealing him self, wherein he reports, (1) The speaker Elohim, the mighty God, he who was able to do every word.

(2) The hearers whom this concerned, Noah and his sonnes with him. Such as could understand, to them only he spake, though the matter which he spake concerneth such as could not understand, as infants and beasts.

3. The speech which was intent and pressing, he layd in saying, that is he seriously and earnestly spake what followeth; pressing it on Noah and his, and us his seed.

2. The next thing is the matter which he spake or the work it self, which is about setting up or making firm his Covenant, wherein are.

1. The Author of the Covenant, or the covenant maker; thus expressed in the words, and I, behold I. This is that Elohim that speaketh, some read, but as for me, behold I. The seventy read singly behold I. Not observing the emphasis in the original; in which is signified.

1. The mighty God to be the principle of this Covenant, he find's it, and makes it, and confirms it.

2. To be the eminent principle of it, to be admired, behold I, or behold me, Isa 65. 1.

3. To be the only principle of this Covenant, it is I, I, none but I, that set up this with you.

2. The confederates; those to whom this covenant was made, which are of several degrees.

1. The immediate subjects declared, with you, that is Noah and his sonnes with him.

2. All mankind small and great, which should issue from them, thus expressed — And with your seed after you.

3. All living creatures, expressed, (1) — And with every living soul, that is generally all unreasonable moving creatures on earth. (2) specially for I, came catel, and beasts of the earth. (3) successively to the end of the world, from all that went out of the Arke to every beast of the earth, that is, all that is, all that were at that present subsisting, and all that should ever be propagated in the earth.

3. The act of God towards these, in setting up his Covenant for them; where in we have to note.

1. The form or manner of this work thus doubly expressed.

(1) — I am making to stand, or I do establish my covenant, (2) And I have established my Covenant, — Some read I will establish or make to stand, this expression notes the being of the covenant before, and supposeth the doubts and fears which yet might be upon Noah and his sonnes; for the cause whereof, there was but need, as well as to procure faith to this Covenant in succeeding ages, this phrase then carrieth in it, (1) The existence, (2) The firmness, (3) The perpetuity of this Covenant.

2. The matter of this Covenant under a double expression.

1. — And there shall not be cut of all flesh any more by the waters of a flood. The promise is negative, to secure against evil, (1) The evil it self, cutting off, killing, destroying, (2) The subject concerned. All flesh, not considered in particulars but taken in the integrity of the matter of living creatures; it doth not exempt every particular, from death by waters, but all in general, (3) The means of this evil nered, the waters of a flood, that is such a universal flood shall not be, as afterward.

2. — And there shall not be any more a flood to corrupt the earth, or to destroy every living thing, as formerly it had done. Where the same evil is provided against.

1. The means forbidden which is a flood, such as was but now past.

2. The end, which was corruption or destruction of all flesh; such as was executed upon the whole world in the sight of Noah.

Some queries would be answered for clearing the whole matter here spoken of.

Quest. 1. What kind of covenant is this spoken of?

Ans. 1. In itself it is an external Covenant concerning temporal life and being of man and beast.

2. This is annexed to the Covenant of grace, which was renewed to Noah. Chap. 6. 8. 18.

3. This is used to represent the stability of the covenant of grace unto the Church. Isa. 54. 9.

4. This is in Christ, and by him made good as all promises are. 2. Cor. 1. 20. So that it is not to be despised.

Quest. 2. Doth God make his Covenant with infants or with beasts who have no understanding? Or how can this be?

Ans. There is a several subject here considerable.

1. Of hearing and enjoying, to whom God speaks it. So Noah and his sonnes, were the then surviving subject, and their wives. Such as had power to hear and believe; and so all of understanding at this Day and to the End.

2. Of enjoying, though neither hearing nor believing it, such were infants, and all brut Creatures, they all had the benefit of this though they understood it not.

This

This must be granted then, that infants, may partake of Gods covenant; though they cannot hear nor exercise faith on it. Against the Anabaptists.

So Abraham heard Gods covenant, but his infants also enjoyed it; so must it be unless the covenant of God be denied unto this Day.

These Notes arise hence.

D. 1. In the way of mans obedience to his word and blessing God goeth on speaking good to them. From the Connection.

D. 2. The Mighty God speaks earnestly his Covenant to the children of men. He saith and saith. Ver. 8.

D. 3. God himself is the Eminent and only Principle or Author of any Covenant for good. J. J. V. 9.

D. 7. God makes his Covenant of good, stand firm in every age.

D. 9. It is only universal destruction by a flood that is exempted; God hath other ways of punishing a wicked world. Matth. 24. 38. Ver. 1.

2. The sealing of this Covenant now followeth.

Ver. 12. And Elohim said, this is the sign of the Covenant which I give between me and between you, and between every living soul which is with you, to eternal generations. And the Lord God said unto Noah &c. Sept. Which I will put between my word and between you, &c. Cald.

Ver. 16. And the bow shall be in the cloud, and I will see it to remember the everlasting Covenant between Elohim and between every living Soul, of all flesh, which is upon the earth, And my bow &c. between me and you, &c. Sept. between the word of God, &c. Cald.

Ver. 17. And Elohim said to Noah, this is the sign of the Covenant, which I have established (or made to stand up) between me, and between all flesh which is upon the earth, which I have testamentated or disposed, &c. Sept. between my word and all flesh. Cald.

In this passage of the sealing Gods Covenant, are three heads to be observed.

1. The constitution of the Seal. Ver. 12, 13, 14.

2. The use of this Signe expressed Ver. 15, 16.

3. The Confirmation of both. Ver. 17. In the first head, the Constitution of the signe, we have these particulars to consider.

1. The Author, or Party constituting, it is the same who made the Covenant spoken. And the mighty God said, He continueth his speech to Noah from the covenant made to the token and seal added; he the same God make's both; man must not meddle in it.

2. The matter which he is about to constitute, expressed in these words

This is the signe of that Covenant which I am giving. Where we have also to note. (1) The Nature of the thing which God was about to give, a Signe, or Token, which indeed is a visible pledge, or Seal, such as might be looked on. (2) The specification of it by the Covenant, unto which it is related, Of that Covenant which I am giving, that is, for not destroying the world any more with a flood: which was declared before. (3) The Parties between which this sign is set. Vix. the Confederats, spoken of before, declared thus, between me &c. The Caldee reads between my word and you, as often, for the Lord they read his Word, which is Christ the substantial Word, for the word of promise is the Cove-

Covenant it self, not a party confederat; so this Covenant may be conceived to be made in Christ, and this token referring to him; as all things of Grace do.

4. The Duration of this Signe which God constitutes, which is professed to be for generations of eternity, that is so long, as in the world Generations are, and stand in need of visible Signes, as well as the word of Covenant.

Ver. 13. 5. The thing it self made use of for this Signe, thus expressed, Ver. 13. My bow have I given in the cloud, and it shall be &c. Where we may see,

1. The matter of the Signe, My bow, (1) Gods bow, which doubtles is the rainbow, that which of it self by Naturalists is conceived a preface of rain, if not the cause as some have feigned.

1. The Matter of it, is the waterish part of a cloud.

2. The figure of it is a bow, whence it borroweth its name.

3. The Quality of it, which is partly coloured; such it appeareth to us: As to the conceits which some have of the colours, the Spirit mentioneth nothing, and therefore may we pass them by, as the thoughts of men. This is styled Gods bow, both for his Creation, and speciall constitution unto this use.

נחתי

2. The Act of God about it, He gave it, not created it now at first, but bestowed and ordained it being, created for this special use; this also is spoken here in the time past.

3. The place of its appearance, the cloud, which was the instrument of drowning the world, and pouring out abundance of water, which might be terrible unto Noah, &c.

4. The end of it, for a Signe, or visible Token confirming Gods Covenant, made between God or the word of God and the earth; that is the inhabitants of it: That so often as they saw it, they might beleeve it a visible pledge of their security from the Deluge.

Ver. 14. 6. The time of its appearance, declared particularly Ver. 14. And it shall be &c. Wherein observe:

1. The time and occasion of it, when God cloudeth the cloud, that is, maketh very dark clouds, for rain: Such as powre down abundance, at that time, and upon that occasion.

2. The visibility of it, the bow then shall be made apparent on the cloud to the inhabitants of the earth, a very visible word.

2. The use of this Signe constituted is observable, which is twofold.

1. Expressed on Gods part, what use he will make of it, and that is twice spoken over, in the 15 and 16 Verses.

Ver. 15.

1. Thus: And I will remember my Covenant which is between me and between you, and between every living Soul of all flesh, and there shall be no more waters to a flood to corrupt all flesh. Where we have to note:

1. The use which God makes of it, to remember his Covenant; it is spoken after the manner of men, not that God needs any visible tokens to put him in minde, but to teach men when they see such Symbols, to beleeve, that God hath them in his thoughts, according to his Covenant to deal with them.

2. The fruit of Gods remembrance, and that is, no more shall waters grow to such a flood to destroy all flesh as was now done.

2. Thus, And the bow, &c. Where we have,

1. The constitution confirmed, the bow shall be in the cloud, there it shall appear.

2. The use which God will make of it, I will see it to remember the everlasting Covenant between God and every living Soul of all flesh which is upon the earth. Where note,

1. The notice of God about it, And I will see it. This is spoken after the manner of men, that God should look upon visible pledges, yet it notes, the price of Sacramental Signes, that God will look upon them.

2. The end of this notice, which is effectual minding of his everlasting Covenant, to make it good unto all the Confederats, which he himself had taken in. This remembrance notes in God. (1) Constant mindfulness of his Covenant. (2) Constant performance; to the eternal duration of it.

2. The other use of this Signe is supposed, and that respecteth man, to whom God giveth it, and sets it up. This is to stirr them up and induce them more to beleeve the Covenant of God, and to walke worthy of it; this is the main scope of all Sacramental Signes, which are added to Gods Covenant.

3. The confirmation of all this, is by Gods speaking it over again.

In which passage we have to note, (1) The Assurer here Elohim the mighty God, he speaks it over. (2) The matter assured, that this bow was the Signe of Gods Covenant.

(3) A periphrasis of the Covenant, Vix. That which God hath established with all flesh upon the earth, where is given the extent of it.

Some Queries here also would be satisfied.

Qu. 1. What Kind of Signe may this be? Answ. It is a Sacramental Signe annexed to the Covenant, for the confirmation of it, invented and set up only by the will of God: Such are also called Seal's, as Circumcision, Rom. 4. 11.

Quest. 2. To whom is this given, and whom doth it concern?

Answ. 1. Primarily this is given to the Church, and concerns chiefly all therein; to Noah first and his sonnes, who could see and understand Gods minde in

Ver. 16.

Ver. 17.

in it, and all that did issue from them were concerned in it.

2. Secondly it concerned every living Soul of all flesh, which were for the Churches sake taken into the Covenant.

Quest. 3. What Benefit accrued to all these from it?

Ans. 1. A full comfort and assurance of the good promised unto such as see, and believe. (2) Gods ingagement for remembrance of his Covenant to all that understand it not, a sweet comfort is this. (3) Ingagement of all that understand this Signe to remember God, and fear him, as is said of the Jewes, when they saw the Rainbow they blessed the God of Heaven; however perhaps superstitiously acted by them, yet there is a duty which therein concerneth every one of us, piously to remember Gods Covenant, and walk worthy of it. (4) Security from the deluge of waters visibly secured unto all Creatures living on the earth.

All which doth further teach us, that,

D. 1. Gods mind is to teach his Church by visible Signes as well as by his Word.

D. 2. Gods Signes or Tokens visible are given and set up by himself, no man may do it.

D. 3. Gods Seals must be annexed onely to Gods Covenant.

D. 4. Gods Tokens and Covenant are given primarily to his Church, and to other Creatures with them and for them. Ver. 12, 13.

D. 5. The Covenant and Seal for security against an universal deluge is perpetual.

D. 6. Gods will maketh things of natural use to Creatures, to become of Spiritual use to the Church. So his bow.

D. 7. The Rainbow in the cloud is Gods own by creation and special designation unto Spiritual use.

D. 8. The Rainbow is a Covenant Token or Seal to the Church of God.

D. 9. In saddest times of danger God hath appointed his bow to be seen.

D. 10. Visibility of Signes of comforts are set for comfort against feares.

D. 11. Gods promise makes visible Signes effectual. Ver. 14.

D. 12. Gods Signes do argue Gods remembrance of such as neither do nor can think upon him.

D. 13. Gods remembrance makes good the Covenant sealed, not to destroy.

D. 14. God would have his People know, that he regards his own Ordinances.

D. 15. Gods remembrance to make good his Covenant, sheweth his careful eye over persons concerned in it.

D. 16. God points out his Seals and presseth them much on his to believing.

D. 17. Gods multiplied pressing Covenant and Seals is to make man have due respect unto them. Ver. 15, 16, 17.

3. The last general head of this Chapter now followeth, which containeth the history of Noahs surviving Seed, with some passages of their manners, and the term of Noahs life.

In the whole these particulars are observable:

1. A rehearsal of Noahs Seed. v. 18, 19.

2. A report of Noahs imployment and failing in it. ver. 20, 21.

3. A relation of Chams carriage. v. 22.

4. Anarration of his other Sonnes act. ver. 23.

5. A discovery of Noahs Prophecy. ver. 24, 25, 26, 27.

6. An history of Noahs end. v. 28, 29.

1. Noahs present Seed after the flood are thus reported in the following verses.

Ver. 18. And there were the Sonnes of Noah going out of the Arke, Schem and Cham, and Japheth, and Cham he the father of Canaan. Cald. same. and Sept.

Ver. 19. These three Sonnes of Noah; and from these the whole earth was scattered.

These three are the Sonnes of Noah, from these they were scattered upon all the earth. Sept. From them was the whole earth sown over. Cald.

In this passage will be meet to consider. 1. The scope of the Spirit in mentioning these, which is to shew.

1. The truth of the promise or blessing, that from these, such fruitfulness should be.

2. The wonder of providence, that from such a few the habitable world should be be peopled. (2) The parts of this piece of history, these.

1. A description of these fountains of mankind by their relation.

Ver. 18.

Noah, they were the Sonnes of Noah, the great fountain.

2. By their privilege with him, in the late deluge. They were preserved in the Ark, and came out from thence together with him: to fulfil Gods purpose foretold.

3. By their names, Schem, and Cham and Japheth.

4. By a special note upon one of them. And Cham he the father of Canaan, recording in it.

1. As to him, a brand of his wickednes derived to his posterity.

2. As concerning Israel, for whom Moses writeth, that they might be encouraged to make on to their promised possession, which God would take from that malignant seed, and bestow on them.

Ver. 19.

3. By their number, expressed thus. These the three sonnes of Noah.

No more but these three, from whom God is resolved to accomplish his promise.

6. By the issue of them recorded, — And from these was scattered or overspread the whole earth.

In which note.

1. The principle of the seed. These, (2) The continent of the seed, the whole earth. (3) Their division into habitations, the seed born of them was dispersed into the habitable parts of the world. So the Seventy read, they were scattered, or sown, here and in the Caldee, the speech is metonymical, the continent said to be dispersed, instead of the subjects contained.

These notes may be taken from this portion.

D. 1. The genealogie of the Church is now to be drawn from Noah.

D. 2. The subject of division from the Church was first in it.

D. 3. God hath noted the rise of the World, as well as of the Church.

D. 4. Gods pointing out of the wicked is for the benefit of his Church. Ver. 18.

D. 5. From small beginnings hath God produced multitudes in the Church, and World.

D. 6. Gods promise is sure and hath effect in the replenishing of the earth, and setting its habitations. Ver. 19.

2. The next thing reported is Noahs implemment, and his failing in it, as followeth.

Ver. 20. And Noah began to be a man of the ground, and he planted a vineyard. — A man an husband man of the earth, &c. Sept. — A man a labourer in the earth, &c. Cald.

Ver. 21. And he drank of the wine, and was drunk and uncovered himself in the midst of his tent. — And he was naked in his house. Septuag. Cald. to the same.

In which passage we have five things reported of Noah.

1. His outward calling, He began to be a man of the ground.

Wherein is reported of him. 1. His betaking himself to imployment, He began, was he not so before?

Yea doubtles: therefore this term of beginning must referre to his vocation in the Arke, where he was sequestred from such work: or els the phrase must be understood as usually it is, for no more but the setting about such a matter; as to begin to say is to say. Compare. Matthew. 16. 6. with Luke. 12. 1. (2) The calling itself, to be a man of the ground, that is, an husband man as the seventy, or a man working in the ground as the Cald. which doubtles takes in the whole busines of husbandry, as a man of war is a soldier. Joshua. 5. 4. and a man of cattle, a shepherd, Genesis. 46. 32.

2. His work specified, He planted a vineyard. — This is but one work of husbandry put for all; as planting is a work upon the ground; so it comprehends all other, as digging, plowing, &c. Here this seems rather to be mentioned for the act following.

3. His partaking of his work, And he drank of the wine. — He drank of that wine, that is the fruit of his own labours which was just, and no evil. 1. Cor. 9. 7. (1) The time of this act is observable, it must be some years after the vineyard planted, before the fruit comes to make wine, and this act also seemeth to follow the birth of several children: as Canaan the Son of Cham is mentioned (2) This was an inordinat action, as the following effect sheweth. It is groundles to conceive there was no wine before the flood; for vines and the fruit of them were then; and the excess of the old world in eating and drinking, was one of the high provocations. Matthew. 24. 38. recorded by the Spirit.

4. His sin, And he was drunk. In it observe, (1) His crime was drunkenness; whether out of ignorance of the strength of the liquor which seemeth somewhat improbable, or els out of infirmity taking more than was convenient, it is disputed; but no need of much striving herein. (2) The time, it was after experience of much favour from God. (3) The singleness of the act act, it was once and no more.

Ver. 20.

Ver. 21.

שכר

5. His shame the effect of sin. And uncovered himself in the midst of his tent. Wherein is discovered.

1. The fruit of his wine, he uncovered doubtless in those parts which piety and modesty would conceal; which is a reproach to be seen, an expression therefore used to set out punishment as well as sin; so Adam was naked by eating, and Noah by drinking. Ezek. 23. 29.

2. The act of it; some have conceived Cham his Son did it, but that is not here charged on him, doubtless the wine that mocked him, might well before his sense and reason, and make him regardless of the right composure of his garments; especially in those times, they being loose.

3. The place it was in his tent, as the Hebrew. Or in his house as the Seventy: where the good man should have given a better example, and not have exposed himself to the observation of his family.

Take these Notes hence.

D. 1. The best and holiest of men upon Gods seating them here below, must undertake some honest calling. So Noah is for husbandry.

D. 2. Mans labour and planting must serve Gods providence to bring the fruits of the earth unto their due use and end. Ver. 20.

D. 3. Feeding, or drinking on a mans own labours is a privilege not denied to man.

D. 4. The best of men may be apt to exceed in the use of creature comforts.

D. 5. Wine is a mocker, and may deceive the holiest men, that are not watchful. Proverbs. 20. 1.

D. 6. Drunkenness makes naked and discovers the shame of a man.

D. 7. It is very evil for a man to discover his shame in his own house, and to his family, much more abroad.

D. 8. God hath not spared to discover the worst as the best of his Saints. Ver. 21.

(1) To humble them. (2). To warn others. (3). To glorify grace, that their righteousness is of him only. Ver. 21.

3. The next relation is of Chams carriage to his Father in this his fallen condition.

Ver. 22 And Cham the Father of Kanaan saw the nakedness or filthiness of his Father, and he told to his two brethren in the street or abroad. And going out he declared to his two brethren without Sept. Cald. to fame.

In this passage we have considerable.

1. The subject spoken of Cham the younger Son of Noah, who also is here again stiled, the Father of the Kanaan, to note his race and to brand him by his posterity alienated from Gods Church and turned against it, though he lived with it not less than 100 years. h

2. The matter spoken of him is in two additions. (1) He saw the nakedness or filthiness of his Father. Wherein occurs.

1. The act, which noteth. (1) A voluntary, and unnatural infection. (2) A wicked malicious observation, (3) A cursed intention to see evil thereby unto his Father.

2. The object, that which ought not to be seen, which is aggravated.

1. From the nature of it. Nakedness, filthiness, or filthy parts, which nature would have blushed to see against its will. (2) From the relation, it was his own dear Fathers nakedness; out of whose bowels he came, and to whom his Son was dear; he is not spared by this cursed wretch but discovered to reproach. (2) And he declared it to his two brethren abroad, or in the street. Herein is more aggravated wickedness.

1. His act, he declares and telleth what he saw, (1) With delight. (2) With reproach, (3) With mischievous purpose, to make his old holy Father an abomination. (2) The subject to whom, his two brethren, those to whom this was no final grief, and to the burden of their souls; which two although only named, yet it denieth not that others might be with them, before whom this defamation was made. (3) The place of this declaration, it was, as the word notes, in the street, or publicly to make his Fathers shame more open: it was bad to do it within doors, but worse to publish it abroad: even the greatest dishonour that can be done to a Father.

From all which we may take these Notes.

D. 1. The greatest shame either to Church or family may arise out of the bowels of them.

D. 2. Apostates from God prove the most disobedient to parents, and wicked to nearest relations.

D. 3. Wickedness makes men unnatural, to observe with delight that which is uncomely.

D. 4. It is horrible unnaturalness to observe observe and publish parents fall and shame.

D. 5. It is a sad character of a sinner to grieve nearest relations, by publishing the faults of any. It's Chams mark here.

D. 6. Sometimes God punisheth sinners of parents by sinners of children, thus to publish their shame.

D. 7. It is a branded generation of men, that prove so unnatural to discover parents sinners. Ver. 22.

Now followeth the report of the carriage of Noahs other two sons toward their father.

Ver. 23. Then took Shem and Japheth a garment, and both of them laid it upon their shoulders, and went backward, and covered the filthiness of their Father, and their faces were backward, and they saw not the filthiness of their Father. Shameful parts, Cald. And Shem and Japheth taking a garment, &c. And saw not their Fathers nakedness. Sept.

In these we have a copy of gracious and pious children, honouring their parents, by hiding his infirmities. These particulars here occur.

Ver. 23.

1. The immediate sequel of this act, upon Chams wicked defamation. And, or then, immediately upon hearing this sad report of their Father they hasten to cover, what Cham had wickedly blazed. Their present undertaking is notable.

2. The subjects spoken of, Shem and Japheth. Of whose age and order, it was declared before. Something also hereafter will follow. Ch. 5. Ver. 32.

3. Their acts reported are several. 1. They took a garment. This was the act of preparation, the garment doubtless was something for convenient covering such as was nearest hand; their taking was a speedy fetching of it for the present use.

2. They both of them put it upon the shoulder.

In which there is a further act preparatory shewing their pious intention to the avoiding of the evil of their wicked brother, they place the garment which they took upon their backs, fit for their motion backward.

3. And they went backward, a motion not usual for any that come to help, yet here judged the fittest by these sonnes of Noah, that they might not accidentally see that, whereupon Cham rejoiced to gaze. (4) And they covered the filthiness of their Father. This is the act of childlike piety to their parent, under his fall; where it may be well to note. (1) The occasion which was the Fathers sin, it was his fall by infirmity. (2) They themselves were children in relation unto him as their Father. (3) Their act is to cover it from sinful man, not from the eyes of God; from the scorn of men not from the reproof of God: so that nothing can be argued either from the persons or act, but the like case must in every thing be granted to require the like practice.

4. Their posture afterward, And their faces were backward.

That is, their duty being done they keep their faces the same way as when they came, from their father, being more willing to cover his nakedness and sin, than any way to behold it.

5. The issue, And the nakedness of their father they did not see.

In which negative issue is carried. (1) A denial of the thought of evil against their father. (2) A denial of any intention or act of evil against him; Such as Chams infection was. (3) An affirmation of the pious affection, and demeanour of these two sonnes unto their father. This was the part of that honour, which God required from them to their parents.

Some profitable Notes arise from this passage.

D. 1. Piety in Children hastens to cover, that which implety discloses to reproach.

D. 2. Some gracious seeds vouchsafed to the Saints for their comfort, as wicked for their grief.

D. 3. Piety to parents will use lawfull means to cover their shame.

D. 4. Piety turns its back to the discovery of parents evils, as unnatural.

D. 5. It is piety in children to cover the infirmities and nakedness of parents. Yet this is no rule for all to hide willfull sinners.

D. 6. Piety turns the face away, and would not willingly see the shame of parents. A sweet patern. V. 23.

1. The next thing here reported is Noahs prophesy, upon his sonnes, and their posterity, which is threefold, according to their number.

1. He beginneth from the younger; verse 24. And Noah awaked from his wine, and knew that which his younger sonne had done unto him, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Ver. 25. And he said, cursed be Kanaan, a servant of servants

Servant's shall be to his brethren, unto his sons.
Sept. — A servant serving, &c.
Cald.

In which passage we have observable.

Ver. 24.

1. Noah's recovery from his fall. And 2. The subject spoken of Noah, the same gracious soul, that had taken a fall, and was overtaken with wine, and slept in filthiness. (2) His recovery. He did awake from his wine, which must carry in it. (1) A return to himself and to his understanding, which the wine had taken away. (2) A glorious, and waking consideration of his fall, and his shame uncovered; when he was in sleep. (3) A watchful departure, or seeking himself from his wine, which had mocked him. All this reasonably must be conceived in this his awaking; therefore this gracious soul was not senseless of his fall, neither did he awake in fury; to go out in revenge against them, which rejoiced in his shame.

יין

2. Noah's cognisance taken of his younger sonnes fall, And he knew that, which his younger son had done unto him.

כנן
הקנן

Wherein note. (1) The cognisance itself. And he knew, that is, had certain understanding, either by some visible sign he might see, or by conference with his sonnes, or by the Spirit of prophecy: All these might concur, to give him knowledge of the fact. (2) The subject taken into knowledge, his little son. As the Hebr. that is, less in years as is imported here, therefore is it read the younger son, as Sept. This must be Cham; whose ungracious act was formerly reported, it is conceived that his son Canaan, was with him, in the discovery of his fathers nakedness. (3) The crime that comes to knowledge. That which Cham did, by inspection on his fathers filthiness rejoicing in it, and publishing of it; this known could not but deeply affect the father; although it may not be conceived, that it should stirre up that gracious man hereupon rashly to break out into imprecations; for that cometh from God as will appear.

Ver. 25.

3. Noah's prophecy concerning his younger son.

1. His utterance of it, which is his act properly. And he said, — God alone is the decreer and infliager of all that followeth. Noah is only the Prophet or Breacher of it: he speaks but Gods mind in this matter.

2. The matter uttered, which is the prediction of a curse, wherein we have to observe. (1) The subject here named which is Kanaan the son of Cham: the reason of breathing this upon him. (2) It is conceived by some he was the first that discovered his Grandfathers nakedness. (3) The fathers curse is in the child. (4) To note the perpetuity, and propagation of it. (5) To point out that seed which was most contrary to the Church and odious to God. Even the Canaanites; whom Israel drove out and subdued, 430 years after the promise given to Abraham. Cham then is fully cursed here, and Canaan rightly.

2. The evil pronounced against these, cursed be Kanaan. — It may be read either imperatively, let him be accursed, or in the future, he shall be accursed. The curse in the language of God carrieth with it the very consequence of evil, that can make a man fully and eternally miserable. It is partly spiritual, and so it separates from God; and from his Church, and gives up men to lust and wickedness; thereby to be hardened unto destruction; and it is partly temporal, falling upon men in their outward estates, to make them an execration, and hissing, and to be abhorred of God and man. Deut. 27. v. 26. &c. This is attended by God.

3. The curse opened. A servant of servants shall he be unto his brethren.

Wherein observe.

1. The evil of the curse explained in part which is slavery or servitude, and that in the vilest condition that can be conceived; A servant of servants, is the basest servant of all.

עבד
עבדים

2. The term of cor-relation, his brethren. Who carried in them the Church of God, Doubles, hell and sin were some Lords, to whom they should be slaves; but to the Church distrustfully should they be made to serve; though they were proud and bitter enemies unto it. So it came to pass, that Joshua, made such of the Canaanites which were spared, to drudge in slavish services unto Israel.

Quest. But were not these Lords some time?

Ans. Yea, in respect of outward power and usurpation; But yet consider

1. Their judgment from God was always to be such as is here threatened.
2. There was an appointed time for the external execution of it. Gen. 15. ver. 13, 14.
3. The spiritual part was in continual execution.

Quest. Should a Father to curse his child?

Ans. (1) Noah doth not curse, but God. (2) He was Gods Minister, therefore must do his office against his own flesh; No ground here then for privat cursing.

Take some Notes from it.

- D. 1. Graciously soules may sleep a while in sin, but they awake again.
- D. 2. Awakening Satins sadly reflects their fall, and depart from evil.
- D. 3. God brings to light the wicked practices of Ingratitude unto a gainst against his Satins, and sheweth it to his Prophets, V. 28.

D. 4. Cognisance taken by God and his Prophets, of wicked practices foretunn's a curse.

D. 5. A Father may be a Minister of a curse from God upon his own children, and he must not spare, as here in Noah; and in Jacob.

D. 6. The curse of God on body and soul find's men in their impieties against him, and their Parents.

D. 7. Gods curse pursueth the children, that goe on in their Fathers steps. Canaan.

D. 8. Such as abuse Sonship in the Church, may justly look to be made slaves unto it. The vilest of slavery is their portion. Such is the curse of Cham. Ver. 25.

Ver. 26.

The second prophetic word concerning Shem. Ver. 26. And he said, blessed be Jehovah the God of Shem and Kanaan shall be a servant to him. — unto his brethren unto Sept. — to them Cald.

In this prediction do occurre considerable.

1. The Prophet declaring it, and he said. That is, moreover & beside the burden foretold to come upon Cham and his posterity, Noah the Prophet of the Lord, instructed by him, proceeds to shew the mind of God, touching his two better sonnes, who piously agreed to cover their Fathers shame, the first and chief of which is Shem.
2. The prophecy itself, wherein are notable.

1. The form of delivering of it, which is gratulatory unto God. Blessed be Jehovah, the God of Shem. — In form and sound of words this is a thanksgiving unto God, wherein may be noted.

2. The object terminating the duty Jehovah. He that is, and was, and is to come, the cause of all things, and of all good to Noah. (2) The reason of this gratulation, his relation unto Shem; the mighty God of Shem, seeing therein no less respect from God both to himself the Father, and his posterity to following generations. It is the first time, God is spoken of as peculiarly related to any man, the God of Shem; afterward God often mentions it. The God of Abraham, &c. Exod. 3. 15. The meaning of this will appear in opening the matter of the prophecy. (3) The gratulation itself. Blessed, which attributed by Noah to God, can not intend any good added to Jehovah by man, as Gods blessing is to us; but a declaration of and ascription of all that good unto God, with believing admiration, which he is pleased to do for his poor creatures. Such always is the blessing of Saints unto God.

2. The matter of this prediction is some special good promised unto Shem, which is comprehended in two heads. (1) In letting over Shem such a Lord as should be able to bless him, and do good unto him. Which is carried in this proposition, Jehovah is the God of Shem, upon which account Noah blesseth the Lord. Wherein read. (1) The subject of it. Jehovah: the fountain of all being, who comprehends all times, creatures, and conditions, in himself: from whom alone are all the issues of good.

2. The attribute, which expresseth only what this Jehovah is and will be unto Shem. He is the God of Shem; where consider.

(1) The chief term of this relation God, Jehovah is the God, or the almighty God, now what ever God is must be conceived here himself; his relations; his attributes, his operations, all is but God, & this God is related to another.

2. The correlatum is Shem. (1) Personally considered who according to his name was a man of renown, and with the name of being the fountain of the Church. (2) Collectively taken, to the true Church of God issuing from him to all generations is carried in this correlation to God.

3. Mystically taken, that great seed which was promised afterward to Abraham and David, in whom all nations should be blessed, even Christ, is intended here, who indeed stands in inseparable relation unto God.

3. The relation itself, which is noted in the propriety, he is the God of Shem; that is, proper and peculiar to Shem, so as he is not the God of others; Shems Father, Lord, king, governour, portion, he is properly Shems, what ever he is; not Chams, nor Japhets so primarily, however he be by participation with him.

2. This blessing consists in putting some under Shem, And Kanaan shall be servant to him or to them. Wherein note

1. The party subjected, Kanaan, he who was cursed with his Father before which name in this prophecy notes. (1) The persons then serving. (2) Their seed the Canaanites. (3) In the mystery Satan the spiritual adversary to the Church of God. (2) The party to whom this should be in subjection is, to him; that is Shem. The relative is read both in the singular and plural, but in this place I conceive it more properly to be singular, noting Shem, who is likewise to be understood in the latitude formerly opened. (3) The subjection itself, carried in the name servant, which was noted before to be the vilest slave; such as shall be under the curse, and laid at the feet of his Church for ever.

Now learn from it.

D. 1. God by his Prophets speak's good unto the pious, as well as evil to the wicked seed.

D. 2. Noah and the Prophets spake of some good to the Church, which themselves saw not. As here to Schem's seed.

D. 3. Prophecies of good unto the Church are best given and received with blessing unto God.

D. 4. The promise of Jehovah's being the God of his Church, is the great blessing. Psalm. 144. 15.

D. 5. Jehovah is more peculiarly the God of some men, than of others, as here in Schem.

D. 6. Where God is truly Lord of his people, all adversaries are made servants to them.

D. 7. The Church shall in its appointed seasons triumph in God, and all enemies be laid under her foot. Ver. 26.

Ver. 27. The third prophetic Word concerneth Jepheth, followeth in the next Verse 27. Elohim shall persuade, or enlarge Jepheth, and he shall dwell in the Tents of Schem, or let him, and Kenaan shall be servant unto them. Let God enlarge, &c. in the house of Schem, &c. Sept. Let his glory dwell in the Tents of Schem, &c. Cald.

This Prophecy carrieth in it two opposite effects. (1) Evil to his Son, and his posterity—supposed necessarily; that there should be a division of Jepheth's seed from Schem, that is a departure of them from the Church, and society of Saints: for otherwise what needed any persuasion of them, to return and cohabit with them. (2) Good to him in his posterity and that is, expresseth Elohim shall persuade, or enlarge, &c. Wherein, (1) The cause of this blessing, it is Elohim God almighty, who bletheth and none can curse, who speaketh, and it shall come to pass: who will work and none shall let it. (2) The blessing itself which is considerable.

1. In the form of it, or manner of expressing it, which is either by way of promise, God shall persuade, or els by way of prayer, let God persuade. The former is the ground of the latter, and this is the application of that. 2. In the matter of it, which is or may be threefold. According to the various signification of one word.

1. Enlargement or multiplying of his seed with himself, to this sense, God shall enlarge Jepheth, or let him enlarge: Which sense is sometimes used of this word, and so the Seventy read it. Now this is the blessing of Jepheth within himself, enlargement, and this is conceived to be twofold.

(1) External and corporal for his seed and issue; so it was made good; for his posterity did surpass his brethren in number. (2) Internal or spiritual, for enlargement of heart towards God, and his ways, which more eminently is included in that other reading of the word, to persuade, which was a work on the heart.

2. Co-habitation with the Church; after their division from it. The Lord shall persuade Jepheth, &c. Where we have to consider.

1. Gods act promised, or prayed for prophetically persuade, or allure, which is the sweet expression of God, when he effectually worketh upon souls to bring them into himself. I will allure her, &c. Hosea. 2. 14. which is the same word. It notes a powerful act of grace upon the heart, to draw it over from sin to God.

2. The object, Jepheth. (1) Taken personally it signifieth there might be a dividing disposition in him from his brother. (2) Taken collectively all his seed. (3) Taken mystically all the gentiles to be persuaded unto Christ. It is a note of some, the word which notes Gods act is of the same signification with the very name of the man, and therefore paraphrase, God shall persuade the persuadable, an ingenious note, taken with this caution; that Jepheth's disposition be not preferred above Gods grace or as precedent to it.

3. The effect of Gods acting, And he shall dwell in the Tents of Schem.

Whereabout observe.

1. The benefit promised, which is habitation or a settled dwelling, which notes, residence, maintenance, and perseverance.

2. The specification by the place, even the tents of Schem, which phrase may admit of various construction. (1) Communion with Schem and his seed, which were the Church of God. And with whom Gods Oracles were abiding, and among whom the way of his salvation was declared.

2. Succession, as to come to dwell in their tents, that is, in their roomes, as sometimes it is used. Rom. 11. v. 11. &c. 1 Chron. 5. 10. So the gentiles were grafted in when the Jewes were cut off, from the Church of God; both are carried in the prophecy, the Church is so paraphrased by tents. To note, the weak condition as to sense, and yet the proper condition of the Church, which God will owne. Zech. 12. 7. Mal. 2. 12. Rev. 20. 9.

3. Dominion over his brother, representing the enemies of the Church. And Kenaan shall be his servant, or servant unto them.

(1) The party subjected was before discovered covered. (2) The subjection itself, is to be vilest of servants, such as shall be cast out from having any memoriall in the house of God. (3) The superiour to whom he is subjected, is Jepheth, joined with Schem and as being in the Church, so it may be read, to him or to them.

Now take the Notes from it.

D. 1. God hath made known that some in the Church to the last times shall divide from it.

D. 2. All divisions from the Church are not irreconcilable.

D. 3. God almighty alone is the cause of making up the breaches of such as divide from his Church.

D. 4. Prophecy of good to any, as it is by promise, so it is brought about by prayer. From the form.

D. 5. Blessing of posterity in abundance may be to such as divide from the Church.

D. 6. Heart enlargement toward the wayes of God is his promise and worke.

D. 7. Souls divided are onely persuadable by God to have communion with his Church.

D. 8. Gods persuasion upon souls is effectual to bring them to the Churches tents.

D. 9. The Gentiles succession of, and communion with the Jewish Church is foretold of God.

D. 10. A tent habitation hath God allotted to his Church below.

D. 11. The worlds palaces will be changed for the Churches tents, when God work's.

D. 12. Subjection of all enemies is surely prophesied to them who join with the Church of God. Ver. 27.

6. The last thing here related is the age and end of Noah, as it followeth.

Ver. 28. And Noah lived after the flood 300 years, and 50 years. Sep. &c. al to the same.

Ver. 29. And all the dayes of Noah were 900 years, and 50 years, and he died. Sep. and Cald. same.

In this passage is related the term of years granted to Noah here below, together with his expiration, wherein may we note.

1. The subject of this history recorded, Ver. 28. It is Noah, the great Father of the restored world, as Adam was of the world created, the great Prophet of the Church, and the great Lord over the whole earth.

The history of such a one is worth our notice, from whom the line of the Church and the world is drawn; to give us understanding of Gods providence toward both, under such a reward.

2. The matter of this history, which is twofold. (1) His life, and thereof. 1. The nature, belized, which expression is comprehensive both of the natural life of Noah, and all the accidents of the same. So that, to say he lived, is not only that he breathed here, but that he lived accepted of God, promoted by him, that he lived testifying against sin, preaching righteousness, giving laws from God to the generations which he was, and sometimes slipping into sin and falling into bitter afflictions: such was his life thorough variety of conditions. (2) The duration expressed two ways.

1. For the space after the flood declared thus. After the flood 350 years, which notes not onely the time, but the various conditions of all those years, whereof the good man had much experience. (2) For the whole space both before and after the flood expressed in these terms,

And all the dayes of Noah were 950 years, in which time he saw the tenth generation from himself, some conclude, that he saw Abraham, and that in good years, near 50, before he died; but a true account, will rather cast it that he died two years before Abraham was born: the ground of difference ariseth from Gen. 11. 16. Where we shall weigh it. He lived then unto the year of creation. 2006. A large time to see the promise of multiplication fulfilled, and to spread the earth, and to establish the Church through how many difficulties will appear in the following story.

2. His death is recorded, And he died. Which must carry in it not onely a simple expiration, but a death becoming such a man; he died a Saint, a believer, a glorious instrument in Christs Church, and so died in hope, when by faith he had seen the promises.

We close with it.

D. 1. Chronology is given by Gods Spirit. Special uses of it are in the Church.

D. 2. Times and conditions of his Church God would have us know.

D. 3. In the greatest desolations God hath hath raised some for his Churches good.

D. 4. God extends the life of his Saints, as he hath use of them. Ver. 28.

D. 5. The longest life of Saints wades through various conditions. Ver. 29.

D. 6. The longest living Saint must dye, yet like a Saint, not fall as the wicked.

CHAP. X.

For a more profitable dealing upon this Scripture, and to avoid vain discourse upon true genealogies, as well as vain fabulous genealogies themselves, it is requisite to premise something necessary to be foreknown concerning the scope, use, order, and parts of this Chapter.

1. The scope of the Spirit here is mainly to draw out the line of the Church, which we see afterward he singeth out, laying aside the mention of other nations. It is not therefore to be expected, that here God should give an exact genealogie of the world, which some have desired, and others because they finde it not here, have found out fables to satisfy their own phancies. What was enough for us to know God hath set down, and more we need not, it belonging not to faith, as the matters of the Church do: by which the Spirit here would instruct us unto life.

2. The use of this scripture is manifold.

1. To prove the truth of Gods promise for multiplying Noachs seed and filling the earth, as within 100 years after the flood is wonderful to behold.

2. To give a true history of the rise of man after the flood, and to confute fabulous fictions.

3. To shew the descent of the Church from Noah together with the Covenant and manifestations of God unto them, at several times.

4. To discover the line of Christ according to the flesh.

5. To give understanding of propheticall Scriptures which mention severall persons and things in this line.

3. The order of giving this history or genealogy is arbitrary to the Spirit, he beginneth with Jepheth the elder, and then proceeds to Cham the younger, and lastly to Schem and his posterity not to diminish his dignity but because he was to proceed in the history of the Church from him; he mentions the other first, and so layeth them aside.

4. The parts of this Chapter, general may be.

1. A general title of the contents, Ver. 1.

2. A special relation of a threefold genealogy.

1. Of Jepheth, Ver. 2. 5.

2. Of Cham, Ver. 6. 20.

3. Of Schem, Ver. 21. 31.

3. A summary conclusion, Ver. 32. The first thus followeth.

Ver. 1. And these are the generations of the sonnes of Noah, Schem, Cham and Jepheth, and to them were born sonnes after the flood. Sept. and Cald. same.

In which title may be considerable.

1. The connection of this to the former history. Noah had prophesied before concerning all his sonnes, and then was added his expiration, the Spirit meaning to speak no more of him: but now that being done, he proceeds to shew you the persons and posterity upon whom all these words were to be fulfilled, and, or but, or now, these are, &c. Gods word must not fall to the ground.

2. The matter here reported, which is but a general proposition of the contents of the whole Chapter, wherein we may point out to observation.

1. The nature of the thing spoken of, generations. Whence as of other like occasions this book is styled in Greek, Genesis which note a continued line for several descents and ages.

2. The propriety of these, spoken of. (1) Collectively, The generations of the sonnes of Noah, such as they begat and did issue from them. (2) Particularly by name, Schem, Cham, and Jepheth, where Schem hath the place of dignity.

3. The way of propagating these generations, expressed thus, And there were born unto them sonnes; the way of performing Gods promise was by generation and birth, of which the males are only named, not the daughters, though they must needs be understood, the nobler sexe being sufficient to declare the line.

(4) The time expressly hinted, after the flood, or that flood, as some emphatically. The expression notes the time; with the sad import of the judgment which waited all the world, save eight persons, yet at such a time, and after such a sweeping flood, God commands it and man becomes fruitful to people the earth againe.

Take some Notes from it.

D. 1. Gods Prophecies and performance are joined together in his word, so they should in our faith and observation.

D. 2.

D. 2. Genealogie according to truth is the Spirits worke, and useful to the Church of God.

D. 3. Variety of lines hath God drawn out from one root to discover the variety of his wisdom.

D. 4. Good and bad may have the outward blessing of the fruit of the body.

D. 5. Propagation by birth serveth Gods providence to bring forth multitudes promised.

D. 6. Saddest desolations in the world cannot hinder God from his worke to preserve a seed.

D. 7. The truest history of Ages must be drawn now from the flood. V. 1.

2. The special genealogy followeth, and first the line of Jepheth, in these Verses.

Ver. 2. The Sonnes of Jepheth, Gomer, and Magog and Madai, and Javan and Tubal, and Mescheth and Thirath. Cald. same. Samar. Joanan, Thobel, and Mosoch, Sept.

Ver. 3. And the Sonnes of Gomer, Aschenaz, and Riphath and Togarmah. Sept. and Cald. same.

Ver. 4. And the Sonnes of Javan, Elifshah and Tharsish, Cithim and Dodanim. Sept. and Cald. to same.

Ver. 5. From these were the Isles of the Nations divided in their Lands, a man to his tongue, to their families among their Nations. Every one according to their language in their tribes and in their Nations Sept. According to their families in their people. Cald.

In this passage two Heads are eminent.

1. The line drawn out to three branches, (1) The direct line from Jepheth of whom is here reported, that he had 7 Sonnes issuing from his own body; what more issue he had, the Scripture mentioneth not; and yet it is not to be doubted but that he had more. That from these came the Gentiles under promise is clear, but to point out the posterity and several Nations certainly issuing from these is too hard for man to do: The holy record is so short in this matter. All then is but probability.

1. Gomer. His name is used, Ezek. 38. 6. noting a Northern people; from Canaan, called by some Cimmerians, some fetch the Danes from them.

2. Magog, a people likewise by this name were known. Ezek. 38. 2. And a fire threatened upon them from the Lord, Ezek. 39. 6. It is thought they were the Scythians. Spiritual enemies noted by them. Rev. 20. 8.

3. Madai, from whom a people were afterward called, by the same Name, Isaiah. 21. 2. Which is rendred the Medes Isaiah. 13. 17. Or the Macedonians. So Mede.

4. Javan, a people are mentioned by his Name. Isaiah. 60. 19. Ezek. 27. 13. These are conceived to be the Grecians, called Jonan in the Greek. Whence Jones.

5. Thubal, a people are named also of him. Ezek. 27. 13. Traders &c. Who joyned with Gog against the Church. Ezek. 38. 2, 3. These are conceived to be the Albanians, Chaldeans, Ibezians, now Spaniards.

6. Mescheth. This notes a people joined with Thubal. Ezek. 27. 13, &c. And as is conceived points out the Capadocians, or more northern, the Muscovites. Ezek. ch. 38. v. 2, 3.

7. Thirath. Mention of him is onely again, 1 Chron. 1. 5. Some think the Tyrians, others the Thracians to be his issue. These are all reckoned from Jepheth himself, but doubtless not all the Children which he had. Thus much the Spirit thought fit to record. Ver. 2.

2. The line subordinate, next mentioned is from his Son Gomer, of whom a threefold issue is related.

1. Aschenaz. A people is named of Ver. 3. him who helped the Medes against Babylon. Jer. 51. 27. These are conceived to dwell in Asia, as Phrygia Minol and Froy. The Jewes make the Germans his issue.

2. Riphath called Diphath. 1 Chron. 1. v. 6. No where els mentioned, of him are thought to come the Paphlagonians, a people in Lesser Asia. Mede thinks these of Pontus and Bithinia.

3. Togarmah, a people is named of this man. Ezek. 27. 14. For merchants. Ezek. 38. 6. Some make the Germans this people. It is certain they were a Northern Nation. Ver. 3. Mede, Phrygia Major, and Galatia.

3. The next line is drawn from Javan, another son of Jepheth; and the issue of no more but these two sonnes is recorded, however it is not to be doubted, but his other sonnes had their issue. The sonnes of this were. (From Javan are the Grecians.)

1. Elifshah, a people is mentioned of Ver. 4. him. Ezek. 27. 7. Merchants who sold blue and purple to Tyrus. Some think the Aolians in Asia the lesse are of him. Mede, Achayans and Peloponnesians.

2. Tharsish, a people of this name is read also, Ezek. 27. 12. 25. Cilicia is thought to be their Country, wherein Tarsus was a famous City, where Paul was born. Act. 21. 39.

3. Cithim, a people is spoken of by this name, Numb. 24. 24. Isaiah. 23. 1. Jer. 2. 10. What now they are called is uncertain. Some translate the word Romans, Cald. Some Italians, Lat. Mede, Mede, Carians, Licians, and Pamphilians.

4. Dodanim, read Rodanim, 1 Chron. ch. 1. ver. 7. What people are now from these is uncertain. Some think the Dorians about Greece. Ver. 4. made the Epirotes. So here we have recorded from Jepheth, only 7 Sonnes, and 7 grand Children, of whom it is clear they were a Northern people from Canaan: but what remainders of them are now after so many alterations, cannot be known. It is an ingenuous allusion of the seven Churches in Asia, to these seven Sonnes of Jepheth, and so an instance of the fulfilling of Noahs prophesy in part, but it riseth not naturally from the text.

2. The settled habitation of these, wherein note.

Ver. 5.

1. The Subject inhabiting or seated, expressed thus, from these, that is, these Sonnes of Jepheth with their offspring, which are not mentioned.
2. The place inhabited, the Isles of the Gentiles, which were not only proper Islands, but all places whereunto the Hebrewes could not passe but by sea. Here two words are used, but the Isles are sometime read Nations themselves. Isaiah. 11. 11.
3. Their bounds given them they were divided, — that is, by lot, or line, as is probable Noah before his death from God might be instructed so to dispose the seed of Jepheth, furthest off. It was not without Gods hand.
4. The rule of this division, which take's two part's.

1. Every one according to his tongue or language. — A man to his tongue, that is, every man according to his speech, which must needs be after Gods curse upon Babel, in confounding this language of man, for before all were of one tongue.

2. According to their families or tribes in their Nations. — That is, being ranked into heads of families, each betook themselves to shipping, and so to inhabit the coasts appointed, and there to fear God; however it fell out otherwise shortly after.

Thus the Genealogy of Jepheth is dispatched and his Sonnes sent away, as taking their lot in more remote places from their brethren.

Chams residence was neerer Schem, which Moses therefore reserveth, having many things of their neighbour-hood to record.

Some Notes from it.

D. 1. The lines of men should guide us to observe the wisdom and goodness of the Providence of Gods much is to be seen in this line of the Gentiles.

D. 2. All the Gentiles however Apostat came from the Church of God at first.

D. 3. Gods brevity in drawing the line of the Gentiles should curb mans curiosity.

D. 4. All the Seed from Jepheth, they are Gentiles under the promise. God shall persuade. V. 2, 3, 4.

D. 5. The divisions and bounds of habitations have bin set unto the Gentiles by God. Act. 17. 26.

D. 6. Division of tongues was made the rule to divide Nations, and dwellings.

D. 7. The Gentiles have distinctly bin seated also according to Tribes, and Families.

D. 8. God will not have the Gentiles Japhets seed forgotten, however now divided in the earth. He therefore hath given their line and Original. Ver. 5.

2. The line of Cham the youngest Son of Noah is described, wherein occurth:

1. His immediat issue from his own body.

Ver. 6. And the Sonnes of Cham, Cush, and Misraim, and Phut, and Kanaan. Sept. and Cald. to same. Herein foure Sonnes are named issuing from Cham.

1. Cush, this the Father of the Ethiopians or black Mores, the Arabians and Mores, Isai. 37. 9. Jer. 13. 23. 2 Kings 19. 9. 1 Esther 1. Num. 12. 1.

2. Misraim, the Father of the Egyptians: the land of Misraim named by the Prophets is called Egypt. Hosea 11. 1. Mar. 2. 15.

3. Phut: his Genealogie is here silenced, but a people called by his name the Prophet mentioneth, Ezek. 27. v. 10. and 38. 5. Lybians. Jer. 46. 9.

4. Kanaan: that Son that had the curse pronounced on him by Noah, the Father of the Canaanites, of whom Moses especially here writeth, whose Land was to be given to Israel.

2. His line derived from these Sonnes, which is threefold. For of Phut no line appears.

1. The race of Cush named as followeth.

Ver. 7. And the Sonnes of Cush, Seba, and Chavilah, and Sabrah, and Rayamah, and Sabihcchah; and the Sonnes of Rayamah, Seba, and Dedan. Sept. and Cald. to same.

Evi-

Evilah. Regma. recorded. Here are two descents from Cush: (1) Immediat, in five Sonnes named.

Sabi, Gr.

1. Seba, the Father of the Sabceans, mixt with the Arabians, as is thought, Pf. 72. 10.

2. Chavilah, Gr. Evila: this is conceived to be Father of some of those mixe people in Arabia. Sure it must not be mistaken for that Chavilah in Schems line. Ver. 29.

3. Sabrah, Gr. Sabatha, conceived to be Father of a Seed dwelling southward in Ethiopia from whence the Queen of Sheba came. 1 Kings 10. Others of a people in Arabia.

Regma, Gr.

4. Rayamah, supposed the Father of a people in Arabia the fruitful, mentioned Ezek. 27. 22.

5. Sabihcchah, Gr. Sabbathaca, supposed likewise a Father of a people in Arabia.

(2) Mediat from his Sonne Rayamah, two Sonnes.

1. Sheba, from this a people in the south of Arabia are conceived. Merchants.

2. Dedan, supposed Father of a people neighbouring under that Climat. Merchants also. Ezek. 27. 22.

3. A special history of one immediat issue besides all these from Cush. ver. 8, 12.

Ver. 8. And Cush begat Nimrod, he began to be a mighty one in the Earth. Cald. same.

Nimrod. He began to be a gyant, &c. Sept.

Ver. 9. He was mighty in hunting to the face of Jehovah, therefore it is said, as Nimrod mighty for hunting to the face of God

A gyant dog hunter before the Lord God, therefore they shall say, as Nimrod, &c. Sept. A strong or violent man before the Lord. Cald.

Ver. 10. And the beginning of his Kingdom was Babel, and Erech, and Acad, and Calneh in the Land of Shinar. Sept. same.

Land of Babel. Cald.

Ver. 11. Out of that Land he went out to Asshur and built Nineveh, and Rehoboth the City and Calach. Asshur went out. Sept. and Cald. same.

Ver. 12. And Resen between Niniveh and between Calach, the same is a great City Dalem. Sept. and Cald.

The singular report of this Sonne is not without some special intent of the Spirit of God to have him noted, and an eminent exprellion of one main part of the curse on Cham, executed on this Seed in giving him up to sin.

Herein we have to note more specially.

1. The birth of this Son by itself related thus, V. 8. — And Cush begat Nimrod, whether before or after his other Sonnes is not mentioned. Some think, he was begotten in adultery, and therefore is not reckoned with his other Sonnes: but non constat. His name notes a Rebel.

2. The Character of him, which is various.

Ver. 8.

1. His power thus expressed, — He began to be a mighty one in the Earth. The seventy, a gyant. (1) The power here spoken of may be in bulke of body, or in authority usurped, or in cruelty exercised.

(2) The rise of it after the flood, it began in him. (3) The extent unto which he spreads it, the earth, or so far as he could reach.

2. The exercise of this power, recorded summarily, Ver. 9. He was mighty in hunting to the face of Jehovah.

Herein is expressed the acting of his power. (1) The work wherein it was put forth was in hunting. A dog leader, or such an hunt-man, the Greek readeth it, who pursued beasts; that he might do, but man hunting is most properly understood here, such as we read of Jer. 16. 16. Lam. 3. 52. and 4. 18. (2) The specification, or aggravation of it, to the face of Jehovah, or before Jehovah. One way it may note the object of his hunting or persecution, Gods face in his Saints, for it is evident he makes in-roads into the east among Shems posterity, there to build his Babel, or els it may be read as an aggravation of it, that thus he hunted Soules to destroy them, even to the very eyes or face of God, while he looked on, who sent the deluge.

3. The proverb made upon him, declared in the following words, — Therefore it shall be said, or it was taken up as a proverb, concerning any cruel oppressours and persecutor's, They were as Nimrod's hunting mightily against God, or before his face.

4. The rise or head of his dominion, is next particularly discovered, — And the beginning &c. Whence first we may see confirmed, his hunting was after Kingdoms and Dominions, which were not gotten without the blood of men. 1. The rise or beginning of his power is signified, or els the chief places of his Dominion, both may be couched here. (2) The places named. (1) Babel, or Babilon, in the East, which belonged to Schem. So we see the tents of the Church he hunted, this also seems to note that his hunting was after the confounding of languages, upon the building of that tower, for upon that occasion it was called Babel: In which work it is probable he was a ring-leader, and afterward beginneth his violence from thence. (2) Erech, supposed Edessa in Mesopotamia. 3. Acad, supposed Nisibis in Mesopotamia. (4) Calneh, mentioned Am. 6. ver. 2. supposed Callinissum a much fortified place. (5) The continent of all these the Land Shinar, noted to be Caldea, signifying, That which scattered, called the Land of Nimrod, Micah. 5. 6. It is the habitation of wickedness. Zech. 5. 11. Hence breaketh out the violence of this man.

5. The extent of his Dominion, — which is read two ways. (1) Conquering Land. (1) Out of that Land Asshur went out: supposed of the posterity of Shem. Whom Nimrod drove away, but it is more than probable, that Ashur is not here meant, but the name of a country.

2. Out of that land he went out into Ashur or Assyria, that is Nimrod to enlarge his dominions, of whom here it is recorded, which seems most rational. (2) Building thereby declaring that he was not content to live as the Church in tents. He doth as Cain think to secure himself, by building Cities and places of strength. Whereof four are named. (1) Nineveh. Jonas 1. famous for and by Jonas Prophecy.

2. Recoboth, this is conceived not an appellative, but a proper name, though some annex it to Nineveh, reading by apposition, a City of streets.

3. Caleh. (4) Resen between Nineveh and Calach. (5) An adjunct to set out by emphasis the stateliness of Nineveh, it was a great City.

Quest. But was Nimrod to be blamed, are not powers of God?

Ans. One commends Nimrod. Ab. Ezra. But falsely.

1. Powers are Gods, but not wicked usurpation. (2) This was Nimrod's case, for which the Spirit brands him

Note from it.

D. 1. The most cursed man may have a numerous seed: it enlargeth the curse. All these of Cham. Ver. 6. 7.

D. 2. Cursed ones bring out sometimes an eminent rebellious seed to hasten vengeance. Nimrod. V. 8.

D. 3. The greatest judgments will not keep wicked ones from sin though being but a little escaped, from them.

D. 4. Under a wise providence, power and violence is suffered to rise and spring in the earth. V. 8.

D. 5. It is the property of giants in sin and earthly power to hunt to death Gods Saints to his face.

D. 6. God makes in vengeance the names of such wicked ones a proverb. Ver. 9.

D. 7. The beginning and chief of all the power of wicked ones, is but confusion, and the place of wickedness. Babel and Shtnar. V. 10.

D. 8. Wicked Potentates are still invading others to enlarge themselves. Ver. 11.

D. 9. Edifying cities, and places of strength, is the wicked's security.

D. 10. Great cities they may have, but such as are under the eye and judgment of God. V. 12.

2. The race of Mithraim followeth, who was another Son of Cham, Ver. 13. And Mithraim begat Ludim, and Vananim, and Lehabim, and Naphtuchim. Cald. same. τὰς λυδίων. — Sec. plural. Sep.

Ver. 14. And Pathrusim and Casluchim where from thence went out Pelischim and Caphtorim. — And the Cappadocians, Cal. for Caphtor. — Patrofanim and Calfcanim, &c. Sep.

In this line is observable that the names of father and sonnes do end in Im. which notes the plural number Hebr. And so the Sep. Readeth them as names of nations or people. It is rightly conceived, that both the heads and people coming from them are meant by these as Mithraim, notes the father of Egypt. And the Egyptians. So the names of all his sonnes noting themselves and the people issuing from them, all conceived belonging to Egypt.

1. Ludim, the son, and the people, from him in Egypt.

2. Vananim, the son. And the inhabitants of Pentapolis.

3. Lehabim, the son, and his offspring, Libians, different, from the V. 6.

4. Naphtuchim, the son, and his seed, Ethiops in Egypt.

5. Pathrusim, the son and his seed, in Pathros. Isaiah 11. 11.

7. Caphtorim, the son and seed, the Cald. calleth them Cappadocians, some read this before the former sentence, and Caphtorim, so that from thence went out Pelischim, by an Hysteresis which is confirmed. Amos 9. 7. But these are thought to be a people belonging to one of the dominions of Egypt.

3. The genealogy of Schem the third son of Noah now followeth; he for his dignity and as a Father of the Church is named before the rest — several times, but with order to the succeeding history about the Church, his line is here described last. Which is two wayes here drawn out.

1. Generally, comprehending some part of the line of the Church, with the collateral issues, which turned from it. Thus in this Chapter.

2. Specially from Schem drawing the direct line unto Abraham. Cap. 11. 10. So that between these two in the beginning of the 11th Chapter, is inserted the state of all these children of Noah until the confounding of the languages, and the cause of that judgment. The general line takes up this Chapter. Wherein observe.

1. The immediat issue of Schem is related.

Ver. 21. And to Schem was born, or there was a birth even he the Father of all the children of Yether, the brother of Jepheth the great or elder. מלך. Sept. נדן Cald.

Ver. 22. The sonnes of Schem, Yelam and Afschur Arpacschad, & Lud, & Aram—Arphaxad, and one more Cainan. Sept. Cald. fame.

In this passage we have to observe. (1) The head or Father of this line set forth.

Ver. 21.

1. By his name, Schem, it notes a name and that an eminent one, God was pleased to make him a man of name, famous for the relation he had to the Church, as being the Father of it next unto Noah.

2. By his relation of paternity expressed thus — He also was the Father of all the children of Heber.

The weight of this is considerable, 1. In the correlatum, the children of Heber; now this is not to be understood of all his children; but of them which were gathered into Gods Church onely, which continued in the line to Christ; the Hebrewes were they called from Heber; that Church wherein Moses now ministered; for whose comfort doubtles he mentions this. (2) In the term of relation, he is called their Father however he was the great grand Father of them, yet here he is reckoned in the nearest relation, (he is called the very Father of them. 3. In the reason of this relation, which was mostly spiritual, that the name of Schem should be named upon them, upon whom the blessing was manifested; that the Lord God became his peculiarly, and so theirs, for as much as the same blessing came to them. Gen. 17. 7. (3) By his relation of fraternity, recorded in the close of the Ver. 21. The brother of Jepheth the great. Heb. the greater, Sept. wherein we may note also. (1). The term of relation, Brother, so he was of the same Father and Mother, and no less also brother to Cham. (2) The correlat Jepheth, set out by an adjunct of his majority in years, the elder or; the greater so he appeared to be in former discoveries compare. Gen. 5. 32. with Gen. 11. 10. Others have made a quarrel whether it should not be joined to Schem, as if he were the elder brother of Jepheth, which the reason of the Scripture considered cannot be.

3. The ground of this relation seemeth to be some spiritual good wherein God would make them sharers together, as persuading Jepheth to dwell in the tents of Schem: otherwise Cham might have been named as well as Jepheth.

2. The issue ascribed to him: (1) In a general term, there was born to him, or there was a birth to him: that is God gave him to be fruitful as the other sonnes.

2. In special, or by name, Ver. 22. Where we have 5 sonnes reckoned of Schem.

1. Elam, of whom the Elamits or Persians, enemies to the Church, yet finding mercy in the promise. Gen. 14. v. 1. Hsi, 21. 2. 22. 6. Jer. 49. 36. 39.

2. Afschur the Father of the Assyrians great scourgers to Israel. Hsi. 10. 5. 2 Kings. 15. 19. 29.

3. Arpacschad, Conceived the Father of the Caldeans, no special genealogie is given of him but that he begat Salah, and was of Christs line. Luke 3. 30.

4. Lud. From whom the Lydians are reckoned, who were of Asia, not those of Africa, which descended of Misraim, Son of Cham.

5. Aram, of whom the Aramits or the Syrians as they are called: great enemies to the Church. Judg. 3. 10. This land of Aram had many parts wherefore were read of Padan-Aram. Gen. 28. 2. Aram-Naharaim. Gen. 24. 10. Aram of Damascus. 2. Sam. 8. 6. Aram-Zobah. Psalm. 60. 2. Aram Maacah. 1. Chron. 19. 6. And Aram Beth-Rehob. 2 Sam. 10. 6. From the discovery of this immediat line of Schem.

Note.

D. 1. The last mention of the Churches line is not the least in Gods account.

D. 2. Fruitfulness is given to the Church of God, for its continuance on earth.

2. The issue of Schem derived from several sonnes now followeth, wherein two sonnes onely are mentioned with their seed.

1. Aram with his posterity as in the next Ver.

Ver. 23.

Ver. 23. And the sonnes of Aram Yuts and Chul, and Gether, and Masli. Cald. same. וּצַח, וְכָל, וְגֵתֵר, וְמָסִלִּי Mark. Sept. of these 4 sonnes various and uncertain are the conjectures, it is enough to consider, that from these the Syrians issued, in the several sorts and multitudes of them, and by these the whole tract of Syria was inhabited.

Ver. 24.

2. Arpacschad with his line general. Ver. 24. And Arpacschad begat Selah, and Selah begat Gether, Cald. same. Kainan, and Kainan begat Sela, Sept. &c.

Ver. 25.

Ver. 25. And to Yebes, were born two sonnes, the name of the one Peleg, for in his dayes the earth was divided, and the name of his brother Joktan.

Ver. 26.

Ver. 26. And Joktan begat Almodad, &c. to Ver. 30.

Ver. 30.

Ver. 30. And their habitation was from Mesha, athou goest to Sephar, a mount of the east, Sept. and Cald. to the same.

Ver. 31.

Ver. 31. These are the sonnes of Schem to their families, to their tongues, in their lands, and after their nations.

In this passage we have the line of Arpacschad, wherein we have considerable. (1) The direct line of the Church, from him to Selach, from Selach to Heber, from Heber to Peleg, concerning whom may be noted. (1) The meaning of his name division. (2) The reason of it, because in his dayes the earth was divided.

Which division some conceived was made by Noah, the great grand Father giving them by lot their portions, but this is groundles.

It was that division doubtles, which God made in judgment upon men in confounding the language of that people that had been of one tongue, and so dividing them accordingly into several parts upon this memorable act of God, Heber gave this name to his Son, to keep in remembrance this worke.

2. The collateral line goeing beside the Church: and that is from Joktan his Brother. Of whom is here declared from Ver. 26. to Ver. 30.

1. His seed, 13 sonnes, whose names are now forgotten as to any seed from them.

2. Their habitation, which is noted to be the east whence it is conceived that of them were the Indians there, but that is plain they were separated from the Church.

3. The summe of Schems line drawn up, these, &c. Where their distinction is made (1) By families. (2) By tongues. Heber keeping the first language in the Church (3) By lands. (4) By nations, the number of which though some attempt to tell, yet is it altogether uncertain.

These Notes result from it.

We conclude from all.

CHAP. XI.

In this Chapter, two main heads are recorded.

1. The history of the earths division. Ver. 1. 9.

2. The direct line of the Church from Schem to Abram. Ver. 10. &c. The former of these seemeth to be in a parenthesis, inserted between the history of the line of Schem. Occasioned by a former mention of dividing the earth in the dayes of Peleg. The account of which division the Spirit here giveth before he proceedeth in making making up the line of the Church which relation belongeth to the time and place of Nimrod spoken of before, but is reserved to this place wherein we have recorded.

1. The occasion or cause procuring this division, which was the confederacy or uniting together of the whole earth set out.
1. In their language, ver. 1.
2. In their place of setting, ver. 2.
3. In their resolutions, ver. 3. 4.
2. Gods pleading with them, wherein note.
1. His observation of them, ver. 5.
2. His reasoning about them, ver. 6.
3. His resolution upon them, ver. 7.
4. His execution of all, ver. 8.
5. His memorial of this set up, ver. 9.
1. The confederacy of the earth in their speech, the help of all the rest.

Ver. 1. And the whole earth was one lip, and one words, of one, some. And one voice to all. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. One tongue and one speech.

In this proposition are considerable.

Ver. 1.

1. The subject set forth, (1) By the nature of it, the earth, metonymically taken for the inhabitants. As for earth. 1. Kings. 8. 27. is read, men of the earth. 2 Chron. 6. 18. (2). By the universality of it, all the earth, that is all men at that time which issued from Noah, and his sonnes of what line soever, of all it is true what is here said, yet with respect to other acts of confederacy this may be restrained to those conspirators that went to build Babel.

שפת אחת

2. The attribute here, is one lip, one words, that is, they had or used among them but one kind of language or words. This doubtles was that which Adam, Scheth, &c. spake before the flood, and Noach, Shem, &c. After the flood until this time of confusion; which language was then taken out of the mouths of all other families, and reserved in the family of Heber, and so in the Church, which afterward was called the Jewes language. Ila. 36. 11. In this were given the oracles of God to them. That this was from Adam, the very names and reasons of their names from that time shew. The continuance of this unity of language in the world was 1757 years, after the flood 101.

The blessing of the unity of language was very great, for keeping unity, amity and commerce among men, as well as other benefits. The misery of the division of tongues, especially to those out of the Church, will make appear it was a blessing.

Take some Notes hence.

D. 1. Language or speech God hath allowed to men as men.

D. 2. One language did God vouchsafe to all for good. It was mainly to keep them to the Church.

D. 3. Sin perverts the sweet blessing of one speech to conspiracy against God. Ver. 2.

2. The confederacy of men in their place, followeth.

Ver. 2. And it was in their journeying from the east, and they found a plain field or valley in the land of Shinar, and they dwelt there.

And they dwelt there, Sept. In the beginning, &c. In the land of Babylon, &c. In this description of the second agreement between them, by one tongue to come to one place. Note.

1. The event affirmed. It was, that is by the over ruling providence of God so it came to passe, not as if they agreed and God knew it not.

2. The meanes or way to this event spoken of in the following terms, In their going from the east, &c. Sept. Wherein occur.

1. The moovers, which however it may seem, to be all these of one tongue, yet it is not so here, and surely the seed of Cham Nimrod, &c. which had all one language with the rest at this time must be understood here, for of Noach, Shem, &c. it is not credible: therefore was it noted before, that the one tongue might be understood of these conspirators which for that time was the same with the rest. (2) Their motion, in their journeying, &c. going forward, which may not be understood for their first motion from their Father; but Chams seed were sent before eastward, and Nimrod growing high among them; either the place was not enough, or not good enough, as they thought for them, therefore they remove.

3. The term of this motion from whence, it was from the east of Schinear, therefore it could not be now that these should come from their father supposed to be in Armenia, which seems Northwest to look unto Shinar. Where these pitched.

3. The event itself set forth in the terms unto which they come, of which we have recorded. (1) Their finding a fit place for themselves to pitch in, and they found a plain field or valley in the land of Shinar, that is by searching; inquiring, that is last came to the knowledge of this place, not without the providence of God ordering it to be the place of remarkable judgment as it was of sin: and thence afterward known to be the land of wickednes. This they found and chose and would have for their purpose. Babel. Cal.

2. Their sitting down, or pitching in it, expressed, and they sat down there, They dwelt, Sept. that is, there they pitched for for their fittest place to do their work; their undertakings do appear hereafter.

Ver. 3.

Take these notes hence.

D. 1. Motions of Gods enemies are and must be at his will.

D. 2. Wicked ones are unquiet and not at ease in their places, but still moving.

D. 3. All sensible convenienties flesh and blood will choose for its quiet.

D. 4. Wickednes finding a fit place for its purpose, sits down in it. Ver. 2.

3. The confederacy of these men in their resolutions and undertakings followeth.

Ver. 3. And they said a man to his fellow, goe to let us make bricks, or, let us bricke bricks, and let us burn them with a burning (or to) and bricke was to them for stone, and slime was to them for mortar. And a man said to his neighbor come let us &c. and let us boile them with fire, mud was to them, אֶפְסָלִים. Sep. Cald, much like, the seventy.

Ver. 4. And they said goe to, let us build for us a city, and a tower, and the head of it to the heavens, and let us make for us a name lest perhaps we be dispersed upon the faces of all the earth. Cald. to the same. Whose head shall be to heaven, &c. before we be dispersed from the face of all the earth. Sep.

In which verses we find them confederate in a double resolution, and undertaking.

1. Of preparation for the worke, wherein. (1) The confederats are mentioned and recorded. And a man said to his neighbor as Sep that is, every one of this Company under Nimrod, was calling to his fellow, encouraging each other to the worke: no more but these of this conspiracy are to be conceived here, such as have bin discovered before: even the posterity of Cham, &c.

2. Their mutual incitation of each other, goe to, Or come, as Septuagint. A word of encouragement to be stirring.

3. Their resolution to prepare for the work thus stated, Let us make bricks, and burn them to a burning, that is thoroughly; this resolution ariseth from deliberation, about the mean's of bringing about their intended worke, which is onely of providing materials thereunto. The reason of thus consulting & resolving about this mean's was the streight unto which they were put in this place, they had neither stone nor mortar to build withall. Yet they were not discouraged, but they pitch upon making what they could not find; with soile disposed, and fire, to make stone a hard worke, as we may guesse by what Israel found it in Egypt to labour in the brick kilns.

4. The event, bricke was to them for stone, and slime was to them for mortar That is by their industry and paines, which wickednes would not spare, so they provided these materials, stone and mortar were thus supplied. Slime is to conceive natural lime.

2. Of edification or building their worke, wherein observe.

1. Their mutual encouragement again Ver. 4. repeated. And they said, goe to, or come on, thus they stirre up each other, to the worke.

2. Their undertaking or worke itself wherein consider.

1. The matter of the worke, Let us build — It was a building, laying bricke on bricke.

2. The subject for whom, For our selves, self is all they aim at; they build not for God.

3. The form of this worke under two terms exprest.

1. A city even such a one as should be the metropolis of the world, wherein stately palaces and houses were to be raised; their fathers tents were now too bale for them.

ער measures.

מגדל

2. A tower, Some conceive it one; spoken for many, so Babilon was called Turrita Babilonia by reason thereof, but here some one eminent tower seemeth to be intended: eight towers one upon another.

4. The measure of this worke, And the head or top thereof in the heavens. that is, whose top, should touch the heavens; it is an hyperbolical speech of proud man, at which the Apostat Julian makes a jest. That it is a like fable to Homers of the giants, laying hill upon hill to fight with Jupiter, for saith he: if they had burnt all the earth into bricks, such a thing could not be built. But to stop his mouth, Moses relates not this as a thing done, but as a proud brag of ungodly wretches; neither can it be conceived as from them, but hyperbolical, where more is said, than was really intended. It notes a very high building, and no more. It is probable the Poets might feigne their fable of the giants warre from this, but therefore is not this a fable, as will appear.

5. The end of this work, which is two-fold exprest. Designing.

1. Their fame. And let us make to us a name. Declaring herein, that their end was not to pull God out of heaven, as the Poets feigne, which they could not think possible, but to exalt themselves above God in his Church below by their pride, insolency, and ambition. God had put the name upon the Church, Schem was their father, but these would now make Schem for themselves, that is, have a name to out reach that name; and to be exalted in the earth. Honour and renown on the earth is their aim. (2) Their security, lest we be dispersed over the faces of the whole earth. — They were afraid of dispersion, therefore they provide a place to keep them together, or at least a metropolis unto which they should belong. It was not then to save from another flood, for concerning that Gods covenant had secured them, but in fear of another judgment from which God had not exempted them, and that was dispersion, banishment, scattering upon the earth. How they should suspect this, is not expressed but probably conjectured, God by Noach and Schem, did threaten their growing wickedness, whereupon they thus resolve to frustrate Gods judgment, and secure themselves, though all in vaine.

Take these Notes from it.

- D. 1. Sinful Apostats are active in drawing each other to sin.*
D. 2. Wickednes is studious for means to effect its ends.
D. 3. No difficulties usually hinder sin from its undertakings.
D. 4. It is but bricke and slime wherewith wickednes builds. V. 3.
D. 5. Wicked ones are much incouraging one another to evil.
D. 6. Cities and towres, ornament, and strength, are sinners Trophies.
D. 7. Sins structure would be as high and stately as heaven.
D. 8. Sinners are ambitious of a name on earth.
D. 9. Dispersion is the evil which sinners fear.
D. 10. Sinners resolve to provide their own security against Gods judgments, by the works of their own hands. V. 4.

2. The second head in the first general is Gods pleading against the confederats, wherein, (1) His observation of their work is noted.

Ver. 5. And Jehovah came down to see the city, and the towre which the sonnes of Adam built. — sonnes of men, &c. Sept. — And the Lord appeared that he might take vengeance upon the works of the city, and the towre, which the sonnes of miserable men built. Cald.

In this discovery of Gods observation of them note.

1. Connection, which knits Gods act to theirs, they build, and then God comes. God is not farre behind, his providence followes close.
 2. The descendent Jehovah, he of whom these confederats were for their being, and to whom they should have bin in all their lives and operations; he hath their being in his hand, and can soon unmake them again.
 3. The motion, — He descended a motion in proper terms unsutable to God who filleth all places, but spoken after the manner of men for our weaknes sake; not strictly speaking what God doth, but what he appears to do, toward men, that conceive him to be above and not to minde what they do, or to be present among them; so that, he descended, is as much, as he appeared or shewed himself to be upon the earth among them & not a stranger to their works.
 4. The end of this descent, declared in what followeth, — To see the city and the towre which the sonnes of Adam built. Wherein.

1. The act aimed at. To see, which is spoken after the manner of men, for he needed not to come down to see, who is everywhere, knowing all things; but to meet with the stupid thoughts of them, who thought God had forsaken the earth, and that he minds not the works of men. Under that term of see is carried.

(1) Exact knowledge of their wayes.
 (2) Severe animadversion upon all their proud enterprises against God, so the Calde. The Lord appeared to take vengeance upon the worke, &c.

2. The object of this act. the city and towre, that is, not these alone, but the apostasy, rebellion, pride and wicked confederacy of Nimrod and his company expressed in these works, even all the iniquity annexed to those places of delight and defence, which were now in hand.

3. The subject employed about this worke, the sonnes of Adam, a title opposite as was noted to the sonnes of God. Chap. 6. 2. And declaring such as were apostat from God and his Church, under which name are declared to us.

1. The wickednes of these confederats, they were all sonnes of Adam Apostat, perishing, in his image. (2) The weaknes of them, they were but sonnes of the dust, who thus set themselves to build against God; Jehovah descends to take notice of these, who are not as the dust of the ballance before him.

Take these Notes hence.

- D. 1. Mens Apostasy and proud attempts are knit together with Gods visitation. Connect.*

D. 2.

- D. 2. God is below, when men think he hath forsaken the earth, and is neer to visit the wickednes of man.*
D. 3. Gods descents for vengeance sometimes upon sinners.
D. 4. God doth visit the beauty and strength of wickednes.
D. 5. The Apostat sonnes of Adam may build their fabricks to prevent Gods judgements.
D. 6. Jehovah will mark for vengeance the sonnes of wickednes and weaknes in all their buildings against him. Ver. 5.

2. Gods reasoning about them or derision of them, which followeth in the next Verse.

Ver. 6. And Jehovah said, behold the people is one, and one lip unto them all, and this their beginning to do, and now nothing will be cut of from them, which they have imagined to do. Cald. same. — Nothing will fail from them what ever they purposed to do. Sept. 135 110 11.

This is Gods reasoning and expostulation about these sonnes of men and their work which they had observed.

Wherein we may note.

1. The form of his reasoning. And Jehovah said. — That is, with himself, after the manner of men, he seems to consult, as after followeth.

2. The matter of it, which hath two heads. (1) His pointing at the grounds of this their enterprize. (1) Their unity in stocke, kindred, nature, disposition, behold the people are one in counsaile, will, purpose, desire and endeavour, every way united and conspiring joyntly to the work. (2) Their unity in lip or language, whereby they communicated their own counsaile to each other for strengthening their hands unto the worke. Thus he points out the main grounds on which they trusted to carry on their worke by unity of Spirits and speech. (2) His deriding of them. He was farre from fearing them, as Julian blasphemeth. All this speech following is ironical, such as was Gen. 3. Man is become, &c. Where he grants, (1) Their entrance — And this they begin to do, or is their beginning. So farre I have suffered them to goe, and thus farre they have done by their confederaty a poor work. (2) Their progress, as they intended foolishly for which God scorneth them, and now, &c. Nothing will be cut of from them which they have imagin'd to doe, all which speech is derisory, as if he should say, now these mighty ones make sure nothing shall be restrained from them, they will carry on their purpose, but vaine workers of iniquity, how are they befooled? I will laugh them to scorn. They will not leave a thought undone as they purpose and yet shall be able to performe nothing. Some read it positively as a charge of their obstinate proceeding against the counsaile of God to this sense; they willfully persist in their evil beginnings & will not be reclaimed: others read by way of interrogation, should not now all that they have imagined to do be cut off? so making it Gods consultation about their punishment. But if we keep to the letter the former sense seemeth more apposite, wherein God derides the confederaty of all these workers of iniquity.

And teacheth us.

- D. 1. God speaks as well as marks, the attempts of the ungodly to their reproach and confusion.*
D. 2. God points out the greatest advantages of violent workers of iniquity to scorn.
D. 3. Vnity of minds, resolutions, and communications, are the greatest props to wicked undertakers.
D. 4. Violent workers of iniquity presume to finish as well as begin: that nothing shall be withheld from them.
D. 5. Proud and presumptuous undertakings of men, are a scorn and derision to God. Ver. 6.

3. Gods resolution followeth.

Ver. 7. Goe to let us goe down and confound there their lip, that they may not hear a man the lip of his fellow. — Come; and descending let us confound their tongue that they may not hear every one the voice of his neighbour. Sept. — Let us appear, &c. Their tongue, &c. Cald.

Ver. 8. And Jehovah scattered them from thence upon the face of all the earth, and they ceased to build the city. — And towre. Sept. — They were hindered from building, &c. Cald.

In Gods resolution is observable the opposition of terms, to the confederats.

1. In their mutual encouragement, they say, goe to, come on; so God answers Ver. 7. them go to, come on now; God useth their term, to shew them their folly, and he so calles on himself, to make opposition to them.

2. In

2. In their work, they said let us make bricke and build, he saith, let us descend and confound their lip.

Wherein Note.

1. The number opposed, the sonnes of Adam were multitudes, to whom God opposeth his number. Let us, he speaks to his Equalls, therefore not to Angels nor creatures: like to that. Gen. 1. Let us make. Where Father, Son, and Spirit, so determine, yet but one Jehovah; as hereafter it is exprest singularly, Jehovah dispersed, which was the same that came downe. God one in being, and three in relation, these resolve upon the matter.

2. The work opposed, the sonnes of men resolve to make bricke and build. God resolves, Father Son and Spirit to come down and confound. These are but the means of infatuating the sonnes of men, and destroying their worke. Two acts are here. (1) Descending, which is not properly to be understood of God, who filleth Heaven and earth; but onely it notes his appearance to men, who thought him to rest carelessly alone. The Caldee hath it. Let us appear, &c. (2) Confounding their language, Let us confound their lip. Metonymically, their speech, where we have act and object considerable, and from both these several judgments.

1. An utter extirpation of all the notions, imaginations, phanly and memory of their former language or speech, that in a moment they were deprived of all possibility of former expressions, to make known their minds; and so it was, that every one was made incapable of directing or assisting another.

2. A various impression of new notions into mindes, and new utterance into mouthes, which made them Barbarians one to another.

3. An universal dissent, contention, and strife thereupon, among themselves, that they could not carry on their intended works. But each taking other to deride and abuse them were ready to seek revenge in a mutual destruction.

3. In their end, that they may not hear, any man the lip of his neighbour. Herein God opposeth himself to the sonnes of Adam. They aime at getting a name, and to prevent dispersion, God is resolved to make them that they shall not understand their own names, nor the speech of their neighbours, whom they had confederats. In which vindictive speech of God may be noted. (1) The evil inflicted, which stands in the privation.

1. Of hearing as is conceived, and the word beareth, they were smitten deaf that they could not hear.

2. Of understanding, that when they did hear they were farre from knowing what each other said, to give answer.

(2) The extent of this evil, it was upon every man in this confederacy: not a man could understand his neighbour, neither the Master builder the under builders, nor they him; all this is in order to their utter dispersion; which by their wicked attempt they laboured to prevent.

Some queries yet are here to be resolved.

1. Quest. It is inquired about the division of the lip or language into how many parts it was, or how many languages hence did arise?

Ans. It is averred by some ancients, that there were 72 languages, but upon no solid ground; others multiply them according to families; but without ground. The number therefore is uncertain, but this is clear that the judgment was upon every man, that none could understand his neighbour. It is more than probable that the languages now in being were from that time.

2. Quest. How was this division of tongues a curse, when under the Gospel it is a blessing?

Ans. Variety of language in itself and simply considered is not a curse, but respectively either to the principle whence it comes, or to the end whereunto it is intended, which are twofold.

1. The wrath of God is the principle of the confusion of language unto dispersion, when none could understand his fellow.

2. The Spirit of Gods love is the author of that variety of tongues which is a blessing and it is so ex hypothesi, their being a diversitie before, not otherwise again, for the end, it will appear.

1. Confusion and dispersion is the end of that division which is a judgment, they are driven by this means from God and his Church.

2. Collection unto the body of Christ, and to God in it is the end of the other, so that by this the Spirit makes all to know the great things of God, and to be of one heart to him and so speak the language of Canaan. Isaiah. 19. 18.

Take these notes hence.

D. 1. God counterworks the incongruities of wicked rebels against himself.

D. 2. There is a plurality of relations in God. Let us descend, &c.

D. 3. Gods consultations and resolutions against his enemies are with himself.

D. 4. God resolves to appear against the attempts of wicked rebels, when they think him farre off.

D. 5. Confusion of speech is Gods just vengeance upon the abuse of it.

D. 6. Confounding soules by division of of tongues, is Gods Curse upon the wicked. Isaiah. 28. 11. V. 7.

4. Gods execution of his judgement upon this confederacy. Verse 8. In which are these terms considerable;

1. The executioner, Jehovah himself he who wanted no strength nor wisdom.

2. The execution connected thus recorded, He scattered or dispersed them, which act must be distinguished to gather the truth, dispersion therefore is double. (1) Of mercy, seating every family in its place, for their well-being, which was done to all these families before this time.

2. Of judgment as in this place, which carrieth.

1. Division of mindes and hearts against each other.

2. Division of tongues, to mutual provocation.

3. Division of carriage, and demeanour, every mans hand being against his neighbour at this time, and so driving one another to their several places of refuge.

3. The term from whence of this dispersion declared to be, from thence; that is, the place where they resolved to secure themselves against all dispersion whatsoever. So they said let us build a city and a towre, that we may not be scattered, yet from thence they were dispersed.

4. The term whereunto of this dispersion. Upon the face of all the earth. Large is the compasse of this execution, every one driving his fellow from him to seek now an habitation in the utmost parts of the earth.

5. The effect of this confusion of tongues. And they ceased to build the city.

Here is the frustration of their counsel and an end of their worke, in the confusion of their language, and opposition of every one to their neighbour, they beat one another from the worke; so that, they who where resolved to build were the main hinderers one of another and would not suffer the worke to be finished.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. Gods execution of vengeance falleth soon after his resolution, from connection.

D. 2. Jehovah will be the executioner of his own sentence on the wicked.

D. 3. It's Gods worke to set confederats against each other, who conspire against him.

D. 4. The place of sin may sometimes prove the place of vengeance. So here.

D. 5. Sinners consultations to strengthen themselves in one place, may end in an universal dispersion.

D. 6. The earth is overspread with sinners against God, by his judgment taken on them.

D. 7. The strongest counsailes of sin will be frustrated by God.

D. 8. High resolutions of sinners fall short of all their ends. V. 8.

5. The close of this inserted history is the memorial of this stroke of vengeance, which God sets up in a new name upon the place, as followeth.

Ver. 9. Therefore he called the name of it Babel, because there Jehovah confounded the lip of all the earth, and thence Jehovah scattered them upon the face of all the earth.

For this cause the name of it is called, confusion, &c. בלבול. Sept. Cald. to fame.

In these is storied the way of Gods perpetuating the memory both of their sin & his vengeance by setting a name upon this place, which should be notorious to the ends of the earth for ever, wherein we have to note.

1. The imposer, He, doubtles Jehovah primitively, however he made use of any to publish it; he alone which worketh all things after his own will, and nameth all in truth after his own mind; so he maketh it to be what he nameth it. Whether good or evil. It is no vain title.

2. The name imposed Babel, confusion as the Sept. but it is a compound and carrieth more; confusion is come, as it did upon the mindes, tongues, persons, and worke of these conspirators, wherein are worthy of observation.

1. The just return made by God upon their designe, they were resolved to make themselves a name, but they meant of honour and renown, perhaps to put some of their own upon the city and towre; or els to stile it by some magnificent title among men; But God giveth them a name of eternall ignominy and contempt; nothing but a confounded place and people.

2. The use of it, which is twofold. (1) Historical, to brand wickednes past, with the dismal effect of it to the worlds end. (2) Prophetical, to set out the bale condition of succeeding Apostates from the Church and enemies to it, both under the law as the eastern Babel. Isai. 13. 1. And under the Gospel, the western Babel, which is therefore called mystical Babel. Revel. 17. Revel. 18. Upon R 3 Whom whom God by this name hath poured out a curse, foretelling in it their everlasting confusion.

מך

3. The imposition, he calleth it — It notes, (1) A real act of branding them, if God say it, none can hinder, its no matter how men call it. (2) An eternal brand, not to be taken off, the name shall never be changed.

על כן

4. The reason of this imposition, expressed, (1) Ilatively, therefore — which referreth to the execution before, (2) Positively in two parts of the judgment.

1. Because there Jehovah confounded the lip of all the earth, that is, the language of those conspirators on earth.

2. Because from thence Jehovah scattered them upon the face of the earth, so division and confusion was come upon them from the hand of God, therefore 'did he brand it with that name Babel, that is confusion is come.

Take these Notes from it.

D. 1. God is the onely imposer of reproach on sinners; whom he brands is branded.

D. 2. Wicked Apostats may aim at a name of renown, but God sets a name of reproach on them.

D. 3. Gods act of vengeance. God sometimes keep's in remembrance by names of vengeance on men, and their places.

D. 4. Babel is a name Trophetical upon the grand Apostacy of Anti-Christ under the Gospel.

D. 5. The name of contempt which God calleth is set on fully, and for ever.

D. 6. Apostats sin and Gods vengeance are a full ground of their eternal name of reproach. Ver. 9.

The second general of this Chapter now followeth which is the line of the Church, describing the genealogies from Schem to Abraham, of which this order may be observed.

1. The line of Schem is delivered unto the issue of Terach, ver. 10. 26. wherein ten descents are considerable, (1) Arphaxad, &c.

2. The line of Terach in special with some special record of Gods providences towards his Church, in the motion of Terach and Abram which lead's to the history of Gods covenanting with Abram in the behalf of his Church.

1. The line from Schem hath 10 Generations; the first followeth in the two next verses.

Ver. 10. These are the generations of Schem, Schem was the son of 100 years, and he begat Arphaxschad two years after the flood. Cald. same. — When he begat, &c. Sept.

Ver. 11. And Schem lived after he begat Arphaxschad 500 years, and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. same. — And he died. Sept.

In which first genealogy we have to observe.

1. The general title of it expressed thus, These are the generations of Schem, of these Moses was speaking Chap. 10. So farre as Pelcg, whose name being given him upon the occasion of dividing the earth; by way of parenthesis, he includes the history of the cause & mean's of this earth's division, in the former part of this Chapter. And that being dispatched, he now return's to draw up the line full unto Abram about which this title is set in the front, wherein consider.

Ver. 10.

1. The nature of the things recorded, generations girms Sept. the term is active, noting these issues as begotten by Schem, and sent out of his thigh; yet passively taken in respect of the sonnes.

2. The speciality of this matter in that restrictive term, these, as if he should say, I have touched upon the lines of Schem before both direct and collateral, but now to leave them, these are the generations of Schem in a direct line, pointing out the right seed among whom the Church was continued on earth.

3. The fountain of these issues. Schem His name God makes famous in his Church and from him alone is the right line reckoned.

4. The use of all these mentioned in the title. (1) To point out where the Church of God was after the flood, (2) To shew Gods providence in singling out some generations in the world for his Church. These and not others.

(3) To make known to us the state of the Church either for truth, or for corruption at this time.

(4) To continue to us the right chronology of the world, not for speculation onely, but for pious practise to us. Upon whom the ends of the world are come.

5. To make us better to understand some passages of the Prophets mentioning these persons or their conditions, (6) To shew us the true line of Christ, and to confirm the new Testament given by him.

2. After the title is mentioned the first race wherein we may note.

1. The Father pointed at by his age: He was the sonne of 100 years

This notes, what was said before that he was born in the 502 year of Noah, of such full age was he at his birth.

Ver. 10.

2. The issue, he begat Arphaxschad, this this sonne in the right line therefore is he named.

3. The time of this issue two years after the flood. — The second year after the flood. Sept. Upon which is mooved a question, seeing two sonnes Elam and Ashur are named before him Chap. 10. 22. Quest: How could he be born the second year?

Answ. It is answered, the scripture doth not alwayes reckon according to nativity, therefore this might be elder than either of them. (2) Neither is it dissonant to reason, that within that time he might have three sonnes. But Arphaxschad seems to be the eldest by the next verse; and then no scruple need be at all.

Ver. 11.

4. The term of Schems life, 500 years after this sonnes birth, so that 600 years was his full age, which reacheth to the 50th year of Isaacs life, so long God continued him a witness of his glorious name and works and Covenant in his Church.

5. The rest of his issue after this son, he begat sonnes and daughter, they are not named, but probably all the children he had was after this son; which resolveth best the former doubt.

Take these Notes hence.

D. 1. Gods providence hath pointed out his Church and recorded its line, after as before the flood; heretn helping the faith of following ages.

D. 2. God chooseth what generations and families he pleaseth to pitch his Church in them.

D. 3. A family God may choose out of the World to set his name upon them, when the World is passed by, a few or little remnant God reserveth.

D. 4. Every generation in the Church from the flood is but to bring Christ nearer.

D. 5. Times are appointed for the birth of every one in the Church for his work. V. 10.

D. 6. Length of dayes, &c. God giveth to his chief witnesses, as Schem was to Isaac's dayes, much worke he had to do in that compass of time.

D. 7. The eminentest in the Church, may have many children degenerate from it. More care should be used to keep them closer to God. Ver. 11.

2. The second issue or birth is thus declared. Ver. 12.

Ver. 12. And Arphaxschad lived five and thirty years, and begat Shalach. Cald. same. — And Arphaxad lived 135 years, and begat Cainan. Sept.

Ver. 13. And Arphaxschad lived after he begat Shalach three years and 400 years, and begat sonnes and daughters. Ver. 13.

Cald. Same. — 430 years, &c. And he died. Sept.

In this generation are related, (1) The Father Arphaxschad, with his age at the birth of this Son. 35 years, not much above the third part of his father Schems age at his birth; it is the first memorable abbreviation of the time of generation, carrying in the issue a shortning of life also. (2) The son or seed in whom the Church was continued Shalach. (3) The number of the years of life, afterward he lived 403 years, so that the whole of his life was 438 years, which reached to the 2096 year of the world, 440 after the flood, he continued unto the 88 year of Abraham. (4) His multiplied issue of sonnes and daughters, within this compass.

Quest. One difficulty desirib answer, how can this line and that of Luke be reconciled, which makes Kainan the son of Arphaxad and father of Shalach?

Answ. 1. It may not be yeelded that either Moses, or the Euangelist were mistaken.

2. The 70 Interpreters who reckon Kainan, are not right in the genealogies.

3. The Hebrew record here and 1 Chron. 1. 18. 19. 24. do agree Shalach to be the seed.

4. An ancient copy of the Greek, as Bexa faith, hath not Kainan; so that, it is thought an error crept in of latter time; some of our latter English also not mentioning it, as is testified.

Take some Observations from it.

D. 1. Speed to generation, and shortnes of life come in together. Ver. 12.

D. 2. The seed of the Church comes in singly not by troops.

D. 3. Gods special hand, not mans generation, points out the seed of his Church. V. 13.

3. The next generation followeth. Ver. 14.

Ver. 14. And Shalach lived 30 years and begat Geber. Cald. Same. — And Kainan lived 130 years and begat Sala. And Kainan lived after he begat Sala 330 years, years, and begat sonnes and daughters, and died, And Sala lived 130 years and begat Eber. Sept.

Ver. 15. Ver. 15. And Shelaeh lived after he begat Yeber three years, and 400 years, and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. fame. — 330 years and he died. Sep.

In this the same particulars are observable, neither is there dissent about the names or persons onely for as much as the Spirit intitleth this Son more nobly to the Church stiling them the children of Yeber, he saw Isaac. 18 years.

From it note.

D. In the very line of the Church the Spirit of God honoureth one above another. The Church is not called by the name of Selah, but Heber. V. 15.

Ver. 16. 4. The fourth progeny followeth thus. Ver. 16. And Yeber lived 34 years and begat Peleg. Cald. fame. — 134 years. Sep.

Ver. 17. Ver. 17. And Yeber lived after he begat Peleg 30 and 400 years, and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. fame. — 370 years and died. Sep.

The like particulars may be noted here, this Heber continued, to the 19th year of Jacob after Schem, 29 years, of the World. An. 2187.

Note.

D. Eminent Saints have kept eminent remembrance of Gods glorious works of judgement on the World and mercy to his Church, therefore he called his son Peleg, as we read, Chap. 10. v. 25. Ver. 16, 17.

The fifth issue is thus described.

Ver. 18. And Peleg lived 30 years, and begat Regu. Cald. fame. — 134 years. Sep.

Ver. 19. And Peleg lived, after he begat Regu nine years and 200 years and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. fame. — and died. Sep.

This reached in life not beyond the 18th year of Abraham, in him are set out, confusion of tongues, division of the earth, and brevity of life in respect of others.

Note.

D. Some instruments in the Church as God makes them monuments of his works, so he cuts them shorter in their time.

The sixth progeny followeth, Ver. 20. And Regu lived two and 30 years Ver. 20. and begat Serug. Cald. fame. — 132 Sept.

Ver. 21. And Regu lived after he begat Serug 7 years and 200 years and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. fame. — and died. Sep.

This reached to the 44th of Abraham, no more is mentioned of this father and son, but in this place; in whom yet the Church continued.

The seventh progeny is thus related.

Ver. 22. And Serug lived 30 years and begat Nachor. Cald. fame. — 130 years. Sep.

Ver. 23. And Serug lived after he begat Nachor 200 years and begat sonnes & daughters. Cald. fame. — And died. Sept.

No more of this is recorded, than the continuation of the Church. He reached to the 71 year of Abraham before he was called out of Charan.

The eighth generation from Schem.

Ver. 24. And Nachor lived 29 years and begat Terach. Cald. fame. — 479 years. Sep.

Ver. 25. And Nachor lived after he begat Terach 19 years and 100 years, and begat sonnes and daughters. Cald. fame — 125. and died. Sep.

Of this Nachor the eighth from Schem, we have not any thing to note but the shortness of his dayes, who died before Noah 8 years, before Schem. 161, before Abraham was born. 11 years.

Ver. 26. And Terach lived 70 years and begat Abram, Nachor, and Haran. Cald. and Sept. fame.

So farre the line bringeth us to Abram the tenth from Schem: Concerning which generation, the Spirit hath more to discover, therefore he beginnes a new upon it, at the next verse, the difficulties about the orders of these sonnes will be remooved in opening the following history of them.

2. The line of Terach is more exactly described, to bring us certainly to find Gods true Church and his covenant to it in Abraham. Wherein we have observable;

1. The line drawn out, ver. 27.
2. The death of Haran. ver. 28.
3. The marriage of Abram and Nachor. ver. 29.
4. The barrenness of Sarai. ver. 30.
5. The remooval of Terachs family. ver. 31.
6. The death of Terach. ver. 32.

1. The line is thus drawn out.

Ver. 27. And these are the generations of Terach; Terach begat Abram, Nachor and Haran, and Haran begat Lot. Sep and Cald. fame.

Wherein we have considerable. (1) The title of this genealogie. That is, the description of those births or issues which Terach Terach begat. The demonstrative particle (these) sheweth the certainty of the Churches line, that we might not be to seek, and that among Abrahams feed. From this title Luther begin's the third great section of this book. The first was from Adam to Noah. (2) From Noah to Abram. (3) From Abram forward; and indeed the title seems to begin a new paragraph. Calvin Thinks at the 31th verse should begin the history of Abram; and the 12th Chapter Junius draweth into this Chapter 3 verses of the next & so marketh the Chapter 12th to begin at the 4. ver. of the next Chapter as our translators have set it. Yet indeed by this title, it seemeth most proper that the history of the Church in Abram beginneth here; and that the next Chapter may take its beginning from this also.

2. The line thus farre described is but unto two generations.

1. Of Terach, Terach begat Abram, Nachor, and Haran, in which the Spirit briefly giveth the history of three sonnes together, whence some difficulty ariseth of the order of the age.

Quest. 1. Whether Abram were the first born?

Ans. No, but is onely named in priority of dignity as Schem was before Jephth the elder brother. These arguments may prove Abraham not to be the eldest.

1. He was 75 years old when he went from Charan, which was upon his Fathers death, at which time his Father was of 205 years, out of which take Abrahams age, and it appears he was born in the 130th year of his Father Terach, and not in the 70th year as some have gathered from verse. 26. After the flood 352. After the creation 2008.

Quest. How shall that be understood then, that he begat these sonnes in the 70th year?

Ans. Surely he began to beget, and Haran was born in that year, and the rest afterward. As also hath bin noted the same form of speech before concerning Noahs begetting Schem, Cham, and Jephth. Gen. 5. 32.

2. It is expresse that Abram was but 10 years older than Sarai his wife Gen. 17. 17. Now if she had bin the daughter of a younger brother, shee had neer as many years as her Father; which may not be granted; to conceive her to be a daughter in law to Haran is not grounded upon solid reason.

Luther supposeth Abram to be the eldest son born in the 70th of Terach, and therefore by the numeration, Gen. 12. 4. findeth 60 years wanting, which may easily be satisfied, considering that Abram was not the eldest, but born in the 130 year of his Father; and so no time will be wanting. Concerning the state of the Church among these, we shall consider in the following history.

2. The next descent here recorded is of Haran Terachs eldest son. And Haran begat Lot. Of which the Spirit speaketh briefly, because of his death before the rest, and his seed also was numbred in the Church, as we see Lot goeth along with his uncle Abraham, &c.

From these we may observe.

D. 1. God hath made from of old a punctual demonstration of his Church, and its line.

D. 2. Short and obscure expressions must receive light in genealogies from larger and more full expressions which God hath made of them.

D. 3. Small hath the line of the Church been, from the beginning in comparison of the line of the World. Ver. 27.

2 The death of the eldest son is related. Ver. 28. And Haran died in the sight of Terach his Father, in the land of his nativity, in Ur of the Caldees. In the land of the Caldeans. Sept. There his Father being alive, &c. Cald.

Wherein we have related.

1. His death, and Haran died. As for any violent death, as the Jewes fable it, that he should be thrown into the fire by the Caldees for not worshipping their Ur, it is groundles; as that Abram also was thrown in and was delivered by faith.

2. The time of it indefinitely expressed, in the sight of Terach. That is, his Father seeing his end, and surviving it.

3. The place of his death, in Ur of the Caldees. Wherein, (1) The place is noted by his birth, it was where he was born, the land of his nativity, not in transmigration. (2) It is set out by the name of the place and people, Ur of the Caldees. Some take it for the name of a city or town. Sept. takes it for a region or country, so Luke call's it the land of the Caldeans. Act. 7. 4.

It may note both country more general, and place more special, for of place it must be understood.

Note from it.

D. 1. God sometimes cuts off the younger seed of his Church before their Fathers.

D. 2. Providence ordaineth the land of nativity to some, to be the place of their expting, or death.

D. 3. The children of the Church may sometimes fall amidst the place of its enemies. Ver. 28.

3. The next thing related is the marriage of Abram and Nachor.

Ver. 29. And Abram took, and Nachor to themselves wives, the name of Abrams wife Sarai, and the name of Nachors wife Milcah, the daughter of Haran being the Father of Milcah, and Father of Isaac. Cald. to same. And Abram and Nachor took, &c. and he the Father of Melcha, &c. Sept.

4. Join to this that which is storied of Sarai. In the next.

Ver. 30. And Sarai was barren, there was not into her a child. Cald. same. She did not bring forth children. Sept.

(1) In the history of this marriage we read. (1) The parties marrying, the two younger sonnes of Terach. Aram and Nachor, for it is unlikely they should marry the youngest Brothers Daughters, as followeth. (2) The parties married, described here.

1. By name Sarai the name of Abrams wife, Milcah the name of Nachors.

2. By relation; they were the Daughters of Haran their Brother. So is Milcah called. The Daughter of Haran; and he siled again the Father of Milcah, and the Father of Isaac, which is Sarai; she having a double name as interpreters both Jewish, and Christian do conceive; Daughter is to be added to Sarai, as to Milcah who is siled Terachs Daughter in law. Ver. 31.

3. The marriage itself they took into them wives. Abram, &c. That is in an orderly way, and according to the appointment of God; by free consent and Covenant to become one flesh.

Quest. Was such marriage of Brothers Daughters lawful?

Ans. 1. From Adam to Noah, and from Noah to Moses, marriage in such relations was lawful, & in neerer somtimes for necessities sake, because there were no other. (2) Such neer relations were afterward prohibited by the positive law of God, however this in the letter is not named. Lev. 18. 14.

Yet teacheth us.

- D. 1. Marriage hath bin the way of propagating Gods Church.
- D. 2. Holy men of God have bin careful of marrying within the Church; the ground of marriage so neer in their own family.
- D. 3. The degrees of it depend upon Gods positive Law. Ver. 29.

2. In the history of Sarai's condition.
1. The subject spoken of Sarai. She that was to be the mother of the Church; of whom purposely the Spirit writeth this which followeth, to shew forth the power of God.

2. The condition spoken of her under two exprellions. (1) She was barren. That is, naturally she was so, and that from her youth and first marriage, the fitter object for God to work upon by his power.

2. To her was no child. That is, hitherto she had no child, when she was now taking her journey with her husband and Grand-father, called also her Father, as the custome of the Jewes was. Here is no mention yet of Abrams feed.

Note from it.

D. 1. Barrennes of the wombe may be the trial of the choicest members of the Church.

D. 2. Barrennes of the womb in Gods dearest ones may turn much to his praise.

D. 3. God records the trials of his Saints, not for their reproach, but for his own glory. V. 30.

5. Terachs transmigration followeth.

Ver. 31. And Terach took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran his sonnes son, and Sarai his daughter in law, his son Abrams wife; and they went forth with them from Ur of the Caldees to goe forward into the land of Kenayan, and they came unto Charan and dwelt there, save down. And they went out together, &c. Cal. And he led them out of the country of the Caldeans. &c. Sept. In which history these particulars are considerable. (1) The leader in this journey expresse.

And Terach took.

Quest. But why takes he such a journey? Ans. Some say because the seed of Nimrod persecuted him for not worshipping their Gods, the fire, called Ur. Others, because they burnt his Son Haran, which are but fables, we have a more sure word to guide us.

1. It is evident, the God of glory appeared unto Abram in Mesopotamia act. 7. 2. Now doubtles Abram made known this to his father, and hereupon remooves, and for his place is set as leader to the rest.

2. It is recorded, that in Caldea they worshipped strange Gods, and doubtles this call of God to Abram, was mainly to separate them from such corruption, as may be gathered from Joshua. 24. 2. 3.

2. The companions in this journey. Abram, Lot and Sarai. But these are not to be understood exclusively, as if no more were with them, for doubtles their servants and family went also with them. Here Sarai is called the daughter in law to to Terach being Abrams wife — his daughter by espousals, as she was his grand Child by her father, these eminently are named, whom God separat's for his Church.

Quest. Why not Nachor with them?

Ans. 1. Gods providence was in it. (2) Probably God kept him there as a witness. (3) Possibly he did love more his own country.

3. Their motion, wherein are expresse. (1) Their entrance on their journey, they went forth with them, or together by faith. Heb. 11. 8. (2) The term from whence from Ur of the Caldees, a place corrupted with idolatries, and irreligion. (3) The end of their journey proposed to go into the land of Kenayan, this the term whereunto propounded, and whether they were called.

(4) The stop which mett them in the way for a time. They came unto Charan and sat down there. What the reason was of their stop is not recorded, though probably it was either Terachs age or sickness, for there we see he died, neither is the time of abode there certainly known, but it seems some years were spent there, where Abram and Lot did increase their substance.

Ver. 31.

Some observations arise hence.

D. 1. God may make known his mind by the child unto the father; and call it before him. Acts. 7. 2.

D. 2. By revelation to a son, God may make parents willing to obey his call.

D. 3. The Spirit giveth honour to parents, as leaders, when they follow the call of grace.

D. 4. God points out by name such as he separat's for his Church.

D. 5. Faith puts all believers upon motion, when God calls them even from their Native country.

D. 6. Faith in God makes haste to depart from polluted places.

D. 7. Faith intends to goe as farre as God calleth the soul.

D. 8. God makes stops somtimes in the way of believers, to make them sit down short. V. 31. So to Moses. &c.

The sixth and last thing touched in this history is Terachs death.

Ver. 32. And the dayes of Terach were 5 years and 200, and Terach died in Charan. And the dayes of Thara in the land of Charan were 205 years, &c. Sep. Cald. Same with Hebr. Two things are recorded here.

1. The term of Terachs life. 205 years, which though the seventy do add in the land of Charan, it is not to be meant; that he lived all those dayes there, but that they contained the whole number of his dayes, he dying there; he lived longer than his Father Nachor, or his Son Abram.

2. The end of it, he died in Charan. An. Mundi, 2083; of the flood, 427: of Abram, 75.

This teacheth us

D. 1. The number of dayes are set by God for his, according to their work appointed.

D. 2. Time and place are appointed to dye as to be borne in; it is good to be ready in every place.

D. 3. The time and end of life to the Saints are recorded for our instruction. V. 32.

CHAP. XII.

It pleaseth some to begin this chapter at the 31th verse of the former; the history of Abrams call, seeming to begin there; but upon that account, it should rather begin at the 27th. Others add the three former verses of this unto the former Chapter, as belonging to the call of Abram, and begin this 12th chapter at the fourth verse, For The old division of the Hebrewes, by three characteristical letters. DDD make here the third great Parable or section of the law to begin. The matter is not of great moment, so long as the true dependance of the history is made known, I shall therefore keep to the order of our Translators, beginning the chapter as they doe.

Now in this chapter beginning here, these three general heads are considerable.

1. Gods call to Abram expresse. Ver.

1. 2. 3. 2. Abrams obedience in egress and progress. Ver. 4. 9.

3. Abrams journeying to Egypt with its events. Ver. 10. 20.

The first general is laid down, in the three first verses, which follow. Wherein note.

1. The call given from God. Ver. 1.

2. The encouragement in a seven-fold promise, following, ver. 2. 3.

Ver. 1. And Jehovah said to Abram, get thee up for thy self, from thy land, and from thy thy kindred, and from thy fathers house, to the land which I will make thee see, Cald. fame. Which I shall shew to thee. Sep.

Ver. 2. And I will make thee to a great nation, and I will bless thee, and I will magnify thy name, and thou shalt be, or be thou a blessing. Sep. and Cal. to fame.

Ver. 3. And I will bless them that bless thee, and I will curse them that curse thee, and all the families of the ground shall be blessed in thee, Sep. and Cald. to fame.

In which description of Abrams call.

Ver. 1.

1. The person calling, Jehovah, — And Jehovah said, but how spake he? Mediatly by another, so some think, that God called him by Schem, but it is groundless. Luth. It is by the letter, and other following expressions more clear, that God spake now immediatly to him as at other times. The calling was divine for its principle, the God of glory. Act. 7. 2.

2. The person called, Abram, a man, while he lived in Ur of the Caldees, not recorded for any eminency of piety, but concurring in the corrupt way of religion with his fathers house, no way more worthy than any other, that God should look upon him: until grace had separated him; and thereby he is filled the friend of God. Hail. 41. 2. 8. Hail. 51. 2.

3. The time of this call; it is related in the time past, he said, but when said God this? was it now in Charan after his father was dead or was it in Ur of the Caldees, before Terach removed thence? With respect unto the context foregoing, it giveth the reason of their first motion, and therefore must then be before their coming out of Ur of the Caldees; and we read not of a second call, as some presume that God called him again out of Charan, after his fathers death. But it should seem that Abram now removed in the strength of the first call. It is well read, God had said to Abram, that is, formerly in Ur, and by an Hyperostis usual with the Hebrews in this history, it is here afterwards related, when they were come so far as Charan.

4. The Call itself; wherein are obvious.

לה לה

1. The motion commanded, expressed thus, goe for thy self, ours read no more but goe thou; yet it is emphatical, as if he should say, though no body should goe with thee, yet goe thou by thy self, thou art the man, that I have set my eye upon, and my command is upon thee, be sure, goe thou.

2. The term from whence in three expressions set forth.

1. From thy own land which was Ur of the Caldees, the land of his nativity. Chap. 11. 28.

2. From thy kindred: That is, from those that came out of the same loines, and womb with him, naturally dear to him, only all corrupted from the pitty of God.

3. From thy Fathers house, — That is, from all his near relations, privileges, and dearest enjoyments by nature.

3. The term whereunto, paraphrased thus, — To the land which I shall shew thee, or make thee see, although thou knowest not where it is. About the place whereunto he is called to goe, these conditions are obvious.

1. It is not named in the call, however, it is in their progresse called Kenaan.

2. It was altogether unknown to Abram, that sense could not encourage him to obedience, but faith only upon Gods call. Heb. 11. 8.

3. It was a place of Gods discovery, it is the land which I will make thee see; which notes. (1) It was of Gods providing. (2) That it must be good from God. (3) That it should be made visible to Abram however for present, his faith only could see it, in Gods word.

These Notes may be here observed.

D. 1. In divine history the Spirit relates sometimes that last, which in order is first.

D. 2. Jehovah the God of glory is only he whose word must sway the hearts of his creatures.

D. 3. Spectal and singular is the call of God in gathering his Church. It was to Abram.

D. 4. Free and effectual is Gods call without mans desert or help. As of Abram.

D. 5. Gods call, is for separation from corruption, in setting his Church.

D. 6. Country, kindred, and dearest relations with enjoyments must be left, when God calls to it.

D. 7. Faith moveth the soule of Gods call when it hath no sense of any advantage, but rather of great disadvantage.

D. 8. Gods providence and discovery will not let his call be to the hurt of believers. Ver. 10.

2. Now followeth the encouragement which God giveth to Abram in a multiplied promise.

Ver. 2. 3. As it is read before.

In which promise of encouragement concur these seven particulars observable, 1. — And I will make thee into a great nation. At

Ver. 2.

At this time in Ur of the Caldees he was childless and Sarah barren, now when God calleth him thence, it is as much as if God should say. Depart from this place, here thou shalt have no children, but when thou art come whither I call thee, I will open Sarais womb, and make thee by thy posterity to a great Nation, the very same word is used, whereby the gentiles are usually called in the Prophets, and which the Jewes accounted an odious name, but under it they must come if they be Abrams seed: collateral lines Abram had, by Hagar and Keturah, but the line by Sarai is that which is of promise; and therefore he speaks not of nations but of one mighty nation, which was Israel.

2. — And I will bless thee, Gods blessing is the effectual working and bestowing of some special good, either temporal or spiritual, both kinds are here included. It comprehends the extent of all Gods Covenant, his special love, and all the good fruits of it both for this life, and that which is to come. Gal. 3. 7.

3. — And I will magnify or make thy name great. This concerns his name; because being called from his own, he might justly fear disrespect among strangers; God encourageth him by this, that he will make his name famous, that is, for piety, virtue, goodness, power and prowess; it contains.

1. A greatening of all good, which is the ground of true honor and respect among the best.

2. A greatening of the fame, & report of all this in the eares of the inhabitants of the earth. Now this was effected both in Abrams person, and in his seed which is specially intended. And such a good and great name is a precious ornament, a sweet blessing. Eccl. 12. 7. 3. Pro. 22. 1.

4. — And be thou a blessing. Or thou shalt be. Sept.

This blessing may be taken. (1) Actively, that he should give blessing unto others. 2. Passively, that he should be blessed. So Sept. In it is an addition to former promises, that is of certainty, upon Gods command. Ps. 123. 5. 6. Ps. 133. 3.

5. — And I will bless them that bless thee, O I

Here is a further encouragement, that God will be a friend to Abrams friends, such is the gracious dignation of God toward his poor servants in Covenant with him.

6. — And I will curse them that curse thee. See more of Gods goodness to his called one, God is in league for the offensive part, to be an enemy also to his enemies, two words are here used. (1) That upon the enemies part, — Signifieth to set light by, and so to vilify or reproach, which God takes notice of, to judge. (2) The word upon Gods part, — Is to curse unto perdition; so much is God incensed against the enemies of his covenanted ones.

Ver. 3. — And I will curse them that curse thee, O I

7. — And in thee shall all the families of the ground be blessed. (1) The subject here, all families of the ground or earth, notes all sorts of people or nations. (2) The good promised, shall be blessed, that is, doubtless, with all spiritual blessings the ground of all other good, this is Gospel blessing, as the Apostle interprets. (3) The means, in thee, that is, by him, as the Father of the promised seed, but indeed in Christ which is the seed itself is the blessing conferred on poor sinners. So that here the Gospel is preached to Abraham for his encouragement. Gal. 3. 8. &c. And this, 430 years before the Law given by Moses, therefore not to be disannulled by any dispensation therein.

We may Note from it.

D. 1. God indulgeth and encourageth his called to obedience as well as commands them. Generally from the blessing annexed.

D. 2. The solitary and childless, will God make to abound in seed, being obedient to his call.

D. 3. The Gentiles by Gods word of promise are given to Abram as his seed.

D. 4. All blessing spiritual and temporal is given to Abram, and his seed in the way of obedience to God.

D. 5. Greatness and excellency of name God will give to his despised ones, obeying his call.

D. 6. God makes sure his blessing to his called, and makes them a blessing to others also. Ver. 2.

D. 7. God will surely be a friend to bless all the friends of his Church and people.

D. 8. God will surely be an enemy to curse all the enemies of his called. Numb. 24. 9.

D. 9. The Gospel was truly given to Abram 430 years before the Law. Gal. 3. 17.

D. 10. By that Gospel all men on earth must now be blessed. V. 3.

The second general is Abrams obedience unto this call of God, which is recorded, ver. 4. 9. Wherein these passages are related.

1. His egress from Charan to Canaan, ver. 4, 5.
2. His progress in Canaan afterward, ver. 6, 9.
The former is thus reported by Moses.

Ver. 4. And Abram walked, went, or departed even as Jehovah had spoken to him, and Lot went with him, and Abram was the son of 5 years and of 70 years in his going out of Charan. — וְאַבְרָם הָיָה בֶּן חָמֵשׁ שָׁנִים וְבֶן שִׁבְעִים שָׁנִים בְּצֵאתוֹ מִכַּרְחָן. Sept. Cald. same.

Ver. 5. And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance which they had gathered, and the soul which they had made in Charan, and they went out to go into the Land of Canaan, and they entered into the Land of Canaan. And every soul which they possessed, &c. Sept. — וְכָל נַפְשׁוֹ שֶׁהָיְתָה לָהֶם בְּכַרְחָן. All the souls which they had subjected to the Law in Charan, &c. Cald.

Ver. 4.

In which passage, these particulars occur. (1) Abrams motion, he walked: that is, he left Charan, and took his journey and walked and went forward, as formerly purposed, only remember this was in faith. (2) The rule of his motion expressed to be, — As Jehovah had spoken to him, not here in Charan, but before in Ur of the Chaldees; for no more but one call from God, do Moses and Stephen relate; that word of God now Abram observes; his father being dead, to steer his motion forward with one companion named afterward. (3) His age, now when he departed from Charan, 75 years old, or the son of 75 years he was, that is in the 75th year of his age, which clearth up the doubt of being Terahs Eldest son, as before hath bin noted, it could not be he, for he was born in the 130th year of Terah, Anno mundi 2083.

Ver. 5.

(4) His company and carriage in his journey. (1) Sarai his wife, (2) Lot his brother's son, (3) Their carriage —

רכושם

All the gettings which they got: some riches and substance not a little it seemeth they had gathered in Charan, which they carry with them. (4) Their servants paraphrased by a single word, And the soul, for soul, as Gen. 14. 21. And these souls by a synecdoche usual for persons, these described to be under them as servants; they made them, that is purchased them as Sept. Or subjected them to the Law.

הנפש אשר עשו

As the Caldee. Such probably they were, as were converted by them to the fear, and Worship of the true God: The commendation of Abrams household servants, and his care of them, give's good presumption of this interpretation, that they were souls made or turned unto God in Charan, it is an error to read, begot. (5) The end of the journey intended. They went out to go into the Land of Canaan: Thither was Abram called, and thither intended they to go when they were stopt at Charan, as ch. 11.

ver. 31. (6) Their arrival into the place purposed, And they came or entered into the Land of Canaan, that is, they reached their journey's end, as to the country, unto which God called.

From it take these Notes.

D. 1. Faith mov's the soul from its rest to finish the work of God.

D. 2. Faith onely worketh up to the word of the Lord.

D. 3. Obedience to the utmost of that word is the necessary issue of a sound faith.

D. 4. A partner in the same faith, will share also in the same work. So Lot.

D. 5. Faith in age will move Soules over all difficulties. It held out in Abram for 100 years after this.

Ver. 4. Psalm 92.

D. 6. Faith will carry wife and Kindred and all at Gods call with them.

D. 7. Faith makes diligent in callings and is not void of Gods blessing in the increase of substance.

D. 8. Faith in Governours will labour to make their Servants Gods, and bring them into Gods Church with themselves.

D. 9. Believing profelyts will go where Gods Church moveth.

D. 10. Faith moveth Soules onely to the Land of Promise. Such was Canaan. Heb. 11. 9. Good in it self. Deut. 8. 7, 8, 9. Ezek. 20. 6.

Jehovahs Land, Hosea 9. 3. Holy Land, Zech. 2. 12. Land of Immanuel, Isaiah 8. 8. A type of Heaven. Heb. 11. 9, 10.

D. 11. Faith doth surely arrive at the Promised Land at last. Ver. 5.

2. His obedience is further expressed in his progress thorough Kenaan where of we have a three fold mention.

1. Of his motion to the place of Schem, ver. 6. 7.

2. Of his motion toward the east part. ver. 8.

3. Of his motion toward the south part. ver. 9.

The first motion of him in this land is thus told.

Ver.

Ver. 6. And Abram passed thorough the land to the place of Schem, to the oak of Moreh, and the Canaanite was then in the land. — וַיַּעֲבֹד אַבְרָם בְּעֵץ מֹרְהָיִם. To a tall oak and the Canaanites did then inhabit the land. Sept.

To the plain of Moreh, and the Canaanite then did abide in the land, Cald.

Ver. 7. And Jehovah appeared unto Abram and said, to thy seed will I give this land, and he built there an altar to Jehovah who had appeared unto him. Sept. and Cald, to the same. To thy sonne Cald.

In which journall, we have here related. (1) Abrams first stage, wherein are mentioned.

Ver. 6.

1. The traveller, Abram, doubtles not single and alone, but with his former company.

2. The motion recorded, — He passed, he was not yet suffered to sit still, but as a pilgrim, which was yet his condition, he travelleth onward, he is a passenger here whether he was called, his foot was not yet fixed.

3. The space wherein he moveth, it is — Within the compass of Canaan the land of promise, there he findes not rest.

4. The place of his first pitching. Set out by two notations. (1) — To the place of Schem, it was a place in the midst of Canaan; when Moses wrote this, doubtles a great city was there, though perhaps not so in the time of Abrams travells. Gen. 33. 18. It is computed to be about 300 mile from Charan, something a long tract. (2) — To the oak of Moreh, that is an oak grove, not one oak. Deut. 11. 30. Some read plaines, valleyes, or Champain. so Cald. An high oak Sep. Moreh is conceived to be the name of a man as Mamre was; or of some mountain Gen. 13. 18. Judg. 7. 1.

5. The description of the men among whom he came, And the Canaanite was then in the land. (1) Their name notes them to be a cursed seed of Cham, most desperat enemies to God, and to his people, who were continual oppressors to them, bad welcom could Abram expect among them. Deut. 12. 30. 31. This was one trial of faith more after a weary journey.

2. The time when Abram was called and might have looked for quiet possession, then fell he among those who were as vile as those in Ur of the Chaldees, his obedience mett with discouragement. (3) The place was the land unto which God called him, and that this should yeeld him no better company or entertainment; it is a sharpe trial.

6. His entertainment there with God, in two expressions setting out.

Ver. 7.

1. Gods apparition to him. And Jehovah appeared unto Abram, that is at this time and in this place, and amidst this discouraging people. (1) The party appearing was Jehovah, he that was, is, and is to come, able enough to encourage against all oppositions of creatures. (2) The apparition, was a clear discovery of him whether in visible shape by vision, or otherwise is not expressed; but clearly did God manifest himself to Abram amidst all these stumbling blocks in his way.

2. Gods promise expressed thus — And he said I will give to thy seed this very land. Wherein occur. (1) The promise maker Jehovah who was able to perform it. (2) The promise receiver, or the subject to whom the promise is made, it is Abrams seed; the eminent seed especially, but to all his seed generally who were to be the Church of God; himself saw not so much as his seed, onely by faith he received the promise. (3) The promise itself, I will give this very land. (1) The matter promised, that very land so possessed by enemies, so polluted by wickedness, so improbable to be owned by God, or possessed by Abrams seed, this very land (2) The freeness of promise, God will give it, it is not for their worth or power in themselves, but Gods free disposition. (3) The end of allotting this to Abrams portion, that it might be the place for his Church eminently, and God might be known to dwell amongst them.

7. Abrams return to God upon this apparition and promise, recorded in the following words, — And he built there, &c. Where.

1. The work is expressed, he built an altar, this was an act of worship, it was for burnt offerings and meat offerings; thereon to figure the sacrifice of Christ, and to worship the Lord with the sacrifice of praise; as was the use of the altar-service; where the unity of it is also remarkable, it was but one, and therein a special type of Christ.

2. The dedication of it, it was to Jehovah the onely object of his peoples sacrifice and Worship, not to the vanities of the gentiles.

3. The reason of this dedication, because God there appeared to him.

1. To comfort him in his sad trials among the Canaanites.

2. To authorize him for erecting this altar; upon which ground, and no other, it becomes a work acceptable with God. It was no will-worship, as the worke of idolatrous Papists is, to set up altars which God commands not, but forbids. Having therefore Gods countenance he is neither afraid nor ashamed to Worship his God according to truth, even before the enemies of the Lord, but he builds his altar, professeth his God, and Worshippeth him.

All which teacheth us.

D. 1. Not onely egress from wayes prohibited, but progress in Gods way may must shew the obedience of faith.

- D. 2. Faith will make a soul a pilgrim on earth, to passe up and down, at Gods command Heb. 11. 9.
- D. 3. Short pitching places doth God allot to believers here below.
- D. 4. Sore travells may God allot to his believing seed on earth.
- D. 5. Sore trialls doth God put upon his believing seed pitching them among the vilest sinners. Ver. 6.
- D. 6. In saddest vialls God makes sweetest discoveries of himselfe to his believing children.
- D. 7. Gods apparition unto him, is not without a promise to them.
- D. 8. Gods promise to every Canaan, the land good, and all heavenly good presented by it.
- D. 9. Abrams seed by Christ is the proper subject of the promised inheritance, heaven is theirs.
- D. 10. All this good temporal and spiritual is Gods free gift, not their desert.
- D. 11. Gods promise is enough to strengthen him against all the Canaanites, even all enemies that may hinder believers from their inheritance.
- D. 12. Faith learns its duty, as well as receiveth its comforts from Gods appearance.
- D. 13. Faith carrieth the soul to Worship God onely.
- D. 14. Faith raiseth monuments of praise for the wonders of Gods promise.
- D. 15. Faith makes return of all Worship to God upon his own altar, and in his own way which is our Lord Jesus Christ; in the truth of those typtical expressions.
- D. 16. One altar onely at once did God require and Saints erect; as the true type of one Christ. Ver. 7. Thorough and by whom we must come to God.

The second stage of Abrams progresse in the land of Canaan now followeth.

Ver. 8. And he removed or translated himselfe thence to a mountain from the east of Bethel and pitched or stretched his tent; Bethel being sea-ward and Hai eastward, and he built there an altar to Jehovah, and called upon the name of Jehovah. And he departed thence, &c. And set up his tent in Bethel toward the sea, &c. Sept. And he ascended thence, &c. having Bethel on the west, and Hai on the east, and there he built an altar before the Lord, and prayed in the name of the Lord. Cald.

Two maine things are recorded here.

1. His motion from Morch. (2) His religion. In the former these terms are obvious. (1) His motion connected to the former pitching. Ver. 8. And, or afterward (because it noteth the order of action) he removed, translated, or thrust out himselfe. The cause or occasion is not expressed of his sudden remove; it is conceived, some hard usage at Shechem, which may be, yet doubtles Gods will in his removal, is not to be denied, though not expressed; wherein God would have him to be as a stranger in the land of promise, that so his motions might be in faith, for such the Spirit doth make them, he moved still by faith.

2. The term from whence. From thence, that is, from the place of Shechem where it is probable Gods true Worship found but bad entertainment.

3. The term whereunto. Unto a mountain on the east of Bethel. It is thought about 24 miles in our English account these places were distant, what motive might draw him hither is not mentioned, but surely thither he came not without God.

4. His pitching or setting down. And he stretched his tent. His dwelling and the manner of it are carried in this expression, he dwelt there, but he did but tent it there, he built no city nor house but sat down a little while in his booth or moovable habitation. It is opposed to a fixed house. The dwelling in which noted them strangers and pilgrims; that they looked not for their rest here.

5. The topography, for its situation, recorded to be distinguished by Bethel sea-ward, and Hai eastward. That is, this mountaine where he pitched, had Bethel on the west, which was their seaward, neither was it now called Bethel but Luts, for Jacob gave it that name about 150 years after this time: Moses therefore useth that name which was known to his generation Gen. 28. 19. It is here so named by anticipation. It was the place, where God appeared to Jacob, therefore called the house of God which afterward became Bethaven the house of iniquity, Hosea. 4.

Idols being set up there by Jeroboam. So

So also this place had Hai on the east of it; the place memorable for Israels fall in part, and Josuahs prevailing with God against it. Josh. 7. The Sept. say he set his tabernacle in Bethel, but that cannot be; however some have made that superstitious use of it, as to think the place more holy. Yet the Spirit records it not for any such end.

2. Here his religion is reported, which appeareth in two particulars.

1. His edifice described. And there he built, &c. Doubtles, the former raised was pulled down, and being now come to his second stage, he raiseth another altar unto God, continuing the ordinances of his Worship in every place.

2. His use of it according to Gods appointment, and he called upon, as some, or, in the name of the Lord, as others, and so noting a double service. (1) Respecting God, and that is invocation or prayer. (2) Respecting man, and that is proclaiming the name of the Lord to them: teaching, preaching in the name of the Lord. Joel. 2. 32. Hag. 40. 3. 6. Rom. 10. 13.

3. Add to this the last stage following. Ver. 9. And Abram went forward in going and journeying toward the south, Cald. same. And Abram took up, (viz. his tent) and going on, pitched his camp in the desert. Sept.

Where we may observe as recorded.

1. Another motion of Abrams. This connection may be read further more, or afterward, Abram takes up his stakes of his tent, and moveth again.

2. The continuance of his motion, going and journeying. That is, in the doubled expression noting the continuance of his motion, and restlessness in the same, all which may not be thought to be without Gods instinct and approbation to exercise faith, to give him in some measure a sight of the promised land, and by him to sow some seed of truth and holines therein.

3. The term, whereto he reacheth is named here the south. That is, the fourth tract of Canaan, which looketh toward Egypt, whither afterward he removed because of the famine, as followeth in this Chapter.

There is no other but this general notion of it. Some conceive, Hebron to be the place, which afterward was a Royal city, but no certainty can be made of it. The Hebrewes note the South, to set out prosperous places and faires, by Ezek. 40. 2. As also the North to be the point whence evil is denounced to come. Jer. 1. 13. 14. As is grown to a Proverb. Omne malum ab Aquilone. But this is conjecture.

These truths issue from it

- D. 1. Faith moves a man from place to place in the world, upon Gods word or intimation.
- D. 2. The bad entertainment of believers in the World maketh them remove their stages.
- D. 3. In the wandrings of believers God sends abroad the discoveries of his will to several places.
- D. 4. Faith maketh soules dwell in tents here below, and be still moveable for heaven.
- D. 5. Faith causeth soules to adhere unto, and make profession of the true religion of God, in all places, faith is never ashamed of Gods truth, worship or way.
- D. 6. Believing soules cannot be without communion with God in offering to him, and hearing from him.
- D. 7. Supplication to God and speaking in his name are special ways of Worship suiting believers. Ver. 8
- D. 8. Faith maketh saints true sojourners below, to be still taking up their stakes at Gods beck.
- D. 9. To all points, East and West and South God orders the motions of the Saints to leave some savour of his truth every where. V. 9.

The third general portion of the Chapter containeth Abrams journey into Egypt, and the occurrences there, for the time of his sojourning.

Wherein we have related.

1. The occasion of his removal thither. ver. 10.
2. The provision of the flesh for his Security. ver. 11. 12. 13.
3. The events befalling him there.
1. The danger of his wife. ver. 14. 15.
2. The entertainment of himselfe. ver. 16.
3. The hand of God upon Pharaoh. ver. 17.
4. The return of Pharaoh to Abraham.
1. By way of reproof, ver. 18. 19.
2. By his dismissal, ver. 19. 20.

1. The occasion of his going into Egypt is this.

to the violation of nearest bonds,
even between husband and wife.

D. 7. Raging lust is cruel even to destroy any that hinder's it.

D. 8. Lust spares its darling, and favourites it; onely to abuse it.
Ver. 12.

D. 9. Believers may be so tempted as to make lies their refuge, and dissemble.

D. 10. Self good and security may put the faithfull upon bad shifts to compass it, so here; but as away mark to avoid it. Ver. 13.

3. The events which by providence fell out while Abram was in Egypt: which are four.

1. The danger of his wife expressed.
Ver. 14, 15.

Ver. 14. And it was in Abrams entering into Egypt, and the Egyptians looked on the woman because she was very faire. Cald. to the same. — The Egyptians seeing the woman that, &c. Sept.

Ver. 15. And the Princes of Pharaoh saw her, and praised her unto Pharaoh, and the woman was taken into the house of Pharaoh.
Cald. same. — And they brought her into Pharaohs house. Sept.

In which passage is evident, that Abrams fear in part came upon him. Whereby he might see the danger of faiths failing;
in both these verses are considerable.

Ver. 14.

1. The time of this event — It was as his first entrance into Egypt, there he seeth presently the fruit of unbelieving fear.

2. The event itself, set out in three particulars.

1. The inspection of the vulgar Egyptians, which takes in, (1) Their act.
They looked on her, &c. — That is, they looked upon her & eyed her lustfully. (2)

כ' פ'ר

The reason of it — Because she was very faire: The reason of this excellent forme, must mainly be some special work of God, she being so much stricken in years as before was noted, at least 60 years old, yet now her eminent beauty is visible.

2. The demeanour of the princes and chief men, discovered Ver. 15.

Ver. 15.

Two acts of theirs are recorded, (1) These court-parasites and panders look upon her with lustful purposes. (2) In their usual unclean discourse they commend her to Pharaoh, as a Paramour sister for a king, such attenders have bin usually in the courts of wicked kings.

3. The carriage of Pharaoh to her. And the woman was taken, &c. Wherein her danger increaseth, (1) She was taken, probably not by force but by flattery from Abram, who now seeth the fruit of dissem-bling her to be his wife. (2) She is taken into Pharaohs house, not to his bed which God prevented, but under his power, whether to be prepared for him by purifying and perfuming, as is read of others, Esther. 2. 3. (3) She is brought unto an idolatrous lustful king; such as in himself, would not spare to defile her; all which circumstances aggravat her danger.

Note hence.

D. 1. Sometimes what unbelief feareth, cometh to passe in the very time and place expected.

D. 2. Unclean hearts love to gaze, where lust may be satisfied.

D. 3. Eminency of beauty God can give in old age. V. 14.

D. 4. The greatest beauty may bring the greatest danger.

D. 5. High places make men bold sometimes to commit high sinnes.

D. 6. Courts of wicked Kings are usually schooles of uncleannes.

D. 7. God suffers chastest soules som-times to be tempted in such places.

D. 8. It is a grievous temptation to be under the power of a lustful
King. V. 15.

The second event under providence is Abrams own entertainment in Egypt something answering his own scope in his carnal counsaill.

Ver. 16. And he did good to Abram for her sake, & there was to him, or he had sheep & oxen, & he asses, & men servants, & woman servants and shee asses, and camels. — And they used Abram well, &c. mules, & asses, half asses and camels. Sept. Cald the same with Hebr. In which passage is discovered that he had his desire intended; that it might be well with him, for her sake.
Ver. 13. Which appear's in two particulars.

Ver. 16.

1. His usage by Pharaoh and his princes.
Wherein note. (1) The connection.
And, which completh his peace with his wives danger, she was taken away to Pharaoh, and he in the mean time well intreated.

2. The subject or guest entertained;
Abram, now under great temptations and fears doubtles.

3. The benefactor that entertains him
Pharaoh himself. So the Hebr. notes it in the singular, and doubtles his Princes, and servants, at their masters command, all ready to serve him. So the Sept. read plural.

4. The

4. The usage he findeth; he doth good to him or dealeth kindly with him, that is by speaking kindly, and imparting freely all things for his outward comfort. This he aimed at in concealing his wife, and this God brings about for him, though not approving his way.

5. The reason of this kind respect. It was for his wives sake, who he said, was his sister. Her beauty pleaseth Pharaoh; and therefore he useth all courtesy to her friend, for a more free enjoyment of her. This was his reach, however Gods over-ruling thoughts were not so.

2. His possessions, sheep, oxen,
&c. Unto him were all these is the Hebrew phrase, or he had them, doubtles he brought his household with him into Egypt, and cattel also, but here is noted the increase, and quiet enjoyment of them among the Egyptians. The summe is, he was very rich
And increased in outward wealth.

Take from all these Notes.

D. 1. Saints enjoyments here are bitter-sweet, especially when procured by fleshly ways.

D. 2. Providence sometimes giveth out issues of good to saints that have used fleshly counsels for the obtaining them.

D. 3. God makes his people to find favour in the eyes of the wicked at his pleasure.

D. 4. Wicked lustfull men may be full of kindness to serve their own turns.

D. 5. Wealth is not inconsistent with grace, though oft-times separated from it.

D. 6. God can give abundance unto him in the very place of streights and trials. So here. Ver. 16.

The third event is that which befel Pharaoh at this time, together with his house.

Ver. 17.

Ver. 17. And Jehorah smote Pharaoh with great plagues, and his house, because of Sarai Abrams wife. — And the Lord examined Pharaoh with great and evil inquisions, and his house, &c. —
And God brought great plagues upon Pharaoh and upon the men of his house, &c.
Cald.

In this is recorded the severe prevention of Pharaohs lust upon Sarai, and the deliverance of her unpolluted from the tents of uncleannes. Wherewith we have to note.

1. The neer connection of this act, unto the danger of Sarai. And or but. Even in the instant of danger upon her, when she was now in Pharaohs house, he doubt-les intended no long delay to his lust, but even then God appear's to over-power corruption.

2. The judge and redeemer in this case,
Jehorah, the eternal, able to deale with the mightiest Potentates and bring them to nothing.

3. The remedy he applies to prevent lust and save the innocent, wherein are considerable.

1. His act recorded — that is, he smote with great strokes, or plagued with great plagues, or requir'd with great and evil exactions, as the Sept. where we have. (1) The remedy, plagues upon the body, what ever they were, conceits are divers, but not certain. God might strike their lust in a suitable way of revenge. (2)
The degree, great. Sore and evil diseases, doubtles on their bodies. (3) The time, before sin committed or violence offered unto Sarai.

2. The object smitten Pharaoh and his house, or the men of his house, as the Cal-dec. (1) The King as Pharaoh was the name of dominion, by which the Kings of Egypt were called, until vanquished by the Greeks, and then were called Ptolemies, this King is reproved by Gods sore stroke.

2. The courtiers who were the first incense of his lust, and no less desiring to satisfy themselves, they conspired in sin, and therefore partake in plagues. (3) The reason, because of Sarai Abrams wife, she procured favour for Abram in the sight of Pharaoh. And now she procures plagues upon Pharaoh and his house from God.
This the Lord doth as the great protector of innocency and chastity.

1. He doth require their sin in taking her away. (2) He prevents their sin by this means, least they should defile her. It is all for her that God so severely pleads with them. — It was all upon the word, business or matter of Sarai who was in danger at his time.

The fourth and last event to Abram in Egypt, is his discharge, and Sarai's deliverance, extorted by the judgments or plagues of God upon Pharaoh.

Ver. 18. And Pharaoh called to Abram and said, why hast thou done this unto me? wherefore didst thou not shew unto me, that she was thy wife; that thou declaredst not to me? Sep. — What is which thou hast done to me, &c. Cald.

Ver. 19. Wherefore didst thou say, she is my sister, so I might have taken her to me for a wife; and now behold thy wife take her, and goe thy way. Cald fame. — taking her depart. — Cald.

Ver. 20. And Pharaoh commanded the men concerning him, and they dismissed him; and his wife, and all that was his, or unto him? — Concerning Abram, to bring him forward, and his wife, and all what ever he had, and Lot with him. Sep. — And they accompanied him, &c. Cald.

In all which passage, these particulars are obvious.

1. Pharaohs summons to Abram upon this stroke.

2. His accusation of Abram, about the danger whereinto he drew him.

3. His dismissal of him with his wife.

4. His charge for his convoy, ver. 20. The first of these is expressed in these words.

And Pharaoh called to Abram.

Ver. 18.

Wherein note.

1. The term of connection. And. Then. Therefore. But, as is read, it notes the close effect of Gods judgment upon Pharaoh, that presently upon sense of the plague, he sends for Abram, whose wife he had coveted.

2. His act, he calleth for Abram doubting by his messengers, for whose sake he apprehends the present wrath upon him.

The second is Pharaohs accusation of him, or charge against him, in three expostulations; and the issue.

1. And he said, why hast thou done this to me? Wherein he chargeth him to be the cause of all these plagues that now beset him, as if himself were innocent. And all the fault were upon Abrams concealment; which though an argument of a wicked heart, to put of guilt to ano- ther; yet it argueth Abram somewhat faulty in it, to be reproved by a Pagan; that he a stranger who came for shelter, should be an occasion of such a judgment on the king.

2. Why didst thou not declare to me, that she was thy wife? Here he chargeth him with his concealment, which is not excusable, but was surely a sin, arising from defect of faith in this particular case.

3. Why didst thou say, she is my sister? Ver. 19. Here he chargeth him with a deceitful profession, which though it were true in some part, yet was made with intent to deceive and hide another truth. Which was his infamy.

4. The issue supposed, which might have bin a grater evil; even the defilement of his own wife, so I might have taken her to me for a wife: which Pharaoh though a wicked wretch judgeth to be abominable, to commit adultery with another mans wife.

Quest. How knew Pharaoh now, she was his wife?

Ans. (1) The plague makes him inquire. (2) God might rebuke him as he did another and reveal it. (3) Or it might be discovered by Sarai, being in his house at this time.

The third, is Abrams dismissal, and now behold thy wife, take her and goe.

Wherein note.

2. A demonstration of his wives purity and propriety kept unto him. Behold thy wife, as she came, so she is still preserved, a wife, no harlot, and thy wife, not another mans.

2. A restitution. Take her to thy self, and so enjoy her as thine own.

3. A dismissal, be gone, or goe thy way, which, however it sends him away uninitiated, yet it seems, with some discontent from Pharaoh, though by reason of the plague on him, he durst not other-wise vent it. But so God over-powers the Spirits of wicked Princes and cuts them short sometimes.

Quest. Why is Abram silent all this while?

Ans. It is not revealed, therefore the resolution can be but conjectural.

1. Some think upon the passion of Pharaoh. (2) Others from his guilt in great part (3) He might think God had answered enough for him.

4. It may be he might reply, though it be not recorded.

The fourth is Abrams safe conduct expressed.

1. In Pharaohs command, and Pharaoh commanded his men concerning him. Doubtles the royal precept was for security to him and his, that in his departure no wrong should be done him. So God over-ruled a wicked man.

2. In his servants readines, and they dis-

CHAP. XIII.

In this Chapter is continued the history of the Church in Abrams family, after his regress from Egypt into Canaan, with several providences of special note. Three general heads are evident in this section or Chapter.

(1) Abrams return to Canaan. Ver. 1. 4.
2. Abrams parting with Lot, and the causes of it, Ver. 5. 13.
3. Abrams further encouragement from Gods renewing his Covenant, Ver. 14. 18.

1. His regress is thus related.

Ver. 1. And Abram ascended from Egypt, he and his wife, and all that was his, and Lot with him to the south. — Descent. Sept. Cald, fame.

Ver. 2. And Abram was very wealthy in cattle, in silver, and in gold. — Very much honored, &c. Cald.

Ver. 3. And he went in his journey from the south, even unto Bethel, to the place wherein was there his tabernacle in the beginning, between Bethel and Hai. — He went whence he departed into the desert. Sept. — And he went by his stages, &c. Cald.

Ver. 4. To the place of the altar which he made there in the beginning. And Abram called there in the name of Jehovah.

In which passage we have these particulars related.

1. His departure or return from the place of his tears and trial, about which note.

1. The connection, and he went, or therefore, that is, immediately and upon Pharaohs dismissal, he staid no longer, when God so made his way out.

2. His station in which observe Abram as leader of the rest, ascended, or went up from Egypt, unto which he formerly came down, it lying lower than Canaan.

2. His company, his wife, his family, and his Nephew Lot. As before, not an hoof left behind; as Moses spake in his time.

3. His first stage: to the south, from whence he mooved formerly into Egypt: which must be understood of the southern part of Canaan, for otherwise, Canaan lay North from Egypt.

4. His state where-with he mooved, he was mighty heavy, or wealthy, or rich, or honourable in cattle, silver and gold, so God increased him by his blessing in every place.

5. His way he takes, he went by his adornings or tracts, wherein he had walked about the land. So God guideth dismissed him, that is, with honour, or accompanied him, or brought him on his way and his wife, and all that he had, his substance and family in safety, so God makes enemies his guard.

In all this history a parallel is observed between Abram and his seed about their coming into, being in, and going out of Egypt. (1) A famine brought both in as the occasion. (2) Oppression befalls both there abiding. (3) Gods plagues plead for both in fury against King and people. (4) They are sent both out with fullness and safety.

Quest. How long staid Abram before his dismissal out of Egypt?

Ans. It is not punctually set down, but by circumstances adjoined, it could not be long, scarce a full year as it is thought, much lesse so many years, that some speak of, as twenty or otherwise. Ensb. Joseph.

This teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods plagues may put wicked hearts upon speedy inquiry into their evils. Connect.

D. 2. Gods heavy strokes may force oppressors to call for oppressed to relieve them.

D. 3. Wicked hearts will charge others to be the cause of their afflictions, rather than themselves.

deth him out of the place of danger.

6. His place of pitching to which he aimed expressed, (1) Bethel, as being the known place near it. (2) The place where he pitched his tent in the beginning, when he came from shechem, Chap. 12, 8. between Bethel and Ai. (3) To the place of the altar which he built there. Chap. 12, ver. 8.

Ver. 4.

7. His end in coming thither, And there Abram called upon the name of Jehovah or, in the name; which as before notes the whole worke of divine Worship, praying, and declaring the name of the Lord to others, that he might be glorified in them.

Take these Notes from it.

D. 1. Gods Saints delay not to follow Gods providence, opening a way to them from the place of trial. This from the connection.

D. 8. The name of the Lord is that which draweth the hearts of Saints from all enjoyments, to delight in it, publish it, and call upon it. V. 4.

The second general head of the Chapter is the history of Abrams parting with his nephew Lot. Whereof is related.

1. The occasion of their parting which was twofold.

1. The great estates and riches which they had both gotten. ver. 5, 6.

2. The strife which here-upon grew among their servants. ver. 7.

2. Abrams motion hereupon. ver. 8, 9.

3. Lots choice for his own portion, ver. 10, 11.

4. The pitched habitation, of both. v. 12, 13. The occasion of parting between these friends, and fellow pilgrims followeth.

Ver. 5. And also unto Lot walking with Abram there were, flocks and herds and tents Sheep, and oxen, and beasts. Sept.

Moreover to Lot who went out, &c. Cald.

Ver. 6. And the land did not bear them to sit down together, because their substance was much, and they could not sit down together. וְהָאֲדָמָה לֹא הָיְתָה לָהֶם לְשֹׁכֵת. And the land did not contain them to dwell together for their goods were many. Sept. Cald. to the same.

Ver. 7. And there was strife between the shepherds of Abrams flocks, and between the shepherds of Lots flocks: and the Canaanite and the Perizzite were then sitting in the land. Cald. and Sept. to the same.

In these is the history of the occasion or provoking cause for the parting of these two friends, which is evidently twofold.

1. The greatness of their wealth. ver. 5, 6. Herein.

1. Lots estate is briefly mentioned. ver. 5. Where we have to note.

1. The subject named and described. Ver. 5. And also to Lot walking. It is Lot, Abrahams companion, and fellow traveller, his walking and going with Abram was also doubtless by faith, parting with all to join himself with the God of Abram: and hitherto keeping close in communion with Abram.

2. His estate in this pilgrimage is noted. He had sheep, oxen and tents, that is, abundance of cattle and substance, and many servants and his household-people which dwell in these tents; for so here is taken figuratively for those who dwell in them. He had a vast family, little less doubtless than Abram, who is said to have 318 Servants in his house able to bear Arms. Gen. 14, 14. Thus God made good his word in part to Abram, to be a friend to his friend.

2. The streitness of place, for their two great families, The land did not, that is, could not, bear them as afterward, wherein. (1) The narrow bounds of the place, it did not contain; nor could it, both these families. (2) The largeness of their possessions, much cattle, substance and servants which they had gotten. (3) The issue, therefore these two friends could now sit down no longer together, in that sweet mutual enjoyment of each other as formerly they had done.

2. The next cause is the unhappy strife which fell out among their servants, wherein are these particulars, (1) The evil separating here related, is contention, which carrieth in it. (1) Heart burning. (2) Reproaching. (3) Acting of hatred.

2. The parties, Abrahams herdsmen, and Lots herdsmen, their necessary servants, and likely such as were zealous for their respective masters, so as to ingage them also, had not grace more appeared in them.

Ver. 7.

51

3. The reason of this strife is not expressed, but probably to be conjectured, that the straits of their place, did occasion inconveniences to each other for pasture and watering, which such great flocks and herds did require, as afterward it will appear, others strive about wells. To lay it upon the pride and frowardness of Lot to his uncle carrieth no reason in it; the Spirit notes him to be a better man.

4. The aggravation of this strife, which may yield a third reason of their parting. And the Canaanite and Perizzite sat then in the land. There were no small enemies to these strangers, and no doubt ready to take occasion upon their contentions to make an end of them both.

1. These had the land mostly in possession, therefore as yet strait bounds were to these strangers, which might occasion strife.

2. It might be scandalous to these enemies that the Saints of God should fall out between themselves.

3. It is most probable, they would have taken occasion to destroy them who were already divided, there grace works first in Abram to consult a way for keeping unity in the Church, and frustrating the evil designs of the enemies.

Take these Notes from it.

D. 1. Walking with Saints in their hardest wayes usually brings Gods outward blessings on them.

D. 2. Great families and possessions God can give his Saints in the land of their pilgrimage. V. 5.

D. 3. Great straits may befall the saints of God in their greatest abundance.

D. 4. Much wealth may prove an occasion of dividing the very Saints. V. 6.

D. 5. Great riches among the best may prove causes of great contentions.

D. 6. Bad servants may be incendiaries to put good Masters to strife.

D. 7. The large territories of the wicked may streighten the godly in earthly places.

D. 8. Wicked enemies of the Church are apt to watch all opportunities, to destroy the Saints by their own divisions. V. 7.

2. Next to the occasion followeth Abrahams motion about parting from his kinsman.

Ver. 8. And Abram said to Lot, let there not be strife I pray thee between me, and between thee, and between my shepherds, and between thy shepherds, because we be men brethren. Sept. and Cald. the same.

Ver. 9. Is not the whole land before thy face; separate thy self or depart now, or I pray thee, if thou be for the left, I will right it, and if thou be for the right hand I also will left it. Behold is not the land? &c. Sept. — If thou be for the North, I will be for the South, &c. Cald.

In which passage proposed, these particulars occur.

1. The connection of Abrahams motion upon the premised occasion: some fire of contention being kindled between servants, he presently puts in to quench it, that it grow no more. And Abram said to Lot, &c. Wherein may we note.

1. The instantaneities of the act, And, then, or therefore, that is, immediately upon the rise of any strife, for that cause, and without delay. Ver. 8.

2. The moover or first author of peace Abram. (1) the elder. (2) the greater, his uncle. (3) the heir of promise, to whom especially the land was given.

3. The party mooved Lot, the younger, educated by his uncle, and blessed by his means.

2. The motion itself, Wherein are these particulars.

1. A cautionary prohibition of the growing evil. Of which we may note.

1. The form, it is propoed by way of intreaty humbly. I pray thee, not roughly, nor peremptorily, in heat or passion.

2. The matter of it thus expressed, Let there not be strife; that evil spoken of before, his motion is presently to quench the fire, (1) That feared, between him and Lot; Let none be between me and between thee, neither on my part. Against thee, nor on thy part against me; wherein seemeth some fear was that the heat of servants might have fired their masters. (2) That acted already between the shepherds, a remedy to that evil hereby he maketh, to put a stop unto its growing; Let there be no strife between my herdsmen and thine, so he sweetly labours to heal his servants evils; which might otherwise be contagious in both families.

3. The reason of this motion thus stated, Because we are men brethren. This is an usual apposition in the Hebrew, which noteth but so much as brethren; yet the word men may have its use here, as noting poor sad, sorrowful men, as they were being pilgrims; but however, thus Abram reasoneth the case with Lot, we are brethren, and for brethren to bear strife is an uncomely uncomely thing, let there be none I pray thee. Brethren is a term of equall relation, and herein Abram defends to his Nephew, to whom he had bin as a father.

וְהָיָה
דָּוָר

1. It may note equality in the flesh, so Abram bespeaks Lot, as the Jewes used to stile kinned their brethren.

2. In religion brethren, and in Church-relation, so though Abram were a Prophet, yet he owne a brotherhood, so defending also.

3. It may note neernes in condition, as if he might say, we are brethren in our afflictions, in our pilgrimage, &c. So he yeelds to him also, for Abram was the Leader and General in all their marches. The reason is good in all, none of these brethren ought to strive, or fall out in their way.

2. A true concession of the whole to Lots content.

Ver. 9. Is not all the land in thy sight or before thy face? Surely it is, where was granted.

(1) The same land which Abram might have held. (2) The whole land. (3) The choice of all, for that is the meaning of that Phrase (to thy face, in thy sight, or before thine eyes, that is to look upon, and view, and choofe what thou wilt for thy self and family. This sense Lots act makes good, ver. 10.

3. A desire of parting declared. Separat thy self or depart from me I pray thee. Where, (1) The form of it is petitionary, (2) The matter was the onely remedy, even the removing of two great families at a greater distance; where more pasture and convenient stations might be had; separation onely in place, that they might keep one in affection.

4. A contented resolution in Abram to take Lots leavings, thus recorded, If so she left thou, I will right it, or go to the right hand; which was south to the place where they were, as the Caldee. Or if to the right shou, then I will left it, that is goe to the left hand, which was North. The phrases are elliptical in the Hebrew, therefore must be supplied. If thou wilt choofe to goe to the left or right, take thy choice, I will take what thou leavest. So Lot choofeth, as afterward. ver. 11.

Note we hence.

D. 1. Gracious hearts hasten to quench any flame of contention rising in the Church.

D. 2. Grace will make the greater move to the lesse for avoiding strife among Saints.

D. 3. Grace will make men begg for peace and to abolish strife in the Churches.

D. 4. Gracious masters are solicitous to avoid contentions raised by ungracious servants.

D. 5. Grace will put Masters upon healing their servants faults. So Abram.

D. 6. Strife is unseemly between brethren in the flesh, in religion and condition. Ver. 8.

D. 7. Grace is willing to part with its own, and all too, in some cases, to brethren.

D. 8. Grace will make Gods servants part in place, to keep one in affection.

D. 9. Grace is self denying to remove strife from the family of God.

D. 10. Grace is content with any thing below, so it may honour God, and keep peace with the Saints. Ver. 9.

3. Lots choise upon Abrams motion followeth, in the next verses.

Ver. 10. And Lot lifted up his eyes, and saw all the plain of Jordan, that is, all was watered, before Jehovah destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah, as the garden of Jehovah, as the land of Egypt in thy going unto Tsoar. As the Paradise of God, and all the land of Egypt. Sept. נָאֻמִּי וְהָאֶרֶץ מִצְרַיִם. &c. וְהָאֶרֶץ מִצְרַיִם. &c.

Ver. 11. And Lot chose to himself all the plain of Jordan, and Lot went forth from the East, and they were separated a man from his brother. every one from his brother. Sept. Lot went out first, &c. Cald.

Wherein are related three main things of observation.

1. Lots survey. Ver. 10. Whereabout (1) His act of surveying, And Lot lifted up his eyes, &c. Which phrases at least do note. (1) Solicitous intention of mind to take Abram at his word, and to look about for his own best advantage; which lifting up of his eyes could not be, but by travelling and viewing the parts and places here spoken of, which Lot did not delay to do, but as the connection notes, presently looked round about. (2) A full sight of what he desired, before he fell upon his choice; wherein the Spirit seems to note a selfish disposition in Lot, not once offering to Abram the precedency in choosing. 2. The object of his survey, which containeth (1) The place, All the plain of Jordan. The whole region about out Jordan. Sept. A memorable river, and which could not but be beneficial to the places about it. Joshua 3. 11.

(2) The commodity of the place set down. (1) Positively, It was well watered, a place of waters, which is a paraphrase of a very fruitful place. (2) Comparatively, As the garden of God. Which may be taken as the name of Eden a proper place spoken of. Gen. 2. Than which no place on earth was more blessed. Ezek. 28. 13. Or els as a common name of any eminent fruitful place, therefore called the garden of God, because most excellent for all blessing; but this too considered at the proper time, before God destroyed Sodom & Gomorrah, for afterward it became a curse: Such earthly pleasure Lot eyed. (2) As Egypt, concerning whose fruitfulness, by the overflowing of Nilus, much is recorded, in divine as well as humane records. Ezek. 29. and 30. and 31.

(3) The bounds of his survey, Even until you come to Zoar. It was at this time called Belah, afterward Zoar, upon Lots safety there. Chap. 14. 2. and 19. 22.

Ver. 11. 2. Lots choise and possession. (1) The choofer, it is himself. (2) The party for whom, for himself. (3) The act, He chose, that is greedily and covetously took the opportunity and pitched on his portion, without any modest proler unto Abram. (4) The portion chosen, All that fruitful plain described before. (5) He went out from the East, or indeed Eastward, for to Sodom lay from Bethel; and so the Hebrew phrase is, from the East, or Eastward. Gen. 2. 8. That is, he went presently to take his possession; halting to his portion, though it was imbittered to him afterward.

3. The issue of this choice, which is their parting, And they were separated or divided, a man from his brother. Each from other. Each Master with their own family betaking them to their places, which was not without Gods special providence, in separating Lots Seed from Abrams afterward; though this could not but be grievous for present.

Note we from it.

D. 1. Good men may be too hasty and solicitous for worldly advantage. As Lot.

D. 2. The lust of the eye, covetous desire may misguide gracious soules sometimes in their choic.

D. 3. Pleasant fruitful possessions on earth are apt to take up too much the care of the Saints.

D. 4. The pleasantest habitations are not alwayes the best: if God grow angry.

D. 5. God spares not to destroy the choicest places where sin abounds. Ver. 10.

D. 6. Good men may be too selfish. He offers not Abram the choic.

D. 7. Gods own left to their choic, may choofe and possess the worst portion.

D. 8. Brethren may be parted, by choic of distinct portions, when ordered by God to higher ends. Ver. 11.

4. Now followeth the relation of the distinct habitations of these parted friends.

Ver. 12. Abram sat down in the land of Canaan, and Lot sat down in the cities of the plain, and stretched tent unto Sodom. dwelt. And Lot dwelt in the land of the regions about, or of the borders, and he pitched tent among the Sodomites. Sept. Lot dwelt in the champion cities. Cald.

Ver. 13. And the men of Sodom were evil and sinners against Jehovah exceedingly. Sept. same. Were wicked with their Mammon, and most vile in their bodies before the Lord overmuch. Cald.

In this part of the history are considerable.

1. Abrams Habitation, wherein (1) The inhabitant is named, Abram the heir of promise. (2) The posture of him, He sat down or dwelt, that is, contentedly abode with his family. (3) The place, In the land of Canaan. This was the inheritance promised him, and there he abides; it is here set in contradistinction to Sodom; for however the place of those five Cities, were conterminat on Canaan, yet after Gods judgment on them in destruction, they were taken quite away; Abrams place therefore was better, though not so rich.

2. Lots Habitation, where about we may note, (1) The inhabitant, Lot with all his. (2) His posture also, he sat down with his owne choise, that is, he dwelt there where he chose (3) The place, the Cities of the plain or among them, whose fruitfulness was before declared, v. 10. (4) The line of his habitation in extent, it was unto Sodom, or in Sodom, as the Sept. renders; doubtles in and about Sodom he and all his were, as afterward we shall find. (5) The bitterness of this habitation in respect of the inhabitants, wherein, (1) The connection, And, now, but, or although, so the particle is and may be read; which notes, Lots praecipitancy and covetousnes after a pleasant place, though it were full of all abominations. It is unjustly charged on him, that he chose this place because he liked the Sodomites wickedness, more than Abrahams holiness, for the Spirit gives him witness, that his righteous Soul was vexed with their wickedness. Yet doubtless he was too hastily in not considering the crying sinnes of the inhabitants, by which God was provoked, for which he smarted afterward. (2) The subject, the inhabitants men of Sodom, that is all generally, for ten Righteous could not be found among them. (3) The attribute in two expressions superlative. (1) They were vehemently wicked, or evil. (2) They were exceedingly or vehemently sinners against Jehovah: that is, they were grown to the very excess of impiety, idolatries against God, and of all iniquity or unrighteousness to men, most abominable and unnatural lusts; which God was forced to extinguish with fire and brimstone: their abominations are specified after ward; and noted by the Prophets, as well as by Christ and his Apostles, to be the most notorious of sinners in the world at this time; and therefore called sinners exceedingly, or by way of excess.

Ver. 12.

Ver. 13.

Take these Notes from it.

- D. 1. Grace makes a soul sit down contented with its promised portion. So did Abram.
 D. 2. The promised portion with all its inconveniences, is better than the most pleasant with sin.
 D. 3. Good soules may sometimes sit down with content in large and pleasant places, without God.
 D. 4. Saints sometimes may meet with an hell, where they look for a paradise. So did Lot.
 D. 5. It is a soul blemish, for Gods servants to covet fruitful places, though never so sinfull. Ver. 12.
 D. 6. Fruitfull places are apt to have the foulest sinners.
 D. 7. The excess and height of sin is in oblique opposition to Jehovah.
 D. 8. Jehovah will make known such to be sinners to the purpose, and brand them, as here Sodom is notorious to all ages. Ver. 13.

The third general head of this Chapter now followeth, Abrahams encouragement by Gods renewing his Covenant of promise with him, wherein will be considerable two particulars.

1. Gods motion to Abram, Ver. 14, 15, 16, 17.

2. Abrahams Return to God, Ver. 18. In Gods motion there is a double promise given.

1. Proposed by God.

1. Of the largeness of his inheritance. Ver. 14, 15.

2. Of the multiplying of his Seed. Ver. 16.

2. Confirmed by doubling the promise. Ver. 17.

1. The promises are proposed thus.

Ver. 14. And Jehovah said to Abram, after that Lot was separated from him, lift up now thine eyes, and see from the place where thou art thence, to the north, and to the south, and to the east, and to the sea, or west. Sept. and Cald. same.

Ver. 15. For all the Land which thou seest, I will give it to thee, and to thy Seed for ever. Sept. and Cald. same.

Ver. 16. And I will put thy Seed, as the dust of the earth, so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, thy Seed also shall be numbered. Sept. same. For as it is not possible for a man to number the dust of the earth, so thy seed shall not be numbered. Cald.

In these is related the third special manifestation of God to Abram. The first was in Ur of the Caldees, Chap. 12. 1. The second at the place of Shechem, Ch. 12. ver. 7. And the third is here mentioned upon some special occasion, but purposely to renew his promise to him, as God saw requisite. Wherein we have to consider.

1. Gods appearance, and motion to him recorded, ver. 14. And Jehovah said to Abram. This Moses reports, as done by God. It is a conjecture of some that God spake to him by a Prophet, which was Schem, but it is groundless, for the text favours it not; and Abram was well acquainted with Gods own voice, as well before, as after we have it in the history: It is safest according to the letter, to understand it, that God did in his way then usual, make known his mind himself to Abram, who was also a Prophet; no phancy was this discovery, but a real Word of God.

2. The time and occasion of this word of God coming unto him.

declared to be, After Lot had separated himself from him. This clause is not inserted in vain, but hath its weight in this place, wherein may be noted.

1. The time of his appearance, it was the moment of the parting of these friends.

2. The occasion insinuated, Which may be twofold.

1. Abrahams trouble upon parting with his Nephew, however necessitated, yet irksome to him; which God in this manifestation would take away.

2. Abrahams singling of him, when now he was alone, and Lot with his family gone, now God sheweth Abram; that it it was not Lot and his to whom his promise should come; but Abram himself, now when he was singled out: and it was not without God, that Lot moved towards the borders of Canaan: that thence his seed at length might be exterminate.

3. The matter of the word which God here speaketh to him, which is the double promise.

1. Of his inheritance, wherein occur.

1. Gods demonstration of the bounds thereof to Abram. Lift up now thine eyes, &c. In which expression; God sheweth familiarly to Abrahams sight, what he would give him, as if he should say, I pray thee now, lift up thine eyes, thou shalt see what I mean to give thee, &c. Here. (1) The kind of demonstration, it is to his sight, so he speaks of setting his eyes to see it.

Quest. But could Abrahams eyes receive all spoken of?

Ans. In short; there needs no recourse to Gods miraculous extending Abrahams sight; neither is it probable, that upon any one hill, he could see to the utmost bounds; but this is enough, that he was able to look to all the points, east, west, north and south; and he doing so, Gods word demonstrates, that to the utmost of those points, so farre as the land reached, it should be his.

2. The place where God shewed him, it is not named but expressed to be the place where Abram was, at their parting, which was a mount between Bethel and Ai.

3. The matter demonstrated, the land in the four points. (1) Northward. To Libanus. (2) Southward. To Idumea, and Arabia. (3) Eastward. To Euphrates. (4) Westward or seaward. To the Mediterranean sea, which was west from him; not that he could see to the utmost parts of these; but to all the points he might, and well understand Gods promise to him.

2. The other is a word of promise to give him this which now he had shewn unto him: and it is inferred by way of reason to his former demonstration, For I will give, &c. God shewed him because his mind was to give it him.

It is vain to see all and have nothing. In the promise are remarkable.

1. The party promising, Jehovah, able to perform it.

2. The matter promised, the whole land or region demonstrated in all its dimensions; this must be the meaning of the letter; it is applied by some to the heavenly Canaan as a type, whereof there is good use; but here the letter expressly speaketh of the land where Abram was resident.

3. The form of promise, I will give it, which noteth a free, and gracious dignation, even of this inferior portion, it is no debt.

4. The subject to whom, in a twofold expression.

1. To thee, which was Abram himself. Quest. How to Abram when he had not a foot of ground there but what he purchased, acts. 7. 5.

Ans. 1. The right was given to him, though not the possession.

2. It was given him for his seed.

3. To thee and thy seed, is read by some, even thy seed, as if it were by way of interpretation; but this seems not so clear, to both God gave it.

2. And to thy seed, Isaac and Jacob heirs of promise together with him. Heb. 11. 9. And after the twelve tribes of Israel, who came to the full possession when the sinnes of the Amorites were ripe. This seed typically is applied by some to Christ, who was the seed of Abram indeed. Use may be made of this with respect to the spiritual Canaan; but the letter is no allegory.

5. The term of continuance For ever, which is not to be meant absolutely, but to the time of the Messiahs coming in the flesh; neither without condition, but upon their obedience. Deut. 4. 25. Therefore Gods word hath not failed to them, neither in the Babylonish captivity, nor in the desolation which the Romans made. But besides this, although this ever is interrupted, yet it seemeth not to be fully ended; but the voice of the Prophets speaks, as if the Lord Christ may yet restore them to their place againe, when he hath brought them under his spiritual scepter.

Thus farre of the first promise.

Whence Note.

- D. 1. Saints who hang loose, and are indifferent for the world, have the best appearance of God. So Abram.
 D. 2. God is not forgetful to comfort his, who are willing to bear injuries from men for his sake.
 D. 3. God hath a speech to make his own to understand his mind. So God said to Abram.
 D. 4. When creature-comforts leave Gods servants, usually he comes himself to them. So here.
 D. 5. God singles out soules to whom he speaks comfortably in his promises; a stranger intermedleth not with their joy.
 D. 6. Sensible demonstrations God sometimes affords of future mercies unto his. See, &c.

D. 7. Large bounds God hath allowed for the typical inheritance of his Church here, which note larger in the heavenly Canaan.

D. 8. Gods demonstration of mercies sometimes precedes his donation, and insures it. Ver. 14.

D. 9. God is free and full in allotting the inheritance of his Church.

D. 10. Jehovah hath what he giveth, therefore he giveth surely, he can not deceive.

D. 11. Gods promise to Abram is fulfilled to his seed, through many generations.

D. 12. God hath his ever in making Covenant with his people according to his will; which it concerneth Gods covenanted ones to know. Ver. 15.

2. The next promise here proposed is for multiplying his seed to possess this inheritance, even the land of promise. Wherein observe.

1. The promise-maker Jehovah, he who is able to do it, beyond the thoughts of creatures.

2. The promise itself, which containeth in it.

שמה 1. Gods act expressed thus, And I will put. 1. Put in being, make, set in subsistence, so that none shall unsettle them.

אמר 2. The matter or object thus put in being, thy seed. This seed is taken concretely for all the children of Israel, in whom the promise fully was made good, as for this land of Canaan promised. This must be granted; therefore one, who makes seed in the former verse to note only Christ, faith, that seed in these two verses is taken in two senses. (1) ידוע. Properly for Christ. (2) עליו. Concretely for all that came out of Abrams loins, Fun. But surely seed must be taken in one sense here, I will give it to thy seed, and I will therefore put thy seed, which must needs be the same. As for what is said, that if it were the same, the second would have bin expressed by a relative: that is no standing rule, for as much as the same thing spoken of is expressed often by the same word, as well as by a relative.

However it is not denied but Christ typically may be intended, as heaven by the land. Yea and properly that the land was his too, as the king of his Church; therefore is it called the land of Immanuel. Isai 8:8.

3. The numerousness of his seed, expressed comparatively, (1) In a simple expression As the dust of the earth, which expression some make hyperbolic, Fun. But such figurative expressions are not to be fastened upon the Spirit of God, without need. Now here, Abrams seed in Gods production is but compared to the dust of the earth in one respect, which is the innumerableness of it, as the words added do clear, not that it should equal the dust of the earth in the scruples of it, or the sand of the sea, but that they should be so many, not to be numbered by man, which was no hyperbole at all. (2) In way of interpretation this is expressed. So that, if a man can number the dust of the earth, thy seed also shall be numbered. But no man can do that; therefore thy seed shall be also innumerable, which is all intended.

It teacheth.

D. 1. Promise to promise, seed to land, God addes to his covenanted friend Abram, for his good.

D. 2. Gods word of promise calleth things that are not, as if they were, that is, puts into being what is not.

D. 3. Gods word of promise putting into being is irreversible. He speaketh and doth it.

D. 4. Innumerable issues as the dust, sand, and stars can God raise out of dead bodies. Heb. 11:22.

D. 5. Children are Gods gift, when, and to whom he pleaseth. Psalms 127.

D. 6. Mans reach of understanding is too shallow to compass the works of Gods promise. Ver. 16.

2. The promise of the inheritance is repeated, with another sensible demonstration of it, to make it more clear to faith.

Ver. 17. Arise, walk thorough in the land, to the length of it, and to the breadth of it, for to thee will I give it. Cald. same. Arising travel thorough, &c. And to thy seed for ever. Sept.

In these, we have to consider these particulars.

1. The demonstration repeated, it was formerly by lifting up his eyes; now by arising and travelling thorough the land, it is thus given by way of command, wherein God injoyneth him.

1. To pluck up the stakes of his tent. Arise, that is, move from hence hence where thou art set; take up thy tents, this place is not enough for thee to see, neither is thy rest here stined.

2. To travel forward, that his feet may tread upon the land promised, and so be helpers to his faith as well as his eyes, wherein we have.

1. His motion, walk thorough, or over, and over.

2. His race, the land of Canaan promised.

3. His bounds, to the length and breadth of it, so is it read.

All this is but to demonstrate Gods promise to fence, wherein God doth not limit Abram, but giveth him liberty of surveying his promised inheritance. (2) The donation repeated, Go and walk about it, for to thee will I give it. It is added by way of reason to Gods demonstration as before; God sheweth because he hath a purpose to give. (1) The promise-maker is the same, Jehovah. (2) The promise the same, a free and full gift. (3) The subject to whom, the same Abram, including his seed, as it was before expressed. Yet all this to Abram was but in promise from God almighty, it was actually performed to his seed, at Gods appointed time, as before noted.

Learn we.

D. 1. Double demonstrations of mercies, and double promises, will God give for the support of the faith of his servants.

D. 2. God injoins experience sometimes for the help of faith in his promises.

D. 3. God would have his Saints reach the utmost dimensions of his promises. Eph. 3:19.

D. 4. God sheweth good things to his people which he purposeth to bestow on their succeeding generations.

D. 5. Gods promise to the head is performed in the seed.

D. 6. Free promise should provoke souls to get experience of the good things to come. V. 17.

The second particular in this last head followeth, which is Abrams return to Gods motion.

Ver. 18. And Abram moved Tent, and came and sat down in the plains or oak groaves of Mamre which are in Chebron, and he built there an altar to Jehovah. Cald. same.

plain. Before the Lord, and Abram intending himself, came and dwelt by the oak groave of mambre, &c; Sep.

In which return of Abram are considerable.

1. Abrams obedience to Gods command; a proof of his faith, God commanded him to arise from his place near Bethel, and survey the land; to this Abram giveth obedience, thus expressed. ver. 18.

And Abram took up the stakes of his tent, or untented himself, as the seventy, which was in order to his progress for survey of his promised inheritance; whether Abram travelled thorough-out the land, I conceive needles to inquire, for doubles Gods command did not injoyne him this for his toil, but for his comfort, & the strengthening of his faith, therefore so farre it is just to conceive he mooved; which was according to Gods will, and then sat down.

2. Abrams residence in a new place of habitation, doubles not without Gods intimation, wherein.

1. His entrance and possession, recorded thus, And he came, and he sat down, that is, guided by God after his survey, he came, and pitched in a certain place.

2. The place described by two titles.

1. Of the inhabitant there, in the plains, or oak groaves of Mamre. He was an Amorite. Gen. 14:13. And yet became confederat with Abram; not onely, in civill commerce; but in Church communion.

2. Of the eminent city near it. Which is in Hebron, or as the suburbs of it. It was not in Abrams time called Hebron but Arba of a great man among the Anakims, whose name it was. Gen. 23:2. Hereabout Abram and Isaac lived. Gen. 35:17. It was Davids first seat of his Kingdom. 2 Sam. 2:1.

3. Abrams religion, with his constancy and activity therein.

And there he built an Altar to the Lord. So he did at his entrance into the land, Gen. 12:7-8. So he doth here also at his new habitation. About this may be observed these particulars.

1. His reiteration of this work, which notes his constancy in the Worship of God.

2. The singleness of the work, It is but one altar in one place, God would have no more.

3. The use of it, which may be here manifold.

1. To give praise to God for his appearance and promise now made unto him. thank offering.

2. To offer sacrifice, and pray, that peace may be from God upon him.

3. To sanctify his new habitation, none can be holy without Gods Worship.

4. To teach Mamre, and his brethren with his family the true fear and Worship of of God, for so the event sheweth, they were confederat with him.

It instructs us.

- D. 1. Faith gives immediat obedience unto Gods advice.
- D. 2. Grace will untent soules any where, to goe where God will have them.
- D. 3. God sometimes scatters brethren in the Church to carry saving knowledge to strangers, so here with Abrams motions.
- D. 4. God sometimes makes the places of his Churches habitation memorable.
- D. 5. The faithfull cannot sit down quietly in any place without God.
- D. 6. Gods promise draweth out the Saints Worship of, and sacrifice to him.

CHAP. XIV.

IN this is continued the sacred history of the Church, and the several events under providence befalling it, while it now tabernacled in Canaan. In the former we read what it suffered by famine and the consequents of it, and of Gods appearance to save in famine, to bring it out of Egypt, to increase it, and singlet out for himself in Abrams family. Now followeth a relation in this chapter, of the Churches sufferings by warres, and Gods care of it in the times of trouble.

In the whole chapter are three general heads.

1. The warre made by wicked powers tending to the hurt of the Churches members and friends. ver. 1. 12.
2. The rescue of the Church from such oppression by Abram. ver. 13. 16.
3. The gratulation, which meeteth Abram and his carriage after victory. ver. 17. & 24.

In the first head occurre these particulars

1. The adverse parties of the warre, ver. 1. 2. 3.
 2. The occasion or cause of the warre. ver. 4.
 3. The entrance to the warre upon the frontiers. ver. 5. 6. 7. 8.
 4. The pitch battle between the fore-named parties. ver. 8. 9.
 5. The successe of the battel. ver. 10. 11. 12.
- The parties of this warre are thus described.

Ver. 1. And it was in the dayes of Amraphel, &c. — It came to passe in the reigne, which was of Amraphel, &c. Sept. Cald. same with Heb.

Ver. 2. They made warre with Bera, &c. — He made with Balla, &c. Cald. and Hebr. same.

Ver. 3. All these were joined together in the valley of Siddim. this is the sea of salt — In the Champian valley, &c. Cald. — All these came together into the salt valley. Sept.

In this passage are recorded these particulars.

1. The time of this conflict recorded. ver. 1. — And it was, or came to passe in the dayes of Amraphel.

Two terms are here noted.

1. The connection to that which is precedent. That was Abrams comfort in Gods appearance, promise, and pitching of his Tabernacle; presently thereupon commeth the history of a new trouble.

2. The time itself, In the dayes of Amraphel. This man being obscure in sacred history, the time is darker in pointing it out by him. It is not amiss conceived as will appear by precedent, and subsequent relation, of the age of Abram, to fall out in or about the 84th. year of Abrams life, 436 years after the flood, 2092 years, Schem, Cham and Japhet, yet surviving 86 years after Noahs death.

2. The parties offending or raising warre, foure Kings.

1. Amraphel, King of Shinyar, some think it to be Nimrod, Son of Cush, Son of Cham; but its not likely, another name being here exprest, and 300 years past from his raising his Kingdom at Babel. Some of his successors more probably it was.

2. Arioch, King of Ellasar, this is conjectured to be the King of Syria.

3. Cedar-la Yomer, King of Ycilam, that is of those that were the Persians, coming from Elam, one of the apostat sonnes of Shem.

4. Thidyal, King of Gojim, this word Gojim is taken either as a proper name of a place by some, or else as an appellative of the Nations: because it is conceived his dominion was was over a mixt people of the Nations, from the confluence of many of several Nations to him. As so it is said Galilee of the Nations. Mat. 4. ver. 15.

3. The act of offence, — They made warre, that is by hostile force they laboured to infest and subdue the defendants, the whole aggregation of evils accompanying the sword is carried in this; they made out all violence to destroy.

4. The Defendants, five other Kings here named.

1. Bera, King of Sodom, that is, the chief Ruler & Commander of Sodom.

2. Birsha, King of Gomorrah, which was the chief Ruler of that city.

3. Shinab, King of Admah, he that had preeminence there.

4. Shemeber, King of Zebain, he was Lord and Commander of that city.

5. The King of Bala, his name is not here exprest, but his place, by two titles.

(1) Bela, so it was called at this time.

(2) Zoar, so it was called after by Lot: who prevailed to keep this city from being consumed with the other 4, some 5 years after.

Quest. How came so many Kings so loon after the flood to be in-throned?

Answ. (1) The promise multiplied men. (2) Ambition made them Lords. (3) Small territories increased in numbers of People.

5. Their congresse, wherein we have to note.

1. The Parties, — All these Offenders and Defendants.

2. Their meeting, They joined together, viz. for battel, they meet to fight it out, and try for the mastery by the sword.

3. The place, set out under two names.

(1) By its name of old, — To the valley of Siddim. So it was called at this time of the battel. A levelled place, which the Caldee calleth Champian: the Greek, Salt valley: but this name came after. (2) By its name, when this was wrote, This is the Sea of Salt; that is, now when Moses wrote it was so called, the Salt Sea, or Dead Sea; God in his vengeance, when he rained brimstone and fire upon these Cities, turning it into this Dead and Salt Sea, called the lake Asphaltites, in which all fish dye, and the very birds flying over, by the infection of sulphureous vapours fall down dead, as it is recorded by Historians; but the battel must needs be fought on it when it was firm ground.

Take these Notes hence.

- D. 1. Great Temptations God many times sends his Servants after great manifestations of his Love.
- D. 2. The dayes of ambitious usurping Powers, are times of warres and troubles.

D. 3. Vain desires of Titles of honour, and injurious power are the mark's of ambitious wicked Spirits.

D. 4. All proud ambitious Titles have been more pleasing to the world, then to the Church. Ver. 1.

D. 5. Its usuall with worldly Kings to seek the vexation, and ruine of each other.

D. 6. When wickednesse cryeth loud to God and vexeth him, he will disquiet sinners. So Sodom.

D. 7. Bela may become Zbar; a sinful place, a place of safety to a Lot. Ver. 2.

D. 8. God makes wicked powers to meet & clash themselves together for destruction.

D. 9. Siddim may become a Sea of Salt; or the place of blood and sin is the place of death. Ver. 3. This is incurable but onely by the waters of the Sanctuary. Ezek. 47. 1, 8, 9.

2. Now followeth the occasion or cause of this warre between the former parties.

Ver. 4. Twelve years they served Cedarla-yomer, and in the 13th year they rebelled. Cald. same. — ~~amirous~~ They fell away. Sept.

Ver. 4.

Where we have two main things recorded, which concur to make up the cause.

1. That these five Kings last named, were in subjection unto Cedarlaomer; their state and the time are specified; they served Cedarlaomer, that is, shewed their subjection doubtles by tribute paid, this was their condition, the time was twelve years, several years before Abram came into Canaan, herein in some part was made good that Prophecy, that Cham should be a servant to Schem, for Cedarlaomer was of Schems posterity, and these Canaanits from Cham.

Quest. But how came these to be his servants?

Answ. The Scripture is silent of that, onely it is probable, that this Cedarlaomer had over-powred them, and brought them into subjection tyrannically, and that they being so brought — under, did by Covenant, or pledge yeeld themselves to be his servants. And to acknowledge it disadvantages, but dares adventure for its own ends. Ver. 8. 9.

The fifth particular relating to this warre is the successe, which as it was conquest and triumph to some for a time, so it was evil to others, in their slaughter overthrow and captivity; this bad successe concern's two fort's.

1. The provokers of the warre, verse. 10. 11.
2. The innocent sufferers by the warre, verse. 12.

The sad condition of the former followeth.

Ver. 10. And the valley of Siddim had pits, pits of slime, and the king of Sodom and Gomorrah fled, and fell there, and the rest fled to the mountaine. The salt valley, wells, wells of slime, &c. Sept.

And the champion valley had pits, out of which was digged slime, &c. Cald.

Ver. 11. And they took all the substance of Sodom and Gomorrah, and all their victuals and went away. And they took all the horse strength of Sodom, &c. Sept. Their carriages. And they plundred all the substance, &c. Cald.

In this narration of the ill successe upon the five defendants, we have to observe.

Ver. 10.

2. King.
21. 6.

(1) The place described. (1) By its name it was the same valley of Siddim, where the battel was pitched, which it is presumed the defendants chose for their own advantage. (2) By its adjuncts, pits, pits of slime were there; the doubling of the word notes the multiplicity of them, as is usual with the Hebr. Therefore our translators read, it was full of slime pits, some say wells of water; likely it is water might be in them; but it seems they were digged for sulphureous slime, wherewith they built and made their walls; this was chosen for a trap to the enemies, but turned to their own disadvantage.

2. The event which was evil to the five kings defendants.

1. Their flight recorded thus, And the King of Sodom and Gomorrah fled; these named, but under these names all the five with their forces are intended, these all were put to a rout. So God ordered the battel.

ופל

2. Their fall declared, there they fell, the phrase usually noteth death. Joshua. 8. ver. 24. 25. Judges. 8. 10. It is conceived, the kings are named for their forces, which might fall into the pits, choosing rather to perish there, than to fall into the hands of their enemies; but the king of Sodom is reported hereafter to come and congratulate Abrams victory, which is most likely the same, and therefore dyed not there himself.

3. Their dispersion thus continued — And the rest fled to the mountain, or moun- tainous country for shelter. They could not rally again for defence, but were all scattered. (4) The plunder which the invaders took from them. (1) all their riches.

And they took all the substance gotten in Sodom and Gomorrah, all the horses, the feventy, that is, all their carriages, if so, which was their wealth. (2) All their provisions for food. And all their food, that is corn and provisions, wherewith the land was full: they labour to impoverish and starve, whom they killed not.

5. Their return with the spoile of the enemy. They marched in triumph over the enemy carrying all the spoile with them.

2. The event is added, which was evil to the Church or some members of it, which were innocent and onely sufferers in the warre.

Ver. 12. And they took Lot and his substance, being the son of Abrams brother, and went away, and he was set down in Sodom. Abrams brothers son, and his stuffe &c. Sep. וְהָיָה לוֹט בְּיָדָם וְהָיָה לוֹט בְּיָדָם Cald. to same Herein is noted the suffering of the Church by this warre; by the rapine of these conquerors.

1. They took Lots person, whose relation also is noted to distinguish him from the wicked Sodomites, he was Abrams brothers son, one brought up with him in the Church of God.

2. They took all his substance, goods or stuffe which was not a little, together with all his family, wife and servants.

3. Their hasting away with their captives and spoil. And they went away.

4. The occasion of Lots being taken, which was his choice of his seat neer Sodom, that place of wickedness, and his being in the city now in this time of this warre. So that now he seeth, it was but sad sitting down among the wicked, so it is read rationally by some, for he was set down in Sodom.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Sinners advantages may prove contrary, to be disadvantages to them. From the place Pits.

D. 2. Pits may take them who intend them for others. Tsal. 9.

D. 3. God doth make sinners flye, and dye, and be dispersed, by sinners.

D. 4. Pits and mountaines are chosen to perish in by flesh, rather than the sword of their enemies. V. 10.

D. 5.

Ver. 11.

וכן

Ver. 12.

D. 5. Ambitious warres make havocke and lay waste, by killing, plundering and starving all that be in their way. V. 11.

D. 6. Warres in the world sometimes prove very prejudicial to the innocent Church of God.

D. 7. Ambitious conquerors spare neither good nor bad. All they have is spoiled.

D. 8. It is bad sitting down for the Saints among the tents of the wicked. He that chooseth their pleasures, shall feelee their paines. Ver. 12.

The second general head of the chapter containeth the rescue of the captives and the spoile taken by the 4 victorious kings, achieved by Abram: wherein.

1. The intelligence brought him. ver. 13.
2. The preparation made by him. ver. 14.
3. The execution upon the enemy. ver. 15.
4. The rescue of the captives. ver. 16.

The first of these is thus recorded.

Ver. 13. And there came an escaper, and reported to Abram the Hebrew, and he was dwelling in the oak-plaines of Mamre the Amorite the brother of Eschool and the brother of Yener, and they were Lords of Abrams Covenant. Cald to the same.

And one of them that were saved comming shewed to Abram, the passenger, he dwelt, &c. which were sworn together with Abram. Sept.

In this we have to note these particulars.

Ver. 13.

1. The intelligencer described thus — And an escaper came; where.

1. The connection is to be noted, which some render, then. As a particle of time, shewing it to be immediatly upon that sad event of Lot himself being taken prisoner.

(2) The intelligencer, one that was escaped from the common calamity, or one of them that were saved and kept alive, and at liberty; perhaps it might be one of Lots family, or neighbors, who knew the relation between him and Abram, whether he were a good man as some conjecture, it is disputable, the Cald. speaks nothing of him, but of his escaping. (3) The motion of him, he came, doubtles it was with speed, he made all haste possible to acquaint Lots friends, and seek for succour.

2. The intelligence, and he reported to Abram the Hebrew, &c. Wherein.

1. The newes itself which he reported, and that doubtles was the dolefull event of the late warre upon the members of the Church, and of the slaughter and captivity of many, and of Lot and his family in particular.

2. The party to whom this relation is made, set out. (1) By his personal name Abram. (2) By his family-name, Hebrew.

The Hebrew; which he had from Heber of the race of Schem his great grandfather, who is memorable for his constancy to Gods true religion, in the Apostacy of Nimrod, and kept the first pure language at the division of tongues, in his line God preserved his Church, upon this account is he called the Hebrew; not because he passed over the river, as the seventy seem to intimate, nor as if it were a name given him by his father, foretelling his state of travelling, the name is properly gentile, or national as the Amorite, Amalekite, &c. (3) By his habitation thus described — And he was sitting or dwelling now in the oak-plaines of Mamre, the Amorite. It was the same habitation, where he pitched after his viewing the land. Chap. 13. 18.

4. By his confederats, to whom also with himself these sad tidings are brought, Mamre, Eschool, and Yener, three Amorites.

And these were Lords of Abrams Covenant. The phrase is a proper Hebraism, which language in expressing the eminency of any one in any respect of worth or skill, calleth them Lords of such a thing, so Joseph is called the Lord or Master of dreames, that is a notable man for dreames, and the discovery of them &c. Gen. 37. 19. So notable archers are called Lords of the arrows. Gen. 49. 23. So here the Lords of Abrams Covenant, are his most eminent, and neer confederats, who were in speciall league with him, above any, and so it were well read, these were the eminent confederats of Abram, it is to be thought in religion, as well as in outward human association.

The word Eschool though it notes often idolls, yet properly it notes Lord in general.

Quest. It is inquired, could Abram be ignorant of this notorious warre?

Ans. It is probable he could not, but yet he might be ignorant of the sad successe, so lately fallen out, he being as is conceived about 30 miles distant from Lot: neither did he move sooner because he would not intermeddle with the quarrells of men, but when justly provoked, as he was by the injuries offered to Lot.

Quest. Was it lawful for him to confederate with the Amorites?

Ans. 1. It was not yet forbidden, but afterward.

2. Agreements may be made with infidels about civill things for commerce and safety.

3. It is safely presumed, that these three famous Amorites brethren, were brought to the faith of Abram, upon their eminent confederacy with him as is noted, and then the question is silenced.

X 3 to

Take these Notes from it.

- D. 1. Providence usually in the deepest distress of his servants, sends speediest means for their help.*
D. 2. God letteth some escape in publicke calamities, that may seek succour, for others who are oppressed.
D. 3. Gods escaped ones out of death and dangers should haste to give tidings for help to others.
D. 4. It is most proper that the sufferings of the Church in one place should be declared to the Church elsewhere for its relief.
D. 5. The line of his Church, truth, and religion, God hath kept under a proper name. Hebrew.
D. 6. It is fit that such as sit at ease in their own habitations should hear of the Churches troubles.
D. 7. God can bring heathens eminently to confederate with his Church and people in affection, and religion.
D. 8. Confederates in truth are affected with the evils that betide their parties, especially in the Church of God. Ver. 13.

The second particular now followeth toward the rescue, viz. Abrams preparation.

Ver. 14. And Abram heard that his brother was led captive, and he armed his instructed ones, children of his house 18, and 300. & pursued unto Dan. Cald. same. And Abram hearing that Lot his nephew was led captive, &c. he numbered his own house born, &c. Sept.

Herein we have storied Abrams referring Lots condition, and his army.

1. His reception of the newes, brought him is exprest. And Abram heard, &c. Wherein observe.

Ver. 14.

1. The connection, which is a term copulative uniting this to the former tidings; some read, when Abram heard, noting that he was immediately affected with the sad condition of Lot. (2) The impression made upon him. He heard, and that sadly, and with sympathy, as appears by the issue. (3) The matter which affected him, that his brother was taken prisoner, and led captive by those insulting conquerors, Lot is called his brother, not for the true ground of that relation, for he was his nephew, but according to the speech of the Hebrews stilling their kinned by that name. Yet doubtless he was dear as a brother especially in respect of his Church-relation, now that he should be led captive, and abused, and spoiled by such infidel oppressors, the noise of this affects Abram.

2. His preparation, which stands in two things.

1. His array. And he armed, &c. Wherein we have to note.

1. His act, it is read he armed, he made ready, the word signifieth to unsheath a sword; And so borrowed here to note an act of military array, he made them draw the sword. (2) His men described by three characters. (1) His catechized or instructed ones, such doubtless whom he had educated in spiritual things, and no less instructed for outward carriage and demeanor, at least for the common safety of them all, therefore are well called his trained ones. Whom he instructed also in the cause, & of Gods presence. (2) Such as were born in his house, or children of his house, that is such servants as were born in his family, had wives and children then with them in Abrams house. (3) Their number, which was 318. A great family must he have in all, there being so many numbred among them fighting men. Hence was he called a mighty Prince.

2. His pursuit of the enemy. And pursued unto Dan. Wherein. (1) His motion, he marched after he had arrayed his company in order to the rescue. (2) His speed, he presently set out, and followed the conquerors, Josephus saith, the fifth night after he reached them, but upon uncertain grounds, as he speaks many things else; doubtless Abram lost no time after his intelligence, but hastened to the rescue. (3) His progress, even unto Dan, a place in the north of Canaan, of old called Leshem, but when the tribe of Dan took it, they put the name of the tribe upon it. Joshua. 19. 47. Judg. 18. 29. Conceived to be above one hundred miles march, yet difficulties discourage not against a good work.

Quest. But what cause had Abram to take up arms?

Ans. It is conceived by Josephus, he did it as much for the Sodomites as for Lot, and that Lot was taken because he assisted the Sodomites, but both are false, and therefore to answer for him. (1) The cause was just, the oppression of righteous persons by tyrants. (2) His end was just to relieve the oppressed, and not any way to seek himself, not so much as to a shoe latchet.

קרי

3. His call was doubtless from God immediately; wherefore Melchizedek saith, that God had delivered his enemies into his hands. Sothanno ground is left for a just scruple.

Note we here.

- D. 1. Tidings of the Churches miseries should make deep impression upon its members.*
D. 2. Gods servants are not slow in hearing of the miseries of the Church and helping it.
D. 3. Brethrens captivity by oppressors should affect and move to their rescue.
D. 4. It becomes righteous heads of families to have their servants instructed in righteousness, and trained to righteous undertakings.
D. 5. Righteous leaders called of God may array and muster forces against oppressors.
D. 6. Small force of men, and great faith in God, may do mighty things.
D. 7. Leaders affected with the oppression of the Church will haste to follow the oppressors.
D. 8. Difficulties of march in such cases do not deterre believers from the pursuit. Ver. 14.

3. The execution upon the enemy is thus recorded.

Ver. 15. And he divided himself upon them by night, he and his servants, and smote them, pursued them unto Chobab, which is on the left hand of Damascus. Upon the north of Damascus. Cald. And he fell upon them by night, &c. Sept.

In this relation are observable.

1. Abrams military art, discovered in his present conduct. And he divided, &c. Wherein we have to note. (1) The connection, which notes the immediate onset, when he had found the enemy, no sooner had he discovered them, but presently falleth on. (2) The stratagem used, the enemies quarters being discovered, and how their camp was pitched, Abram doubtless instructed by God in this new undertaking dealt wisely.

1. In ordering his army fit for the onset, therefore he divides them into several parties, and doubtless appoints them their several posts, both his own men, and his confederate forces of the Amorites which came with him: into how many companies he divided them is not exprest, but doubtless, herein his wisdom was eminent so to digest them, as most likely to surprize the enemy, and so as by their signals made, they might fall on together.

2. In taking the night for his project: wherein he took the advantage of speed, of secrecy, not to be discovered, of the enemies security and oftancy, when they were unarmed, and unready, to make their own defence. And dis tempered with intemperancy, as Josephus.

2. His valiant onset, and violent execution. And he smote them. Which exprestion noteth the act of the prevailing party, and carrieth in it wounding, slaughtering, routing and subduing, and this he did by his forces as Gods faithful executioner, not pitying or sparing what God had appointed for destruction.

3. His unwearyed pursuit of the victory upon these proud and cruel Potentates. And he pursued them, &c. Where note (1) The fierce prosecution of the victory Abram with all his army; after slaying some, and putting the rest to a sudden flight, furiously makes after to cut them off in their rout.

2. The space of this pursuit, from Dan to the left, or north side of Damascus, the Metropolis of Syria, which was from the confines of Canaan into the chief part of Syria, all this way had Abram the mowing of them down: so that the swiftest of them could carry back nothing but the sad story of a lamentable destruction. In all which Abram waied by faith, being taught of God as well as called by him, and travelling in a way unknown. Ipsi. 41. 2. 3.

In this passage we have to observe.

יטב

1. The act of rescue — And he brought backe or returned, it hath immediate connection to the former, upon the overthrow of the spoilers, the spoile is presently rescued, it carrieth in it redemption from slavery, and restitution into proper right and liberty.

2. The object of this rescue noted in four terms.

1. All the substance. — The Sept. reads and all the horse, which with respect to the original, must note their carriages, which on horse or other carrying beasts, they had brought away from Sodom, all the riches which they had gotten, and the conquerors had made plunder; the worth of it, and the universality of it are here noted, all the substance or wealth.

2. He brought backe his brother Lot, and his substance. In which we may note, — (1) The act of rescue is repeated, as eminently aimed here at though others fared the better for it (2) The object, his brother Lot and his substance, family-goods and all.

3. The women, poor helpless creatures, the common prey to cruel lustful souldiers. — Those of the weaker sexe less able to resist, and therefore more liable to rapine and injury, these also he rescued.

4. And the people, — These doubtless were the whole rout of prisoners taken in battel and afterward, which they carried away in triumph, making them to serve with bitterness, all these are redeemed from hard masters, and set at liberty in their own places.

Take these Notes hence.

The third generall of this Chapter containeth Abrams gratulations after his victory and his carriage under them.

Ver. 17. And the king of Sodom went out to meet him, after he returned from smiting Chedor-lamcer, and the kings which were with him, to the valley Shaveh, this is the vale of the king. — And there went out the king of Sodom, and the king of Gomorra, &c. from the slaughter, &c. This is the field of king Melchizedec. Sept.

In the plaine valley, which is the refreshing place of the king. Caldec. After Abrams victory two parties are observed to meet and congratulate him for his good success, (1) a party of the world. The king of Sodom and his. (2) A party of the Church Melchizedek. The history of the first is interrupted, beginning at this 17th, and continued from the 21st verse to the end. The second is related together, verse 18. 19. 20.

In this 17th verse we have an entrance into the king of Sodoms congratulation, Ver. 17. wherein note. (1) His motion, and the king of Sodom went &c. Herein we have. (1) The connection. And, which some read wherefore, or therefore, that is, because newes came of Abrams victory, and rescue of the captives, then, or therefore, this king hasten's. (2) The subject, the king of Sodom, only named in the original, the Sept. add's the king of Gomorra. It is likely so many as were alive, and whom the rescue concerned, now were willing to see and congratulate the conqueror, though but for their own sakes. He that perhaps would scorn to own Abram before, now is willing to acknowledg him his patron and deliverer. (3) The motion itself, he went out, doubles without delay speeding to see the prey rescued.

2. The end of his motion — To meet him even Abram, which carrieth in it, his joy at the victory, his congratulation of him; and acknowledgment of his valor and success; herein however discovering humanity, though for his own ends.

3. The time and cause of his motion, described as followeth (1) The time was after Abrams return, or coming back from Chobah toward his own place near Hebron. (2) The cause is his victory over those conquerors, and slaughter of them who who not long since routed the king of Sodom and his confederats, slaughtered and led captive as they pleased; these being subdued, and that yoke of oppression broken and the captives rescued, give the cause of this visit from the king of Sodom.

4. The place whether he mooveth, and where he meets him described by two expressions. — 1. To the valley Shaveh, this being the proper name of it as is conceived, some read the plain valley. Cald. (2) The title more general. This is the kings valley. — Some conceive it so called for the excellency of it above others as a noted valley. The Caldec faith, it was the house or place of the kings refreshing. The Sept. read it the field of king Melchizedek. Now he is noted to be king of Salem, and in after time it was known a valley near Jerusalem that held that name of the kings valley, where Absalom set his pillar. 2. Sam. 18. 18. It is likely to be the same, known also by this name when this history was written, & probably belonging to Melchizedek, being king of Salem. So farre was Abram returned homeward, and here the king of Sodom met him. It is likely to be a large place, where all the spoile & captives might be distributed unto him & the rest concerned in them.

D. 1. Conquerors usually want not observance and congratulations from the world.

D. 2. The powers of the earth are sometimes forced to acknowledge the prowess of Gods Saints.

D. 3. Humanity persuades men to the acknowledgment of God to any, whom God makes helpful to them.

D. 4. The killing of the slayer, and breaking the yoke of the oppressor is cause of congratulation to the oppressed.

D. 5. Nature will not be slow to meet and congratulate its deliverers.

D. 6. Deliverance may make men goe farre to acknowledge Gods servants, who before would scarce vouchsafe to goe out of doors for them. Ver. 17.

The second congratulation now followeth, before that of the king of Sodom is finished. Viz. That of the Church acted by Melchizedek.

Ver. 18. And Melchizedek king of Salem brought forth bread and wine, and he was Priest to the most high God. — Of the most high, Sept. — King of Jerusalem; &c. And he a Minister before the high God. Cald.

Ver. 19. And he blessed him, and said, blessed be Abram to the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth — Melchizedek. &c. Who created heaven, &c. Sept. — Before the high God, whose possession is heaven and earth. Cald.

Ver. 20. And blessed be the most high God who hath delivered thine enemies into thy hand; and he gave to him the tenth of all. — Under thy hands, &c. And Abram gave, &c. Sept. — And he gave to him one of ten, of all things. Cal.

In the whole we have two heads considerable.

1. The congratulation of the Minister of God. Ver. 18. 19.

2. The return of Abram Gods servant. Ver. 20.

In the former, we have to note more distinctly.

1. The person congratulating expressed here.

1. By name. Melchizedek: which in the old Testament is but once here mentioned by Moses, and once by David. Psalm. 110. 3. Much stirre hath bin who this should be, whose proper name this is: the conceit of them, who thought him to be an Angell, Spirit, or Christ himself is foolish, it is evident he was a man, a King that swayed a scepter among men, therefore no Spirit, and Christ was a Priest after his order; therefore he could not be the same.

Such as more rationally deem him to be a man, are not agreed about him. Some ancient and modern Jewes and Christians, judge him to be Schem; the Patriarch, the Son of Noach, who was now surviving; but to be peremptory, where the Spirit doth not speak expressly, is rashness, if the Apostle be the best interpreter of Gods mind, he faith, that he was without Father, without Mother, and without Genealogy, having neither beginning of life nor end of dayes, which must be meant in respect of any holy record of these, not simply, for if he were a man he must have all these: but none of these are reported of this Melchizedek in all the sacred story. Yet of Schem, his beginning and end, &c. are known. In short whoever it was, known by this name, surely the Spirit of God would have us to be ignorant of him, and not to search farther than is revealed concerning this thing. It was therefore an extraordinary person, raised up by God, to be a speciall type of Christ, who was not of Abrams family, but by Gods call exalted and set up above him. This is enough for us to believe.

The connective particle by which this man is brought in with his congratulation.

Y

Is

Is best read adverbatively to what went before of the King of Sodom, he came out to meet Abram, but this great minister came to bless him, and bless God for him.

2. The person congratulating is expressed by his office, and proper works of it, which is twofold. (1) Kingly, expressed by his liberality. The King of Shalem brought forth bread and wine. Wherein we have to consider.

1. The title of office. King of Shalem. the former name noted his power and virtue, he was King of righteousness, so the Apostle expounds the name of Melchizedek, and therein commends him beyond all the Kings on earth, a fit type for Gods King, his own Son, this title notes his power, and his place. King of Shalem, which afterward was called Jerusalem: this the Spirit also sheweth to be King of peace, and from the notation of the name sheweth the fruit of the government of this King to be peace; very fit also in this respect to be a type of the prince of peace. The disputes about the variety of places under this name Shalem are of no great worth: seeing it is mostly agreed that this was the seat of this King which afterward was named Jerusalem: and in Davids time called by the name of Salem. Ps. 76. 5.

2. The work of this office is added, He brought forth bread and wine. This notes the free, liberal, and royall entertainment of a King towards Abram, and his wearied troopes, that were with him. The letter is plain. (1) The act, He brought forth, or caused to be brought forth and presented for refreshing to Abram. (2) The object, Bread and Wine. Metonymically, for all food and necessities, which might be requisite for the condition of the wearied souldiers, all this he did as King expressing bounty: therefore the Apostle intending mainly to speak of his Priesthood. Heb. 7. Doth not mention a word of this as not appertaining thereunto. Irrationally therefore is it read and urged by Popish Doctors, that he offered bread and wine in sacrifice to prove the Sacrifice of their Masse; whereas, the history is so clear, that it was a gift for Abram and his men, and no sacrifice to God. Neither doth the Apostle mention it as any act of his Priesthood.

Take these Notes hence.

- D. 1. Congratulations of the Saints to the sweet successes of the Church, are opposit to the worlds.*
D. 2. God had some chosen vessels out of the family of Abram, under whom he gathered his Church.
D. 3. An extraordinary King and Priest God hath sometimes set up as a proper type of his own son.

D. 4. A King of righteousness and peace, is best to typifie the prince of peace himself.

D. 5. It is enough to know concerning Melchizedek that God would not have him known. Hebr. 7. 3.

D. 6 Gods King is tender in refreshing Gods wearied servants. The King in type and truth.

D. 7. The bread and wine of Melchizedek was given to men, not offered to God.

D. 8. Allfull provision is made by the King of righteousness and peace, for Gods victorious servants. Ver. 18.

2. The Priestly office of this Melchizedek is described; and as formerly he congratulated Abram as a King, now he doth it as a Priest. Wherein we have to observe,

1. His office asserted And he was Priest to, &c. Wherein these terms are obvious. 1. The subject of this assertion connected and continued, and he, or even he. Which notes.

1. The identity of the person, it was Melchizedek, the very same, he that was King.

2. The singularity, it was he, and none else, he and not another, who in this was made like to the Son of God, or made fit to typify or resemble and liken him in his priesthood.

2. The attribute here given unto him, a Priest to God most high,

Whereof are two parts.

1. The title of office, Priest, as Hebr. and Sep. A Minister as the Cald. Which is a proper general name, so the originall word signifies sometimes a chief officer or Minister, next the King, as the Priest is next to God. 2. Sam. 8. 18. compared with. 1. Chron. 18. 17. Heb. 5. 1. In this is carried.

1. The nature of the office, which generally was to deal in all things for the people toward God, and especially to offer sacrifice for sin and to make reconciliation, to intercede for, and bless the people.

2. The eminency of the office, it was the Priest, eminently declared above all other sacrificers, for so Abram was a Priest himself, and did minister at the Altar, as we read frequently.

3. The reciprocation of this office with the person, so that it could pass no farther from him to any other, but he was that Priest, and that Priest was he.

2. The relation of it whose and to whom he was this minister. To the God most high; Hebr. Of God most high, Sept. Before God

God most high. Cald. All do but set out the author and great Lord to whom this minister had relation. So we know officers receive their dignity from the greatness of the Lords to whom they do belong. Now none so great as this Lord. Set forth here. (1) In his nature included, he that is. And of whom, and to whom all things are. No other can be God.

(2.) In his power, it is the mighty one; or God almighty, he that doth whatever pleaseth him.

(3) In his height, the most high, which is here first used, with respect to Abrams victory, and Melchizedeks blessing, which notes his exalted glory above all creatures, and is the character of the only true God, in opposition to all false ones, 1. Sai. 57. 15.

Take now from hence these truths asserted.

D. 1. It must be the same, and no other person, King and Priest, who represents the Son of God.

D. 2. There was a priesthood before the Law eminent for blessing, and reciprocal to one person, the type of Christ.

D. 3. It is God most high whose priesthood this is, who giveth the honor and efficacy to it above all, how eminently must that Priest be blessed; to whom the height of God is assistent. P. V. 18.

2. His Priestly work expressed, which is all in blessing, & that is twofold, which is here expressed.

1. The blessing terminated on Abram, wherein observe.

1. The manner of giving it, by speaking. And he blessed him and said, that is, he blessed him by saying. The Sept. reads, and Melchizedek blessed him, to take away that doubt of the party blessing, which likewise the Apostle doth confirm. These terms are more distinctly to be observed.

1. The term of connection, which knits the work to the office. He was the Priest of God most high And, or therefore he blessed, &c.

2. The act, or work annexed, he even Melchizedek, blessed him, where we have.

1. The blesser, he, the Priest, as the minister and instrument in Gods hand for this work, he is efficient and bestower of the blessing, therefore greater than Abram, as the Apostle gathereth. Heb. 7. 6. 7.

2. The blessing carried in the word, which for the matter of it followeth hereafter, but here it notes some special good added and bestowed upon Abram, and that effectually.

3. The person blessed Abram himself, herein lesse then Melchizedek, however otherwise the heir of promise, and now a glorious conqueror, and redeemer of the Church.

3. The manner of blessing. And said, that is by word speech he and blessed him, of which note.

1. The kind of word, it was Prophetical. 2. It was petitionary, by way of prayer. 3. It was authoritative, and powerful, bringing from God the good prophesied and prayed for upon Abram.

2. The matter of the blessing itself. Blessed be Abram to the most high God, &c. Here note. (1) The subject of this blessing, Abram the friend of God.

2. The matter of the blessing, it is all good, both spiritual, and temporal: even all within Gods compasse, all that was carried in the promise.

3. The certainty of it, be he blessed, or he is blessed, the good is, hereby put into actual being.

4. The author or fountaine of it, God, expressed here by two attributes. Which magnify the blessing.

(1) God most high. That is, God exalted in glory, at the height of his Power, wisdom, goodness, holynes and glory, to be blessed from him; gracious to him, accepted and beloved of him, and abounding with all good before him, how highly blessed must this soul be?

2. Priest of the heavens and the earth. Creator, the Sept. render it by mistake of the word, more than of the matter, for the Creator only is Lord and possessor of them. Now this adds to the weight of the blessing, that if any thing in heaven or earth can be good for Abram, he that possesses both, is the spring of blessing, from whence Melchizedek fetcheth it for Abram, and he faileth not of it. Thus farre the blessing upon man, even Abram.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Office and work are joined together in all Gods Ministers, Priests, and blessing.

D. 2. A ministry God hath used to bless his people, extraordinary and ordinary.

D. 3. God hath made his blessed ones inferior, and engaged to his blessing ministry.

D. 4. The chiefest of Gods Priests have blessed Saints by prayer and prophesy.

D. 5. All blessing on soules and bodies is certainly conveyed to Abram and his by Gods own Priest. Melchizedek and Christ.

D. 6. God alone is the fountain of blessing through his ministry.

D. 7. The height of God glorifieth the blessings of his ministry upon his people.

D. 8. Gods possession of heaven and earth filleth up the blessing of Abram and his seed. Ver. 19.

2. The next work of this Priestly office wherein Melchizedek congratulates Abram, is a blessing given unto God. In which are obvious.

Ver. 20.

1. The Priestly act, blessing. Recorded thus, And blessed be, &c. (1) The connection of this blessing unto the former, Gods praise, with his Churches good, it must be joined inseparably. (2) The work is blessing; which being terminated upon God, cannot signify as before the donation of any good to him, for the creature can add nothing unto God. But the blessing of man unto God consists.

1. In the acknowledgment of all good from him.

2. In confessing his name upon all our good.

3. In returning thanks and praise for all, so blessing and thanksgiving are synonymous, Matthew. 26. 26. compared with Luke. 22. 19. Only this differs from common blessing of men, in that it is an act of office even of Gods own eminent high Priest, whose blessing to God and man is effectual to man for good, to God for glory in adoration.

2. The object of this blessing is God most high. Wherein note.

1. His being as the cause of beings is blessed.

2. His power above all creature power is confessed.

3. His height, that he is higher than the highest, who hath all things under him.

And thus he is blessed here, that is, acknowledged, confessed, praised, and worshipped.

3. The reason of this present Priestly act, Gods good hand upon Abram, thus paraphrased. Who hath delivered thy distressers into thy hand, or who hath given thine enemies under thine hand. Three parties are here considerable, in this reason of the blessing.

1. God the author of the Churches deliverance, and subduing of the distressers. He alone gave up those raging enemies, and cast the victory upon Abram: he gives them for a prey, and he gives the spoils to Abram.

2. The proud usurping enemy subdued, and brought under Abrahams hand or power, they were now in manu eius

Although enemies, yet enemies subdued, distressers led captive, and brought under command. This is a just cause of blessing. Exodus. 15. Judges. 5. &c.

3. Abram honored and crowned with victory. God delivered and his hands only take the enemy into his power, to execute the will of God upon them. God is the giver and Abram only the receiver of the conquest, therefore God is blessed. So farre the congratulation.

2. The return of Abram to Melchizedek after his congratulation followeth thus, And he gave to him the tenth of all.

In which are. (1) The connection, and, which knits immediately this return of the blessed one unto the bleaser. (2) The solvent here is Abram blessed by Gods high Priest, he that was heir of promise, even he for himself, and all his acknowledgeth duty and homage to God, and the Priest of the most high by this return.

3. His solution, wherein. (1) His act, he gave, that is, (1) Obedientially, as a just debt. (2) Freely without coercion. (3) Thankfully, by way of acknowledgment. (2) The matter of his retribution. The tenth of all, or one tenth of all, as Cald.

Herein observe.

1. The stinted portion, it was the tenth part, neither more, nor less.

2. The extended bounds of this portion, it is expressed, of all; the Apostle faith of the spoils, which must be meant of those taken from the four kings, for of the spoils of Sodom he took nothing; this must be granted; but yet the universal particle here seemeth not to be bounded to spoils, but that Abram, did of all he had give the tenth: and however we read not of payment of them but in this place, yet it hindreth not but that Abram paid this acknowledgment to this Priest continually.

4. The solved, or the superior to whom this homage is paid in Gods stead, is his Priest Melchizedek long before the law, authorized by God take this acknowledgment, and whereby the Apostle concludes him to be greater than Abram. Heb. 7. vers. 4.

Some queries here would be answered. Quest. 1. How came Abram to pitch upon such a portion as the tenth, why not rather a fifth, or third, or half, or all?

Ans. 1. Nature could not dictate such a portion for God, but rather all, because all is from him. (2) The law of tithes was not then written, which afterward was, Levit. 27. 30. Numb. 18. 24. (3) This must be the positive law of God revealed at that time, as God was pleased to make known his will; of which we have the practice both in Abram here, and afterward in Jacob. Gen. 28. 22. Wherein the great God condescends much to man.

Quest.

Quest. 2. Whether from hence, it being before the Law, may be evinced, that such a proportion is due under the Gospel?

Ans. Unto which that I may return plainly I shall give an answer in these propositions.

1. That this portion was a due to Melchizedek.

2. That Christ was the Priest of Melchizedeks order.

3. That the Priesthood is reciprocal with Christ.

4. That the tenth of all is proper unto that high Priest, and at his dispose.

5. That he hath not abated of that proportion, which God hath required from men.

6. That the tenth of mens estates is due to God, of which he alloweth a full measure to the Gospel-ministry, and thereto to other uses at his pleasure.

Take these notes from it.

D. 1. Blessing from God to man requirith immediately mans blessing of God again. Connect.

D. 2. Priestly blessing of God, is his ordinance, as well as Priestly blessing from him.

D. 3. The confession, praising and adoring of God in his being, power and highness is all the blessing soules can give to God.

D. 4. High blessings from God must have high blessings and praises of him answering them.

D. 5. God alone gives the events of warre, subduing to enemies, conquest to the Church.

D. 6. Such providences command blessing and praise for God who orders them.

D. 7. The best congratulation to conquerors is thanks-giving unto God for them.

D. 8. The blessed mans return unto God is not long after Gods blessing of him.

D. 9. The tenth of mens estates in the world is Gods specialty, to be disposed as he will.

D. 10. A soul blessed of God will freely pay this homage to him, or his assigne.

D. 11. Reall thanks of mens substance must be given to God as well as lip confession.

D. 12. All such returns must be made with professed subjection unto God, and his Christ the means of blessing, and all the instruments of the same. V. 20.

2. Now followeth the King of Sodom congratulation continued, wherein are obvious.

1. The King of Sodom offer by way of thankfulness unto Abram.

Ver. 21. And the King of Sodom said unto Abram. Give to me the soul, and take the substance to thy self. Cald. same. Give me the men, but take the horse carriage to thy self, Sept.

In which passage we have obvious to view.

1. His friendly communication annexed to his former access. ver. 17. Then, or and, that is, after he was come, the King of Sodom said unto Abram, that is, by friendly communication discoursed with him.

2. His petition to him. Give me the soul, wherein (1) He desires a gift, but no debt, acknowledging all due to the conqueror, but begging an act of grace from him. (2) The matter of the gift desired, the soul, where there is a double figure (1) Enallage unumv. Soul put for soules, singular for plural. (2) Synecdoche parvis pro toto, soules for men, women and children of all ages and relations; which did belong to him: The Sept. read plainly; give me the mee, that is, all persons belonging to his dominion: and no more, for Lot and his company were set free by themselves.

3. His concession, what he would willingly give to Abram as a due acknowledgment thus expressed. And the substance take to thy self. It was taken by Abram, and before by the Spoiler, and therefore is it in his hand to give it to the King of Sodom as well as the persons. Neither doth the King speak here as proprietor, but as an ingenuous client yielding willingly to him what he had, wherein is obvious. (1) Ingenuity and freeness in yielding up all.

(2) Liberality and fullness, all the substance, goods, and riches belonging to Sodom; which the four Kings took away, all their horse-carriages as the Sept. seem to call it. So farre as a man he acknowledgeth himself indebted to Abram, and therefore offereth this homage.

Note from it.

D. 1. Successes will bring great men of of the world to friendly communications with Gods people.

- D. 2. Lofty proud enemies may become petitioners to Gods servants
 D. 3. Persons are more desirable to Fathers and Kings, than goods and riches.
 D. 4. Ingenuity will take as a gift of grace, what was its own, yet taken and redeemed.
 D. 5. The soul makes man so much desirable, he is therefore styled by that name, give me the soul, &c.
 D. 6. Ingenious Spirits will be free and full in acknowledgments to their redeemers. V. 21.

2. Abrams return to the King of Sodom offer, recorded.

Ver. 22. Then said Abram to the King of Sodom, I have lifted up my hand to Jehovah the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth. I will stretch out my hand to God most high who created heaven and earth, Sept. I lift up my hand in prayer before the Lord the most high God, whose possession is, &c. Cald.

Ver. 23. If from a thread even to the latchet of a shoe, or if I take of all which is to thee, and thou shalt not say, I have enriched Abram. Cald. to fame. If from a thread to the latchet of a shoe I shall take of all that is thine; that thou mayest not say, that I have enriched Abram. Sept.

Ver. 24. Besides only, what the youths have eaten, and the part of the men which went with me, Yancr Eschol and Mamre let them, or they shall take their portion, Sept. and Cald. same.

In this reply of Abram we have to note.

1. His declaration to the King of Sodom as touching the offer made by him.

Ver. 22. Then Abram said to the King of Sodom, that is, after his ingenious proffer, he speaks friendly to him again, and withal declares his mind freely, as to the grant he made.

2. The matter declared, in three heads.

1. His adjuration, or vow by oath which he had made to God, wherein we may see.

1. The deponent, Abram, Gods friend and servant.

2. The form of deposition. I have lifted up my hand, &c. A fashion used in swearing. Dan. 12. 17. Rev. 10. 5. 6. I have lift up my hand in prayer, as the Caldee; but it is more properly, the symbol of an oath, so he declares, that he had bound himself according to what followeth.

3. The object of this service, or peace of worship, God, set out here in four titles.

1. Jehovah. He that was, is, and is to come.

2. El, The mighty God, who had saved him. (3) The most high. (4) The possessor, &c. All note him to be the true God only.

4. The matter depofed, which in general was not to take the least thing of the King of Sodom. Two particulars are here expressed.

1. The thing depofed. If from a thread to the latchet of a shoe, it is a form used in swearing, which is defective and doth require supply; as, if I take, let God require it: so it is rendered well negatively I will not. Heb. 3. 11. 18. Psalm. 95. 11. (1) The matter sworn is that he will not take from the King of Sodom, no not by his grant. (2) The extent of it, not from a thread to a shoe latchet, not a jot of all that was his, so little was this holy conqueror taken with the love of spoil. (2) The reason of this deposition, the connective particle here may be read cautiously because thou shalt not say, &c.

1. He reasons from the person, not thou the King of Sodom, but God most high shall have the glory of all my acquisitions. (2) From the substance, it is not riches that moved me to undertake this warre, but righteousness, it was not to be made rich by thee. (3) From himself, Abram hath a promise from the possessor of heaven and earth, of all blessing, and should he be enriched by Sodom. Upon his own side, faith, righteousness, and contentation, is the reason of his refusal. Upon the King of Sodom's side, his boasting by such mean's and taking occasion to reproach God; and to lessen his blessing to Abram.

2. His reservation, which is just, he would not injure others, by his own free refusal of the spoil. Two exceptions therefore he maketh.

1. Concerning the food which the young men had eaten, which doubtless were Abrams trained servants called here young men or youths.

This was the justest thing that could be, that soldiers should eat when they were venturing their lives for their rescue. Meat only excepted for his soldiers in the time of their work Abram will touch with nothing else of Sodom.

2. Concerning his confederates, and the part of the men that went with me, &c. Excepting also the part or portion, taken by them and due unto them; which was most righteous, that his freedmen for himself should not prejudice others in their right: he gives order for them, they shall have; or let them have their part.

It Learneth us.

D. 1. Grace denieth not civil returns to ingenious carriages of men.

D. 2:

D. 2. It befits the children of grace to bind themselves by oath from evil.

D. 3. Such oaths must be made to the true God only. It is part of his worship. Ifai. 65. 15.

D. 4. The being, power, height and sufficiency of God, are enough to take of his servants from all engagements to men. Ver. 22.

D. 5. Gods sanctified ones having enough in and from God, abhorre to take from worldly men to his dishonor.

D. 6. Gods servants undertake no warre for spoil but righteousness to redeem the oppressed.

D. 7. Neither thread nor shoe latchet advantage will righteous soules take from the wicked upon their successes.

D. 8. It is the believing magnanimity of the heirs of promise, not to be enriched by the world, though by right they may claim it. Ver. 23.

D. 9. Vows to God must not imply unjust things to Men.

D. 10. Liberality of some eminent Saints, must not prejudice the right of other men, to give that away. Abram so provides for his confederates. Ver. 24.

CHAP. XV.

The Prophets transition from the precedent narration to another, sheweth the history of the Church continued as it was in Abraham and his family unto the 86th year of his age. This whole Chapter is taken up in a twofold revelation of Gods will in things to come upon his Church.

1. In a vision of comfort made to Abram when he was waking. Ver. 1. 11.

2. In a discovery of some sad events upon his Church to him, when he was sleeping yet with some revivings in renewing his Covenant. Ver. 12. 21.

1. In the vision of comfort are two heads.

1. The ascertaining to Abram the seed of the Church, ver. 1. 6.

2. The ascertaining the place and inheritance of the Church, ver. 7. 11.

1. In the assurance made by God of the seed. These particulars are observable.

1. Gods appearance to Abram in a general way of consolation. ver. 1.

2. Abrams return to God. Ver. 2.

3. Gods reply again upon Abram. Ver. 4. 5.

4. Abrams acquiescence in Gods word, Ver. 6.

1. The general word of comfort is thus given.

Ver. 1. After these words or things, was the word of Jehovah to Abram, in a vision, saying, Fear not Abram. I thy shield, thy reward much exceedingly. I protect thee, thy reward shall be exceeding great. Sept. The word was from before the Lord to Abram in Prophecy saying, &c. My word shall be thy strength, thy reward too too much. Cald.

In this general discovery of comfort, we have.

1. The time of it pointed out. After these things. It may be read after these words, that is those very words with the king of Sodom, wherein he declared his living above creatures in those great undertakings; and as well, after these things, for so the expression, both Hebrew and Greek may hold out; now so it notes all the transactions thus farre, to the restoring of every man his own after the conquest. All those matters ended, God now appears again.

2. The author of it, Jehovah by his word. The only true God. He that was, that is, and that is to come, the eternal, he giveth out his word for comfort. Authorizing, as to the Prophet. Ifai. 1. 1. and 40. 1.

3. The subject to whom it cometh, to Abram. It is the heir of promise, whom God had called out of his own country, brought into Canaan, honored with so great a conquest before his enemies; and yet he now humbled, and standing in need of some reviving.

4. The manner of appearance of this word from Jehovah. It was in a vision saying. So the Hebrew, and Greek agree the Caldee, in Prophecy, which may be no unfit paraphrase. Several ways of Gods appearing of old we have; but two usually, both which fall upon Abram. Num. 12. 6.

1. Vision, which is some visible discovery of God to men, when they are waking, such was here to Abram, and such were to Jeremy, Ezekiel, Zechary, Peter and John.

2. Dream, which God was pleased to give for sometimes to his servants as here, afterward he shewed something to Abram, so he hath sometimes by it made known things to his enemies, as to Pharaoh, Gen. 41. and to Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 2.

Who

Who had no understanding of God by it, but to his Saints he hath made his mind known by the fame, As to Joseph and Daniel. Gen. 41. 25. Dan. 2. 19. So God continued to appear to Joseph and Mary about their moving to and from Egypt. Matt. 2. The former way God useth here, by some visible appearance; for-as-much as afterward he leads Abram forth; but evidently thus he commeth to comfort Abram.

5. The matter of the consolation here given by God in this way. Which stands.

1. In a word of command or counsel. Fear not — Thou shalt not fear, or fear thou not. whether it were to prevent future, or remove present fear, is not to expresse. But this is evident, at such sudden visible apparitions the Saints have startled, and feared evil, when God intended good. So Gideon, Manoah, Mary, &c. Whether this only were the cause of his fear, or any other terrible apprehensions from enemies without, or temptations within, it matters not much, the prohibition is, fear not. Wherein.

1. The evil forbidden is unbelieving, distracting and tormenting fear.

2. The prohibition absolute and peremptory, as well as efficacious to remove them.

2. In a word of promise. Which is twofold.

1. I am and will be a shield to thee. — I will protect thee, as the Seventy. My word shall be thy strength as the Caldee. This is a promise securing from all formidable evils that might assault him to make him fear.

1. The undertaker is Jehovah. An everlasting rock.

2. The good promised, all the comfort of a shield, that is Shelter, defence and exemption from any evil that can be feared, real and universal.

3. The subject of the promise — To thee Abram, and such as thee.

2. I am or will be thy exceeding great reward. — The seventy read, thy reward shall be very much. So it pleaseth some to read, making reward the subject of the proposition. And upon this reason, because of Abrahams reply to God, by way of complaint, for want of a child, which they conceive, Abram would not have done, if God himself had bin proposed as his reward. But the reason is not of strength; for if Abram did complain, it was his infirmity, and he might offend in it against God, as well as his promise, and no inconvenience follow the supposition of so much; but Abraham complaineth not of the littleness of his reward, only expresseth his desire to see the promise accomplished concerning his seed. Herein therefore, (1) God is the subject, as before the infinite and incomprehensible good. (2) The attribute, wherein. (1) The nature of it, reward. A word used for the due return to the hiring, but in this place, and others, spoken of God concerning his creatures, it is not, it cannot be so; but notes only a good answerable and sufficient to supply the wants of the creature, whether spiritual, or temporal. Which is sometimes expresse by portion, and lot, inheritance to his people; such is God without any demerit from man.

2. The measure of it set out by two words, exceeding great, or much vehemently or too too much, over-reaching the bounds of creature comprehension, God can be no lesse, if he be the reward, as els where also he thus makes over himself.

I will be a God to thee, that is, all good.

3. The propriety, thy reward, that is Abrahams, and all such as are as Abram.

3. The manner of attribution is free and promissory, I will be this to thee, because I will, so that no debt can be claimed, nor merit pretended here by creatures.

From it note.

D. 1. Times of self denial in the creature, in the season of Gods appearance most sweetly to them.

D. 2. Gods work being done by Saints, and mans reward slighted, God will not belong from appearing to comfort them. From the time.

D. 3. Visions of comfort are given by the word of Jehovah alone to his Abrahams.

D. 4. Gods word is effectual to and for all, it speaketh concerning the good of his people.

D. 5. God hath commanded a fear not for his faithfull Abrahams.

D. 6. Jehovah by promise is the shield, or sure defence of his from all evils.

D. 7. Jehovah is the unmeasurable reward of his people: a free, gracious and full portion to them.

D. 8. Such soules so defended and rewarded have no need to fear. V. 1.

2. Now followeth Abrahams return unto God.

Ver. 2. And Abram said, O Lord Jehovah, what wilt thou give unto me, and I walk solitary or childless, and the son of disposition of my house, as some, or the son of dereliction of my house, as others, is this Eliezer of Damascus. — And I am dismissed childless childless; and the Son of Masek my home-borne handmaid is this Damascus Eliezer. Sept. — And I goe without a child, and the Son of feeding or governing he who is in my house, he is Eliezer of Damascus. Cald.

Ver. 3. And Abram said behold to mee thou hast not given a seed, and behold a Son of my house inherit me, or is my heir. — Because thou hast not given me a Son, but one of my house born shall inherit me, Sept. — Thou hast not given me an issue, &c. Cald.

This return seems to come from a Spirit not satisfied with Gods former promise, and therefore carrieth in it some complaint of a want that stuck close upon Abram.

In the whole passage we have to observe.

1. The plaintive replying, twice expresse, and Abram said, ver. 2. again and Abram said, ver. 3. Wherein. (1) The man is named twice, Abram, the heir of promise, the late conqueror, the friend of God, to whom the eternal was a shield and reward exceedingly, yet now troubled for all this, because yet the seed did not appear, which he expected. (2) His speech, which is doubled, said and said.

The repetition notes some emphasis. Abram. Yea Abram, he said and again he said, his heart was full, to make exception against his precedent comforts given by God.

2. The complaint which he maketh is twofold, & that doubled in these two verses.

1. For want of a seed, a son of his own body, whereof he complaineth two wayes.

1. By expostulation: ver. 2. Thus recorded — What wilt thou give mee and I walk solitary or childless. wherein observe.

1. The form of it, notes discontent of Spirit, by thus questioning. As if Abram had said, thus Lord thou hast given much to me, even thy self my shield, and full reward, but how can this be, or what is it thou wilt give, if thou deny me this desire of a child.

2. The matter of complaint takes in.

1. The object to whom, Adonay, Jehovah. Some critical notes are among the Hebrewes concerning the vowels in the second name of God, but nothing of the sense of it is altered, it is the name of Gods eternal being; but it is observed by Junius that these names are usually joined, when the soul more passionately seeks to God, or complains unto him. As here and Deut. 3. 24. Deut. 9. 26. Abram looks upon God here: (1) As his proper Lord, and household-master, who took the care of him. Sept. Adonay. (2) As the eternal cause of the being of him and all his comforts, and could put his seed into being also.

2. The thing complained of, wherein. (1) A concession, it is true, thou hast given thy servant great promises, above his thoughts, too great for such a worm. Thou hast given victory, &c. (2) An exception, but what all this, seeing I goe childless? two things seem to make up this complaint. (1) His going or walking, which is in the wearing out of his life, as if he had said, I am going to my fathers, or as the Sept. I am dissolved, that is, by age he now supposed himself declining toward the grave. (2) His want of a seed: I am yet solitary alone, without a child, or son which should be the seed promised; and what are all things els without this?

2. By positive demonstration is this complaint made. ver. 3. — Behold to mee thou hast not given a seed. Which is the same as before, only more demonstratively he points out his discontent, thou hast given much, but behold a son, a seed, that desired mercy, that thou hast not given me; where in this temptation he seemeth to complain something of God, as well as to him, about keeping backe yet the promised seed.

2. The other matter of his complaint is, least a stranger should be his heir. This is also twice expresse. (1) And the son of disposition or dereliction of my house, v. 2. Wherein.

1. The subject spoken of, is Eliezer of Damascus, some take Damascus to be the name of the Man also, as the Sep. seems to read by apposition: but more generally is it taken for the name of that Metropolis of Syria which some say was built by this man.

2. That which was spoken of him; which Abram hints at in his complaint. He is the Son of the disposition of my house, so some read the word — As if it noted, the work of going up and down the house, and ordering affaires therein; and that is the reason; it is translated steward of his house, now if so, the meaning is, that this Eliezer was not only present steward, for that did not trouble Abram, but that he must leave his house to be ordered by him, he having no Son. The Caldee favours this reading. But others read the word dereliction, to this sense, he is the Son to whom all must be left for want of an heir, or the son of a derelict house, who must be adopted heir, when I have none born: either may bear good sense, but the latter is nearer to his want, the scope of both is the same.

3. This matter of complaint is repeated, ver. 3.

And behold a son of my house doth inherit mee, or is heir to mee, where note.

1. The term of demonstration. Behold, which notes some eminent disgust which Abram had unto this inheriting of a stranger, as if he had said, behold after all the promises made me, thus it is.

2. The subject here repeated, the son of my house, opposed to the son of the womb, or of a mans own body, that is a servant.

John. 19: v. 17.
Pro. 31. 2.
Jer. 2. 14.
Genf. 17.
v. 12.

3. The attribute, he inherits me, that is, all that is mine, or he is like to be my heir, if I now goe down to the grave. Here is grief.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Gods Abrams after great experience and promises, under temptation may say and say what is not convenient, and that to God.

D. 2. Some outward want may trouble a soull sometimes, who hath a full God for its portion.

D. 3. Gracious soules in such case complaine to none but God about.

D. 4. Dominton and the eternal being of God is acknowledged affectionately by Saints in such cases.

D. 5. Saints in weaknes may think all Gods gifts but small, while their desire is denied.

D. 6. It is an hard temptatton to eminent Saints sometimes to goe childles out of the world.

D. 7. Saints do acknowledge children Gods gift, and goe to him for them. Genes. 25. 21.

D. 8. It is incident to good men when great in the world to be troubled for an heir, that strangers should not inherit after them. Ver. 2. 3.

3. Now followeth Gods reply to Abram.

Ver. 4. And behold the word of Jehovah was unto him, to say, he shall not inherit thee, but he that shall come out of thy bowels, he shall inherit thee. And presently the voice of God came to him, &c. But he who shall come out of thee, &c. Sept. — The word from the face of the Lord, &c. But the son whom thou shalt beget, he shall be thy heir. Cald.

Ver. 5. And he led him forth abroad, and said, look now to the heavens; and number the starres if thou be able to number them, and he said unto him, so shall thy seed be. Sept. and Cald. Same. So shall thy sonnes be. Cald.

Gods reply in these, is wholly consolatory against the former complaint of Abram, for want of a seed, so the gracious Lord yeelds to the infirmities of his, and puts his armes under to bear them up.

The consolation is given him two wayes

1. To his ear, ver. 4. 4. Wherein we have to note.

1. The manner of making it out to his ear thus expressed — And behold the word, &c. This comfort here is brought by term of demonstration as the complaint was in the precedent ver. here are obvious.

1. The term of connection, and, which knits the comfort close upon the complaint.

2. The term of demonstration, behold, as Abram pointed out his grief to God, behold thou hast not given me a seed, so the Lord points out in the same way his comfort. Behold, The Sept. read instantly.

3. The mean's pointed out for comfort the word of Jehovah, which likely came in an audible voice, as at other times, this speaks out the comfort.

4. The object to whom, Abram the plaintiffe somewhat discouraged for want of a child.

2. The matter of comfort made out by this word, in two propositions.

1. Negative, removing Abrams fear of a strangers succession. — This shall not inherit, or be thine heir, which is the son of the house; therefore fear it not.

2. Affirmative, supplying Abrams want. But he that shall come out of thy bowels. Here God speaks to his heart in promise, (1) The subject whereof is a child, and son eminently out of his own bowels, whom yet he should beget, when reached to greater dayes, and lesse hope in the flesh. (2) The attribute, He shall inherit, or be thine heir, this was the good now wanted, and desired, and all this was Gods undoubted word unto him. (2) To his eye God makes out his comfort also ver. 5.

Where occurre these particulars to be considered.

1. His production thus recorded; — And he brought him forth abroad, this must be understood in vision or trance, he is carried out of his tent. The term connective doth but adde another cordial to him in his fainting. The leader of him is God, his morion is abroad out of doores, but in vision onely: so far he prepares him for more comfort.

2. His signal of Gods supply, presented to his eye, And said, look now toward the heavens. &c. In which we may observe

1. The act signal, is to look, or fixe his eyes to help his faith.

2. The object signal, the Heavens.

(3) The end, to see if he could number the starres. If he could, which by experience he found could not: neither any man can. Jer 33. 22. Onely is it Gods prerogative. Psalm. 147. v. 4. For however some of eminent station and motion may be numbered, all that are fixed in the heavens cannot. So Abram

Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

Abram was convinced they were innumerable to him.

3. His application of this to strengthen faith and help his comfort. — And he said to him, that is, God to Abram, so shall thy seed be, that is, numberles; (1) The subject. Although seed generally be taken for all Abrams children, yet here with respect to the heir promised, it notes all in that line especially. (2) That which is applied to this seed is likenes to the starres in their number: God had formerly in a like promise, used the similitude of the dust for this purpose, to shew the numberlesnes of his seed, the same thing he now sets out by the starres, it is therefore but a conjecture beside the scope of the scripture, although harmles, that by the dust should be signified Abrams natural seed, which are earthy, and by the starres his spiritual seed, which are heavenly: for the scope of both signalls, is to answer Abrams doubt about his solitarines, that he had no child, and this God doth by the promise of a numberles seed unto him. As the dust, or as the starres.

Learn from hence.

D. 1. God is not farre behind in answering the complaints of his servants, which are causes, when made in weaknes.

D. 2. God point's out his word to answer the doubts and supply the wants of his troubled Saints. Behold the word.

D. 3. Gods word denieth the evill to be, which sometimes his tempted Saints do fear. The word of power is in that revealed.

D. 4. Gods word put's in being that good, the want whereof sometimes makes the Saints complaine.

D. 5. Gods word held forth for removing evil, and bringing good, deserveth faith of his people. Ver. 4.

D. 6. Gods goodnes leads his Saints from one comfort to another; from hearing to seeing.

D. 7. God make's mens eyes sometimes as well as eares helpful unto faith.

D. 8. Gods works may give us signes of, as his word expresseth his Covenant. Starres are signally of his goodnes.

D. 9. The starres of heaven are numberles in respect of men.

D. 10. The seed of the Church are and shall be numberles as the starres of heaven. Ver. 6.

4. The last particular in this vision of God assuring Abram of a seed; is Abrams acquiescence or satisfaction in Gods discovery.

Ver. 6. And he believed in Jehovah, and he imputed it to him for righteousness. — And Abram believed God, and it was accounted to him for righteousness. Sept. — And he believed in the word of the Lord and it was reputed to him for righteousness, Cald.

In these we find Abram quieted by faith and justified. It is the first and most eminent place, that meets us in the scripture, holding forth the power of faith unto justification: which might be subject to more cavils of men, had not the Spirit by the Apostle given a clear interpretation of it. Rom. 4. Which being done before us, we may more easily follow in the opening of it.

Two great acts are recorded here.

1. Abrams act towards God expressed thus — And he believed in Jehovah. Wherein these terms are considerable.

1. The term of connection, And, then, or therefore. It knits Abrams faith to Gods revelation. Immediately thereupon he believed.

2. The subject acting Abram, who was but now under a sad temptation by reason of sense, even almost without hope of any seed, or that special one which God had promised; he against hope, that is, when there was none in the flesh, nor in his own sense, yet he gathers hope from Gods will discovered to him, that he shall be the Father of many nations. Rom. 4. 18.

3. The act itself, he believed, so the Apostle renders it; which carrieth in it, apprehension of, assent unto, and assistance in Jehovah. The word notes, a making one true. Which hit's with that of the Baptist, he that believeth hath set to his seal, that God is true. John. 3. 33.

4. The object, Jehovah, in the word of the Lord: as Cald. He believed God. Sept. the Hebrew read's believing in God, the Greek, believing God: in the former assistance, in the latter assent is noted; both must be in true faith, however they are often used singly to expresse the nature of it. Jehovah here terminat's all.

1. In his being, as the foundation of all his creatures.

2. In his revelation of his promise. So the word of the Lord.

3. In

Ver. 6.

3. In his power to perform, what he had promised, this faith of his is commended by the Apostle for these notable effects.

1. It destroyed sense the ground of doubting, he considered not his own body, &c.

2. It settled and quieted his Spirit, he staggered not any more through unbelief.

3. It gave glory unto God, Rom. 4. 18. 19. 20.

2. Gods act upon Abram in these terms expressed — And he imputed it to him righteousness. This by some Jewes is interpreted also to be Abrams act to God, reading thus, that Abram accounted this promise his righteousness, that is, Gods faithfulness to him, or els, that Abram accounted to himself that it was his righteousness which procured this promise from God. But besides the clear conviction to be gathered from the text to the contrary; their own Rabbines some of them acknowledge this to be Gods act on Abram.

This is the truth, and so herein are obvious.

1. The term of connection, and, which joyneth Gods act with Abrams, in his believing.

2. The agent here; which is the same Jehovah, in whom he trusted.

3. The act, imputed; which among mens apprehensions is taken.

1. For reputed or esteeming a thing as it is, such was Phineas act. Psalm. 106. 30.

2. For accounting small things at more than they be worth.

3. For esteeming that to be one mans, which is anothers.

4. The object or matter imputed, it, which relative pointeth out the faith of Abram.

5. The product of this account or imputation, righteousness, that is, such an absolute conformity to his own will, which maketh a soule stand upright in Gods judgment. Now how this believing should be reputed this righteousness, is the question.

(1) Some say God accounted this poor act of faith, instead of all righteousness. As if one should take five pound for an hundred pound: but this cannot be, for. (1) God was just in justifying, as he is gracious, therefore must repute that righteousness, which is such. (2) God is true and calleth things as they are; but the act of believing is not that righteousness. (3) No work of man can be perfect righteousness, then it would be of work, but the act of believing is mans work. Therefore this interpretation is false. (2) Others say, God imputed this faith to him as a righteous act: even as he did the zeal of Phineas to him. This is a truth, but not the truth here; for this is a compleat righteousness, whereby the soule stands justified before God. As the Apostle witnesseth. (3) To come therefore to the scope of the Spirit here and in his own interpretation. Rom. 4. 22. God did impute faith unto him for righteousness, that is, a sufficient act in him to receive that righteousness of God, which in the promise he gave unto him; so faith is considered by the Apostle in opposition to work, and as a reception onely of the gift of righteousness, which God bestoweth in the promised seed. Ier. 23. 6. Rom. 4. 3. 4. &c. Rom. 5. 17. 2. Cor. 5. 21. That in James. 2. 23. speaketh of the justification of Abrams faith, not of his person.

6. The subject to whom all this is imputed, is Abram a beleever, and herein the father of the faithful.

Quest. 1. Did not Abram believe before this time?

Ans. Yea surely, for he followed Gods call, but here eminently is his faith spoken of, as breaking out of great temptation, which unbelieveing sense had brought upon him.

Quest. 2. Was not Abram justified before now?

Ans. Yea doubtles, but now upon such an eminent appearance of faith, God giveth an eminent testimony of his righteousness; and by what meanes he was justified, even by faith in the promised seed.

Quest. 3. But did his beleeving that his seed should be as the starres, or that he should be the Father of many nations, justify him or receive this righteousness?

Ans. (1) It was the same faith where-with he received all the promises. 2. It was that faith mainly upon the promised seed in which all nations should be blessed, which received righteousness; even that upon Christ to come, whose day he saw. Iohn. 8. 56. (3) It is the same upon Christ delivered for our sinnes, by which we receive righteousness also. Rom. 4. 24. 25. And it is called justifying upon this account.

Which teacheth us, that,

D. 1. Gods gracious manifestation of himself in promise to him, soon rescueth their soules out of temptation

D. 2. Faith in Jehovah followeth the revelation of his promise in his covenanted ones.

D. 3. Sound faith assert's Gods truth and power, and therein quietly hears from complaining.

D. 4. Gods gift of righteousness is installed on faith onely.

D. 5. God justifies soules by imputing Christs righteousness to faith.

D. 6. God accounts faith a sufficient hand hand to take in his righteousness. Ver. 6.

2. The second part of the comfortable vision made to Abram waking, is the assurance of the inheritance unto his seed, which God maketh by covenant unto him. Herein these particulars are considerable.

1. Gods purpose asserted of giving the land to him. ver. 7.

2. Abrams reply desiring some evidence of it. ver. 8.

3. Gods direction to Abram to prepare a sacrifice. ver. 9.

4. Abrams obedience to make covenant by sacrifice. ver. 10. 11.

5. Abrams second discovery of some sad events, with the issue made to him in a deep sleep, which was the second part of Chap. ver. 12. 16.

6. Gods acceptance of Abrams sacrifice testified. ver. 17.

7. Gods covenant made with Abram thereupon. ver. 18. 21.

8. Gods purpose asserted of giving the inheritance follow's.

Ver. 7. And he said unto him I am Jehovah whom my self brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees to give thee this land to inherit it. Out of the region of the Chaldeans, &c. Sept. — That I might give thee this land for an inheritance. Cald.

In this God labour's to strengthen Abrams faith about the appointed inheritance of the Church, and that from the assertion of three things,

1. Of his own being, thus expressed — And he said, &c.

(1) The connection knits this to Abrams former beleeving, whereupon God add's to comfort him. (2) The evidence of this assertion. He said unto him, God expressly making out his mind to Abram. (3) The matter asserted, I am Jehovah, who now speak unto thee, that was, is, and is to come, who call that which is not as if it were, and can make to be what and when I please; so that thy faith need not stagger concerning any thing that I speak unto thee, all being is within the compass of mine.

2. Of his former call and gracious respect to Abram declared thus — Who my self brought thee, &c. Where are asserted. (1) The author of grace, I my self the same Jehovah. (2) The act of grace, brought thee out from Ur of the Chaldees.

1. The motion, which carrieth in it Gods call of him though not mentioned, Chap. 11. 31. guidance of him, protection of him in all his wayes even until now.

2. The term from whence, from Ur of the Chaldees, the place of his nativity which was defiled with all idolatry; passing by others, and leaving them there I have brought thee out, to be peculiar to my self, and to raise up my Church of thee, that it might be preserved pure. Now having given thee such an earnest Abram, there is no cause for doubting of the inheritance. It is all fabulous which the Jewes write, of Gods taking Abram out of the fire of the Chaldeans, &c.

3. Of his end in bringing Abram out of his own country, it was, — To give, &c. In which aim of God is expressed.

1. The freeness of his purpose to Abram, it was to give him that which was not his, he did not call him out to begger him, or take away from him, but to give to him.

2. The boon itself, which he giveth, this land, that was, Canaan the land of promise so often mentioned, & about which it seemeth Abram had some fear, being yet as a stranger in it.

3. The proper use of this land, it was for Abram to inherit it; that is, not to be onely the place of his pilgrimage, but the settled lot of him and his seed, among whom the Church of God was to be settled.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Faith in Gods word never wants seasonable comfort from him. The connection yields this.

D. 2. Gods being in the sure foundation presented to faith, to keep a soul from staggering about Gods word.

D. 3. Gods acts of grace past, are forceable to confirm faith concerning the promise to come.

D. 4. Gods special grace in bringing soules from sin and sinners may assure them of his care for lower mercies.

D. 5. The lot of the Churches inheritance is Gods gift onely.

D. 6. Gods end revealed in singling out his Churches portion should make soules strong in believing of it. Ver. 7.

2. Abrams reply to this assertion of God followeth.

Ver. 8. And he said Lord Jehovah where in shall I know that I shall inherit it. — Sept. — Lord God, &c. Cald.

In which passage do occur these particulars observable.

Ver. 8.

1. The replicant, Abram, to whom God had but now asserted his mind for bringing him unto this inheritance, of which he seemeth yet to stand in doubt, or at least not to be fully satisfied about the assurance of it.

2. The object of this reply, the Lord Jehovah. Adonai Jehovah, by which name he stileth him, verse 2. And there the appellation was observed to note earnestness of affection, wherein he grants him to be Jehovah, and his proper Lord of whom was all he had, and of him, whether out of some infirmity, or desire to grow stronger in faith, he begs a further assurance of the matter promised.

3. The reply itself, wherein, &c. — we have.

1. The matter to be assured, and that is the inheritance formerly promised of the land whither God had brought him. (2) The assurance, which he desireth, it is no less than of knowledge. (3) The means of this assurance desired, by what shall I know this? which seems to intimate some special token, which he desired, for confirmation of the same.

Quest. Was it well in Abram after Gods mind asserted in this matter to ask for further satisfaction?

Ans. 1. God blames him not for it, therefore it may seem, that he was stirred up by him to ask it. (2) If yet he laboured through infirmity of faith, God vouchsafeth to condescend unto him to help it, yet this is no example imitable by us, to whom God hath confirmed all his promises in his own son.

Take these Notes from it.

D. 1. The strongest believer after Gods word revealed may by sense be shaken and desire more assurance.

D. 2. The Lord Jehovah is the only oracle unto which faith stieeth for confirmation.

D. 3. Assurance of knowledge faith makes after, concerning good promised.

D. 4. Some sensible pledges of the Saints inheritance are not altogether inconsistent with faith to desire. Ver. 8.

3. Gods direction to Abram, for his better assurance, thus followeth.

Ver. 9. And he said unto him, take for me, &c. — Δαμάριον προσέκομψας, &c. Sept. same. — Offer before me three heifers, &c. and the son of the dove, Cald. Which is a yong pigeen.

In which direction or injunction of God note these terms.

1. The connection, and, which knitt's Gods answer to his request especially he lab. uring under temptation, God stayeth not long to satisfy. Ver. 9.

2. The power injoyning, or directing his own way for his servants satisfaction. Jehovah — and he said.

3. The subject to whom the injunction cometh, to him. — That is, to Abram now tempted and labouring under some conflicts, about Gods former promise of the inheritance.

4. The injunction itself, which in summe is to prepare a sacrifice according to Gods mind, wherein we have to observe.

1. The act injoyned. Take for me — In the expression of the act, separation from the common herds and flocks, and dedication, and oblation are surely intended. The Caldee therefore paraphrasth, offer. 2. In that note of propriety, to me, is carried the use of this work, it must be taken for Gods use, that is, for a sacrifice unto him.

2. The object or matter to be thus taken, set forth. (1) In kind. (1) Of cat. tel an heifer. — Shee goad — And ram — (2) Of fowle the turtle doves, — And yong pigeon, or nestling — These kinds of beasts and birds doubtles were in use for sacrifice before: and afterward injoynd by the law to the seed of Abram, Leviticus. 1. v. 2. 14. (2) In age, all of the herd and flocks were to be of three years age, — Which is conceived to be the time of their maturity, but for the fowle no age is mentioned, onely intimated it is, that they were to be young.

Quest. Why were these cratures taken for sacrifice?

Ans. Gods own will is the onely sufficient reason for the nature of them and the number of their years.

Quest. How could these give assurance to Abram?

Ans. It was for that purpose that here they be injoynd; and therefore vain are mens conjectures to make them signes of other things: now needs must they be for Abrams confirmation, as being the adjoynd pledges of Gods Covenant, as afterward is declared; which Covenant is made between God and his Saints by sacrifice.

Take these Notes.

D. 1. God doth not deny nor delay to strengthen the faith of his tempted servants. D. 2.

D. 2. God chooseth his own way to satisfy tempted soules by signalls, and leaves it not to man.

D. 3. Gods special way of ascertaining beleivers of his promise is by sacrifice or signalls of his Covenant.

D. 4. God alone hath power to injoyne such sacrifices to his Church.

D. 5. God hath confirmed typicall promises by typical sacrifices of beasts and birds.

D. 6. God in all them intends his Church to be confirmed in his eternal Covenant by the sacrifice of his son. Ver. 9.

4. Abrams obedience to Gods injunction followeth.

Ver. 10. And he took for him all these, and divided them in the midst, and gave every ones part to meet his fellow, and the bird he did not divide — and set them opposit one to another and the birds, &c. Sept. — &c. Cald. and he offered all these before him, and divided them equally, and put the parts one against another.

Ver. 11. And the soul came down upon the carcasses, and Abram huffed them away. — But the birds came down upon the bodies and the two parts of them, and Abram sat down with them, Sept. — And Abram cast them off. Cald.

In this passage of Abrams obedience to Gods direction we have two things to observe.

1. His performance, which takes in three acts.

1. He took all the fore mentioned things for God. — That is, he separated, and offered them to God, As the Caldee readeth.

2. He divided them in the midst. — However this, and that which followeth be not expessed in the former injunction, yet is it safely presumed, that this God commanded also; for as much as Abram divides the beasts but not the birds, which difference to make, presumes it was of Gods teaching.

3. He gave or set every ones part to meet his fellow. — That is, he placed them; shoulder to shoulder, breast to breast, &c. Every one even, as they were cut, leaving a space in the midst between them; for so was the custome practised by men, and therefore commanded by God, that the covenants passed between the parts of the sacrifice. Ver. 14. 18. And took some such imprecation upon them; that they should be even cut in peeces as these, if they did not keep the covenant; unto which God here alludeth, when he would ascertain Abram of his desire concerning the inheritance, unto all which is added a negative, the birds he divided not, — That is to separate part from part, but onely clave them or split them according to the Law. Levit. 1. 16, 17.

Quest. Why were these rites so observed by Abram?

Ans. (1) Surely he did nothing but upon Gods command.

2. It is conceived by some to note the sad and broken condition of Abrams seed in Egypt, whereof God acquaints him hereafter, and yet hopes of bringing bone to bone, as these parts lay so disposed. Ezekiel. 37.

3. It is certain, that all this was for the visible confirmation of the covenant and promise of the inheritance unto him. As for other significations made, they may be pious, but uncertain, whether here intended. Gal. 3. 17.

2. His disturbance in this work of offering to God. And the soul came down upon the carcasses. — Wherein we have shortly set down these two particulars.

(1) The cause of his disturbance. (1) The bird, or fowl, singular for plural. As the Sept. read. ἡ ψυχή, it is likely, kites or ravens, such as prey upon the slain. (2) The descent, these lighted on the parts divided by Abram and prepared for God, seeking to devour that which was to be a pledge for confirmation unto Abrams faith; these are by some transferred to note the Egyptians preying upon Israel Abrams seed. E. zek. 17. 3.

2. The removal of it. And Abram huffed them away. That is, stirring the aire and making a noise drove them from the sacrifice, this is also by some applied to signify the act of Moses and Aaron driving of the Egyptians from Israel; it may be a pious conjecture, but no more. For in this place it notes no more but Abrams resistance of that which hindered him in his sacrificing to God. The application of this to Israels deliverance from Egypt as well as of the former to Israels sufferings there, may be innocent, and useful.

Take these Notes from it.

D. 1. Faith is exactly obedient to the command of God for the matter, manner and end of sacrificing.

D. 2. Faith is ready at a beck to make covenant with God by sacrifice. Ver. 10. Psal. 50. 5.

D. 3. The best beleivers may be disturbed by outward temptations, in their most exact preparations for Gods Worship. D. 4.

D. 4. Believing souls by the blast of Gods Spirit must huffe these away, or drive away all distracting things, which hinder their communion with God. V. 11.

5. Now followeth Gods fuller discovery of his purpose concerning the inheritance of Abram and his seed, how and when it should come into their actual possession. ver. 12. 16. Wherein these particulars are observable.

1. The manner of this discovery in sleep. ver. 12.

2. The matter of discovery, whereof are these heads.

1. The sad condition of his seed in captivity. ver. 13.

2. The judging of that nation and their deliverance. ver. 14.

3. The end of Abrams life, before all this. ver. 15.

4. The time of the accomplishment of all to his seed. ver. 16.

1. The manner of discovering Gods mind thus followeth.

Ver. 12. And the sun was to goe away that is, to set, and a deep sleep fell upon Abram, and behold a terror, great darknes was falling on him. Cald. fame. And about sun set an extatic fell upon Abram, and behold dark blacknes falleth on him. Sept.

In this Gods manner of revealing his will to Abram, we have to observe,

Ver. 12.

1. The season of the day. It was about the going down of the sun, after his preparations for God, and attendance on him, and obedience to his command in making ready his sacrifice.

2. The disposition of Abram by God into such a frame, fit to receive his mind both for the evill and good which should betide his seed, in two events.

1. A deep sleep fell upon Abram, In which note, (1) The condition here incident, is a deep sleep, not naturall, nor from naturall causes, as wearines or the like, but extraordinary and supernatural, in the very falling of it. (2) The subject was Abram, who desired to know more of Gods will about this matter. (3) The ordering of this to him, if fell upon him, doubtles not by accident, but as ordered and sent upon him by God; as it was with Adam. Gen. 2. 21.

2. A terror of great darknes, &c. And so, &c. here is another event added unto the former, brought in. (1) By a term of demonstration, behold, noting some eminent thing befalling in this great sleep.

2. The event, read by some, terror, great darknes. And by others, horror of great darknes which may be as well; this also was a supernatural effect, casting Abram into such a frame of terror, wherein he might now be fit to receive the following revelation of the sad condition of his seed, before they came to the inheritance. (3) The affecting Abram with this, it fell upon him, by the impulse, and command of God; who thus disposeth him to be more fully acquainted with his will. Thus in sleep and by dream God speaks to Abram as well as by vision. Num. 12. 6.

From it note.

D. 1. God hath his seasons after the souls preparation for him and obedience to him, to discover his will to it.

D. 2. God hath in a sleep appeared to his servants, but such as was sent of him, not natural. Dan. 10. ver. 9.

D. 3. Gods wisdom disposeth him to make them capable of his discoveries; so he doth put Abram to sleep when horror must come upon him.

D. 4. Eminent terrors God may send upon his Saints to instruct them, of terrible events to come upon him. Ver. 12.

2. The matter of the discovery concerning the captivity of the seed of Abram followeth.

Ver. 13. And he said to Abram, knowing thou shalt know, that thy seed shall be a stranger, in a land not for them, and they shall make them serve, and shall afflict them, 400 years. Thy sonnes, &c. Cald. els fame. And it was said &c. In a land not their own: and they shall make them serve and afflict, and humble them, &c. Sept.

In this passage we have to observe, these particulars.

1. The way of revelation, annexed to Ver. 13, the former condition wherein Abram was, And he said to Abram. In it. (1) God the revealer. (2) The revelation, by word, or clear expression. (3) The subject to whom, Abram, in his sleep affected with the horror of darknes.

2. The certainty of the effect. Knowing thou shalt know, that is, thou shalt assuredly know, as thou desirest, that the inheritance shall be to thy seed, but in this way that I shall shew thee.

3: The

3. The matter revealed to his knowledge, in which. (1) The condition of him and his seed is discovered thus. (1) Thy seed shall be a stranger in a land not for them. (1) The subject here spoken of, thy seed. Not excluding himself. As sometimes God speaks of him not excluding his seed, for so he must be spoken of here from the number of years mentioned. (2) The condition spoken of them, they shall be strangers. This was true of himself now, and of Isaac, and Jacob, as well as of all the tribes of Israel.

3. The place, In a land not for them, or not their own, even Canaan, and Egypt; wherein Abram was a stranger; but especially it was verified of Israel in Egypt. Yet to make up the number of years, it must begin in Abrahams time; he also was a stranger in the land of promise, not yet subdued to him.

2. And they shall serve them, as some read, that is Abrahams seed shall serve the people of that land, or, they shall make them to serve them. That is, the Lords and people of the land, shall bring under Abrahams seed, and make servants of them to drudge at their command. In part Abram, Isaac, and Jacob were kept under, but eminently the tribes of Israel were made to serve bitterly in Egypt. Exod. 2.

3. And they shall afflict them. i. e. The Lords and people of that land, shall distress, trouble, and grind Abram and his seed. Abram himself met with some hardship from them in Canaan, but his seed groaned under hard taskmasters & were in bitterness of soul; but all must be taken in with respect unto the time here expressed. (2) The time of duration of all this captivity, and bitterness, it was for no less then 400 years.

Quest. Is not the number of years for Israels dwelling in Egypt, made 430. Exod. 12. 40. Gal. 3. 17?

Ans. It is not unusual in numbers to name the greater and omit the less. So here.

Quest. Where is the beginning and end of these 430 years?

Ans. The end is evident to be at the going of Israel out of Egypt. Exod. 12. 41.

The beginning therefore must be at the 10th year after Abrahams coming from Haran, even the time of confirmation of Gods Covenant by sacrifice, of which we read, Gen. 15. v. 18. compared with Galat. 3. ver. 17.

Quest. Did Israel dwell in Egypt all this while?

Ans. No, neither is this term of years meant of that only, but of Abrahams peregrination in Canaan, as well as theirs in Egypt. As is evident in the computation of years, therefore this sad discovery in part concerned Abram himself as well as his seed.

Note from it.

D. 1. In the saddest tempers of the Saints, God doth vouchsafe to reveal his will unto his servants for their comfort.

D. 2. Gods revelations are to give certain knowledge of his will unto his servants.

D. 3. Many are the trials, hardships, and afflictions which befall the Saints, between the promise and possession of their inheritance.

D. 4. The dayes are set for number, to bring in the promised inheritance, and make an end of affliction, beyond which this shall not be continued, nor that delayed. Exod. 12. 41. Ver. 13.

The next head of the matter discovered, is the judging of the oppressor, and deliverance of Abrahams seed.

Ver. 14. And the nation also which they shall serve I judge, and afterward therefore they shall goe forth with much substance. Cald. to fame. I will judge, saith the Lord, and after these things, they shall come forth hither, &c. Sept.

In these words God giveth in some light to remove that horror of darknes upon Abram, and it is by way of promise to him and his seed, of which here are 2 parts.

1. To avenge them of their oppressing enemies. And the nation, &c. Ver. 14.

Wherein. (1) The avenger. God himself to whom vengeance belongeth. Deut. 32. 35. He that is able and just, to give to them affliction who oppress his people.

2 Theif. 1. 6. 2 The object of this vengeance, The nation whom the seed of Abram should serve, which were the Egyptians without controversy who made them serve in bitterness. (3) The act of vengeance, I judge, God speaks in the present time to note the certainty of it, as if he were now doing it. The burden of this expression is judging it, to bring them to an account, to require of them all the wrong done to his people, to sentence them unto vengeance and to execute it to the utmost, as was punctually performed in Gods 10 plagues upon Egypt, and the overthrow of Pharaoh and his armies at last in the sea. Exod. 14. And though this were a threatening on Egypt, it is a promise to Abram.

2. To set them at liberty with a full advantage. And afterwards they shall go forth, &c. In which note (1) The order of the mercy promised, afterward, that is, when God had so judged Egypt, then and therefore shall the seed of Abram be free.

2. The mercy itself promised consisting of two parts. (1) Liberty, they shall goe out from captivity and bondage to be a free people, and walk at large where God should lead them. (2) Plenty, with great substance should they come forth full of riches, and abundant in wealth acquired; of which we see the proof. Exod. 3. 21. 22. Exod. 12. 35. 36.

Note from it.

D. 1. In the depth of horror on the Saints under apprehensions of bitter evil, God usually beareth up Spirits, with some sweet discoveries of good to them.

D. 2. Vengeance is pronounced upon enemies when God speaks peace unto his Church.

D. 3. God himself is the Judge and avenger of his Churches wrongs upon oppressors.

D. 4. Heavy is the judgment, which God layeth on the oppressors of his seed.

D. 5. The Churches mercies follow upon its oppressors judgments.

D. 6. Liberty and plenty of good, is the promised portion of the Church. Ver. 14.

3. Gods discovery as to Abrahams person followeth.

Ver. 15. And thou shalt come to thy Fathers in peace, thou shalt be buried in a good hoary age. — Thou shalt goe, being buried, &c. Sept. — And thou shalt be gathered to thy Fathers, &c. Caldee.

In these God put's the matter out of question to Abram, that though he had the promise, yet he must not see the performance of it in full, onely 90 years providences he saw more in order to the end, wherein he had his seed promised given unto him and so the whole promise going on toward performance. In this verse two things are revealed to Abram.

Ver. 15.

1. Concerning his death, — Thou shalt come, &c. (1) The subject of this promise. Thou, even thou Abram, whom I have called, to whom I have given the promise. (2) The good promised. (1) Translation from the vale of trouble thou shalt come, or enter in, not dye but onely change thy place; Abram live's yet, Matth. 22. 32. (2) The term of motion or translation, thy Fathers, that is, thy body shall goe to theirs into the dust, and thy Spirit to theirs where they are perfected; thou shalt but part from finnes and kinred to goe to thy Fathers, Scheth, and Enoch, and Noah, &c.

3. The manner of translation, in peace, reconciled to me, at peace within, and in the enjoyment of all spiritual good; no sting nor bands shall be in thy death or departure, and instead of this Canaan, where thou art, thou shalt have heaven, where the Spirits of just men are made perfect.

2. Concerning his funeral, Thou shalt be buried, &c. (1) The benefit here promised, is burial, as his Fathers, not cast out as accursed. Jer. 22. 19. but laid up to rest in the dust, until all things be accomplished. (2) The time of it, The hoary old age. Full of dayes as is expressed. Gen. 25. 8. (3) The quality of that age, it shall flourish in goodnes and righteoulines and so be a crown of glory.

These Notes are here.

D. 1. Gods friends may have the precious promises revealed, yet not performed in their dayes.

D. 2. If God deny his friends to see promises of the Churches good on earth, he gives a more sweet prospect to them of heaven.

D. 3. The Saints in dying, change but their place, from children to their Fathers they remoove.

D. 4. Gods friends shall dye in peace, however they die. So did Josiah. 2. King. 22. v. 20. and 23. 29.

D. 5. Burial is a mercy, especially when age and goodnes do accompany it.

D. 6. It is mercy to be taken away from extreme misery. Ver. 15. From earth to heaven.

4. Gods discovery of the time of accomplishing his promise to the Church now followeth.

Ver. 16. And the fourth generation they shall return hither, because the iniquity of the Amorite is not perfectly full hitherto. Cald. fame. — But in the fourth generation they shall return, &c. Sept.

In this passage two things are declared. 1. The set time of Gods declaring to execute execute the promise, And the fourth generation, &c. Wherein we have. (1) The subject of obtaining the inheritance, the fourth Generation, which carrieth in it. (1) The men, the seed of Abram issuing out of his loines, generated from him, therefore called Generation. (2) The number of years, in the number of descents, The fourth Generation, which if Generation be taken for an age, and an age reckoned for 100 year, it hit's in with the 400 year mentioned before, or if it be from children immediately descended, then six descents are recorded from Abram, to Moses, or to Caleb; therefore the numbring Generations by year's seem's to be fitter; for after four ages so compleat, and fifth current the promise was fulfilled. (2) The privilege allowed unto these, they shall return hither, that is, be restored from their slavery to take full possession of this Land, wherein thou art, for an inheritance.

2. The reason of this delay, Because the iniquity of the Amorite &c. God resolved to give the land of his enemies unto Abram and his seed, but yet was resolved they should wait, so long as he suffered from them; that should not seem hard to the people of God to stay, while he beareth with men. In the reason are considerable. (1) The subject eyed, the Amorite, put for those nine sorts of people more mentioned in the end of this Chapter. (2) The state or condition of them, which put's the block in Gods way. Their iniquity was not yet come to the height, for which God was resolved to cast them out: not hitherto, while Abram was, nor would be untill Gods own appointed time. Some read the punishment of the Amorite's, but not so fitly. Their Idolatries, oppressions, and lusts, were not yet grown to that pitch of provocation, which was destined to their destruction. Levit. 18. Deut. 12. 2. &c.

Take these notes hence.

D. 1. Gods promises unto his beloved ones may seem to admitt delays.

D. 2. Gods time is stinted by himself for making good all his promises to his.

D. 3. At the very point of time set by God his promise shall be performed.

D. 4. Generations in the Church may not see the performance of many of Gods promises.

D. 5. Gods patience toward sinnes of enemies, may deferr' mercies to his friends.

D. 6. The height of sinnes in enemies may work greatest mercies unto Gods Church. Ver. 16.

6. Gods acceptance of Abrahams sacrifice is here recorded in the tokens of it.

Ver. 17. And the sun was going, and there was a darkness, and behold a furnace of smoke, and a lamp of fire which passed between those parts divided. — Cald. to fame. — Now after the sun was at the west, there was a flame, and behold a smoking furnace, and there came lamps of fire — which passed between the parts divided in two. Sept.

In this verse which discovers Gods acceptance of his own sacrifice commanded as well as the Symbols of making that Covenant which followeth, may be noted.

1. The Season, it was at sun-set, the same time when God revealed the sad events upon his seed and the time set for their deliverance and return to their inheritance, after all their grievous sufferings.

2. The Quality accompanying, There was darkness, or a very dark night, which might sute with the discovery.

3. The Symbols of Gods presence, acceptance, and covenanting with Abram which were two. (1) Behold a smoaking furnace or oven. — a furnace of smoke. This passing between the parts seem's to be a symbol of Gods presence as well as the lamp; so by a pillar of cloud God appear's: however some conceive it to be an emblem of the iron furnace of Egypt, wherein Abrahams seed were afflicted; yet it seems not so proper in the present place.

(2) — And a lamp of fire, so God often presented himself, especially in giving approbation unto the offerings of his Saints. Judg. 6. 21. Judg. 13. 19, 20. As it is more than probable, the fire wrought so here.

4. The action here mentioned, which passed between those divisions, or parts of the sacrifices, which were cut in peeces, and laid part against part. — This was the custom among men in making Covenants, Jer. 34. 18. Unto which God condescends, and therefore causeth this symbol of his presence to passe between the parts. Which might be as well to consume them and thereby shew his acceptance, as to represent his Covenant making with Abram and his Seed.

These Notes arise hence.

D. 1. The time of the bitterest horror upon the Saints may be the season of Gods appearance to and acceptance of them.

D. 2. Gods darknes sent for his discovery, may ease the horror fallen on his Saints. A dark cloud is comfort.

D. 3. Gods discoveries are suitable to the sad and afflicted conditions of his Saints. In a furnace of smok &c D. 4. God accepts the persons and offerings of his Saints even in the time when he speaks of afflicting them.

D. 5. God condescends to the way of mans covenanting for his peoples comfort.

D. 6. God keeps Covenant when he passeth between the parts, or makes Covenant, however man failes. Ver. 17.

7. Gods expresse covenanting with Abram about his inheritance followeth.

Ver. 18. In that day Jehovah struck with Abram a Covenant, saying: To thy seed have I given this Land, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Perath, or Euphrates; God covenanted a Covenant — to thy seed I will give &c. to the great river Euphrates. Sept. — To thy sonnes have I given &c. Cald.

Ver. 19. The Kenite, and the Kenezite, and the Kadmonite.

Ver. 20. And the Chittite, and the Perazite, and Rephaim.

Ver. 21. And the Emorite, and the Canaanite, and the Girgashite, and the Jebusite. The Seventy reads them all plural. — The Caldee changeth two names, the first for Kenites, Salameans, and for Rephaim, Giants.

In this close of the Chapter we have observable.

Ver. 18.

1. The point of time mentioned, In that very day when God thus appeared to Abram in the symbols of his presence.
2. The Author of this Covenant, Jehovah himself, he freely and of himself doth this.
3. The party covenanted, Abram, who was in some doubt and struggling at this time about both heir and inheritance. — Psalm 50. 5.
4. The specification of the act, he struck a Covenant. A phrase taken from smiting the Sacrifice by which this Covenant is confirmed, so that the act upon the Sacrifice is applied to the Covenant: and so it is properly translated, God made a Covenant, or covenanted a Covenant, as the Sept. This is more than the promise fore-mentioned.

5. The matter of the Covenant, which is the assurance of the promised inheritance, wherein Gods deed of gift is recited, which carrieth these particulars.

1. The Doner, Jehovah himself, who covenants, 1.

2. The Receiver, Abrahams seed, not excluding him: for he had entrance, though not full possession, and it was given to him primarily, and to his seed for his sake, that they should inherit in Gods time.

3. The Act: the nature whereof is free disposition, a gift, not due upon any account, but freely call upon him and them; the time also of the act is past in the Hebrew, I have given, translated in future by the Seventy, I will give. It is true that it carrieth the force of a promise to be accomplished in the time forever. And it is spoken of in time past, to note the certainty of the same, yet Abram had a little taste of this already.

4. The Object or matter of this gift, declared three ways.

1. Expressly, — this very Land; that was, of Canaan; whither now God had brought Abram: concerning which he desired more assurance to inherit it. v. 8.

Quest. But was this all the matter of Gods Covenant?

Answ. Surely no, but all the promises before and after mentioned are included in this Covenant: as the Apostle interprets, Gal. 3. 17. Onely because Abrams doubt was about this, therefore is it mentioned, that by the assurance of this which was sensible, faith might gather more strength about the rest. For this Canaan in promise typified the place of rest in Heaven.

2. By the bounds here set to the promised inheritance which are thus described, From the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates.

Two terms of bounds are here expressed. 1. From whence, from the river of Egypt: which some read Nilus, but this running thorough the midst of Egypt, is not so probable, unless so called by falling into another water. It is called Sichor, Joshua 13. 3.

2. To which, the great river, the river Euphrates; it is here described by name and measure. The name was known eminently, a river of Asia; the greatness of it was likewise known, not as the greatest of all, but the greatest in those parts, for which it is called great by way of eminency.

Quest. But did Abrams seed ever inherit this compass? the bounds, Numb. 34. &c. seem to make it much less.

Answ. They did not all at once, but in Davids and Salomons time, they did; and God did not promise altogether but by degrees, Exod. 23. 29, 30. 2 Sam. 8. 3. 1 Kings 4. 21.

3. By the inhabitants, which now dwelt in the land, so punctually doth God describe

Ver. 19.
20, 21.

scribe it, which were ten sorts of people or nations, as they are numbered. The Amorites were mentioned instead of the other nine before.

Quest. How can this be, when Moses mentions but 6 or 7 at most, Deut. 20. 17. Deut. 7. 1?

Answ. (1) It pleaseth the Spirit, sometimes to mention, one, or three, or six, or seven for all. (2) There were onely 7 in the land, but the 3 former borderers thereupon, which may well make up the number, without a fault.

All teacheth us.

D. 1. The time of Saints Sacrifice amidst their troubles may be the season of Gods making Covenant with them.

D. 2. Not onely promise but Covenant hath God made to his Church for their consolation.

D. 3. Word and signe, promise and pledge make up Gods Covenant.

D. 4. Gods promise of good to come is as sure as if done already.

D. 5. Lower mercies God may give as tokens of greater blessings, this Land.

D. 6. The Church hath had its place and portion designed in this world, for being here. Ver. 18.

D. 7. Gods bounds to his Church were large under the Law, much more under the Gospel. The ends of the earth now. Ver. 19.

D. 8. All peoples shall be driven out to make room for the Church of God. Multitudes can be no hindrance of making good Gods Covenant to them. Ver. 20, 21.

CHAP. XVI.

THIS Chapter containeth such providences which beset Abram unto the 86 year of his age, in the year following Gods discovery of promise and Covenant to him, concerning an Heir of his own body and the inheritance of which God had spoken. The scope of this history is to let us see, the wisdom of the flesh labouring to bring about the promise of God, before the set time, together with the sad events of the same. The summary contents are in four general parts.

1. Sarais policy to have a child. Ver. 1, 2, and 3.
2. Abrams consent with the sad events. Ver. 4, 5, 6.
3. Gods discovery of the issue by his Angel. Ver. 7, 12.
4. Hagers return to Jehovah. V. 13, 14.
5. Hagers deliverance or child-bearing. Ver. 15, 16.

The first head is thus written in the three former Verses.

Ver. 1. And Sarai the wife of Abram did not bring forth unto him: and to her was an Egyptian handmaid, and her name Hagar. — Whose name. Sept. and Cald. same.

Ver. 2. And Sarai said to Abram, behold now Jehovah hath shut me up from bearing, go in I pray thee unto mine handmaid, perhaps I shall be built by her, and Abram hearkened unto the voice of Sarai. — If perhaps I may receive sonnes from her, &c. Cald.

Ver. 3. And Sarai the wife of Abram, took Hagar the Egyptian, her handmaid, from the end of ten years of Abrams dwelling in the land of Canaan, and she gave her to Abram her husband, to him for a wife. — Sept. and Cald. to the same.

In this passage the fleshly policy of Sarai seemeth to work for bringing about the promise of God, in giving Abram his desired issue. Whereof there are these three main heads observable.

1. The occasion first moving Sarai unto this course. Ver. 1. Which seems to be heretwofold. (1) In respect of her self, and Sarai the wife of Abram did not, &c. note, (1) The term of connection of this to the former assurance which God gave Abram and Sarai of a seed, is not to be sighted, that so soon after promise and Covenant made to him, the flesh should be immediately working in haste to have the matter effected, otherwise than God intended. So it fell out.

2. The occasion was on Sarai's part her own barrenness, being now 75 years of age, and so in her own sense concluding her self not to be in hope to bear a child to Abram or be a mother; wherein afterward she found her self mistaken and her faith too much staggering, when she saw 15 years after this God was able to make her a mother. (2) In respect of a more likely mean's, which was now at hand, she had an hand-maid an Egyptian whose name was Hagar, — She being yong and likely to bear children in sense, and now in the house, and probably in her favour also, this become a temptation to this holy matron, which occasioned that which followeth.

3. The motion of Sarai unto Abram, upon this occasion, wherein are these particulars observable. (1) Her narrative by way of complaint of her own barrenness, — behold

Ver. 1.

Ver. 2.

La 3

behold

נרת
נרת

Behold now the Lord hath restrained me from bearing. Init mark.

1. The evil she acknowledgeth justly upon herself; not bearing, and inability thereunto.

2. The just author of it. Jehovah himself had shut her up, who is Lord of all his creatures.

(2) Her request, or proposition unto Abram. Wherein consider.

1. The matter desired, — Go in I pray thee into my maid, which is a sollicitation of him to take a wrong way to get a promised seed. It is added by Josephus, that she did it by Gods instinct, or advertisement; but no such thing is in the scripture, neither is it fuitable to the nature or will of God; however his wife providence did over-rule in it. The motion was from the flesh.

2. The reason of such a desire, Perhaps I shall be built up by her. Wherein observe,

(1) The good aimed at, is to have a son, and so her family built up by her maid; So that it was no other end but a seed that she intendeth here not to provoke her husband basely to lust. Though this were bad enough to seek it out of Gods way. (2) The manner of her expectation it was but contingent, she knew not whether she should have child or no by her, but upon peradventure, she moveth it.

3. Her prevalency in this temptation, and Abram hearkned to the voice of Sarai — That is, he shortly yielded and granted to her motion: doubtles it were evil.

3. The action of Sarai followeth, which is twofold.

1. Toward her maid, wherein is evident. (1) Her susception or taking of her, which was doubtles her free choise of her and setting her a part for this special end to bear her children, so that Sarai onely here is discovered to act both her maid and husband, to bring about her own designe. (2) The time of this is noted. After Abram had dwelt ten years in the land of Canaan. Which was in the 85 year of his age. The delays of the promise, and Abrams great age, might likely make Sarai so hasty to get a son, while there might be some hope in the flesh; however Gods thoughts were to stay the performance of his promise until there was no hope in the flesh.

2. Her action toward her husband, she gave her to Abram her husband to be to him for a wife. In which you may observe,

(1) The giver here, is Sarai. (2) The receiver Abram. (3) The gift, Hagar. (4) The use, to be his wife.

Some Questions would be answered to clear all here.

1. Quest. What kind of wife was Hagar unto Abram?

Ans. Such as was called a concubine, Gen. 25. 6. which differed at that time from the true and proper wife. (1) In power over family, which the true had, and not this, but continued a servant. (2) In manner of taking, the true wife was married with solemn espousals, and dowry, but not the concubine. (3) In priviledge of issue, the son of the wife inherited, not of the concubine. Gen. 25. 6. They were used in bed, and for procreation onely.

2. Quest. Could Sarai lawfully give or Abram take such a wife?

Ans. Surely no; for from the beginning it was not so. They two shall be one flesh, is the Law: therefore Christ concludes such cases beside or against the primitive constitution, to be evil. Matth. 19. However therefore it was a prevailing custom in that and following ages, so that it was not scandalous to men, yet it was sinful by the Law of God.

3. Quest. Is Abram then to be charged with adultery?

Ans. Some filthy tongues set on fire by hell to rail more against God and his course of providence in the old Testament, (as Fault. Manich.) Than against these. Yet do bespatter Abram and Sarai with horrid reproaches about this matter. But (1) Impatience, diffidence, and hastines was Sarai's sin, together with her tempting her husband. (2) Yielding to his wife was Abrams sin, and to make use of meanes against Gods command. (3) Adulterous and unclean ends appear in neither of them. So that it cannot be charged so deeply; however it cannot be denied sin and inirmity.

4. Quest. Why God should suffer this miscarriage?

Ans. (1) His secret thoughts therein are not to be searched by us.

(2) He that can bring good out of evil, may permit what pleaseth him.

(3) This is revealed, that there is a spiritual use made of these two wives of Abram, beyond all others, as being allegories of the two Testaments, now what God may please in his wisdom to suffer and order upon such an account, cannot be other than good from him, Gal. 4. 22. 23. &c.

5. Quest. Is this practice then imitable?

Ans. No by no means. (1) That which was done upon mans part was sin, at least of weakness. (2) That which God did by it was extraordinary, therefore no providences may be examples unto us without Gods command for our ordinary walking with him

Some Observations may be from this passage.

D. 1. Gods promise and Covenant can hardly keep up faith in his own, against the discouragements of sense. From the connection.

D. 2.

D. 2. Sensible barrennes may make beleivers doubt of the fruits of Gods promise as to them. This is a truth in flesh, and Spirit.

D. 3. Sensible helps at hand may be an occasion to doubt of Gods promise as being as farre off. So was Hagar to Sarai. Ver. 2.

D. 4. Opening and shutting wombs is acknowledged to be Jehovahs work by his servants. By Sarai.

D. 5. Good soules in temptations may complain of this barrennes though God order it. So Sarai.

D. 6. Sense of such wants may put soules upon unlawfull meanes to have their desires of a seed. So upon Sarai.

D. 7. Flesh persuades to take an uncertain peradventure in sense, rather than wait for Gods promise in certatny. So Sarai. Ver. 2.

D. 8. Temptations from a wife especially being good, may be prevalent with the best of husbands to misguide them from Gods rule.

D. 9. Temptation may carry Saints not onely to the motion but action of evil.

D. 10. Such temptations may make Saints do evil, for ends seeming good. So Sarai gives her to wife. Ver. 3.

2. Abrams consent to Sarai with the events of it do follow in the three next Verses:

Ver. 4. And he went in unto Hagar and she conceived, and she saw that she had conceived and her mistress was vile in her eyes. Sept. and Cald. to the same.

Ver. 5. And Sarai said to Abram, my wrong be upon thee, I gave my maid into thy bosom, and she saw that she conceived, and I am vile in her eyes: let Jehovah judge between mee and between thee. — I am injured by thee, &c. Sep. My judgment be upon thee, I gave my maid into thy hand, &c. Cald.

Ver. 6. And Abram said to Sarai, behold thy maid is in thy hand, do to her the good in thine own eyes, and Sarai afflicted her, and she fled from her face. — Use her as it is pleasing unto thee, &c. Sep. As is pleasing in thine eyes, &c. Cald.

In which passage, these particulars are observable.

1. Abrams consent to Sarai's motion expressed now by his action, and recorded. Ver. 4. And he went in unto Hagar, that is, as unto a wife, so to make use of her, as to have a seed by her, wherein. (1) The agent, Abram, after the promise made him for a seed out of his own loines, though as yet not revealed to him, whether by Sarai, or any other, so that under this temptation from his wife, he takes this course being hastily desirous of a seed, without asking counsel of God. (2) The act expressed by motion, went in, notes the conjugal act, allowed to man and wife. (3) The patient Hagar, though allowed by Sarai, yet not to given unto him by God from whom he was to expect his rule.

2. The effect of this consenting act. Which is twofold.

1. Such as was desired by Abram and Sarai, which was Hagar's conception.

— And she conceived. concepit is concepit. 2. Which was the first hope of the fruit of the womb and that it might be a son, which was desired.

2. Such as was not expected hereupon, and that was an house full of trouble to all that had an hand in this counsel of halting a seed.

1. Sarai's suffering from Hagar, thus declared. — And she saw she had conceived, and her mistress was vile in her eyes. Wherein note two evils.

1. A carnal sense of an outward priviledge given her in an unlawful way: she now perceived, that what was denied to Sarai was granted unto her, viz. The fruit of the womb in her conception; this she seeth and poreth on, and feeds her fancy, with the present hope of answering her Mistris desire.

2. Her pride of heart expressed two wayes.

1. In exalting her-self in her own thoughts that she was fruitful, and likely to be the mother of the promised seed; talking, as is likely proudly, as Peninnah. 1. Sam. 2. 3.

2. In despising, or, reproaching her mistress, as vile, and beneath her in respect of her barrennes, likely with taunting speeches, and proud carriages, as Peninnah vexed Hannah. 1. Sam. 1. 6. Wherein was a double suffering.

1. For her barrennes inflicted by God.

2. For her kindnes vouchsafed to her maid by whom she comes to be reviled: one of the unsufferable evils. Proverbs 30. 23.

2. Abrams suffering from Sarai. V. 5. Here observe.

1. Her charge upon him, thus expressed, — My wrong is upon thee, or be upon thee. — I am injured by thee. Sept. or I have a plea or judgment against thee Cald. Which passage is taken, either for a rash crimination of her faultles husband, as if he were the cause of the maids pride and contempt, or els as a rash threatening of him, to this purpose, My wrong is upon thee, that is, in thy hand to right it, which if thou refuse, God will require it.

1. The accuser is a good wife, but now overcome with passion, Sarai.

2. The accused is a faultless husband, as to this accusation, Abram.

3. The accusation, that he was the author of her contempt.

2. The reason of her charge aggravating it upon him.

1. From her own pretended kindness thus recorded.

I gave my maid into thy bosom, which indeed was her evil. Yet shee pretends.

(1) Freeness, giving. (2) Suitableness of gift, her maid. (3) Neepnes, into his very bosom for enjoyment.

2. From the unanswerable return of her maid. And she saw, &c. That is, for her kindness she received contempt, yet this only from the pride of Hagar without the fault of Abram.

3. Her appeal, rashly made unto God in the following words — Let Jehovah judge between me and thee: or he shall.

(1) The appellant, Sarai in the heat of passion. (2) The judge appealed unto, Jehovah. (3) The matter appealed for, judgment, vengeance. (4) The parties to be judged, either husband, or her self, or rather in her rash expression, she desires God to interpose upon her unjust charge, and judge her husband, a strange act of a good woman. So Exodus. 5. 21. Gods name taken in vain.

3. Hagar's suffering from both. Declared.

1. By Abrams commission to Sarai. (1) Delivering Hagar into her hand or power, thus declared — Behold thy maid is in thy hand, that is, under thy power, I leave her to thee. (2) Leaving Hagar to her will, for revenge, Do to her that which is good in thine eyes. Check her, curb her, correct her, or what els might seem good to satisfy her passion; too much surely to gratify such a rash complaint.

2. By Sarai's execution, And Sarai afflicted her; that is, used her hardly in words or blow's or carriage; putting her to some wants, or straits, or bitternes, to curb her pride; all likely beyond the bounds of moderation; and very irksome to the present condition of child bearing.

3. By Hagar's suffering in expulsion, and she fled from her face. — Note here. (1) The subject, a peccant maid, yet stubborn in her pride and contempt, so adding sin to sin, and that after she had smarted for her folly, such bad use doth sin make of affliction, as to be more provoked by it. (2) The act is flight, out of an angry thought of revenge, to prejudice her Master and Mistress, as to deprive them of the seed; some think her way was to Egypt with a purpose to forsake the Church and religion of God, wherein she was nurtured with Abram, but that is not apparent. (3) The term from whence of her flight, the presence of Sarai, and the family of Abram, unto whom, as the Angel afterward adviseth, she should rather have submitted her self; yet her pride will not suffer her, untill God meet with her, and thus sin rewards the sinner her self, to put her on greater straits and miseries. So she suffers from her self, the cause of all.

So we have the history in the letter opened. But if we consider the mystery, as these two women shadow out two covenants, administrations, used both by Abram; as God hath discovered his mind to be. Gal. 4. 22. Some other spirituall construction may be made and profitable instructions gathered.

1. From the letter of the history note.

D. 1. Strong beleever's left unto a temptation may yeeld to use unlawful meanes, for a good end.

D. 2. Bad meanes may sometimes succeed outwardly toward the end intended. So Hagar conceived.

D. 3. The carnall successe of bad meanes is looked on by them, that use it to stirre up pride. So here.

D. 4. Such pride upon successes make men usually contemne those that want them, though better than themselves. Ver. 4.

D. 5. Usually they who first give evil counsell are they who first smart by it. As Sarai.

D. 6. Sin admitted filleth the best families with troubles, sets the maid against her Mistress, wife against husband, &c.

D. 7. Good women under temptation may charge innocent husbands with the evils of their own counsells.

D. 8. Pretended kindness, when it is but sin, may be used to charge them who have accepted it. Sarai had more reason to blame her self for giving her maid to her husband, which was the first cause of all evil.

D. 9. Taffion may lead good soules, not not onely to provoke men but God also by hasty imprecations on them selves and others. V. 5.

D. 10. Good men, as they are tender unto wives, so too much sometimes may indulge their passions.

D. 11. Relgnes of family government are in the husbands hands to order toward all relations therein.

D. 12. Good wives having once gotten them may use them to the oppression of servants, who have displeased them.

D. 13. The same hand which gives a servant to sin, may be hardest upon it, for affliction.

D. 14. Servants chersist in sin by governors, justly are made sometimes by hardnes to abhorre them.

D. 15. It is a servile nature, not a filiall, to fly from the hand of chastening or correction.

D. 16. Sin hardens bad servants, by flight, to seek their own misery, rather than by humbling to seek mercy. V. 6.

2. From the Mysteries included note.

D. 1. Some kind of corrupt conceptions may be of soules toward God, by the abuse of the Law at Sinai.

D. 2. Such conceptions make soules proud, and despise the Covenant of grace from Sinai: resting on themselves.

D. 3. The Covenant of grace is at an extreme opposition with the Law abused, to bring forth children.

D. 4. Conceptions from the Law abused fly from before the Covenant of grace, as not induring it.

The third generall head is Gods appearance upon these occasions by the ministry of an Angel, and the discovery of his mind about some of these carriage, and the issue of the present conception, the whole message is taken up about two parties.

1. About Hagar, ver. 7. 8. 9.

2. About her seed, ver. 10. 11. 12.

1. The passage concerning Hagar, followeth thus.

Ver. 7. And the Angel of Jehovah found her by a fountain of waters, in the wilderness, by the fountain in the way of Shur. — of Hagara, Cald. — Sept. wants the last clause.

Ver. 8. And he said Hagar Sarais maid, whence comest thou? And whether wilt thou goe, and she said, from the face of Sarai my mistress I am flying. Sept. & Cal. the same.

Ver. 9. And the Angel of Jehovah said unto her, return to thy mistress, and humble thy self under her hands. Sept and Cald. same.

In all which passage Gods dealing with Hagar, after her flight is reported. Wherein are these particulars.

1. Gods meeting with her. ver. 7. About which we have.

1. The subject expressed — The Angel of Jehovah; which by the following words. I will multiply, &c. seem's to be that Angel which is Jehovah himself: so also Hagar stileth him afterward: so that Christ the Son of God must be here intended; for no created Angel among them who stands, doth take upon him to promise, that which is Gods part, neither will they take glory or Worship due to God, as this Angel doth, ver. 13. As for the externall form of his appearance, it might be in an human shape: as afterward also he useth. It is usual for him to goe under the name of Angel, as Gods great messenger to the World. Exod. 14. 19. Exod. 23. 20. 21. Mai. 63. 9. Mal. 3. 1.

2. The act of Gods providence toward Hagar, thus declared, — And he found her, The connective particle is here best made adversative opposit to Hagar's former act, she fleeth, but God finds her. In which is not carried any labour of God in seeking her, for who can fly from his presence? but after the manner of men it is spoken; and it notes an act of providence. (1) For stopping Hagar, in her flight. (2) For easing Abram of further trouble, who probably was making inquiry after her.

3. The place of Gods meeting and expressing this providence, set down, (1) Under a general notion: — By a well of waters in the wilderness. Doubtles sitting there to quench her thirst, where now she might begin to think of her folly in reducing her self by her sin into these straits. (2) Under a more speciall description, thus — by that well in the way leading toward Shur, which was a city between Canaan & Egypt, Exod. 15. 22. So it is likely that Hagar was fleeing into her own country, from Gods Church in Abrams family, to her fathers idolatrous courses, whence she was called.

2. Gods expostulating reproof, when rein occurs.

1. His compellation of her — Hagar gar Sarai's maid, he call's her. (1) By her name. (2) By her relation, Sarai's maid, intimating that yet she stood in the relation of a servant, although she had laboured to cast off the yoke, she was yet in Gods account bound to her duty under her governors.

2. His expostulation which is objuratory, which as read, is but twofold, but may carry three questions. (1) Where — that is, where art thou? art thou in the place of thy relation? is this the place where thou shouldst be?

It intimates that she was now found out of her proper place. Gen. 3. 9.

(2) Whence comest thou or from what place? — Which hints another check, what! hast thou left Abrams family, through thy stubbornness and pride? hast thou forsaken Gods Church, and truth there? and left thy relations? it is no question of doubting, but of criminalizing for her departure; God knew from whence she came. So to Adam, Gen. 3. 9. Eccle. 10. ver. 4.

(3.) And whether wilt thou goe? — What to Egypt? To idolatry? To thy fathers house? Is this the fruit of Gods calling thee out from that sink of sin into his Church? for so he found her in the way, and stop's her.

3. Hagar's answer into God. From the face of Sarai my mistress am I flying. — Wherein she acknowledged.

(1.) Her sin, I am flying, as a fugitive, (2) Her relation, Sarai is my mistress, to whom then she must owe duty. (3) The term from whence of her flight, from her face, abhorring even the sight of her. This reply whether it were penitential in her, arising from remorse for her fault, or one forced out by God, is a quere; but the charity of some, conceiveth it an argument of her repentance; but surely then caused by God, not from her own disposition, which was so proud. 4. Gods counsell unto her in her present condition, wherein. (1) The counsellor, the same Angel of Jehovah. (2) The counsell itself in two particulars.

1. Return to thy mistress — Which expression notes.

(1) Her deviation, that she had erred, therefore need was of returning, which carrieth repentance in it of her former fault. (2) Her duty now, to goe backe into that order & relation, unto which God had called her as a servant, and acknowledge her mistress in her place; as if he had said, thou hast done foolishly in leaving thy place and order, goe return to it again, even to thy mistress to serve her.

2. And humble thy self under her hand. — Wherein note.

1. The party advised a servant, sinning, punished, and flying.

2. The advice, to lay down pride, to humble self, to endure affliction rather from her mistress, and under her power, than thus unlawfully to free her self.

Something may be mysteriall also here in subjecting the covenant of Sinai to that of Sion. Which may be noted in its place.

These Observations may be from the history

D. 1. Christ was the Angell of Jehovah sent to the Church in old times. As here. Isai. 63. Mal.

D. 2. Christ is the Angell-Jehovah or God himself; as is hinted here.

D. 3. God find's sinners usually when they loose themselves.

D. 4. Gods finding of them is usually when soules are brought to great extremity.

D. 5. God sometimes meet's sinners, when they are flying to his enemies. V. 7.

D. 6. God will have order and relations owned when sinners servants may reject them. Sarai's maid.

D. 7. Gods expostulat's in displeasure with sinners, for being where they should not be, leaving the place of calling, and flying to other places. Here servants learn your duties.

D. 8. Soules when God expostulat's with them are brought to acknowledge their errors and sinnes.

D. 9. God counsell's sinners in his way, when he hath convinced them. Return.

D. 10. Gods mind is that swearing servants must return into order of subjection.

D. 11. God will have domesticall order maintained and servants to submit to governors, and suffer sorrow, rather than sin, and leave their places. V. 9. 1. Pet. 3. ver. 18.

In the mysterie this may be noted.

D. 12. The handmaid covenant at Sinai must be subject to the free covenant covenant given from Sion that is above.

2. The next discovery made by the Angel Jehovah unto Hagar, is about her seed, which she should bring forth from her conception in this wrong way, contained in the three following Verses. In all which the reading not much differing are considerable these two heads.

1. Gods discovery of his mind concerning her seed in general, by way of promise: Wherein are.

Ver. 10. 1. The promise-maker, the angel of Jehovah, which was the Son of God as before, said unto her.

2. The subject of the promise to whom it is made, Hagar: to her this outward good is yielded.

3. The promise itself, expressed two ways.

1. Liberally from God, multiplying, I will multiply thy seed.

Thy sonnes. Cald. which double expression, notes, (1) The certainty of the seed. (2) plenty, or multitude; all to come from Ismael.

2. Indefinitely, and it shall not be numbered for the multitude. — This note the valnes of the people to issue from Ismael. Like to those expressions to Abram, Chap. 13. 16. Chap. 15. 5. Where is to be noted, that this promise, for kind is but of temporal good; which also was made for Abrams sake: to whom it is again renewed Chap. 17. 20. But the Covenant of grace is not given here as to the promised seed. For the present, it was here given to Hagar to mitigate her outward affliction and trouble.

2. Gods discovery of his mind concerning that special seed now conceived, all which yet is not to be confined to his person but the seed that after should come from him. Wherein.

1. A promise of safe deliverance, about which (1) He declares the certainty of conception. Behold thou art breeding,

So he confirms the blessing that was granted. (2) He promiserth safe child bearing. And thou shalt bring forth a son, or art bringing forth shortly. Such as was desired; good successe herein is promised.

2. A prediction. (1) Of his name, where about is declared. (1) The name itself. Thou shalt call his name Ismael.

(2) The reason of this name, Because Jehovah hath heard thine affliction, because the Lord hath received thy prayer, Cald. which is the very signification of the name: a good name and a good reason; but a bad child. (2) A prediction of his nature, and demeanor here. And he shall be a wild asse man; He shall be as a wild asse man; Sept. wild as living in the warps among beasts.

A wild asse among men. Cald. The description of the wild asse is by God himself, Job. 39. 5. 6. 7. 8. Men naturally are compared to it. Job. 11. 12; unto whose wild courses God compares the ways of Judah, Jer. 2. 24. Hof. 8. 9. Ignorance, unreasonableness, untamedness, and cruelty of disposition is signified by it. So his seed called saraiin, or Saracens, were theeves and robbers.

2. His demeanor, and carriage, and condition by reason of it. His hand will be against all, and the hand of all against him. Iland in this place is an emblem, either of violence, or of power: and so it is rendered two ways.

1. In a good sense, that though the power of all should be against him, yet he should have power enough against all. So the Cald. read's. And he shall need, and all sonnes of men shall need him. Cald. Gen. 25. 17. 18.

2. In a bad, which is more probable and suitable to his nature foretold, that he should use violence to all, & eternal violence upon him, as is evidenced in his seed the Turks. (3) A prediction of his earthly priviledge. And he shall dwell before the face of all his brethren. Wherein.

1. His possession positively is foretold, he shall have place upon earth, his seled habitation.

2. Comparatively, over against, before the faces, in the presence, or upon, above the faces of his brethren; either Israelites, or other collateral seeds from Abram, in his posterity, their habitations were enlarged, as with the Turks at this day.

Thus is the history. The mysterie of the seed of the bond-woman may be here also fitly taken notice of, for their multitude, wildnes, enmity, and eminency in the visible Church on earth, whence some observations may be taken.

But first from the History note.

D. 1. God usually add's comfort to his counsell for his afflicted ones. From connect.

D. 2. Exceeding numerous may God make the seed of concubins, as well as of the truly married.

D. 3. God onely can give and multiply seed. Ver. 10. Therefore was this not a created Angel.

D. 4. Conception and birth of the worst of men is ordered by the Lord.

D. 5. Good names may be given to the worst of men who never reach the nature of them. Of this the Saracens boast.

- D. 6. God imposeth such names to remember his mercies; though to aggravate mens sinnes. Ver. 11.
- D. 7. The wildest, vilest, cruellest of natures are permitted and ordered by Gods fore-sight.
- D. 8. The hand of power and violence, God may allot unto wicked ones.
- D. 9. Such hands also of violence are counter-wrought by that which God sets up in others against them.
- D. 10. The wildest and wickedest of men may have habitations, and seats on earth, beyond many others. Ver. 12.

2. From the mystery take these Notes.

- D. 1. Multitudes of bond children or false-born may be in the Church on earth.
- D. 2. Such false seed may have good names in the Church of God.
- D. 3. The bond-children in the Church are fierce and wild and cruel against the true seed. So Isaac.
- D. 4. Such corrupt seed may have places and repute in the visible Church equal or beyond their brethren, the true seed.

V. 13, 14. 4. The next head of this Chapter containeth Hagar's return to God after this discovery, wherein. (1) Her Worship. And she called the name of Jehovah speaking to her, thou God seest me.

Ver. 13. In which passage comprehending an act of Worship, we have considerable these particulars.

1. The Worshipper, Hagar, a sinner, a convicted sinner, an humbled sinner, a reformed sinner, a comforted sinner, by the promise of Jehovah and his appearance to her.
2. The object worshipped, Jehovah, who met her, pitied her, and showed her mercy in her sad condition, incurred by her own sin.
3. The Worship itself here offered unto God, which is conceived under a twofold form.
1. As praise and confession unto God; so the putting of such a name or title on God, seems to be for the setting of him high upon her heart. Wherein we may note.

1. The imposer, Hagar, under experience of Gods care.
2. The imposition, She called the name of Jehovah, that is, she declared him by that name that followeth. As the Sept. also.
3. The object of this imposition, Jehovah, speaking to her by counsel, and by comfort, him she nameth.
4. The name itself imposed, Thou O God seest me. Thou art God looking upon me, Sept. In which expression the attribute of his providence is thankfully acknowledged by her, with respect unto her self. As if she had said, Jehovah, this is the name by which I will call thee, my God, caring for me, seeing my affliction, pitying, pardoning me, providing for me to return me from this wilderness condition, and to discover more good to come upon me. I will thus call thee, and confess of thee for ever.

2. As prayer, so it is read by some, She called upon the name of Jehovah, who spake with her saying, Thou. And so the Caldee paraphraseth, and she praid in the name of the Lord, saying thou art God seeing all things. Which though the letter originally doth not expresse, yet may it be justly conceived that Hagar did pray as well as praise, in this time of her distresse; & most meetly might she address her self to God under this attribute of his providence, thou art God; who looketh after me in my affliction, which by my pride and folly I have brought upon myself, unto thee I look, &c.

2. The reason of her Worship in this kind, which is her experience of Gods providence at this time. This among all the variety of readings cannot be denied. But is imported. Because she said, have I also here seen or looked after him that seeth me? The Seventy read positively, because she said, for I have also seen before me him that appeared to me. The Caldee thus Because he said, Behold I began to see after that he appeared to me. Various conjectures have bin made of the sense of this passage.

1. Some thus: Have I seen here also? admiring. As if God appeared onely in Abrahams family. Marvelous I should see him here also.
2. Others: Have I seen, and am I now, after such a sight, or do I live?
3. Others: Have I seen, the back parts of him that seeth me? i. e. obscurely.
4. Others: Have I seen his back, that is, his displeasure here also?

But these seem not to give the right mind of this question.

Some other read, Have I seen him that looketh after me here, and is careful of my posterity? but the placing of the preposition will not suffer this neither.

In short therefore. This expostulation is oburgatory unto Hagar her self, as well as laudatory unto God; and to be rendered negatively. Have I here also seen? &c. that is, I have not seen or looked ked &c. Wherein. (1) She justifieth God. Jehovah hath seen me, and provided for me, even now a fugitive; and in this place of the wilderness, hath appeared to counsel and comfort me, when he might have destroyed me. (2) She condemneth her self, Have I here also seen or looked after him? Surely no, in my former place I did not see nor consider him, and in my wanderings I have not set mine eyes unto him, to regard him or seek after him for help, yet he hath seen me, and provided well for me, therefore I will worship him by that name, Thou God seest me, thou art the seeing and providing God. 3. The record which Hagar makes of this providence of God, at this place, Ver. 14. Therefore she called the well Beer-lachai-roi, behold it is between Kadesh and Bered. This record or monument of Gods providence is made by the imposition of a name upon the well where he met her.

Ver. 13.

Ver. 14.

The verb is masculine, therefore it may be applied to any one, for so men called the well though Hagar gave it.

1. The nomination of the place is here recorded, wherein. (1) The reason of imposition, — Therefore, because God there saw her. (2) The imposer, Hagar. (3) The subject of imposition, the well — (4) The name it self, Beer-lachai-roi. The well of him that liveth, and seeth me. The Cald. The well at which the Angel of life appeared. — The Sept. The well of him who I saw before me. — The well of the living, seeing me. So is it to the letter. It is a signal, or sacramental attribution, as if she had said, This well is and shall be the token, signal, or monument, to hold out the name of Jehovah, who made me live, and saw me, or provided for me in this place. So she would perpetuate the memory of the present providence. Some refer the first attribute of living to Hagar; and the second of seeing unto God; but better reason concludes both attributes to concern God; for whose praise they were imposed on the well. This is the first monument of this kind; raised afterward by Abram and Moses are the like.

2. The demonstration of this place by the topography, points out the well where it was, and what it was called in the time of Moses, Behold between Kadesh and Bered. The Sept. read Barad, the Cald. Agara, which is read of no where else, but Kadesh is mentioned, Num. 20. Two cities they were in the entrance of the wilderness of Sur, in the way to Egypt.

Quest. Whether are such monuments imitable at this day?

Ans. (1) There is no word to warrant it. (2) Gods revelation to us is more clear and spiritual, and therefore our duty is to raise spiritual monuments in our souls unto the Lord.

Yet it learneth us.

D. 1. The effectual appearance of good to souls by counsel or comfort, causeth suitable returns unto him. Connect.

D. 2. Soules comforted and comforted by God, name all their mercies on him onely.

D. 3. Providence is a special Name of God. Thou God seest me; and all. This must not be taken in vain. Praise him for it.

D. 4. Gods speaking to a soul, encourages it to speak of him, and to him. (God that spake to her.)

D. 5. It is good to praise God and to seek him under such attributes which he revealeth unto souls. Power or providence.

D. 6. Gods fight over, and care of poor souls in their distresse is a forceable reason to acknowledge him, and pray unto him.

D. 7. Good souls may not look after God, when he is alwayes seeing to them, and caring for them. Have I &c.

D. 8. Such carelesnes of souls will they acknowledge, and be humbled for it. Ver. 13.

D. 9. Soules having experience of their own unworthines and Gods gracious providence, should raise monuments of it unto his Praise.

D. 10. Life and all providential comforts are the name and glory of Jehovah.

D. 11. The effect of these may be named upon creatures to the glory of God. So this soul is life, righteousness, holiness, &c. which God hath put upon it.

D. 12. It behooveth souls to hold out and demonstrate clearly these works of God for which they would praise him. Ver. 14.

5. The last head in this Chapter is Hagar's deliverance, and her bringing forth a son, according to the word of the Angel Jehovah, unto her. Wherein these particulars are considerable in Ver. 15, and 16.

1. The birth declared, — And Hagar brought forth a son for Abram. Wherein is, (1) Something supposed, which is

Ver. 15.

Bb 3 her her obedience unto the word of Jehovah who spake to her in the wilderness, expressed. (1) In repentance for her pride and folly, being convinced that she was now out of her place in flying from Abrams family, and her subjection to her governors there. (2) In her return back again to Abrams house. (3) In her submission to her Mistress according to the advice given her by the Angel. ver. 9.

2. Something expressed, which followeth hereupon in the time appointed, and that is: the birth as fore told, ver. 11. Wherein may be noted.

(1) The Mother Hagar the bond woman, whom Abram had known as a wife, she is fruitful. (2) The privilege granted, she bare and brought forth, when Sarai yet was shut up from so much as conceiving. (3) The fruit, it was a son so much desired, and as it was fore told. (4) The Father expressed, it was Abram, upon his use or abuse of Hagar.

2. The nomination or naming of the child; wherein also observe.

1. Something is implied, viz. That Hagar had acquainted Abram of Gods meeting with her in the wilderness, and of his prediction of the birth, and imposition of that name; unto which Abram giveth ready obedience.

2. Something declared about the naming of the child born.

1. The imposer, Abram from Gods intimation to him, so it appears to be the Fathers right.

2. The subject on whom the name is imposed, his son, whom Hagar bare.

3. It was his own son. (2) It was he whom Hagar bare: that is, not the promised seed, but that which was born of the flesh: This periphrasis is not in vain, it was that son. 3. The name imposed, Ishmael. This was foretold by the Angel, and so it is acted by Abram, which name was more to instruct Abram and Hagar too, that God had heard them, than any comfort to the son.

3. The time of this birth, when all this was brought to passe noted in Abrams age; And Abram was the son of 80 year: and 6 years, in Hagars bringing forth Ishmael to Abram. The words being plain, that Abram was 86 years of age when Ishmael was born, no need of further inquisition about them.

Ver. 16. Only a question ariseeth.

Quest. Why is this mention of Abrams age made at this time?

Ans. 1. It serveth to shew the greater certainty of that history.

2. It is to discover the chronology of the Church & of the world, the 86th year of Abram, falling in the 2094th year of the world, as is computed.

3. It sheweth the wise and good providence of God to Abram, that however he was hasty, upon the promise of a seed revealed, to seek it in the way of the flesh, yet God makes him to see, that it was not the way intended by God to give that seed which he had promised to him.

1. Therefore perhaps as a little chastening upon his haste, God makes him wait 14 years more, before the promise is made good.

2. God doth this to exercise Abrams faith and patience, that he might be a pattern to all who believe.

3. God would have his servant to learn; that though the bond child come forth by the help of the flesh, yet the true seed is brought forth by the promise, when Abrams body and Sarais womb were dead, as to such an issue. Thus the history is clear.

But herein also may be a mystérie conceived, as is affirmed of the Mothers, Gal. 4. So of the children some spiritual intimation may be, of the false and true seed, and the time of their production, whereof the Spirit is not wholly silent. Something may be noted this way in its place.

From the history learn.

D. 1. Repentance of errors, obedience to Gods will, and submission to his yoke, is the way to see the expected good accomplished by him.

D. 2. Even Hagar, in a way unallowed, may have the blessing of the fruit of the womb. Evil may so prosper.

D. 3. Abram may have a son desired in the way of the flesh, but not the son promised. Desires may so be granted.

D. 4. It hath bin and is the Fathers right to impose names on his children. So did Abram.

D. 5. God may order being and name of such a seed, which he doth not approve.

D. 6. Hagars son may have a name, to mislead Abram and her to remember God. Ver. 15.

D. 7. History and Chronology the Spirit hath made usfull to the Church, for observing the line of Providence.

D. 8. Haste to get a promise in mans way, may have its own fruits, but deferre the performance of the promise. Ishmael at 86 years, but not Ishmael at the 109th. Ver. 16.

From

From the mystérie in this mother and seed learn also.

D. 1. Fleshy children in the Church begotten by the abuse of the law, may call Abram Father. Mat. 3. 9. So did this charged by the baptist there.

D. 2. The carnall seed in the Church may be sooner brought forth than the true children. It is a harder work to get Spirits transformed, and hearts changed, then to get the form and outside of religion.

CHAP. XVII.

In this chapter after thirteen years silence of God to Abram, for we have no apparition of God unto him recorded after the birth of Ishmael unto this time; we have here the history of the Church revived and continued in the 99th year of Abram.

The general heads of this chapter are two.

1. Gods apparition to Abram, with it's concomitants, from ver. 1. to 17.

2. Abrams obedience to Gods will revealed. ver. 23. to 27.

In the former we have these effects of Gods appearing. (1) The renewing of Gods covenant to him. ver. 1. to 8. (2) The addition of seal therunto. ver. 9. to 14. (3) The special promise about Sarais Isaac, ver. 15. to ver. 22.

Within the compass of the first we have to note. (1) A general intimation of Gods appearance and the scope of it, ver. 1. 2. (2) Abrams reception of this discovery. ver. 3. (3) A more special revelation of the covenant to him in the particulars of it. ver. 3. to 8.

First, the general expression of Gods appearance and covenant is in ver. 1. 2. wherein occurs;

1. The time recorded, thus.

Ver. 2. And Abram was the son of ninety years & nine years. So the letter, Hebr. so the Caldee.

And Abram was of ninety years. Sept. He was then entering into that year of his age, which is not noted in vain by the Spirit, but it sheweth Gods visible discoveries were not every dayes work unto his Saints, but at his owne pleasure, and upon solemn occasion; and not without an hint of rebuking Abrams haste, to have the promised seed in a way of his own: sure it is, God exercizeth his faith and patience 14 years longer, before the seed is born, which God promised;

2. The apparition expressed, — And Jehovah was seen to Abram, so the Sept.

The Lord appeared, Calde. That is probably, in a visible shape of a man, as also afterward he did. Chap. 18. this was the fifth eminent appearance of God unto him:

3. The revelation of his will made upon this appearance — And God said unto him; The word which here he giveth him is threefold in form of speech. (1) narrative, אני ה' אל'הי I am God almighty or al sufficient. — I am thy God, Sept. Cald. as Hebr:

It is conceiv'd to be a promise, and so it may, but the form of speech is onely declarative, where may be noted. (1) What God declareth; and that is the attribute of his power or all sufficiency, to perform in another way his promise made, though as yet it was not done; neither was it Gods will to doe it, as yet, to the uttermost. So God best interprets himself unto Moses, I appeared to Abram El-schaddai a God able to doe what I promised; but not Jehovah to put in present being then, what I was able to doe. Exod. 6. 3.

So that this attribute was most fit for Abram; he contenting himself with Ishmael as the promised seed, and looking upon himself and Sarai, as dead to generation at this time; now therefore God makes himself known a mighty God, an almighty one and all-sufficient; to whom nothing was impossible to bring about his owne promise. This supported Abrams faith. Rom. 4. 20. Isai. 13. 6. Nothing stands before him. (2) To whom this was declared; and that is to Abram, content enough as it seemeth, with the Son of the bond woman, not seeing thorough the promise, but crying to earnestly for the promised seed as before: yet ready to believe what God should reveal unto him. (3) Why God declareth himself thus: surely it was most futable to overcome the present difficulties incounting Abrams faith; for nothing but impossibilities appeared unto him to have a seed out of a dead body and dead womb. But seeing El-schaddai by faith, against hope he believed in hope. Rom. 4. 18. (2) Preceptive, or mandatory; which injoyneth. 1. Exactness of walking; — Walk in my sight, or before me, the Septuag. read, be pleasing before me, the Caldee, Serve thou before me, the Two terms are significant here. 1. That which notes the matter or duty injoyed, Walking, pleasing, and servng, as translated, which indeed carry in them the whole work of faith, love, and obedience to God in all things commanded by him. 2. The form, before me as I looking on. 2. Purity of being, — And thou shalt be perfect, — and be blamelesse; Sept. be perfect, Cald. This notes the very form of life and working required, which is as some read perfection, others integrity, and others sincerity in being, professing, and and working towards God. So that a pure, blameless, sincere frame of Spirit is all here required; and not perfection of degree's of grace not here attainable, ver. 1.

(3) Promissory, which is thus expressed ver. 2. — And I will give my Covenant between me, and between thee, and I will multiply thee in exceeding exceedingly. — And I will put my Covenant, &c. and I will multiply thee vehemently. Septu. — Between my word and between thee, and I will multiply thee vehemently vehemently. Cald. In which general discovery note.

1. The connection of the promise is observable which knits it to the forgoing command. 2. The promiser, I, El-schad-dai, I am not onely almighty but I will shew it. 3. The matter promised, in two expressions. (1) I will give my Covenant, viz. That made before, Chap. 5. 18. Which is mainly the Covenant of grace and afterward is more distinctly delivered. (2) I will multiply thee abundantly, abundantly, which is annexed unto the Covenant of grace, and is the answerable effect of the former attribute, which nothing else but almightiness can doe, to give such an innumerable feed; so vehemently multiplied out of dead bodies, as before it was spoken, as the stars or dust, ver. 2.

These truth's may be learned from the premises,

- D. 1. Mans haste to get Gods promise in his own way may meet with Gods delays.
- D. 2. God stayeth his fulfilling promises until the time may most suite his glory.
- D. 3. Gods extraordinary discoveries are more rare and unfrequent; not every day.
- D. 4. God doth appear at last to perform his promise, when perhaps his servants look not for it.
- D. 5. Jehovah declares himself in the; forlorn conditions of his servants God almighty, that we might live upon him.
- D. 6. Gods almightiness doth challenge exactness of faith, love, and obedience, in his peoples walking with him.
- D. 7. Sincerity of being crowneth all walking with God, and so is commanded by him. Ver. 1.
- D. 8. The almighty God, in a way of sincere walking before him will make good his Covenant to his Saints.

D. 9. Excessive multiplication of the Churches seed is annexed to Gods Covenant with Abram. Ver. 2.

(2) The next particular in the first head is Abrahams reception and entertainment of this Gods discovery, as it is expressed in the beginning of ver. 3. And Abram fell upon his face. Ver. 3.

His posture onely is here noted as a symbol of his stipulation unto God upon this appearance unto him. It is no less than prostration which is here expressed; Worship of God appearing is surely the meaning of it. (1) In an awful fear of that Majestie visible. Dan. 8. 17. (2) In an obediencial restitution, yielding to Gods command and waiting, for his promise. (3) In a grateful worshipping of God who came now to awaken him, for a new and better reception of his Covenant and promise than before; hereby expressing his faith and thankfulness, honouring God.

Note from it.

D. 1. Gods gracious appearances in his Covenant to his Saints are humbling discoveries to them.

D. 2. Saints humbly submit to all Gods will discovered in his wisdom to them.

D. 3. Saints humbly Worship and honor God in the revelation of his Covenant of love to them. Ver. 3.

(3) Now followeth a more distinct relation of Gods Covenant unto him, wherein we have, (1) The revealer, thus described — And Elohim spake with him, in saying, ver. 3. The same God almighty who appeared to him, of whose word there could be no doubt. (2) The matter revealed, which is his Covenant, and this in two special parts of it is made known.

1. In that which concern's Abram by himself, ver. 4. 5. 6.

2. In that which concern's Abram and his seed jointly; ver. 7. 8.

In the first of these we have to consider: (1) The singling out of the Covenant maker, I, behold my Covenant, — Ver. 4. And behold my Covenant. Sept. — Behold I have made my Covenant. Cald. Two special heads of comfort doth God hold out.

1. Himself. I. It is I, Abram, be not afraid afraid, behold me God almighty, able to support this Abram needed, when he fell upon his face with some consternation at the appearance of God.

2. His Covenant, behold my Covenant; that is his former promise solemnly confirmed, let this discovery yet uphold thee.

(2) The specifying of the confederat peculiar in this Covenant, it is with thee — Sept. and Cald. same, that is, to Abram eminently and by himself.

(3) The special matter of the Covenant here made unto him. In general it was, that however now he might conceive himself very unlikely to have any more but one Ishmael, yet God Covenants with him as to that matter, that he should be the Father of many nations.

Wherein we have to note.

(1) The promise itself; And thou shalt be for a Father of multitudes of nations —

Ver. 4. This according to the mind of Gods Spirit is rendered, 1. To the letter, concerning the natural seed of Abram, and so he was a Father or fountaine of a numerous seed, Ishmaelites, Kethureans, Israelites, &c. 2. To the spiritual application of this, and so it notes the seed of the Church, as well to be adopted to Abram, as such who did arise out of his loines. And this way the Spirit carrieth it. Rom. 4. 16. 17. Rom. 11. 17. Gal. 3. 7. And this doubtless by the Spirits interpretation is the main good promised to Abram to be the Father of the faithful, or of the multitude of beleeving nations; such as make up the Church of God. Therefore the exprellion for a Father in the original serves fitly here; though Abram was not the natural Father of them, yet he was by Gods Covenant, as, or for a Father to them, who were gathered to his faith; and his name to be named upon them, as Abrahams children. 1. The relation promised, a Father. 2. The correlate, of nations, not onely worldly but spiritual. 3. The extent of this correlate multitudes, no small number, but all the Church which spread into nations, groweth to multitudes.

(2) A special signe or token of this privileged in the change of his name. Ver. 5. Wherein occurre.

1. The actual change of his name, And thy name shall not be called farther, Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham. — Sept. and Cald. same. This is the first name we read of changed by God and doubtless as an act of grace, though sometime it is as a token of wrath and judgment. Wherein we have to observe, 1. Something denied, as derogatory to him, Thy name shall not any more be called Abram, that is, an high Father, or Abram alone without children. 2. Something affirmed, thy name shall be Abraham, that is, thou shalt be called and so surely be Abram or an high Father with a multitude of children. H. Is the first letter of אברהם a multitude, and put for it, though abbreviated for better pronunciation, which otherwise should be Abrahamon; wherein may be observed, (1) A period put to Abrahams orby, or childlessness. (2) A beginning of Abrahams fruitfulness. (3) A special token of it in his name, which might still put him in remembrance of it.

(2) A special reason of this token expressed, Because I have given thee the Father of the multitude of nations — אני אב. I have set or made thee, Sept. — Cald. same. Herein note 1. The author of this constitution, God almighty, 1. 2. The constitution itself which carrieth in it, (1) Reality of effect, it is set and done (2) Freeness, it is given, (3) Stability, it is without repentance, 3. The priviledge of constitution, a Father of multitude of nations; according as was expressed before, so that Gods change of name here carrieth in it a real effect; and not onely made a new addition to him at circumcision, as is conceived by some.

Thirdly. A confirmation of the same Covenant, by doubling and trebling it. Ver. 6. Three expressions are added.

1. And I will make thee to be fruitful in abundance, abundantly. — And I will increase thee mightily. Sept. — I will multiply thee very much, very much. Caldee.

(1) The priviledg promised is the same, fruitfulness or multiplication of seed unto him by God. (2) The extent of it, which is to the utmost multitude, therefore so doubly exprested.

2. And I will give thee for nations — And I will set thee. Septua. and Cald. That is to become nations or that nations should be of thee; The certainty, freeness, and greatness of this priviledge, is here again repeated.

3. And kings shall goe out from thee — And kings of nations shall be of thee. Sept. — And kings who shall rule over people, &c. Cald. In this the dignity of his seed, as well as the multitude and reality is signified; the truth of which was accomplished. 1. In the letter, as in the kings of several nations from Ishmael, Esau, &c. and the kings of Israel and Judah. 2. In the spiritual application, Christ the eminent king was to come from him, whose day he saw. All this properly belongs to Abraham to be the Father of these.

1 Pet. 2. v. 9. Rev. 1. 6.

Note from it.

D. 1. The almighty God speaks kindly to his humbled Worshipers.

D. 2. God almighty holds out himself a support to dejected soules.

D. 3. God almighty makes out him. C c himself in his Covenant unto his humbled prostrate souls.

D. 4. Temporal and spiritual paternity doth God give in his Covenant to barren Abram.

D. 5. Multitude of nations are the promised seed of Abram, both in the flesh, and in the Spirit.

D. 6. As Abram was a Father properly to his natural seed, so he is a Father to adopted nations. Ver. 4.

D. 7. There is a time of Gods putting an end unto Abram's and his Churches barrenness.

D. 8. God almighty changeth the name of the solitary into multitudes of children.

D. 9. God makes real to his people what he name's on them.

D. 10. God freely give's Abraham the Father of his multiplied people, and them children unto him. V. 5.

D. 11. Repeated promises from God to his, are strong obligations for duty from them to God.

D. 12. God is firmly engaged for Abrahams and the Churches exceeding fruitfulness; he will fructify them vehemently, vehemently.

D. 13. God giveth Abraham to the nations, as well as to his natural seed, to be their Father.

D. 14. A royal seed is the Church from Abraham, especially in the king Christ.

D. 15. Gods Covenant to Abraham carrieth in it political order. Ver. 6. Kings as well as people shall come out of him.

2. The next part of the Covenant concerns Abraham and his seed together: as expressed, ver. 7. 8. Wherein we have to consider these particulars. (1) The Covenant-maker, the same El-Schaddai, (2) The Covenant-making thus expressed.

Ver. 7.

And I have made to stand my Covenant. It is in time past, though the matter requireth it to be read in future, being of things not yet accomplished. So the Sept.

blish, and so the Caldee.

The making of it here is not onely by gift, but by establishment; I will make my Covenant to arise against any thing that may hurt thee, and it shall not fall. (3) The Covenantees or confederates.

Between me and between thee, &c. 1. The parties confederat are Abraham and his seed. 2. The succession of them in their generations. The Sept. readeth so, but the Cald. reads, Between my word, and between thee, and between thy sonnes, &c. This is conceived to be the name of the son of God; but the parties here are God, and Abraham with his seed.

Quest. What is meant by this seed?

Answ. All Abrahams children natural in the line of Isaac and Jacob, together with all afterward under Christ ingrafted, and taken under his name. Of which the Apostle maketh two sorts.

1. The true seed of promise such as Isaac was. 2. The children of the flesh, such as were not the true Israel, to whom yet did appertain the external adoption, &c. Rom. 9. ver. 3. to 9. Which several seeds are reckoned under the Gospel as well as before, and under the Law. Both must be comprehended in Abrahams seed.

(4) The Covenant itself, of which are two parts expressed.

1. Principal and Spiritual, For an everlasting Covenant to be unto thee for Elobim, and to thy seed after thee. To be thy God and thy seed after thee. Sept. To thy sonnes. Cald. Which properly is the promise of adoption of Abraham and his seed out of the world to become a peculiar people unto God amongst whom he was resolved especially to place his Name.

Herein is by Covenant granted. 1. Special relation, that El-Schaddai, (though he be God of heaven and earth), yet now will become more peculiarly by grace the God of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Israel; So to be a God to thee, and to be thy God is all one. Now this was twofold according to the double seed. 1. External to those who were the seed in the flesh which had it's mortal ever. Rom. 9. 4. 2. Internal which was to the true seed of promise, and to them was it an everlasting name indeed. Isai. 56. 5.

2. Special communication unto his covenanted ones. I will be for a mighty to thee and to thy seed. And that two ways. 1. By outward common salvation; and Church communion in externals, unto all the seed of Abraham; so they were all called the sonnes and children of the Kingdom, to whom the Law was given, and the service, &c. Rom. 9. 4. 2. By inward and special salvation, and spiritual communion in all saving graces, Righteousness, Holiness in truth, &c. So the force of this expression is, I will be to thee for a Mighty God, as if he had said, Whatever I am, or have, or can doe, I will be all that to thee and to thy seed. Almighty Righteousness, Life and Salvation.

Righteousness, Life and Salvation. To be for a God, is the highest expression to set forth the communication of all good; what can there be that is not in God? Truly therefore are they blessed whose God is Jehovah. Psalm 144. 15. 3. Special duration, for an everlasting Covenant, which according to the parts of it, and subjects concerned in it must admit a double sense. (1) Of outward adoption, and good vouchsafed to the seed of the flesh, it was a Covenant for their ever, that is so long as the carnal Israel should continue in their Church state, which was unto Christ, then the children of the Kingdom were cast out. Math. 8. 11, 12. It was therefore but a bounded ever, as the Law of Ordinances had, that is so long as the subjects did continue: so what is for a mans life, we say he hath it for ever; it is indeed his ever. (2) Of inward adoption and grace vouchsafed to the true seed, and this is everlasting truly, that shall never end, as they are Gods seed established for ever. Ver. 7.

2. Additional, consisting of some external advantages; wherein also we have to consider.

(1) The external good by Covenant bequeathed, where note, 1. The freeness of the Doner, And I have given, read in future, because yet to come, but very certain, and therefore express in time past. I will give. Sept. and Cald. 2. The subjects to whom, Abraham and his seed both of flesh and promise; both enjoy this portion, 3. The matter of the gift expressed (1) By Abrahams travels, The land of thy travels, pilgrimage and peregrinations, which thou inhabitest, Sept. That should be his for rest. This was a type of Heaven unto which Abraham and his true seed should come. (2) By its name and extent.

Even all the land of Canaan; the bounds whereof were described before. Chap. 15. 4. The use or end of it, for a Possession everlasting, that is a quiet habitation, wherein they might walk with God, and serve him; and that for ever; even unto Christ: when the partition wall was to go down, and Abraham to become indeed the Father of all Nations.

(2) The relation-promise repeated, And I will be to them for a Mighty God, this beareth the same meaning as before expressed.

And all together teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods Covenant with Abraham is a standing Covenant, it riseth, but falleth not.

D. 2. The same Covenant which maketh Abraham the Father, maketh the Church his seed.

D. 3. Abraham and his seed are the onely confederats with God in his Covenant to his Church.

D. 4. All the seed of Abraham after the flesh and after the promise have their respective places in the Covenant of God.

D. 5. Abraham's seed in successive generations are all in Covenant with God.

D. 6. The Almighty God hath given himself to Abraham, and all his seed in special relation to be their God. To carnal, outwardly: To spiritual, inwardly.

D. 7. God Almighty hath given himself to be for a God to Abraham and his seed. Common good to carnal, and special good to spiritual seed. All that God is, hath, or can do, to bring to Glory.

D. 8. Gods Covenant is everlasting; of outward priviledge to the Jewes ever, and of inward to the children of promise absolutely for ever. Ver. 7.

D. 9. Gods Covenant of Grace hath the promise of outward comforts additional to it.

D. 10. The place of the Churches Pilgrimage, God can give to be the place of their rest.

D. 11. Gods Covenant for a time confined his Church within the bounds of Canaan.

D. 12. The Churches station and possession there, was for a limited ever.

D. 13. The Almighty was Israel's God in that place eminently known.

D. 14. God will much more own his true seed in Heaven for ever. V. 8.

2. The next special head in the first general of this Chapter is, the addition of a new seal unto the former Covenant.

Where about we have to observe.

1. The prescription of it, Ver. 9.
2. The description of it, Ver. 10, 11.
3. The subject of it with its time stated, Ver. 12, 13.
4. The pressing motive to observation, Ver. 14.

(1) In the prescription of this sacramental seal, Ver. 9. we have to note, 1. The connection of this institution with the former giving of his Covenant, I will be a God to thee and thine, and will do thee good in this land, and moreover thou shalt have this token of my Covenant; stiled Covenant here, according to the use of Gods expression. 2. The authority prescribing, And Elohim said unto Abraham, the same God almighty who gave the Covenant, institutes this seal. 3. The subject of this prescription, Abraham and his seed, in their successive generations; as before. 4. The matter prescribed, And thou shalt keep my Covenant. 1. The act is conscientious observation, or use of it. 2. Abraham. Sept. 2. The object is Gods Covenant, that is, the token or seal of his Covenant, called God's eminently both in respect of original, and authority, and end, whereunto it is intended.

(2) In the description of this token of Gods Covenant are delivered, Ver. 10. 1. A peculiar assertion of that which was prescribed, This is my Covenant which ye shall keep. viz. Circumcision following.

Quest. But was not that the Covenant, I will be a God &c. Ver. 7.

Ans. Yea surely, therefore where God calleth Circumcision his Covenant, it must be understood figuratively, that is, This Circumcision is the seal of my Covenant which I have made and it shall be in your flesh; so that it is usual in sacramental expressions to attribute the thing unto the signe.

Or else to this purpose, This is my additional Ordinance to my Covenant, which ye shall observe toward me in your generations; that ye shall have a signe of my Covenant in your flesh. Between my word and you. Cald. 2. A full expression of the Ordinance itself commanded.

That all males with you be circumcised; — Every male shall be circumcised; Sept. In which proposition are observable, 1. The subject on whom this ordinance was imposed, Every male, for none else could be capable of it. 2. The signe itself ordained, Circumcision; ye shall be circumcised; the nature whereof is afterward described. 3. The limitation of it, only among you, or for you, or with you this shall be done. It was enough for them all in Abrahams family the Church, for God's appointed time, that the males were circumcised; for the females were included in them; and the Covenant of promise was no less to them. 3. A special description of this Circumcision, And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin.

Ver. 11.

And ye shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskin. Sept. and Cald. the same with Hebr. Wherein occurs. 1. The agents, ye. That is Abraham first, and so after parents, and others deputed by God for that work. 2. The act, Circumcise, or cut off round. 3. The object; the flesh of the foreskin, called preputium, by naturalists, whence is thought, preputium is made, with some change of letter. The Greek ἀνέσθρα notes the top of the flesh which covers all the genital member. Why God should put the signe of his Covenant upon such a place? Though blasphemous wretches have derided it, yet surely it was his will, thought most fit by him, and for holy ends as by Moses and the Prophets is made apparent. 4. A special use or end of this ordinance, And it shall be for a signe of Covenant between me and between you. So Sept. between my word and you. Cald. Here we have the plain interpretation of the former proposition. Circumcision is the Covenant, that is the token and seal of it, and of righteousness by it. Rom. 4. 11. Now under this expression of a signe or token sacramental, are carried. (First) Signification; it was a signe to betoken something. (1) Pollution of Nature, in all before Circumcision. (2) Distinction of the Church from the people of the world. (3) Abolition of the body of the finnes of the flesh. Therefore though Circumcision be enjoyed upon one member, yet is virtually upon all: as we read of the Circumcision of the Ear, the Lips, and Heart. Exod. 6. 30. Jer. 6. 10. Isai. 6. 10. Deut. 10. 16. Chap. 30. ver. 6. Col. 2. 11. (4) Collation of the promise, of the Almighty being their God who were circumcised. (5) Restitution of mans faith and obedience unto God to walk before him, and to be upright. (6) Confession of faith in the promised seed to come, in whom this Circumcision should be finished. (Secondly) Application of all the benefits of this Covenant unto the Circumcised. (Thirdly) Obligation of the whole Covenant, and all the benefits of the same unto the South. Rom. 4. 11. Thus farre from what is here prescribed and described unto us.

These observations may be noted.

- D. 1. God Almighty think's fit to annexe visible seals to his Covenant; for his Churches edifying.
 D. 2. God's Authority injoyneeth such as be in Covenant, to receive the visible seals thereof.
 D. 3. The carnal seed of Abraham (as well as true) are in Gods account subjects fit for outward Covenant seals. Ver. 9.
 D. 4. The very Covenant of grace and the good of it are attributed to the external pledges of the same. D. 5.

D. 5. A conscientious observation doth God require of the ordinance, for the participation of the Covenant blessing.

D. 6. Circumcision of all the males in Abrahams family was Gods sealing ordinance to them for the time appointed. Ver. 10.

D. 7. The cutting of the flesh of the fore-skin is that Circumcision first appointed by God.

D. 8. Gods Ordinance of Circumcision is the very signe and seal of the Covenant of grace; confirming Gods promise to man, and ingaging mans duty unto God, in mortification of the flesh, and walking in the Spirit perfectly before him. Ver. 11.

3. The subject of this seal with its stated time of administration, Ver. 12, 13. is to be scanned.

Herein these particulars occur.

1. The subject of this signe described by these characters.

(1) Of Age, as recorded Ver. 12. And the son of eight dayes shall be circumcised for you, or with you. And a child of 8 dayes. Sept. Cald. reads as Hebr. The plain sense is that the child having reached the eight day, and not before, was to be circumcised, so it was exactly observed to the last, when the Ordinance could be administered. So John the Baptist was Circumcised, and Christ also upon the eight day. Luk. 1. 50. Chap. 2. 21.

Quest. But why was the eight day the specifying time of the ripeness of the subject for this seal?

Ans. 1. This being positive depends only upon Gods will, which is a full reason of it; as here he expressly commandeth it. 2. Something of natural consideration did also concur as reason, that the child might have more strength to bear so severe a Sacrament. 3. Something of legal signification is also hinted, as some space for the mothers cleansing and fitting her to bear, as well as disposing the child which was accounted as in its bloods until the eighth day; which Law also concerned the beasts which were to be sacrificed to God. Lev. 12. 2, 3. Chap. 22. 27. Other mysterious conjectures the Jewes make, as that a Sabbath might passe over them to sanctifie them; as there must be one Sabbath in eight dayes. But Scripture hints no such thing.

Quest. Was it alwayes then administered at that time? Or was it unlawful to Circumcise at other times? This is certain,

Ans. 1. Sooner they might not Circumcise any. 2. In some cases of such impediments as were allowed, it was not unlawful to deferre it; as in case of the child's weakness, and in their troublesome motions in the wilderness. Josh. 5. 6, 7. But otherwise, no reasonable let withstanding, they were to Circumcise though the day fell out on the Sabbath. Joh. 7. 22.

(2) Of Sexe, Every male in your generations. 1. The subject is Males, only who were capable of it. 2. The succession, these in their generations.

(3) Of Condition, in respect of outward state; so the males are here discovered to be of two sorts. 1. Natural, as his owne seed successively springing from him. 2. Asceticious, such as he took besides these into his family, and they were also of two kinds. 1. The birth of the house, or the son of the house, He that is born in the house. The house-born of thy house, so the Sept. Which doubtless notes such servants as were borne of servants in his house. 2. Such as were The acquisition of silver; that is, servants bought into his family at any price, Acquisition. Sept. Three notes are of this. (1) He was a purchase by money, or price of any kind. (2) He was a stranger, Heb. Of every son of a stranger, so that others besides Abraham's natural children might be admitted. (3) He was none of Abraham's natural offspring. He that is not of thy seed. So that this is punctually noted; that this subject was not of Abraham's flesh and blood; and therefore neither Covenant nor seal were bound thereunto. Sept. and Cald. the same. V. 12. 2. The necessity of the ordinance injoynted upon this.

By circumcising he shall be circumcised, so Sept. and Cald. Which doubled phrase noteth. 1. The thoroughness of the work, 2. The necessity of it, both in respect of the nature, and time of the duty. It must be even so in every circumcised as God hath commanded: only mercy reserved which God will have rather than sacrifice upon the weak and such as were not able to bear it.

3. The end of this Covenant seal repeated. And my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. So also read's the Sept. and Cald. Wherein are these termes: (1) The subject of whom it is spoken, Covenant, that is metonymically taken for the sign or seal of Gods Covenant, this token of my Covenant, circumcision, now injoynted. (2) The attribute, wherein is affirmed. 1. The use of it, a signe or seal of covenant it shall be; intended in that expression for a covenant. 2. The subject in which it shall appear, in your flesh, or circumcised part. (3) The duration, for ever, which applied unto the outward sign must needs signify a limited ted ever, to those generations, untill Christ, and no longer. Some queries would be answered here about.

Quest. 1. Whether it be the same Covenant here to Abraham, as it is to us under the Gospell in Christ?

Ans. It is wholly the same. 1. In its principle. 2. In its matter and substance. 3. In its end; so the Spirit affirmeth. Gal. 3. 6. 7. 8. 9. 29. One-ly in respect of external adjuncts of signes and administration it is not the same.

Quest. 2. Doth this covenant concern such kind of persons now under Christ as it did, when given to Abraham?

Ans. Yea altogether, both for sexe, and age, and condition; neither is there a title from Christ excluding any: but expresse reception even of infants, as members of the Kingdom of God.

Mark. 10. 14.

Quest. 3. Is the same Covenant capable of variety of outward signes, or seales?

Ans. Yea surely, for so God from Adam after he had revealed the same covenant in the seed of the woman, gave visible sacrifices, wherein something was sacramental; after that, to Noah he gave the Ark & rainbow, signes of the same; after this, circumcision, and the passover to Abraham and Moses; and after all, baptism and the Lords supper to us in Christ.

Quest. 4. Doth baptism succeed and come in the place of circumcision?

Ans. Yea, the Apostle speaks plainly to it. Col. 2. 11. 12. ——— Baptism, circumcision being ended, baptism now serveth to the very same ends; to seal the covenant of grace, to initiate into the Church, to engage soules to faith and obedience; in all which it is a like figure unto circumcision.

Quest. 5. Is not the subject of this seal changed?

Ans. No: for as in the first gathering of the Church into Abrahams family, old and young were circumcised in their respective wayes, so in the bringing in of nations to the faith of Abraham in Christ, the elder believing and confessing are to be baptized and all their little ones together with them; for the covenant takes them in all. Acts. 2. 39.

Quest. 6. Is the time then of the eighth day binding for baptism as for circumcision?

Ans. No: For the time was but a circumstance belonging unto that ordinance, and upon special reason both in respect of God and the creature; which being taken away, and an easier burden laid on all sexes by Christ, no reason can tie it unto the same time.

Quest. 7. What necessity was there for this ordinance to be administered at such a time?

Ans. 1. No absolute necessity but conditional so farre as it was possible at such a time. 2. The necessity was of precept, for our obedience, not of means to our salvation.

Hence learn wee.

D. 1. Gods Covenant of grace unto Abraham did take in infants, who were sealed also.

D. 2. Gods wisdom and mercy pointed out a set time for infants admission into his Church by circumcision.

D. 3. Gods seal of his Covenant in circumcision, as it was sharper, so it was straiter, onely to males.

D. 4. God in building the partition between his Church and the world, left some gap for strangers to enter by.

D. 5. Abrahams charge was to bring his servants to Gods covenant and ordinances, as well as come himself. V. 12.

D. 6. God by his command hath laid a necessity on his of receiving his seales as his covenant.

D. 7. Gods will is to set some visible token of his spirituall covenant in the flesh of his.

D. 8. Such seales God hath made everlasting tokens of his covenant, circumcision to Jewes, baptism to Christians; which must require everlasting obedience.

(1) The last particular in the second general followeth, viz. The motive pressing Abraham and his seed unto the former duty, which is the danger of neglect, expressed in the 14th Ver. In summe, he commands obedience unto his Ordinance, under a most severe penalty that should be inflicted upon the offenders. Wherein these terms are considerable. 1. The subject of the penalty punctually described, And the uncircumcised, or covered, man-child or male, who shall not circumcise the flesh of his foreskinne. Cald. same; Sept. adde, in the eighth day. In which description, (1) The Sexe is mentioned, the male, but no age as the Septuagint expresseth of the eighth day; for surely surely God would lay no such Law nor penalty upon that age. The male therefore intended here, is he that was grown up to know the will of God, who was bound, if his parents did neglect it, to be obedient unto God himself; such is the subject threatened. (2) The condition of him as threatened, uncircumcised, or having the flesh of his foreskin abiding, and covering him; and he so continuing. (3) The aggravation of it, who shall not circumcise, the flesh of his forsken, the active reading of this passage is to the letter and more ealy to be understood than the passive. As it is read, whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised; or in whole flesh the foreskin is not circumcised; this seems to cast the sentence upon poor infants who are not circumcised: so many ancients have erred, and others with them laying this severe sentence where God did not lay it. But this being read actively, who shall not circumcise, &c, note's a wilful neglect or contempt of this ordinance when men come to knowledge, and then should submit themselves to this command of God; he that shall refuse, neglect or contemne this ordinance when he should subject himself thereunto is the person under penalty. 2. The sentence of penalty itself.

Ver. 14.

Even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

Sept. That soul shall be destroyed and blotted out from its stocke.

Cald. even that man shall perish from his people. (1) The subject is here again repeated that soul, i.e. The uncircumcised man, that shall neglect and despise it.

(2) The sentence expressed, shall be cut off from his people, his stocke or kindred.

1. The term from whence he must be taken, is his people; which may be meant either politically, from the people of the same state, or ecclesiastically, from the people of the same Church. 2. The penalty, to be cut off from them, which carrieth.

1. Sometimes death by the Magistrate, Exod. 31. 14. 2. Sometimes excommunication from the Church, Exod. 12. v. 15. 3. Sometimes destruction from God, which might be by temporal and eternal death. Lev. 22. 3. Upon this account Moses was like to be killed, Ex. 4. 24.

3. The reason of this sentence thus recorded He hath broken my Covenant

Sept. for he hath dissipated my Covenant. Cald. he hath made voyd my Covenant. The reason of the former sentence is the greatness of the sin, expressed here by the breach of Gods Covenant. 1. The object violated, is Gods Covenant, wherein he promised to become a God unto poore soules; now in the neglect and contempt of this signe in the flesh the very Covenant and God himself is despised; they are all united, one cannot be wronged without the other. 2. The act addes to the sin, (1) In the nature of it, it is a violent breaking, tearing, frustrating Gods promise or Covenant; so the word carrieth in it. (2) In the wilfulness of it, so he doth, and will do, who doth not submit to Gods ordinance; God himself, his Covenant and seal are trampled upon by the uncircumcised soul, therefore it must be cut off. It is queried here.

Quest. 1. Whether every one that was uncircumcised, and so lived and died was cut off from God, or no?

Ans. 1. If it be meant of uncircumcision plainly in the flesh, which was not executed in time as required, the omission lying on necessity, this did not cut off from God; otherwise those who died in the wilderness perished, which were many who had neither time, place, nor ability to subject themselves to this ordinance.

2. Suppose it in some that did neglect to observe this Sacrament. The sentence however did not exclude repentances. Every threatening of judgment hath this in the bowels of it unless they repent. Christ grants this. Luke. 13. 3. 5.

Quest. 2. Is the same penalty upon neglect & contempt of the Covenant-seals now?

Ans. No less; but rather more, upon them that reject the counsaile of God in Baptism, and spill the Lords blood at his supper. Luke. 7. 30. 1 Cor. 11. 27. 29.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Threatnings are Gods own way to presse on duties on his own.

D. 2. Wilful neglect or contempt of Covenant-seales is grievous sin.

D. 3. Cutting off from the Church, and living, by death temporal and eternal, is the reward of such contempt.

D. 4. Be Covenant seales never so mean in themselves, yet God himself, and his Covenant of life are rejected in them. Ver. 14.

Thirdly. The third particular head is Gods special discovery of the promised seed to come of Sarai, wherein, 1. Gods revelation of his will concerning Sarai, ver. 15. 16. 2. Abrahams reply to God, ver. 17. 18. 3. Gods answer to Abraham, ver. 19. 20. 21. 22.

(1) In Gods gracious dignation unto Sarai, we have, 1. His will revealed concerning the change of her name, ver. 15. wherein, 1. The revealer, thus described. And Elohim said to Abraham. 1. The term of connection some read, by a word of order, afterward; some by way of addition, furthermore; besides; also; others onely onely by a copulative, and. All note, that the revelation following is annexed to the duty required before. 2. The revealer is Elohim, God almighty, who was able to do it. 3. The revelation is in plain termes, he spake it. 4. The subject of reception Abraham Gods friend. 2. The matter here revealed, which was a priviledge personally concerning Sarai, and implicitly the whole Church of God, and it is contained in Gods charge concerning the change of her name, expressed, 1. negatively, Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai. Cald. the same

Ver. 15.

Sept. Sarathy wife, her name shall not be called any more Sara. In which negation. 1. The authority is divine. 2. The thing denied, is not as a matter unlawful, to use the name, but a putting of an end unto her barren condition now at her 90th year. The name therefore imports in it the matter denied; the name Sarai signifieth my lady or princeesse, which was but singular and limited, and in the denial of this is the taking away of her limited pre-eminence over one family onely, and her long continued barrenness. 2. Affirmatively in what should succeed it. For Sarai is her name. Cald. same, Sept. thus, but Sarra shall be her name; as the Apostles also read, the Greeks wanting an h at the end of words do supply it by double r. In which assertion, 1. The authority imposing is the same, the almighty God. 2. The name imposed is with the change of i, into h, Sarrah, which letter was added to her husbands name before, as being the first letter of Hamon a multitude; noting him to be the high Father of multitudes, and so here it is put to her name, noting her also a princeess or lady of multitudes issuing from her owne body. So that here is asserted under this name that exceeding fruitfulness of the barren which did not bear, that for her great issue is made a type of Jerusalem above, the mother of us all. 2. The reason of Gods will for this change, is given in the 16th ver. Which in general is Gods promise of blessing her, signified in her name, which blessing as expressed, is twofold. 1. Immediate, upon her ownebody, thus recorded, and I am blessing her, and also I have given thee, &c. Cald. same, Sept. And I will give thee a son of her, & I will bless him, Which last clause is not in the Hebrew, in which promise may be noted, (1) The doner, God. The same Elohim as before, able to effect what he promisseth. 2. The good promised to be bestowed on her by him, expressed generally. 1. A blessing. 2. The kind of blessing, a son, even the promised seed. Chap. 15. ver. 4. (3) The certainty, I have given, he speak's of what was to come as past, so we read I will give. (4) The subject to whom, Abraham. (5) The person from whom the son was to issue, Sarah his own wife, from her. This is the first place where express mention is made of the mother of the promised seed; though no doubt but God alwayes intended this by his owne wife, which he easily might have understood; therefore here is a secret hint of reproof both to him and her for taking Hagar to help in this work; it was their weakness to make such haste, therefore God makes them stay 15 years more, and then glorifieth his power, when they expected it not. 2. The mediate blessing which shee should have by the seed born of her, and I am blessing her, and she shall be for nations, and Kings of people shall be of her. Cald. Kings who shall reign over peoples, &c. Sept. thus, And he shall be for nations, and Kings of nations shall be of him. This was true but yet the blessing is here given to Sarah, as the reason of changing her name. Where we have.

Ver. 16.

(1) The causal good promised as before, I will bless her, not onely speak good to her, but effect it. Such is God blessing, doing good to soules.

(2) The effect of this, which was fruitfulness mediate by her owne issue to come after. This is set out. 1. In the numerousness of the seed, She shall be for nations; i. e. a mother of them as Abraham the father; not one but many nations; which was true naturally in people, which came from her, but eminently in the access of all nations unto the covenant of grace typified by her, and the true Church of God. 2. In the eminency of her seed. Kings of people should be of her. Which was a royal feed issuing from such a Princeesse, and this was acted.

(1) Literally in the Kingdoms from her. (2) Spiritually in the King Christ which was the main seed intended, and all his royal people with him. In him all nations were blessed. He was King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, and hee makes all his Kings and Priests unto God their Father.

Note hence.

D. 1. God joyneth promises to command, and giveth his Church for ordinances, as well as them unto his Church. From the connect.

D. 2. The almighty God is still revealing words of grace to his Abrahams.

D. 3. God in his owne time can forbid barrenness natural and spiritual.

D. 4. In forbidding barrenness God maketh abundantly fruitfull; as the mother of the faithfull so they themselves.

D. 5. Change of names carrieth reall change of natures and conditions with God. Ver. 15. D 6.

D. 6. God blessing is the cause of all fruitfulness, and it is doubled on the Church.

D. 7. God perform's his promise of seed in a right way, by Sarah, not by Hagar.

D. 8. All the numbers of the Church, and dignities thereof here, have Sarah their mother, as Abraham their father. Ver. 16.

2. The next particular is Abrahams reply unto God, ver. 17. 18.

Wherein these things are observable. 1. His prostration at Gods discovery, even as it was ver. 3. recorded.

Ver. 17. And Abraham set upon his face. Sept. and Cald. the same.

It is a paraphrase of worshipping God, as before expressed. ver. 3. wherein faith, humility, and holy fear are expressed as the necessary attendants on true worship. A real apprehension of Gods presence, and due carriage to the same, as well as to the promise made now concerning Sarah, is intimated in this posture; where he layeth his own face to Gods foot. 2. His affection toward Gods discovery about Sarah's bearing of seed, And he laughed, this action is but the symbol of his affection, therefore the Caldee paraphraseth, And he rejoiced; it is controverted something about the meaning of this act.

Q. 1. Whether it were not an effect of unbelief as Sarah's laughing was? Some think so; but yet it is not here reproved as hers was: which evidenceth against it.

Genef. 18. v. 12. Q. 2. Whether it were not a pure effect of faith noting his gladness in the good tidings given him by God? Ans. the Apostle seemeth so to commend the faith of Abraham in this matter, that there was not the least wavering. Rom. 4. 19. 20. Laughing note's affection as well as scorn. Psalm. 126. 7. And so it may be the rejoicing of faith. Christ seemeth to commend it. John. 8. 56. which day there, may referre unto this very time, wherein Abraham had the promise of the son of promise of whom according to the flesh our Lord came.

Q. 3. Whether it were not a mixt action, between faith and sense? Which is not hard to grant, so that sense be considered subordinat to faith, guided by it; & so against hope (for there was none in sense) he believed in hope as the Apostle speaketh, Rom. 4. 18. 19. The whole carriage of Abraham therefore in this matter is commended by God. His laughing then, though an act of sense, was by way of admiration at the strangeness of this newes which God had told him. 3. His meditation for inward reasoning hereupon, (1) The form of it is expressed thus. And he said in his heart. And he spake to his mind saying, Sept.

It was an heart-reasoning; thoughts were there tossed up and down but no doubtful ones. Onely Gods word received by faith puts on serious considerations about his own and wifes condition. (2) The matter of it in two questions.

1. Shall there be born to a son of a hundred year? — shall a son be born to him, &c. Sept.

2. And shall Sarah the daughter of ninety years bring forth? Sept. and Cald. same. (1) The matter of both questions is the same, Whether it were possible that out of a dead womb, and dead body as to generation; a son could now be born; which deadness also might so much the more discourage because it was inflicted on them in youth as well as confirmed by age. (2) The form of the questions, is not of denying such a thing to be, but believing the thing to be possible with God, and admiring that such an event should be now produced upon what was barren from her youth. The phrase of a son of an hundred year, is of one entering into the hundredth year, as Abraham now was. So also a daughter of ninety, notes her entering into the ninetenth year; wherein Isaac was born.

4. His supplication, wherein occurre Ver. 18. to note. 1. The Suppliant, And Abraham said unto God, — This is Abraham who beleaved the former promise made concerning Sarah. 2. The object petitioned, Elohim, the Almighty God. 3. The form of supplication, he spake by way of prayer. 4. The matter of supplication, O that Ismael might live before thee. — Let this Ismael live before thee, Sept. — I would that Ismael might stand, or abide before thee; Cald. (1) The subject prayed for, is the son of the flesh, whom perhaps Abraham formerly might suppose to be heir of promise but was the son of the bondwoman. (2) The blessing prayed for was, that hee might live. (3) The specification of this life, In the sight of God, which may note both life temporal and eternal; for in the face or favour of God all life consists. Psalm. 39. 5. (4) The scope of this petition, not as if he sighted the present promise of a son by Sarah, but in tender desire that his other seed might be under Gods blessing also.

Take these Notes from the promises.

D. 1. Gods sweetest discoveries of grace make Saints the more humble. Abraham prostrates himself when God promisseth to bless him.

D. 2. The Saints face is fittest to meet with Gods foot. Greatest prostration D d tion tion to Godst condescension is most answerable.

D. 3. Joy and prostration may meet together towards God. Behumbled and yet laugh.

D. 4. Fatih laugh's for joy in the promise; though sense in unbelief, as Sarah.

D. 5. The more improbable a promise is in sense, the more joy it works by believing. Ver. 17.

D. 6. Gracious parents may seek life and blessing for the worst of children.

D. 7. Good parents may sometimes preferre that which God will have come after. Abraham after the promise begs for Ismael. Ver. 18.

3. Gods answer to Abrahams reply now followeth, Ver. 19.

Ver. 19. Wherein are these particulars. 1. His confirmation of the promise to Sarah concerning the seed, And Elobim said surely Sarah thy wife is bearing, or shall bear to thee a son. Sept. Behold Sarah thy wife shall bear to thee a son.

Cald. In truth &c. 1. The form of confirmation rendered, yes, indeed, truly, in truth; which expression is by way of ratifying his former promise, ver. 16. And an hint to take him off from doting upon Ishmael, as if he should be his only son; as if he should say, I have promised it, and in truth it shall come to passe; it shall not fail. 2. The matter confirmed, that Sarah notwithstanding the deadness of her womb at such an age, shall certainly yet conceive, and bear to Abraham the son of promise; as was before declared. 2. His nomination of the son promised, And thou shalt call his name Jischak. Sept. and Cald. to fame. Where note. 1. The Imposer, God. 2. The instrument of imposition, Abraham. 3. The imposition, thou shalt call. 4. The name itself, Jischak, Laughter, or Joy. 5. The reason of this name, Abrahams laughing in faith; and rejoicing in the promised seed, and Christ in him. The Turks glory that Ismael their father had a better name, Gods hearing; but little reason for the name, For joy in God; it is good as Gods hearing of man. But we know good names may be cast upon bad men, as here it was; Gods Covenant carrieth the blessing to be gloried in, and not a mans name.

3. His Sanction of this Covenant of grace with this son. And I have made, or will make to stand my Covenant to him for a Covenant of eternity to his seed after him. Sept. same. and to his seed. Cald. Here also occur. 1. The Establisher, God Almighty. 2. The establishment, have made to stand, in time past, to note the certainty of it to come, as if done already. It did stand firm in Gods purpose, and it should be no less established to Isaac in Gods time. 3. The object or matter established, my Covenant, which doubtless was the whole body of Gods promises made yea and Amen in Christ Jesus. 4. The duration of it, for a Covenant of eternity it should be, which here is to be understood to be endless, for as much as the subject of it is immortal. The Covenant of grace ends not but in the perfection of Gods covenant ones in glory. 5. The subject to whom this establishment was made, Isaac, and his seed, doubtless such as were children of faith both natural and ingrafted branches, for so Isaac's as well as Abraham's seed must be reckoned; of him came Christ in whom all Gods chosen among the nations are blessed. ver. 19.

4. His dignation unto Ishmael according to Abraham's prayer; wherein God vouchsafeth these benefits. 1. Audience, thus expressed, And for Ismael, I have heard thee. Sept. Behold I have heard, &c. Cald. I have received thy prayer. That is, God accepted his prayer in part, but not in whole, so far as it seemed good unto him. 2. Beneficence, in these four things granted to Ismael. 1. In blessing of him, — so Sept. and Cald. Behold I have blessed him, giving portions of outward good. 2. In fruitful-tying, or making him fruitful, And I have made him to increase. So Sept. and Cald. I will increase him; time past is put for the future. 3. In multiplying his fruit, And I have made him to multiply to very much, very much. Sept. and Cald. same. And I will multiply him, that is in his seed, to very much, very much: to a numerous seed. 4. In nobilitating him in the world, Twelve Princes shall he beget and I will give him to be a great Nation. Sept. Twelve Nations shall he beget, &c. Cald. as Hebr.

This was made good as is read, Gen. 25, ver. 12, 16. whence this may be better understood, so God vouchsafeth the son of the flesh, fleshly things in abundance; and as yet it is made good unto his seed the Saracens unto this day. ver. 20.

5. Gods exception followeth next, wherein we have. 1. The excepting particle, (1) is here well rendered, but; wherein God sheweth he did not heare Abraham in all, which was not after his will. 2. The matter excepted, But my Covenant will I establish with Jischak, &c. Sept and Cald. same.

(1) The matter is the establishment of the covenant of grace, my Covenant will I establish, not with him, that God excepts. (2) The subject mentioned to whom this is reserved, set out, both by his name, Isaac,

Ver. 20.

Ver. 21.

Isaac; and by his mother, whom Sarah shall bear; and by the time of his birth.

In, or at this set time in the year following.

Sept. and Cald. same. That is the stated time of so many months wherein women usually bear children; by which time Abraham accomplished the hundred years, and Sarah the ninety, spoken of ver. 21. Sixty. Gods conclusion, and decession, or parting from Abraham, thus recorded.

Ver. 22.

And he finished to speak to him, and Elobim ascended up from Abraham. Sept. same. Cald. The glory of the Lord ascended. 1. Here we have Gods close of his revelation to Abraham at this time; at this last word he shut up his speech for this time. 2. Gods departure from Abraham into heaven; wherein must be concluded, that God appeared unto Abraham in a visible shape; so the Caldee read's, the glory of the Lord ascended, which doubtless was some visible symtome of his gracious prefence with him, for otherwise God filleth heaven and earth in his being; neither can any local motion be attributed unto him. So that the summe is, this visible discovery of Gods mind to Abraham now ceased for this time. All these particulars being thus opened let us, gather the truths which may be fruitful to us, ver. 22.

D. 1. God doubleth his promise sometimes to strengthen faith in his covenanted Saints. His revelation can only support faith.

D. 2. In harder cases and conflicts with sense God useth more solemn assertions of his promise. So now with Sarah who was so long barren.

D. 3. God almighty revealeth his will himself to raise faith in his people.

D. 4. Ninety years barrenness cannot hinder God from making a wombe fruitful, Sarah thy wife, &c.

D. 5. The promised seed will answer the joy of believers in name and nature. Isaac in the time, Christ in truth.

D. 6. The covenant of grace is rectly established to the promised seed. To keep it as well as to receive it. Ver. 19.

D. 7. God may hear gracious parents in something for children of the flesh, Abraham for an Ismael.

D. 8. Children of the flesh God may blest with outward good, an increase, and multiplied seed, and worldly honors. V. 20.

D. 9. Gods special Covenant of grace doth God specially reserve for the promised seed.

D. 10. The seed of promise in whom all are blessed is punctually described by name and birth, and time. So it was with Isaac, so with Christ.

D. 11. At Gods set time, be it never so improbable unto sense, Gods promise shall be fulfilled. 21.

D. 12. God measureth out the revelation of his good pleasure, and shuts it up according to his will. And he left of talking with him.

D. 13. Extraordinary visible appearances of himself, God takes away at pleasure; but his saving discovery in his word and ordinances abide. V. 22. And God went up from Abraham.

The second general head of this chapter is Abrahams obedience unto Gods discovery of his will for the impressing of the token of Gods covenant upon himself and family, which then were the visible Church. ver. 23, to the end;

Wherein these particulars are considerable.

1. His obedience plainly expressed, ver. 23, 24, 25.

2. His obedience again repeated, ver. 26, 27.

In the first narration of his obedience are observable. 1. The connection of it with Gods revelation of his will, that preceed's, and this followeth. A sweet order. 1. Ver. 23. 2. The subject of obedience, Abraham, to whom God was pleased to make known his covenant, Abraham. But here a querie or two must be resolved.

Quest. Did Abraham do all this work spoken of in circumcising such a family himself? He had 318 servants, &c. Gen. 14, 14.

Ans. 1. He was the party to whom God spake, and the very head of the family, who did all either by his hand, or by his order.

2. It is very likely that he did ordain others helpfull in so great a work; for it is not credible, that he could do such a work himself in the time mentioned; neither did God bind him to do it himself, but only commanded it to be done, and that was his care to whom God made it known. By way of proportion it is further queried.

Quest. May any administer the signes of the Covenant now, as baptism, whomsoever any man may desire?

Ans. No. 1. Any might not do it now in circumcision, but such as were appointed. The Father is the head in the action; upon extraordinary case the mother hath done it as Sipporah, Exod. 4. Sometimes the supreme magistrate saw it done, as Joshua. 5.

Secondly. Nothing was done without rule then; much lesse may it now under the Gospel. 3. The command now runs to such as Christ calleth to preach the Gospel; therefore no other may do it. — The dispensations to women were wicked.

3. The obedience performed appeareth in these particulars. 1. The object on whom he worketh, described. 1. In variety of relations within his family. (1) His son, — even Ismael his son. (2) His children of the house, — All home born servants. (3) His purchased servants — All the purchase of his silver, which were servants bought or hired. 2. In the universality of the sexe, every male among the men or poor men of the house of Abraham; upon all he performed Gods will. 2. The act of obedience expressed, is twofold.

1. Hee took them, — that is, doubtless by preparatory speeches and counsells prevailed with them to see them apart, and fit them for such a difficult duty: for it is not credible, that he took any by force. 2. Hee circumcised the flesh of their foreskin, — that is, he cut off or cauled to be cut off, the skin that covered the top of the genitall member in all those males. A painful and shamefull work, had not God commanded it. 4. The time of this obedience, in the body of that day.

Some read it onely demonstratively, in that very self same day, but others, in the body or strength of that day, when yet the sun was fully apparent, as the expression may carry: whence the Jewes account it unlawful to circumcise in the night, when the sun is downe; but how rationally, may be judged; where there is no rule against it. 5. The rule of this obedience, — as God had said unto him; by Gods word and no other canon did Abraham proceed in this work; wherein the purity and exactness of his obedience doth appear, strictly to act by Gods will. ver. 23. Sept. and Cald. same. 6. The age of Abraham, when he received the token of the covenant as it is registered in the 24. ver.

Ver. 24. And Abraham was the son of 99 years in his being circumcised in the flesh of his foreskin. So at the first discovery of this Covenant-token to Abraham, the old received it with their yong. And no other did Christ intend in taking away this, and giving an easier signe in Baptism, but that parents who submitted unto faith, with their children should receive it, as an initial entrance into Gods Covenant.

But here it would be resolved.

Quest. Why is Abrahams age here mentioned when he was circumcised?

Ans. Although the reason be not expressed, yet safely may it be presumed.

1. To note Gods continued care of him unto this day; as his age is mentioned in other places. 2. To set the chronologie of the Church more clear.

Quest. Why did God deferre it so long, till he commanded it?

Ans. 1. To try him with an hard Sacrament at this time that his faith might appear more glorious. 2. To be the Father of the promised seed in circumcision; a figure of the cutting of the body of the finnes of the flesh. — Ver. 24. Sept. and Cald. to the same

7. The age of Ismael is thus declared.

And Ismael his son was the son of thirteen year in the flesh of his foreskin being circumcised to him. — Sept. and Cald. to the same purpose.

Quest. Why was Ismael circumcised at this age?

Ans. At such a stature the command found him, as his Father at 99. And God would not have it delayd. Gods will is both law and reason.

Quest. Was this exemplary for others for the future to be circumcised.

Ans. No, for we see the word generally tyeth it unto the eighth day however the Arabians and Turks who boast of being his seed make it a rule to bee circumcised in the thirteenth year; such have they bin that would not be baptised until thirty year old as they conceive Christ was; making that a rule which God never meant.

Quest. Why was Ismael circumcised, seeing the Covenant was not given to him?

Ans. 1. The outward part of the Covenant did belong to him as Abrahams seed, and in the visible Church; therefore the outward sign according to Gods will. 2. Abraham doubtless was commanded to circumcise him, as theret in his house. 3. This was an outward meanes of grace, how-ever abused by such a child of the flesh. It gets Gods glory in the aggravating of his sin. — Ver. 25. And hence we may put Christians in mind, that though some say none but such who are true Christians must be baptised, visibility of profession is as much as any man can require for such an admision to this Covenant seed.

Secondly. In his obedience repeated by the work done, the same particulars are spoken of which need no more explication than than what hath bin opened. So ver. 26. 27. Only it may be demanded.

Quest. Why then is it repeated?

Ans. 1. To shew the certainty of this obedience in submitting unto this ordinance, which carried pain and shame and reproach as to man in it, yet Abraham and his house by faith went through all. 2. To shew the blessing of a conscionable governour; he hath his family sweetly concurring to submit unto God. 3. To be an example unto all Abrahams children to walk in the steps of his faith, and express it by ready submission unto all Gods commands.

Now take these observations.

D. 1. The beleivers obedience must alwayes follow Gods revelation. from connection.

D. 2. Such as know Gods will are bound to do it, and be obedient. So Abraham.

D. 3. All lawfull administrators of his ordinances must have their warrant from God. So had Abraham.

D. 4. All of all ages within the outward priviledge of Gods Covenant hath he enjoyned the initial token of it.

D. 5. Due preparation and execution faith doth make in administering Gods sealing ordinances. So Abraham.

D. 6. Difficulty, shame, reproach and pain, cannot hinder faith from submitting to Gods ordinances. Gods command fence them against all this.

D. 7. Faith delayeth not to keep Gods commandments. The same day as God command's, Abraham obeyeth.

D. 8. Faith in all administrations steereth according to the word of God onely. So did Abraham. Ver. 23.

D. 9. Every year of Gods Saints hath some special providence of God upon it.

D. 10. The eldest and the yongest are taken into Gods Churb-Covenant together.

D. 11. Faith will make age submit to hard services upon Gods command. So did Abraham. Ver. 24. What would not old age doe for God being so Spirituall.

D. 12. Obedience is to be performed to Gods ordinances in such ages as Gods revelation find's them.

D. 13. Children of the flesh have bin and are allowed by God to share in outward priviledges of the Church.

D. 14. Vnsanctified soules may submit themselves, to hard duties in the Church of God. Ver. 25.

D. 15. Eminent obedience to God hath a double memorial from his Spirit.

D. 16. It is commendable with the Spirit to have head and family all submitting to the ordinance of God. Especially when they yeeld to circumcision of hearts, which this of the flesh doth represent.

D. 17. Dangers affright not faith from obedience. All being sore together might be assaulted, Yet they submit to it; as knowing God was guard and defence enough.

For the close of this Chapter, I shall onely adde Luthers observation, upon the eminency of Abrahams obedience. Although the command of circumcising might seem to carry in it something of folly, and filthiness, as well as bitterness unto such an old Saint: Abraham did not so much as ask God, why this should be done? But goeth and doth it. Adam asked, why should this tree be forbidden? and so by unbelief fell. So of all popery lie faith, Nihil est nisi unum quare. And againe, Circumfigamus hanc pestem quare. Pestilent hoc quare Abraham simpliciter jugular; & ex corde evellit, &c. Luth. in Cap. 17. Gen. Fol. 103. 104.

CHAP. XVIII.

The beginning of the 4th section of the Law which the Jews used to read, is here made, intitled by the first word Vajera.

The summe of it is a special discovery of another apparition of God to Abraham, shortly after that in the former Chapter, in the same year, and not many dayes after, as the matter revealed about the promised seed will evince.

The general heads of the Chapter are these, 1. Gods apparition to Abraham. Ver. 1. To the end of the 8.

2. Gods further revelation of Sarah's bearing. From Ver. 9. to 15.

3. Gods discovery of vengeance intended to Sodom. From Ver. 16. to 22.

4. Abrahams Intercession for Sodom. Ver. 22. to 33.

In the first general are these particulars obvious.

1. Gods apparition itself declared, Ver. 1.

Wherein, 1. The connection of this to the former apparition, And, then, moreover; all note the addition of his discovery unto the former. 2. The subject appearing, Jehovah himself, but not without some company at this present. 3. The nature of the apparition, He appeared, that is visibly, and so was seen.

4. The subject to whom, Abraham, to him, that is, after his ready obedience, subjecting himself and family all at once to that soveraign upon Gods command.

5. The place of apparition, In the plains of Mamre, oak of Mamre Sept.

the place where he pitched his habitations, when he parted from Lot. Chap. 12.

6. The time of this apparition, And he was sitting at the door of the tent, as the day was hot.

Cald. Same. At noon Sept. In all it appeareth.

1. It was at high day. 2. At an hot season: when travellers might be weary, or he set to take the aire. 3. At a time of general repast, and for his posture 'twas waiting, or expecting for such guest, as some conceive.

Take these Notes from it.

D. 1. Multiplied manifestations of himself, as well as evident, God giveth to eminent obedience.

D. 2. Visible discoveries Jehovah hath and will make of himself, as he pleases.

D. 3. Day as well as night apparitions God affords unto his Saints.

D. 4. Gracious soules in waiting for good may have unexpected discoveries of God. Ver. 1.

2. Abrahams inspection or espying of him, as it is recorded ver. 2.

And he liſt up his eyes and ſaw, and beheld three men ſtanding over againſt him. Ver. 2.

Sept. and Cald. to ſame, Imma, where is declared 1. The freeneſs of the act, he did not hang down his head or turn his back as ſuch who are not willing to ſee their gueſts, but liſt up his eyes and ſets his face more earneſtly to behold ſuch objects of love approaching. 2. The truth of the act, what he looked on he ſaw really, it was no deluſion of ſight, or phantaſie; but a true and real ſight of his eyes. 3. The object of this act, and things diſcovered, ſet forth here, 1. Eminently by a demonſtrative terme, Behold, no dark, doubtful apprehenſion, as he who ſaw men like trees, but clearly he diſcerned. 2. Truly in the nature of it as it was ſeen, they were men; indeed truly men as looked on by him, yet called all by the Apoſtle Angels, Heb. 13. 2. And in this Chapter one of them is called Jehovah, ver. 13, 14, 17, 20, 22, &c. And the other two are called Angels, chap. 19. 1. So that God himſelf even the Son of God whom the Angels worſhip and obey, with two other of his miniſtring Spirits do here come as gueſts unto Abraham, but theſe alſo in the real ſhapes of men; no phantaſms as Satan ſometimes makes, God ſo permitting. True humane bodies were created and aſſumed by theſe, as by their parts, motion, ſpeeches, waſhing feet, and eating, is diſcovered; which were real actions. This God can and hath done to make bodies for a time to ſpecial uſe, and ſo unmake them at his pleaſure. Some determine them to be three arch-Angels ſent upon three ſeveral errands, the one to confirm the birth of Iſaac by Sarah unto Abraham, the other to ſave Lot, and the third to deſtroy Sodom. But theſe are Rabbinical dreares; and againſt the expreſs letter of the text: wherein one is Jehovah himſelf; and both the other helped Lot; and the vengeance on Sodom was from the Lord, from heaven. Some ancients have at leaſt rhetorically ſet out the trinity in the God-head. But not ſolidly. Others have their conceits of Michael, Gabriel, and Raphael to be theſe three Angels; but without ground. It is enough what hath bin declared for the truth. 3. The object is declared diſtinctly in number, they were three, who appeared to Abraham; but two onely to Lot, which were meſſengers from Jehovah who appeared to and converſed with Abraham. 4. In their poſture, they are diſcribed exactly, ſtanding as travellers, and that at ſome diſtance from him; as may appear by Abrahams haſte unto them, where they were, as it ſeemeth, ſome diſtance from them.

Note

Note hence.

D. 1. Gracious ſoules are willing to eſpy God upon all discoveries made unto them.

D. 2. Intent are the Saints to have a real ſight of what God offers them.

D. 3. The moſt eminent diſcovery of God unto his Saints hath bin in the fleſh.

D. 4. The Son of God did appear in fleſh created, and put it off again, before he came in fleſh conceived.

D. 5. The Son of God hath vouchſafed Angels humane natures alſo, for apparition unto men to accompliſh his work commanded them.

D. 6. God with his Angels hath ſometimes offered himſelf, a viſible gueſt to be entertained. Although not ſo now, yet in his members, he doth ſtil. Chriſt voucheth it. Matth. 23. 40.

Ver. 2.

3. Abrahams ſalutation of thoſe who appeared. Wherein we have theſe particulars to conſider: 1. His ſpeed toward them. And he ſaw, and ran to meet them from the door of the tent. Sept. and Cald. ſame. (1) His ſight is again mentioned, he was not deceived. (2) His ſpeed in motion, he ran, doubtleſs mooved upon good grounds, and diſcovery of whom it was; otherwiſe ſuch haſte was not ſo needful. (3) The term whence, the door of the Tabernacle, where he ſate for his reſreſhing; thence he haſted. 2. His obedience to them, And he bowed himſelf to the earth. And he worſhipped to the earth, Sept. and Cald. It is queſtioned what kind of Worſhip this was? Some think it onely civil, ſuppoſing Abraham knew them not to be ſuch as theſe were, which at firſt it may be ſo; yet doubtleſs Jehovah is ſaid to appear unto him, and he afterward calleth him ſo, and ſo worſhippeth; but however he ſaw that in them which commanded reverence, and his ſpeaking unto one in the next verſe argueth he had ſpecial reſpect unto one.

Hence note alſo.

D. 1. Sight of God in other perſons maketh gracious ſoules haſte to meet him.

D. 2. Gracious ſoules haſte to entertain God with them, as well as meet him. So Zacheus quickly deſcends to Chriſt.

D. 3. Meetings with God in him, are to be entertain'd with due reverence. V. 2.

4. Abrahams invitation followeth.

Wherein we have conſiderable.

1. His compellation. And he ſaid my Lord. So the Sept. and Cald. yet in the Hebr. it is read by ſome, my Lords, as if ſpoken to all, but the word as critics note by the long N properly ſets forth God; and the words referring to him are ſingular, as thy ſight, and thy ſervant. So that Abraham ſpeaketh mainly to one among them whom afterward he acknowledgeth to be Jehovah; whether certainly knowing him, or by ſome token conjecturing him to be the Lord of the reſt, it is not worth diſputing; but unto him, the Son of God, he directs his mind, as unto all; acknowledging him to be his Lord and Maſter as well as theirs who then attended him. 2. His condition propoſed.

If now I have found grace in thine eyes, beſore thee. Sept. and Cald. ſame.

Wherein we have, 1. The ſubject ſuppoſed, If I, poor I, Abraham, who deſerve no favor, but am a poor creature, leſs than all grace. 2. The privilege ſuppoſed, If I have found grace, it ſeemeth that appeared by ſome ſtand which was made or ſome reſpect caſt upon him, ſo that he ſuppoſeth, if ſo much grace were already diſcovered, now he might deſire a further expreſſion. 3. The patron of this privilege ſuppoſed, if it be in thine eyes, or before thee, that is, that Lord, Jehovah to whom he makes his addreſſes; if thine eyes my Lord be toward me as they ſeem to be in grace, this is the ground of his farther requelt. 3. His petition, preferred upon the former favour ſuppoſed, which was fourfold. 1. He intreats him and his attenders to a ſtop, and ſtay with him thus deſcribed. Paſſe not; I pray thee from thy ſervant. Or paſſe not by thy ſervant, Sept. Wherein he deprecates the Lords deſertion of him, in that way as now he ſeemed to come viſibly, as a gueſt unto him; and therein earneſtly deſires his ſtay, and abode wherein he ſheweth. (1) His affection; he would not part with this gueſt. (2) His humility; he acknowledgeth himſelf his ſervant, ready at his word, and ſo ingageth him to make a ſtop: ver. 3.

2. He invites to a bath or waſhing; a needful reſreſhing unto travellers in thoſe parts, who either go without ſhooes or onely in ſandals, an open kind of ſhooes which were capable of diſt and gravel which might annoy the feet.

Now a little water ſhal be taken, and waſh Ver. 4.

ye your feet. Let water now be taken, and let them wash your feet, Sept. doubtless Abraham had those who attended on that office. In the letter, this washing of feet was an office of charity to wearied travellers, soiled and annoyed with heat and dust; and under it Christ notes all duties of charity, when himself washeth his disciples feet. John. 13. reading also to them there in a lesson of humility. This in those countries became afterward a distinguishing character of the Churches eleemosynaries; if they had washed the saints feet. This Abraham offers, water hath its worth, and washing its comfort.

3. He intreats them unto rest, now in the heat of the day.

And lean you, or rest you under the tree — and refresh your selves, &c. Sept. Here in hee speaks to them, as unto men, such as they appeared, now a shade and seat, and resting place is very desirable in the heat of the day; hereunto therefore he invites these guests as most suitable to their present appearance. ver. 4. — 4. He invites them to a Vaticum, to take a morsel of nourishment in their way, expressed.

Ver. 5.

And I will take to you a morsel of bread and eat ye, &c. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Thus he bespeaketh them as travellers, however he apprehended God among them; yet as they appeared, they might stand in need of bread. (1) His offer is but small, I will fetch a bit of bread, but therein his heart large. (2) His intention, the refreshing of the wearied, and comforting their hearts. (3) His reason, twofold. 1. To help them on their way, afterward ye shall passe on your way. 2. To regulate unto their kind respect in turning their way toward him. The answer made unto this invitation.

And they said, so shalt thou do, as thou hast said, — and he said, so do, &c. The one being the Lord eminently speaks the others by consent. But the answer is by way of concession, and acceptance, do as thou hast said, we will come in unto thee. ver. 5.

Note.

D. 1. Gracious soules receive God with honor in all his discoveries by himself, or in others.

D. 2. Humble soules are apt to judge themselves unworthy of favour from God or any of his.

D. 3. Favour found with God incourageth his Saints to seek further to him.

D. 4. A sight of Gods favour in himself or messengers, works a desire of his abode.

D. 5. Gracious soules are really servants to God and his messengers. Ver. 3.

D. 6. A free and gracious Spirit is large towards God in his servants.

D. 7. Suitable refreshings do Gods Saints desire to give to all in whom God appeares.

D. 8. The Saints offers unto God in his may be small, but their performance is great. Ver. 4.

D. 9. Saints are ready to further on Gods messengers.

D. 10. Gracious soules take all opportunities of doing good.

D. 11. God in his accepts the tenders of his Saints. Ver. 5.

Now fitly followeth Abrahams provision for entertainment of his guests, wherein are obvious. 1. His speed described thus.

And Abraham hastened, &c. Sept. and Cald. same. After his invitation accepted, he makes no delay for due entertainment. (1) His motion was swift, and hastie, (2) The term of it was the place of provisions, the tent; and his help for family provisions Sarah his wife, 2. His order unto her for the palfrey, which shee was at least to oversee, if not to put her hand unto it, as was most probable. In which order (1) His charge for speed, — and he said hasten.

So Sept. and Cald. That is speedily make ready by bolting or otherwise, he would have her hands, and servants, as speedy as his heart. (2) For matter and measure, — Three Peraks or measures, or pecks; which measure is thought to be a pottle bigger then our common English peck called Winchester. Herein (1) The matter provided is the finest of the wheat, or the fat of the kidneies of wheat. (2) The measure very large for three men; three such measures; he profered a morsel, but provides good measure. Thirdly for the manner of fitting it.

Knead and make hearth-cakes. (1) By wetting and mingling the flower to make it into paste. (2) By baking it on the hearth with embers, as the custom was. Ver. 6. 3. His provision for the kitching, for meat, here. 1. His speed is remarkable. — And he ran to the herd, the word is the ox, but noteth the herd where the kine and calves were, — To the oxen, Sept. and Cald. His freeness and fulness of heart appeareth in this; he giveth of the herd as of the grain. 2. His choise, — a calf tender and good. — So the Sept. and Cald. Every thing he points out of the best for his desired guests. All to litle for them in whom God appeares. 3. His order for dressing it.

And he gave it to a youth, and he hastened to make it; that is, to make it ready and dress it, that it might be fit for eating. Sept. same.

to bolle it, Cald. Whether by boiling or roasting it was made ready is not expressed; but is probable some part was dressed one way, and some another. All was done according to Abrahams command over his own family: Canonical discipline was here sweetly observed. And while thus dinner was making ready, it is to be presumed, others were employed in washing their feet, and giving them attendance in preparation thereunto. Ver. 7. 4. His serving in of dinner, when it was now ready, Wherein (1) The ordering of the dishes is recorded.

Ver. 8.

And he took, &c. Whether in his own hand or by his servants, it matters not, he saw it done. The enumeration of all is not complete, for doubtless he carried in the cakes also which were made & other provisions; we have a part mentioned for the whole. (2) The presenting of all unto them — & he gave all, or set all before them, and invited them now to eat. 5. His attendance on them.

And he stood by them under the tree. His station was a signe of ministratation unto them, so the Caldee reads, he ministrated by them, as the phrase of standing noteth sometimes service and ministratation, Neh. 12. 44. Jer. 52. 12. compared with 2 Kin. 25. 8. 6. The close of this history is the return of the guests, they accept Abrahams provision, and eat of it. — And they did eat. If question be, how those bodies could eat? Or whether nourished? It is answered, doubtless they did truly eat, and the bodies were refreshed for the time that God made use of them, and after both were resolved into their principles by the hand of God. Ver. 8.

Note From it.

D. 8. Gracious hearts will serve as well as feed such guests as heaven sends to them.

D. 9. Holy guests will accept with due expressions, the provision made for them by Saints.

D. 10. Hospitality as it is Abrahams childrens grace, so it shall have Abrahams successe. God will owne it. Ver. 8.

The second general head of this Chapter now followeth, which is Gods discovery & confirmation of his former promise concerning Sarah's bearing the eminent seed, wherein these particulars occur. (1) The inquiry made for Sarah, by the guests.

And they said unto him, where is Sarah thy wife? — So the Cald. — But the Seaventy, And he said to him, &c. 1. The inquisitor here, is expressed plurally, They said, but in the next verse the same is singular, — I will return. So that it must be principally one, though it might be by the mouthes of all. 2. The question is about Sarah, not from ignorance, but as calling her forth to shew her the mercy which was intended toward her, and upon this occasion of such sweet and loving entertainment wife therefore as well as husband is partaker of the promise. Therefore God seeks after her to declare it to her. They knew Abraham and his wife, therefore it implieth they were more than men, it being not told. Secondly, the answer returned by Abraham.

And he said, behold in the tent. Which intimates, 1. Her being in her proper place. 2. Her calling forth upon this occasion, for it seems shee came within hearing, as her reply afterward sheweth. — Ver. 9. Thirdly. The Lords reply unto Abraham, Sarah being now within hearing, wherein are two promises, 1. Of his return to Abraham.

And he said, returning, I will return unto thee, according to the time of life. — Ver. 10. Returning I will come unto thee according to this season for hours. Sept. — In that time wherein you shall be alive, Cald. 1. The matter of the promise, is Gods certain visitation of Abraham again, not so much by visible appearance as in the powerful execution of the following promise, the doubling of the expression notes the certainty of the event. Surely I will return unto thee. 2. The time of accomplishing it, set forth according to the letter thus, According to the time of life, others, according to the life of time. The meaning of which phrase is varied by some. 1. It is metaphorically understood of life, with respect unto time, so the life of time is the revolution of the year, and return of the same season. Which pleaseth some. Future. Answ. 2. It is properly understood of life with respect to Abraham and Sarah, so the Caldee paraphraseth, in the time wherein ye shall be alive; which was at the set time the next year, as Chap. 17. 21. So taken, it is a promise of life to them so long, and then the performance of that promise for the seed. 2. The promise repeated for Sarah's bearing, of the promised seed.
E c Gods

And behold a son that be to, or of Sarah thy wife. — And Sara thy wife shall have a son. S. pt. — At this time will I come, and to Sarah shall be a son. Rom. 9. 9. So Cald. 1. The subject of the promise, hopeless Sarah. 2. The good of promise, a son, an eminent one, the very promised seed shall be of her, that is of her body, and given of God to her.

Fourthly Sarahs reception of this promise fo repeated, here, 1. Her outward sense of it thus recorded.

And Sarah was hearing at the door of the tent, and it was behind him, — And Sarah being behind him heard, &c. — And the door was behind him, Cald. It cometh to the same purpose, there Sarah heard it, and so had cause to believe it. Ver. 10. And she was behind him. 2. Her objections against it secretly meditated, 1. The age of her husband and self, as laid down. V. 11. And Abraham and Sarah were old going (or gon) into daves, — and she was behind him. Sept. Were old and of a grown age. He of 99 years at this time, and she of 89, which was very aged in our account.

2. The common state and means of womens conceiving child, now failing, beside her former long barrenness, The way as of women ceased to be unto Sarah.

Womens customs ceased to be to Sarah, Sept. — The custom of women, &c. Cald. Levit. 19. 25. That is in short, she was past all natural strength to conceive or bear a child: and therefore in sense hopeless of such a mercy. Ver. 11.

3. Her unbelief or doubting concerning this promise, expressed two ways, 1. In gesture, thus expressed.

And Sarah laughed in her self, which carriage was not like Abrahams for joy of the promise, but from unbelief and slighting of the promise of God as a thing ridiculous. She threw it away as incredible and a thing not to be done, 1. Unbelief, 2. Scorn, is carried in this expression. 2. In censure of the matter within her self by secret reasoning. 1. About her self, in these terms,

After I am old shall there be pleasure to me? — Not as yet hath it bin to me even until now. Sept. — Shall youth be to me after I am old? Cald. Her expostulation must be readed negatively; it cannot be that I should be capable now of such a mercy. 2. About her husband, and my Lord is old, — So all read. It is as much as if she had said, he is as dead as I unto such a work, therefore there is no hope of this. Crows was this to Abrahams faith, who considered not his own body dead, nor the deadness of Sarah's womb, but was strong in faith because God had said it. But she lived by sense and so judgeth. Rom. 4. 19. 20. Thus tarre is Sarahs entertainment of the promise. Ver. 12.

Now take some Notes from it,

D. 1. Gracious hospitality hath sweet returns from God as acceptance with him. A good encouragement to such a practise which hath such an issue.

D. 2. Known to God are soules who entertain him, better than hee is known to them. Where is Sarah?

D. 3. God calleth for the woman to be sharer in the promise with the man.

D. 4. It is good to be at hand, near to God in our places, when promises are given out. Ver. 9.

D. 5. God labours to put beleevng soules above all doubts concerning his promise.

D. 6. God is punctual in his own time to perform his promise.

D. 7. God will keep his Saints alive to see the good which he promiseth them.

D. 8. God demonstrat's that barrenness or age cannot hinder the effect of his promise. Abraham and Sarah were old.

D. 9. The son of promise is Sarah's seed only.

D. 10. Weak Saints may receive promises with their eares, and yet not believe nor digest them. Ver. 10.

D. 11. Sensible objections may puzzle puzzle the weak faith of Gods servants. Ver. 11.

D. 12. Weakness of faith and strength of sense may make Saints despise the promise.

D. 13. Natures defects are apt to question the power of God to help them.

D. 14. Sarah and her daughters, honor their husbands in speaking of them. Ver. 12. My Lord being old. 1. Peter. 3. 5. 6. The Spirit proposeth this Pattern.

(5) Now followeth Gods animadversion upon Sarahs gesture, and censure of his promise, ver. 13. 14. Wherein we have.

1. His reprehension of her, directed to her by her husband, wherein may be observed, 1. Gods application to Abraham, he doth not presently speak to Sarah, And Jehovah said to Abraham, (1) The reprover is Jehovah himself, so Moses stileth him, now he discovers what a guest they had entertained. He that knew their hearts, and tried Sarahs reins so inwardly affected with unbelief. (2) The hand by which he sends the reproof, he speaks to Abraham, the heir of promise and Gods friend as well as Sarahs husband, fitt as her head to set it on.

2. Gods expostulating rebuke directed to her, 1. For her gesture, thus exprest. Why laugheth Sarah at this? It is a cutting expostulation, wherein is shewed, (1) Gods knowledge of her inward thoughts and affection in receiving his promise, that they were full of unbelief and scorn, (2) Gods displeasure with her for such entertainment of his promise. 2. For her censure.

Saying, shall I also verily bear a child, and I am old. — So the Cald. Sept. shall I truly bear? I am old. Where, 1. God taxeth her secret disputes in her self. 2. He reprooves the taking up of such an objection from fence against God. Why should shee oppose her age and sensible objections to my promise? ver. 13. 2. His conviction of the justness of his reproof by two undeniable evidences, 1. By the absolute power of Gods power.

Is any word (or thing) hid from Jehovah? — Is any word hid, &c. Cald. — Is any word impossible, &c. Sept. (1) The form of expression is interrogatory, affirmatively opposed, which implieth a stronger negation. Though this seem strange for creatures to work beyond natural custom, yet doth God wonder at any thing? Is it strange to him to work what he pleaseth? (2) The matter is a negative opposition, wherein, 1. The subject is word or thing, for to speak and do, with God is all one; it notes any effect or event of good, which may seem utterly uncalculable by creatures, for evil God cannot do, neither lye, &c. Heb. 6. 2 The attribute is variously read according to the use of the word; it notes sometimes, to be hidden and that (with such a proposition, from, any one, which is in this place, and so may be read, nothing is or can be hid from Jehovah; not a work, though never so strange can be hid from him but he can find it out and do it. It notes sometimes wonderful and strange at which creatures are amazed, as that a dead womb should bear, but this is no strange matter with God; almightiness mak's nothing of this. Therefore the seventy paraphrase it, nothing is impossible with the Lord: so in a case harder it was spoken to Mary, Luc. 1. 37. our Translators exprest it, nothing is too hard for God. All which aim at the same thing, to note the almightiness of God, able to answer all Sarahs objections. 2. By the repetition of the former promise, that now she might know it came from God and believe.

At the time, &c. Where, 1. Stated time is here again noted, even so long as time of life is given for quickning and perfecting the fruit of the womb, which is the space of nine months. 2. His promise. I will return to thee, that was to Abraham by performing this word in grace unto him, and for his fuller consolation. 3. The effect of his coming and to Sarah shall be a son, that is, then she shall see that effected which now she laughed at: she shall bear the promised seed indeed.

(6) Sarahs reply to God, by way of excuse, wherein, 1. Her denial of the charge is recorded.

Then Sarah denied, &c. They who make nothing of Sarahs laughing are confuted by her own denial that it was a sin, because she would disowne it, if she could by denial but in this she sinneth more, to ad a lye to her unbelief; yet being overtaken so she doth poore creature in her self. 2. Her reason of thus doing, — Because she was afraid.

Sept. and Cald same. Herein note, 1. Her passion was fear fallen upon her for guilt. 2. The occasion, Gods charging her with her sin to her husband and in her hearing. 3. The effect, more sin in denying truth; see what passions doe, when they are let loose beyond bounds, and moved by guilt.

(7) Gods fastening her sin upon her, though in much mercy, onely to make her know it and be ashamed, that he might heal her.

And he said, nay, but thou didst laugh: God will be true, but every man a liar. 1. The Replier, God. 2. His reply 3. 1. True making her to own her sin. 2. Tender, he strikes her not dumb as he did Zachariah upon the like unbelief, but E c 2 makes

The third general of the Chapter now followeth, which is Gods prediction of vengeance on Sodom and the cities about it unto Abraham. Herein are observable, 1. The season and occasion of this discovery. ver. 16. And herein these terms are expresse. 1. The rising of the guests from dinner.

Ver. 16.

And the men arose from thence. (So Sept. and Cald.) That is, the Angels, appearing in humane shapes, of which the Angel of the Covenant the Son of God was one, as appeareth in the next verse. These after they had accepted Abrahams entertainment, and dispatched the ministry of the promise to Sarah, and cleared it up more by reprooving her unbelief, now they arise to go about other work.

2. The course which way hence they bend.

And they looked against the faces of Sodom. Against the face of the Sodomites and Gomorrha, Sept. Cald as Hebr. Which phrase carrieth in it; 1. The bent of their faces and mindes to that place. 2. Their contrariety and opposition to it, that they went as enemies, to meet them in their faces for destruction.

3. Abrahams further readiness to waite on them in their way, which lost him nothing.

And Abraham was walking with them, to dismishe them or send them on in their way. Sept. same. Cald. That he might accompany them. This carriage of Abrahams noteth. 1. Further humanity to his guests to bring them forward; as often it is desired from some unto the Saints. 2. Reverence unto them having now perceived that they were more then men, God having revealed himself unto him and Sarah. 3. Earnest love to follow after God, and to have further discoveries of his will from him.

Act. 15. 3. John. 3. Eph. 6.

Hence may we learn.

- D. 1. God moveth the station of his messengers from Saints below, when they are certified of his favour.
- D. 2. God who comes to Abraham in love, goeth against Sodom in wrath and for vengeance. He looks otherwise on the wicked, &c.
- D. 3. Saints having found Gods presence once are very loath to leave it. So Abraham. V. 16.

2. The reason of this Gods discovery to Abraham. Ver. 17. In the expresse whereof we may note. 1. Gods resolution discovered interrogatively.

And Jehovah said, am I concealing from Abraham what I am doing? The Sept. read negatively. I will not hide from Abraham my servant what things I do. Cald. as Hebr. The affirmative question is rightly resolved into a negative position. 1. The revealer here is Jehovah, from whom all truth cometh. 2. The subject to whom God will not deny his will, Abraham his friend. 3. The matter revealed, or not concealed, is Gods purpose about Sodoms

Ver. 17.

Sodoms destruction; this God would not with-hold from him.

- D. 2. God revealeth his secrets to his friends. Amos. 3. 7.
- D. 3. The judgements on the wicked God eminently sheweth unto his Church. V. 17.

Secondly. The reason of this resolution is threefold. 1. For grace formerly vouchsafed to him, therefore God would now vouchsafe him more. This was twofold. 1. Greatness promised him in respect of his seed, thus set out:

And Abraham in being shall be for a nation great and mighty. Sept. and Cald. to the same, God had given him this promise several times before, as Chap. 13. ver. 16. Chap. 12. ver. 2. &c. And here he makes that promise the ground of another discovery from God, as if he had said, I have freely taken Abraham into Covenant, I will surely make him the Father of a great people; and shall I not acquaint him with my purpose upon mine enemies? Not as if any self-greatness in Abraham should engage God thereunto. 2. Blessedness promised in the seed to come from him. And all nations of the earth shall blesse themselves in him. And for his sake all people of the earth shall be blessed, Cald. Sept. as Hebr. here is another privileged granted him, to be as the father or fountaine of blessing to the nations, in being the Father of the Messiah after the flesh. Now thus God argueth, have I made Abraham as the spring of blessing unto nations, and shall I not shew to him where I purpose to powre out my curse? Surely having granted him the former, I will not conceal the latter: I will adde this favour to the former; not upon Abrahams merit.

- D. 2. Abraham is made by promise the visible head of greatness and blessing unto the Church.
- D. 3. God accounts it reason, that such as have the promise of blessing should know the purpose of cursing on the wicked. V. 18.

2. The next reason is from the duty unto which God had appointed Abraham, which also he approved in him.

Because I have known him, &c. wherein. 1. Gods act expresse, I have known him; which knowledg of God may be considered, in time past, and then it notes Gods knowledg of him from eternity, fore-ordaining Abraham to this work: whom he did foreknow, them he ordered unto grace and duty. 2. In time present or to come, and so it notes the knowledg of approbation. The Sept. and Cald. read it in time past, as well as the Hebr. Which though it may be read in future or present, yet not exclusively to the time past, God did foreknow Abraham that he would make a Covenant with him, to walk with God; and so he did know and commend Abrahams obedience futable to his grace given to and Covenant made with him. 2. The object of this act, which makes up the reason, consisting of two parts. 1. Abrahams carriage to his family.

That he will command, &c. Sept. and Cald. to the same, wherein these particulars fall under Gods knowledg. 1. Concerning Abraham himself; that he will fear Gods judgments revealed upon sinners, and awfully have respect unto his Majesty. 2. That being thus affected, he will exercise his power to make Gods Covenant and statutes to be observed, seeing God requireth the breach of them with such vengeance. (1) He will command for God, so the word expressly notes authoritative injunction over all under his power. (2) This power he puts forth. 1. Upon his children, they were nearest. 2. Upon his house family or men of his house; as the Cald. That is all kind of servants under his power. 3. The term of putting forth his command, it is after him, that when he should be gathered to his fathers, yet the fear of God might lye enjoyned upon the generation after him. This God knew and liked. 2. The returne of Abrahams family unto his command in the effect of it, expresse thus; And they kept, or shall keep the way of Jehovah, &c.

ways which are right. Cald. It sheweth in summe their ready obedience, which becomes the family and Church wherein God is known. 1. In the main duty, they kept and would keep the way of Jehovah. (1) Their keeping was in faith, love and obedience, and that with watchfulness and constancy. (2) The way of Jehovah, which noteth the whole trade of Gods Law revealed; of which he is author, matter, and end. Truth of God, ordinances of God, Worship of God, walking with God are all carried in this duty of keeping his way. 2. In the consequent of this, which is duty unto man.

To do judgement and justice. It is a paraphrase of all righteousness commanded in Ec 3 the the second table, which giveth good proof of keeping the way of the Lord, &c. And therefore it is usual in scripture under this to comprehend all duty to God and man. Some distinguish these two, as if justice noteth righteous carriage to all, judgement a right demeanour to the oppressed, but no great need is there of restraining, when both are comprehensive of all duty unto man; for this cause will God reveal his secret judgment on Sodom to Abraham and his, because they shall make this good use of it. 3. The last reason is Gods future respect to Abraham, I will perform all my Covenant which I have made unto him, in this way of his obedience; therefore I will not hide this from him.

Ver. 19.

That Jehovah may make to come upon Abraham, &c. This is inferred as the consequence of Abrahams government for God over his family, and their joynt obedience; God having framed Abrahams heart unto this, he is now resolved to carry on the performance of all the good which he had promised. That the Lord may bring upon Abraham what he spake, That he would bring upon him, Cald. Herein. 1. The connection, that, sometimes causal, but here consequential. 2. The matter consequent, which is Gods full performance to Abraham. (1) The finisher, Jehovah who was Author (2) The accomplishment, he will make to come upon him, (3) The matter completed, that which God had spoken to him and concerning him; which doubtless was the perfection of his covenant even to Christ, and all the good given in him. That God had spoken in the promised seed, Gal. 3. 16.

diatly. 2. The reason of his visitation revealed, which in summe is the intolerableness of their sin, expressed two wayes. 1. By number, as followeth.

The cry of Sodom and Gomorrah because it is multiplied. Cald. the same.

Sept. The cry of the Sodomites and Gomorra is multiplied.

1. The subject of multiplication, The cry of Sodom and Gomorra. That is the hideous noise of their sinnes provoking God to vengeance, as the cry of blood, Gen. 4. 10. This cry noteth the excess of sin; grown up to such strength that it roareth in the ears of God for vengeance; noted therefore usually by that title in scripture to be crying sinnes, Isai. 5. 7. A good paraphrase it is of that blood and unnatural uncleanness found among them, as well as of all the sinnes else numbered up, Ezek. 16. 49.

2. The multiplication itself, it is multiplied very much, or exceedingly; for the reason will be, joyning the superlative expression unto this which is found in the next sentence, that is, every day these cries are increased in mine ears saith the Lord, so that they are infinitely many. 3. The rational rational particle, because it is so, therefore will I visit, or it is surely so, as some read it, by way of assertion; which ariseth to the same purpose. 2. By weight thus expressed.

And their sin, because it is very grievous, great. Sept. and their sinnes are very great. Cald. Because it is too mighty. 1. The subject of this aggravation is the same crying sinne spoken of.

2. The aggravation itself, it is grievous heavy, pressing, as sheaves press the cart, Amos. 2. v. 13., very malignant, full of deadly poison and that in the highest degree of excess. 3. The rational particle here added, because it is so, or so it is indeed; therefore I must visit. Ver. 20.

3. The revelation it self made to Abraham, where 1. Gods motion is declared,

I will discover now. And Ver. 20.

descending, &c. Sept. I will appear now, Cald. Here bodily motion is spoken of God, after the manner of men, not that God can move from place to place, for he filleth all places at once. It notes therefore here, 1. Gods appearance to judgment. 2. Gods nearness to them, or presence with them, whereby all are open to him, that he cannot be deceived; as one that commeth and locketh on. 2. Gods visitation.

And I will see whether according to the cry thereof, which is come to me, they have made a consummation, or done fully.

Sept. If they finish or consummate according to their cry, &c. Cald. and I will discern whether they have done, as the cry which is come before me. I will consume them if they repent not. Herein. 1. Gods act, I will see, which noteth (1) A full discovery (2) a discovery to judgment therefore well paraphrased, I will judge, that is punish them for all I see. 2. The object, which doubtless was the sinners in those places now visited, yet here described, 1. By the cry of their sin spoken of before, according to that God will see and judge, 2. By the evidence of it to God, it came even to him, or before him to disquiet him. 3. By the fullness of their sin. God seeth that they have made a consummation, and filled up the measure of sin; then he visiteth and judgeth.

All this is positive under the supposition expressed. 3. Gods dignation to them if sin be not high.

And if not, I will know. Sept. that I may know, Cald. But if they repent I will not take vengeance. Wherein we have, 1. An exception; if their sin be not so crying and grievous. 2. Gods dignation thereupon, I will know, not as if he were ignorant, but knowledge here carrieth it action. I will then pity them, spare them, and not take vengeance; so it is paraphrased fully, I will not take revenge if they repent. Ver. 21.

Fourthly, Gods dispatch for execution with Abrahams consentment of all. Ver. 22. Wherein are two particulars, 1. The messengers dispatched about the business revealed.

And the men set their faces from thence, and walked toward Sodom. Sept. And the men turning themselves, &c.

And the men departed thence, &c. Cald.

Two things are here related of the messengers on Angels, here exprest under the name of men, or poore men in appearance. 1.

Their setting themselves to their way in right posture, They set their faces, and eyed the place to which they were sent, which noteth their bent and intention of mind thither for the work unto which they were designed. 2. Their progress in motion; they went forward to Sodom, and made haste too, for it seemeth they were with Lot in Sodom that evening, so the seaventy, They came to Sodom. 2. Abrahams deportment at their departure.

And Abraham yet himself was standing before Jehovah, Sept. same.

Cald. Abraham yet stood in prayer before the Lord.

1. The subject here mentioned. Abraham himself, doubtless exceedingly affected with the said discovery made; and he was kept also by God for further communication

nication; the Angels being dispatched by him.

2. The posture of him expressed, he was standing, in prayer saith the Cald. It was doubtless a posture of attendance or ministry, and it is certain he did pray and intercede with the Lord about this matter. Jer. 16. 1. Humble, watchful, earnest was this attendance. 3. The object of this attendance, it was Jehovah, one of the three men spoken of, yet now discovered to be the Son of God himself, by sending away his Angels and making known his mind to Abraham. Upon him onely Abraham waits to find favour for Lot, and poor souls in Sodom.

Learn hence.

- D. 1. Gods dispatches for execution, surely follow upon the revelation of vengeance on the wicked. The angels were dispatched, &c.
 D. 2. Gods ministers angelical, are bent for execution of his will on crying sinners, and to pursue the enemy.
 D. 3. Gracious Spirits are affected with judgment revealed on the wicked, and stand before God as they may to avert it. Ver. 22.

4. The last general head of this Chapter now followeth, which is Abrahams intercession unto God for these places on which so much wrath was revealed. This is completed in six petitions and answers to them. 1. The first is from ver. 23. to the end of ver. 26. Wherein mark.

1. Abrahams intercession, ver. 23. 24. 25. about which, 1. His address to God is noted, Ver. 23.

Ver. 23. And Abraham drew near and said. — Sept. and Cald. same.

Quest. How could he draw near to God who is every where present?

Answ. It is not meant of local access, but spiritual, of the soul, when in faith, love, desire, it set's itself to seek God. So it was good for the Psalmist to draw near to God. Psal. 73. 28. And in this sense souls are said to be far from God, when remote from duty, and to draw near when souls are bent upon seeking him; so Abraham drew near and said. 2. Abrahams prayer or intercession it self in the first onset; it is in the general scope, that Sodom and the cities about it might be spared from the threatened overthrow, but more particularly expressed in three supplicatory expostulations.

1. Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked?

This question being affirmative must be read negatively, Thou wilt not so destroy. Sept. same. The Cald. Wilt thou in thy fury consume? Surely no. So Abraham had a judgment of certainty concerning God, that he could not, nor would not deal with the righteous as with the wicked in destroying. And thus it is an argument of his prayer to God. Yet again, looking upon this as the question of a supplicant, it carrieth in it also a prayer. Lord do not destroy the righteous with the wicked, wilt thou? O do not Lord. Both wayes may we take it. The righteous here is the truly justified and sanctified soul; the wicked such as are contrary to God in being and doing; the destruction was the doleful overthrow threaten'd & afterward executed. Ver. 23.

2. The next petitionary expostulation is in ver. 24. Where we have two special matters to consider, 1. A supposition, in judgment of charity, of some competent number of righteous in those places.

If there be, perhaps there are fifty righteous within the city. Here Abrahams charity to poore sinners is expressed; yea and his prudential piety toward God, that he begins at such a number as fifty, at the highest he supposeth so many at least might be in five cities; for however, city is spoken of here in the singular, as of one, yet it is synecdochical for all the rest. This therefore he supposeth as a ground of his following petition to God. 2. A petitionary expostulation hereupon.

Wilt thou also destroy, and not spare the place, for the fifty righteous which are therein? This affirmative question is rendered negatively, surely thou wilt not destroy, but spare, &c. Yet consider this too coming from a petitioner, it carrieth this petition; Lord do not destroy but spare the place even all the sinners therein for these fifty righteous. — Sept. and Cald. are to the same purpose. ver. 24. 3. The next petitionary question is ver. 25. Wherein.

1. The ground of this petition, which is the inconsistency of all injustice with God in his proceedings with men. 1. The matter inconsistent, is that the righteous should be delivered to death as the wicked. 2. The inconsistency it self expressed, by a participle abominating; — farre be it; it is a prophonation of God, not to be indured. The Septuag. read. μυδαμυν. By no means can this be agreeable to God. The Cald. paraph. True are thy judgments; therefore this cannot be. This participle is doubled to note the vehemency of it. Farre be it, farre be it from Jehovah. Sometimes being used as to men, the name of God is added, God forbid it me, or make it far from me, or odious to me. 1. Chron. 11. 19. It is Davids expression.

2. The petitionary expostulation it self, Shal not the judge of the whole earth do right? This negative question is resolved affirmatively. The judge of all the earth must do and will do judgment. — Shalt

Ver. 24.

Ver. 25.

לללל

Shalt not thou do judgment who judgest all the earth? Sept. — Cald. same with Hebrew, but take this also as a petitionary question, and then something more is carried in it, even Abrahams desire to God as judge of all the earth to give judgment of discerning between the wicked and the righteous, thou art judge of all the earth, thou canst do nothing but right; oh put a difference between the righteous and wicked now, that the overflowing scourge take not all away together. So it is his prayer also. ver. 25. 2. The answer which God makes to Abraham in this petition, wherein occur. 1. Abrahams condition supposed, and taken for granted, —

Ver. 26.

And Jehovah said, If I find in Sodom fifty righteous within the city; this was the ground of Abrahams prayer for mercy; let that be granted saith God as thou supposest, that there be so many righteous, I will accept the number and give you the desire. 2. Gods promise upon that ground granted, Then I will spare the whole place for their sakes. — There shall none perish, if this number appeare. But it is queried here.

Quest. 1. Doth not Abraham desire evil, in praying for the wicked to be spared?

Answ. No. 1. He doth not simply desire this, to have the wicked escape, but to have them suffer if they must by themselves. 2. Gods threatnings sometimes admit repentance, so it might be with these, if they repent not I will consume them. Jon. 3. 3. It is lawful to pray against Gods revealed will with submission, so did Christ himselfe, if it be possible, &c. Math. 26.

Quest. 2. Doth not God grant that which is contrary to his justice in sparing the wicked?

Answ. No; For God is resolved to glorifie his grace sometimes, as well as justice, therefore it is not cross to justice, when he himselfe doth satisfie it.

Quest. 3. Is not God changeable in his counsels when he yields from threatening to sparing?

Answ. No, he abides the same, but changeth us by repentance, which he was resolved by threatening to work, and so to spare.

Quest. 4. Is it not with the just sometimes as with the wicked? is this righteous?

Answ. 1. In respect of outward sufferings it may seem so, but it is not so, for that is but chastening to the just, which is vengeance on the wicked. 2. The righteous are never destroyed, which is the reward of the wicked.

Learn we from this.

- D. 1. Saints who stand before God have liberty to draw near unto him.

D. 2. Prayer brings soules nigh to God indeed. To his very heart, and bosome.

D. 12. A few righteous in the world are more powerful with God to save, than many wicked to destroy. Ver. 26.

Thus farre Abrahams faith in prayer. The second intercession of Abraham followeth. ver. 27. 28. Wherein we have to consider, 1. Abrahams petition. 2. Gods answer thereunto. In his petition occur these particulars. 1. His preparation unto it, by an humble address unto God againe. Wherein appeare. 1. His encouragement taken from Gods former reply.

And Abraham answered and said; God Ver. 27. having granted mercy for fifty, now he get's ground, and comes to God againe with a second petition. Sept. and Cald. to the same. 2. His self-judgment and abasement in this onset, wherein are acknowledged two things.

1. His bold enterprize, in the following words.

Behold now I have begun to speak unto my Lord. — To the Lord Sept. I have spoken much before the Lord. Cald. This he acknowledgeth to be boldness in him, considering the greatness of that God with whome he had to doe. Poor I, have begun to speak to the Lord, as some read noting his relation to him.

Ff 2. His

2. His unworthiness for such an attempt. And I dust and ashes. — Earth and ashes. Sept. — Seeing I am dust and ashes: Cald. That which he takes to himself is a base condition, signified by those termes, dust, which is an underfoot thing, and ashes, which notes his desert of being consumed for coming so near to God. — ver. 27. Secondly, His intercession, wherein are to be noted, 1. A supposition of the failing of his former ground in some degree.

Ver. 28.

Perhaps there shall be wanting of the fifty, righteous, five. — Sept. But if the fifty righteous be lessened into forty five. — Cald. as Hebr. Gods grant so readily, makes Abraham doubt upon search that the number will not be found; therefore he defends to be sure of his request granted, suppose five be wanting. 2. A petition againe expostulatory.

Wilt thou destroy for five the whole city? That is, for want of five. — Sept. wilt thou destroy for forty five? — Cald. as Hebr. Were the question proposed plainly, it would be resolved negatively, thou wilt not destroy; but coming from an intercessor, it doth not onely import that, but a prayer also that the want of five may not cause the vengeance threatned upon all to be dispensed. O my Lord destroy not all for want of five righteous. Secondly, Gods answer unto this petition.

And he said, I will not destroy it, if I find there forty and five. Here God yeelds again, Abraham thy request is granted. Ver. 28.

Learn from it.

- D. 1. Gods answers of grace encourages his unto replies of prayer. So Abraham takes ground.
- D. 2. Saints wonder at the privilege of mens speaking to the Lord.
- D. 3. Gods sovereignty & lordship, may well make Saints wonder at their admittance.
- D. 4. Mans vilenes and desert to be turned to ashes makes it wonderful, that yet he should speak to God.
- D. 5. Saints come with self-abasing thoughts to intreat Gods face for sinners. Ver. 27.
- D. 6. Humbled soules are encouraged upon failing of numbers; yet to seek Gods face for good. Though five be wanting, yet will God spare the rest.
- D. 7. God gives in granted the desires of humble soules. Ver. 28. Tsal. 9. 12. Even when their sensible groanes are abated.

3. The next part of the intercession follow's, ver. 29. wherein we have to note, 1. The instance of the intercessor, upon the preceding answer of God.

And he added yet to speak unto him, and said, — Sept. and Cald. same. Thus Abraham gathers strength, and puts it out in more intercession. 2. The argument of the intercessor with its abatement, Perhaps, or if peradventure forty be found there.

Ver. 29.

Here he expresseth his ground with abatement, and supposeth his request. It is an elegant aposiopesis. As if he said; O pardon and spare if there be but forty. 3. The answer of God to this.

And he said, I will not do it for the sake of the forty. — Sept. I will not destroy, &c. — Cald. I will not make an end. — He giveth in these a general pardon upon this account. As if he had said, Abraham bring forth forty righteous and all shall be spared.

Which teacheth us.

- D. 1. Gracious soules adde to pray, when God adds to grant their requests.
- D. 2. Strength of argument in the prayers of Saints may abate persons threatned from 45 to 40.
- D. 3. Gods answers of grace groweth higher as arguments of Saints may grow lower. Ver. 29. I will not doe it for forty's sake.

Fourthly, The fourth intercession of Abraham followeth. V. 30. Wherein occurs, 1. Abrahams request. 2. Gods answer. In the former are observable, 1. His preparation by a preventing desire in turning away Gods displeasure from his boldness.

And he said let not I pray anger burn upon the Lord, or my Lord, and I will speak. — The Sept. reads it in an abrupt question, by an aposiopesis, And he said, wilt thou Lord, if I speak? That is, wilt thou be displeased? — The Cald. Let not the fury of the Lord be angry, &c. wherein, 1. His boldness by faith in replying, And he said, &c. i. e. Abraham. 2. His humility in returning, let not I pray thee 3. His preventing desire, let not anger kindle upon the Lord; He feareth because of his importunity. 4. His resolution hereupon, I will speak, or pray further.

ther. 2. The supposed ground of this next petition thus delivered.

Ver. 30.

Perhaps thirty shall be found there or if thirty, &c. Here is an abatement by tens, beginning, so he presseth upon grace. 3. His petition included, Lord destroy not but save for the sake of thirty righteous. In the latter we have Gods answer, where, 1. The ground supposed, is thus stated.

If I find thirty there, 2. The petition granted. And he said, I will not do it. — Sept. I will not destroy for the sake of thirty. — Cald. I will not make an end, &c. in summe, Abrahams petition is granted, the cities shall not be destroyed, all shall be spared, if thirty righteous be found among them.

It learneth us.

- D. 1. Gods yeelding encourages petitioners to be bold in praying to him.
- D. 2. Gracious intercessors are afraid of Gods displeasure burning against their importunity for sparing the wicked.
- D. 3. Gods displeasure being deprecated, Saints proceed in praying fervently.
- D. 4. Saints may fall by ten in arguments of Prayer with God.
- D. 5. Grace refresh by sens to answer the intercession of Saints, and as their arguments fall. Ver. 30.

Fiftly, Yet Abraham seeing Gods free return supposeth he was yet to high, and therefore imboldens himself to another abatement, ver. 31. And to bring grace to a further condescension.

Wherein also are.

1. His petition, and thereabout are considerable. 1. His preface.

Ver. 31.

And he said behold I pray, I have begun to speak to my Lord. — Sept. And he said, yet I have to spake unto the Lord. — Cald. I have spoken much before the Lord. The same expression is before, ver. 27. Here being repeated, note's multiplication of his self-judging, behold I, even I, so vile, have begun thus far to bespeak the Lord of glory; may I not proceed? He hath encouraged me thus far, I will yet go further. 2. His ground supposed.

Perhaps twenty shall be found there. — If there be found. Sept. Here he falls ten more, hoping that number would be found. 3. His prayer implied; Oh spare all & do not destroy for the sake of twenty righteous among them. 2. Gods answer hereunto.

And he said I will not destroy for the sake of the twenty. — Cald. same. — Sept. If I find twenty. God grants thus far upon abatement of ten more. Find me twenty, and judgment shall not proceed.

It instructs us.

- D. 1. Multiplied self judging is requisite with multiplied boldness in addresses unto God.
- D. 2. Humility encouraged by God, begs grace to condescend lower to its wants.
- D. 3. Grace dispiseth not, but yeelds to the pressing intercession of the humble soule. Ver. 31.

Sixty. The last intercession of Abraham now followeth, and he speaketh no more in this matter. Ver. 32. Wherein, 1. His request framed as before, and therein, 1. A prefacing petition to divert Gods wrath, as was, ver. 30. 2. A limitation of himself, but this one petition more in this matter, And I will speak yet but once, or this one turn. So far God lets out his Spirit. — Sept. wilt thou, if I speak yet once? i. e. Thou wilt not be displeased if I do. 3. His last reason supposed.

Ver. 32.

Perhaps there shall be found there ten, — Sept. If there be found, &c. 4. His prayer implied, O spare for the sake of ten. 2. Gods answer in the last place by way of grant.

And he said, I will not destroy for the sake of the ten. — Sept. and Cald. same. Abraham surely thought so many to be in Lot's family at least, yet when he had his grant he find's it otherwise.

It teacheth us.

- D. 1. Gracious soules would not willingly provoke God though they desire to prevail with him even for wicked ones, that these be spared by him.
- D. 2. In intercession for sinners there is a limit and bound set by God upon the Spirits of his Saints. Grace ordereth it so.
- D. 3. Saints drive in prayer the deliverance of the wicked to the lowest and least price that may be. To ten. O Lord spare them.
- D. 4. Gods grace condescends to the lowest and least number of the righteous, that he may be gractious to others. So sometimes

Ff 2 he

he doth, but not always.
Ver. 32.

Seventhly. The close of all followeth, Ver. 33. Abraham having procured grace to come so low, he dares go no farther, neither will God stay to hear any more. Two things are here recorded at the conclusion. First, Gods departure from him.

Ver. 33.

And Jehovah departed as he had finished to speak unto Abraham. — Sept. same.

Cald. and the glory of the Lord was taken up, when he ceased to speak to Abraham. Herein we have, 1. Gods motion mentioned, which was local in respect of the body assumed, and that signal of his refusing any more petitions about this matter. 2. The occasion or season of it, the finishing of his communication with Abraham, so much as he vouchsafed. Secondly. Abraham's return home.

And Abraham returned to his place. i. To his tent and family whence he came with his guest. Which carrieth in it his cessation from further interceding, and his betaking himself to his own charge, about the duties which concerned him therein: no doubt with an heart full of care.

Learn we in this close.

D. 1. God hath his times set for hearing Saints intercessions for sinners and answer's, and then he will hear no more.

D. 2. God heareth out his Saints in all humble and faithful intreaties of him.

D. 3. Gods answer being given, Saints must go away contented with Gods will, and return to their relation duties. So did Abraham.

A Corollary from all.

This being an extraordinary dignation from God, learn this. Extraordinary actions of some Saints must not be drawn into ordinary practise. No cause therefore for us to plead so with God for any.

CHAP. XIX.

THIS Chapter containeth the history of the execution of Gods threatened vengeance on Sodom and the cities about it. In the whole are these parts. 1. The access of the executioners, and entertainment of them by Lot. Ver. 1. 2. 3. 2. The high provocation of the Sodomites at this very instant of judgment. Ver. 4. to the end of Ver. 11. Thirdly. The deliverance of Lot & his. V. 12. to 23. Fourthly the execution done, and judgment on Lots wife. V. 24. to 26. Fifthly. The care of Abraham and Gods respect to him in it. Ver. 27. to 29. Sixthly. The condition of Lot after his deliverance. Ver. 30 to 38.

First. In the first general passage of this history are to be noted these particulars, 1. The access of the messengers for execution unto Sodom.

And there came two angels to Sodom in the even. S. ptuag. and Cald. same. — Ver. 1.

1. The subject of access, two angels, they were two of those three, who dined with Abraham, staid men, and dispatched away by the third for this work intended. Chap. 18. ver. 2. 22. Yet here called Angels: so they were in their own natures as well as office; only for this time God clothed them with humane shapes and natures. 2. The access, they came (or were come) to Sodom, there indeed they were at present to execute the work enjoined on them, for vengeance on the place, and deliverance of Lot and his. Their number hath no mystérie. 3. The time, it was the even of that day when they dined with Abraham; they hastened according to their charge, for it was the space of five German, or fifteen English miles between Abrahams place and Sodom. For the possibility of their conveyance in such a time it cannot be doubtful; why the even is pitched on, vaine are conjectures, which make it emblematical of sad tidings, as the morning and midday of good. It is enough so providence ordered it, and perhaps that they might be eye-witnesses of their horrid practises in the night. But at this time they are come. 2. The providential posture of Lot, described.

And Lot was sitting in the gate of Sodom. — Sept. and Cald. same. Herein are obvious. 1. The subject, Lot, the man whome providence appointed to be saved from Sodom's overthrow and therefore put him in the way of the Angels at that time. 2. The posture of him, he sat in the gate of Sodom. The history is literal, therefore his session was as men use to rest their bodies or to wait for any, so the gate note's nothing but the entrance into the city, a place fittest to meet with travellers; and so ordered by God that now he should be there; as to that conjecture which makes the gate to be taken figuratively, as if it should mean, that Lot sat there as a judge because their sessions were kept in the gates of cities, it is altogether unapt for this place, as also untrue, for Lot was no ruler as appeares, Ver. 9.

3. The salutation given by Lot upon his first view of them.

And Lot saw, and rose to meet them, and bowed himself with the face on the earth.

Worshipped, &c. Sept. and Cald. Wherein are observable. 1. Readiness, to observe his providential guests, he saw. 2. Diligence, and stirring to take oportopportunity of receiving them. 3. Humility, towards those whom doubtless by some intimations he might perceive were sent of God. So he doth not only eye them, and meet them, but prostrates himself before them.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Gods dignation of humane shapes takes not away the nature of Angels. But they abide such still.

D. 2. Angels are speedie messengers to execute judgment upon the wicked, and to work deliverance for the righteous.

D. 3. Providence puts men in the way of mercy to whom he sends deliverance.

D. 4. God makes his servants to eye, and meet, and honour the instruments of salvation, and of vengeance. Ver. 1.

Ver. 2.

4. The invitation which Lot giveth them. Wherein. 1. His compellation of them is recorded. And he said, Behold I pray my Lords. This is an honorable bespeaking of them, upon whom doubtless he perceived some eminent character of their special dignity and office. That criticism between the two vowels in Adonai, is but weak. Doubtless though the name primitively is Gods, yet this as well as others is transferred to Angels and to men. 2. His friendly invitation of them. 1. To a stop, and digression into his habitation.

Turn aside I pray you into your servants house. — Sept. and Cald. same. Thus far he offereth them a shelter; where-in appear. (1) his fair intreaty; I pray, a term noting real desire. (2) His care of them, turn ye out of the street into a house. He knew it would not be so safe abroad for them in the night; here may be noted that gates and houses were proper unto cities and fenced places. Abraham dwelt in an oak grove, and a tent sufficed him, but Lot had an house within gates and fences, and yet not so safe. (3) His humility acknowledging himself their servant, and his house so far theirs. 2. To a lodging, — and stay all night, or lodge with me, as the night requirerth your repose. Cald. same. Sept. 3. To a refreshing of their bodies, for their better progress the next day.

And wash your feet, and ye shall rise up early and go on in your way. — Sept. and Cald. same. We have here. 1. His refreshing offered, washing, which was very needful for travellers in that country, walking mostly bare footed. 2. The end of his offer, to help them onward in their journey, he knowing not yet the business about which they came, he would not hinder them by kindness. Fifthly. The denial of the Angels unto this invitation.

And they said no, for we will lodge in the street, or stay the night there. — Sept. and Cald. same. 1. Their denial was real, not feigned. 2. Their reason notwithstanding their purpose, to lodge in the street, perhaps to discover the wickedness of the place, which appeared to them afterward in the house.

Learn from it.

D. 1. The Spirit of grace is courteous and humble towards the messengers of God, though they be strangers.

D. 2. A gracious soul is free, and real in inviting such strangers to shelter, lodging, and refreshing needful for them.

D. 3. Gates & houses are mens safe-guards; yet none without God.

D. 4. Gracious hospitality, would be no hinderance to Gods servants, but help them in their way.

D. 5. Gods messengers may deny the kindness of Saints without breach of charity upon special grounds. Ver. 2.

Sixthly. The importunity of Lot for all this denial, thus recorded.

And he forced upon them exceedingly, i. e. Ver. 3.

with his mouth. — And he violently compelled them, Sept. Cald. This doubles was a force of love overcoming them with great importunity, he did not coldly intreat, but with all his might begged them to be his guests. The intention of his intreaty is superlative.

7. The grant of the Angels hereupon: And they turned into him, and entered into his house. — Sept. and Cald. same. Herein they yeild his request, without lightness or equivocation; for their purpose was real to abide in the street; and yet did not intend upon importunity wholly to deny him.

8. The provision made by Lot and their acceptance.

And he made them a banquet, and baked unleavened bread or cakes; and they did eat.

Cald. same. — A drinking. Sept. 1. Lots entertainment.

1. He made for them a feast, a word not used in Abrahams entertainment, yet doubtless not intending much more; however the corruption of that place, which was fulness of bread, among the rest, might perhaps induce Lot to imitate something; but here we have no complaint of him; though it was charged heavily upon Sodom; not that God gave them fulness, but that they abused it to gluttony and drunkenness, which stirred up all other beastly lusts in them. Their fulness was of their own making, even to the overcharging of nature, and besotting of it. Ezek. 16. 49. 2. He baked unleavened cakes, such as soonest could be provided, and doubtless the best he had. This hath not to do with the Law of unleavened bread, given by Moses, however some pharisee this was occasional only, and for common use. 2. The guests acceptance and compliance; they eat of what was provided for them; under which action sweet society and communion are carried; Angels converse with gracious men, and these have fellowship with them.

Ff 3 doubtless

D. 3. Love in Saints is free and liberal to all whom from God it entertaineth.
D. 4. There may be honest feasting in Lot's house among the riot and gluttony of the Sodomites.

Secondly In the next general passage, which is the Sodomites provocation in present unto vengeance, occur; 1. Their assault upon Lots house, ver. 4. 5. 2. Lots intervention to prevent evil, ver. 6. 7. 8. 3. The Sodomites violence upon him, ver. 9. 4. The rescue of Lot by the Angels, ver. 10. 5. The frustration of the Sodomites design, ver. 11.

First, in their assault these particulars are considerable, 1. The time of it.

Before that they lay downe, — But before they slept, Sept. — Yet they lay not down. Cald. The expression noteth the season to be the night, when men should rest, this is the opportunity which sin taketh to express its fury, Lot feared it would have proved a bad time abroad, but conceived there would be more security in his house, yet this time was taken, which was also the instant of judgment. 2. The assailants, — thus characterized.

Ver. 4.

And the men of the city, the men of Sodom, from the child to the ancient, all the people from the end, or border of it. — All the people together, Sept. Cald. Such a description of an universal contagion, that is not ordinarily heard. 1. From ages, Old and young. 2. From universality, all the people. 3. From their bounds, throughout the city from end to end. All these conclude that ten righteous could not be found. 3. The Assault.

They compassed the house, — Sept. fame. — They trench about the house, Cald. The sense is, so they rounded it that no escape should be made out of their violent hands, neither at fore doors nor at posterne, ver. 4.

4. The summons which they gave, wherein may be seen, 1. Their clamour.

And they cried upon Lot; and said, — Ver. 5. And they called unto Lot, &c Doubtless the cry was impetuous and mutinous; violent, and irresistible by him; so sin useth to clamour. 2. Their question made to him.

Where the men which came unto thee, this night? — Where are? — Sept. and Cald. This inquisition also was not of wise and sober men, for safety in looking after strangers, but of man-slayers who lay in wait to defile and destroy, even an inquisition unto the utmost of filthiness. 3. Their demand.

And we will know them, — That we may congregate which them, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. In which expression according to what Lot answereth, is discovered the height of wickedness, & the loud cry of their abominations, from which vengeance could not stay longer. 1. In requiring harmless strangers from their place of rest to be delivered unto their violence. 2. In the end of their demand, which was to make them objects of unnatural lusts, the most horrid abomination, even to commit filthiness with them; which is the sense of their knowing them here, as Lots words do import. That sin which hence is called Sodomy, the defiling of menselves with mankind. — Notorious wickedness! Ezek. 16. v. 49. 50. Rom. 1. 27. 1. Tim. 1. 10.

D. 8. Violent sinners demand the innocent to be given up unto them.

D. 9. Sin groweth to its full pitch, when it carrieth men to unnatural lust. Sodomy is an high crying sin. Ver. 5.

Secondly The next particular is Lots intervention for the safety of his guests, who were now environed with beastly enemies, wherein we have to consider, 1. His adventure in going out to appease them. ver. 6.

Ver. 6.

And Lot went out unto them to the fore doors, and shut the portal after him. — So the Sept. express it by anistegon, & thron; The Cald. may fute also with it. Wherein the pious care which he had of his guests appears. 1. In his exposing himself to danger rather than them; He himself went out to this furious multitude; His courage and fidelity were eminent in this; in faith and duty appeareth his boldness, to put himself in the throng of such neighing horses. 2. In shutting them in; by which he laboured to prevent the violence of the Sodomites in entering the house; as doors are made, and shut, to keep all safe within. To shut the door, was to secure the house and all within it.

D. 4. Saints providence would serve Gods, in shutting doors against incroaching danger. Ver. 6.

2. His advice to them by way of dehortation, ver. 7.

And he said, brethren, pray do not evil, Ver. 7.

or wickedly. — By no means, men brethren, doe not wickedness. Sept.

Cald. fame. Wherein we have to note, 1. His compellation, brethren, so he stileth either for creation, or cohabitation, not for combination in evil. Thus with soft words he labours to qualify the heat of their fury. 2. His counsel by way of dehortation, I pray do not wickedly; Thus far his righteous soul striveth lawfully against the violence of their sinful attempt.

Sweet words and sound counsells are the means which thus far he useth to oppose violent transgressors, if it might be to keep them from evil, even from that odious sin intended by them.

Learn hence.

D. 1. It is not unbecoming Saints in some respect to stile the vilest of men brethren, to win them from evil.

D. 2. Kindness which is comely in the Saints must not flatter men to keep them in sin.

D. 3. Pious souls put out all their strength in disswading the wicked from sin. Ver. 7.

Thirdly. His offer by way of remedy, which he maketh, to prevent this evil from his guests. Ver. 8. Herein we have also to consider, 1. His humility in bespeaking them, — Behold I pray, Cald. the same. — Sept. wants it. Ver. 8.

It is an humble frame of speech to quench the fury of violent sinners, that were enraged with lust. 2. His discovery to them,

I have two daughters who have not known man.

That is, they were virgins, and yet betrothed unto husbands, but not married, nor in cohabitation with them. 3. His proffer.

I will bring out them I pray, and do to them as is good in your eyes. — And use them as it pleaseth you, Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Wherein, 1. His indulgence offered to their fury, I will bring them out unto you, that is, deliver them into your hands, rather than give up innocent strangers to you. 2. His license, Use them, as seem's

seem's good unto you, although it be unto defilement; a strange remedy, but yet a great condescension, in denying his own and children's comfort to secure strangers.

Fourthly. His exemption of his guests upon this account from violence and danger, wherein occurs, 1. His exception.

Only to these men, do not a word, or thing. That is, any thing of evil; — Cald. Do no unrighteous thing. Sept. — Cald. as Heb. That is the meaning, do no such hurt or evil, which your clamour makes known. That abominable wickedness which cryeth unto heaven. 2. His reason, alledg'd. For therefore are they come under the shadow of my raster, or roof. Synecd. Under the covering of my beams, Sep. A paraphrase of his house, that is, those innocent are come in, to be sheltered by me under my roof, therefore do them no wrong.

Quest. Was Lots offer good in this matter?

Ans. It is maintained so by many, and that several ways, but chiefly, because some conceive, Lot intended no such things, as the defilement of his daughters; but spake it onely to curb their unnatural lusts, as Reuben said to Jacob, kill my sonnes, if I bring not Benjamin again; his mind was not to have his sons slain, but to shew the care he would have of his younger brother. Gen. 42. ver. 37. So is conceived to be Lots mind, let my daughters be defiled rather than these strangers abused; but desiring neither. Yet the form of words seem to carry that Lot would have done this, to secure his guests; and therefore is it reckoned among his slips. But doubtless not to be laid as his reproach, who was now put upon such a great temptation.

Learn from it.

- D. 1. Humble carriage is best to overcome the proud insulations of the wicked.
- D. 2. Gracious soules choose rather to suffer in their own dearest comforts then expose the messengers of God and strangers unto violence.

- D. 5. It is the Saints property to be very sollicitous of securing such as are of Gods family with them.
- D. 6. Fidelity perswades Christians to secure innocent ones that are come to them for shelter. Ver. 8.

Thirdly. The third particular noted in the second general now followeth which is the violence of the Sodomites upon Lot. Ver. 9. Wherein we have to consider these particulars. 1. Their reply by way of blighting and contempt, which is exprest in two passages from them.

1. — And they said, be gone sur- ther. — Depart there, Sept. Ver. 9.

Go back there, Cald. A contemptuous exprellion; as when we say get you gone, and not induring to see or speak with any one: so they impatient of any more words from Lot, reject him with this scornful apage, be gone, stand back.

2. — And they said, this one came to sojourn, and judging he will judge, or will he judging judge? — Thou camest in, to sojourn, was it also to judge judgment? Sept. — This one, &c. and behold he judgeth judgment. Cald.

Which is as much as, he takes upon himself to be a judge, wherein they reproach him. 1. With his pilgrim condition, This one came to sojourn, having no place of his own; a poor suake that knew not where to have shelter; and is but one single fellow, and he to talk to all us the congregation of Sodom? We will not bear it. 2. With usurpation, and he will be judging judge. So some read it as a scornful expostulation; but others positively, as a malicious charge or accusation. This strange fellow will needs be judge and give lawes to us, to bring us under; but we will have none of this. So the best counsells are taken by the wicked with the worst interpretations. 2. Their reply by way of menacing and threat.

Now will we do evil to thee above them.

Now we will afflict thee more than them. Sept. — Cald. as Heb. Here's the devillish retribution of wicked men to such as seek to save them by good counsel. 1. The matter of the threatening, is to doe him mischief, doubtless the same in kind with what they intended to his strangers, for whom he adventured himself. 2. The subject of this threatening; Lot himself, his own body. 3. The measure of it, set down comparatively more to him than to them. So wickedness return's to the opposers of it.

3. Their attempt to doe what they threatned. And they thrust upon the man, upon Lot very much: and drew near to break the door. — And they forced the man even Lot exceedingly, &c. Sept. — And they pressed the man Lot mightily. Cald. Wherein double violence is offered. 1. Upon Lot himself, their act was a violent pressing to take him and prostrate him to their wickedness; the intention of their act is, that they forced exceedingly, with all their might. 2. U-

2. Upon his house and guests within, they drew near to break the door; gates nor doors can withstand the fury of an enraged sinful multitude; by this, they intended to enter and have their lustful wills upon whom they pleased; this was the fruit of Lots striving with the wicked Sodomites.

- D. 8. Neither men, nor gates, nor doors can withstand the violence of lustful men; when God gives them up. Ver. 9.

4. The fourth particular in the second general is Lot's rescue. ver. 10. Wherein also are to be considered. 1. The deliverers.

Ver. 10.

The men, even the Angels in humane shapes, whom Lot entertained and for whom he had so much adventured himself. 2. The acts making up Lots rescue or deliverance, these. 1. — And they sent out their hand, — stretched forth their hands, Sept. and Cald. Such now the Angels had in their assumed bodies; and these are made instruments of Lots preservation being now pressed with the violence of the Sodomites. The hands of these were mightier then all the wicked. 2.

And they made Lot come in unto them into the house. — They drew Lot, &c. Sept. Force to force, but this greater: the meaning is clear, they brought him out of the hands of the Sodomites into his house for safety. 3. — And they shut the door. — so Sept. and Cald. That is against their violent pursuit, and it is fast shut when Angels shut it; men cannot open such doors to enter or to hurt any within.

- D. 1. God in his Angels appears seasonably a deliverer to his Saints, who are but weak undertakers for him.
- D. 2. Angels may have hands created, and them put forth for the rescue of indangered Saints.
- D. 3. Saints are caught sometimes by Angels into safety, when they seem to be caught by wicked hands to misery.
- D. 4. The houses of Gods Saints are safe, when the Angels shut the doors. V. 10.

Fifthly. The Sodomites frustration followeth which helped on Lots safety as it is described. ver. 11. Wherein are to be noted. 1. An act of judgment miraculous upon them, stopping their present fury.

And they smote the men which were at the Ver. 11. doore of the house with blindnesses, from the little to the great. — אֶתְּמָלָה, Sept. — Avidencia, August. 1. The inflictors were the Angels in the forms of men. 2. The object the Sodomites, set out, both by their present imploiment, they were surrounding Lots house, and approaching the doore to break in by violence: and also by the universality of them, from the least to the greatest, as many as were equal in sin are the same in judgment. 3. The infliction itself, they were smitten with blindnesses. (1) The evil inflicted is blindness in the plural, both of eyes and mind, this word is but twice used, here and 2. King. 6. 18. (2) The infliction was judicial from God by his Angels, which at Gods word they can do, yea and the devils to, when God will give up men unto them. Whether this were by misrepresenting the object, or by darkening the air, or by imiting the vivise faculty and organs, or by all, it matters not, but this was the hand of God on them.

2. The effect of this blinding judgment. And they grievously laboured, or wearied themselves to find the door. — And they fainted seeking the door. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Wherein are these two evils dispensed on them. 1. Great toil, pain, labour unto weariness and fainting. 2. Frustration, they seek but never find, so that the walls were enough to contend with blind men. The like was to the Syrians. 2. Kings. 6. 18.

It learneth us.

D. 1. In the worst and most violent pursuit of Saints and innocent ones, God can blind, and insatiate their wicked persecutors.

D. 2. Universal is Gods judgment usually, when universal is the sinne provoking, upon small and great.

D. 3. Sore pain do the wicked take and suffer in prosecuting violence against Gods Saints.

D. 4. All the labour of the wicked is lost against Gods people, they may seek but shall not find. V. 11.

Thirdly, the next general head of the chapter followeth, which containeth the history of Lots salvation and deliverance from Sodom's destruction, wherein are observable. 1. The Angels warning him to be gon. ver. 12. 13.

2. Lots warning thereupon to his sons. 14.

3. The Angels dispatching Lot away, with Gods charge to him. ver. 15. 16. 17.

4. Lots supplication for a place of refuge. ver. 18. 19. 20.

5. The Lords answer of grant unto him. ver. 21. 22. 23.

In the first of these we have these particulars to consider. 1. The Angels expostulation with Lot.

Vers. 12. And the men said to Lot, who yet belongeth to thee here? Sept. and Cald. express not this question, which yet is not to be omitted. 1. The inquisitors, by their name and appearance men, by their nature and office, the Angels of Jehovah. 2. The inquiry, which is not from ignorance as if they knew not Lots allies; but of providence and care, over Lot and his, to call them altogether and save them. Who or what more belongeth to thee yet here? We will look to all that is thine.

2. The Angels admonition to him. Son in Law, and thy sonnes, and thy daughters, and whatsoever is to thee in the city, bring out of the place. Hast thou here sonnes in law, or sonnes or daughters? or if thou have any other in this city, &c. Sept. Cald. to the same purpose.

1. Here is the matter of the Angels care, all that was neer and dear to Lot in that place, noted by relation.

2. The act of care in advising, bring them all out of this place, let none stay here behind. ver. 12. 3. The Angels reason of this their advice, which is threefold.

1. Their present purpose of destroying it. Because we are destroying or about to destroy this place, We do destroy, Sept.

Vers. 13. We will destroy, Cald. The summe is, destruction is determined upon this place, and the time of execution is come, therefore bring out all thine and be gon, least you perish in the ruines of it. What destruction this was will appear hereafter. Good Angels do it.

2. The cry of their abominations before the Lord, which was very great. And the cause of it. Because the cry of them is grown great to the face of Jehovah. Sept. Their cry is exalted, &c. Cald. their cry is great. Therefore would the Angels have Lot gon from amidst the crying finnes of that people.

1. The evil is The cry of finnes, 2. The aggravation, It is exalted, or grown great.

3. The provocation of them, it is In the Very face of God, and against his visitation and threatnings. 3. The commission from Jehovah unto them to destroy the place and inhabitants.

And Jehovah hath sent us to destroy it, — And the Lord hath sent us to blot it out. Septua. Cald. as Hebr. 1. The power commissionating, Jehovah the everlasting God, who ruleth in Heaven and Earth. 2. The mission, he sent them in this manner to try the Sodomites, and find out their wickedness. 3. The commission is utterly to destroy place and people where wickedness cryeth so loud; the eminency of which destruction is declared in the execution. Ver. 13.

We may learn from all this.

We may learn from all this.

D. 4. God calleth his, and all that are neer and dear to him out of the place, upon which vengeance is determined. So out of Spiritual Sodom. Rev. 18. 4.

D. 5. Approaching vengeance discovered should make Saints quit themselves from among the wicked. V. 12.

D. 6. When the cry of finnes groweth great against Gods face, it is time for Saints to haste from thence.

D. 7. Jehovah commissionat's destroyers to blot out the wicked in the earth. D. 8.

D. 8. Good Angels are sometimes commissioned to destroy the wicked as well as to save the righteous. Ver. 13.

Ver. 14. 2. The next particular in the third general is Lots warning to his sons in law. ver. 14. Wherein are. 1. His accesse to them

And Lot went out; The connection supposeth, that by the judgment of blindness cast upon the Sodomites, the tumult was ceased, and the assailants drawn off from the house, then Lot according to the item of the Angels goeth about the saving of his allies, if yet it might be; out therefore he goeth to their habitations timely to warn them. 2. His admonition or advice unto them, wherein. 1. The intention of it, in the double expression used, —

And he spake, and he said, — So Sept. and Cald. It note's the earnestness of heart in saluting timely advice upon them. He spake it, and said it again. 2. The object of it to whom it was spoken, described.

1. By their relation, To his sons-in-law, such as were mentioned before by the Angels. 2. By the ground of this relation, — Receiving his daughters, or being about to take them, — Who had taken his daughters, Sept.

Cald. as Hebr. The expression in the letter is present, taking, which some read future, that they were now about to take his daughters for wives: others as Septuagint.

read it in time past which had taken his daughters; and so determine that Lot had some daughters married, beside the two virgins, which went out with him, and they with their husbands by unbelief perished; but to be peremptory in saying that he had, or had not more children, where no revelation is made to us, will be but rashness.

3. The matter of his advice. Arise, go out of this place, for Jehovah is destroying the city. — Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein we have. 1. His advice, arise; that is, suddenly bestir your selves, go ye out of this place, leave all you have here, come and escape with me. 2. His reason; which was strong faith upon Gods revelation, Jehovah is destroying, or about to destroy the city. (1) He beleeveeth, the eternal God was now provoked to execute wrath. (2) The act mentioned, which in Hebr. is in the present time, but here rightly rendered in the future by Sept. and ours, for as yet execution was not done; (3) The object upon which this destruction was to come, the city where they dwelt, which was enough as to them that they might provide presently to be gon with him. No stateliness of cities exempt them from Gods vengeance.

3. His entertainment which he find's with his sons in law.

And he was as one mocking in the eyes of his sons in law, and he seemed to do ridiculously before his sons in law, Sept. and he was as a laughing stocke unto his sons in Law. Cald. Their entertainment is with derision and scorn.

Wherein, 1. The party devided, Lot with his message, and with his God, 2. The derision, he and all he said from his God was made as ridiculous, that they giered; and laughed him to scorn for his advice. 3. The deriders, sons in law, of neer relation but none of his religion in truth; such as loved Sodom better then Gods Church; these though naive might teach them to reverence, yet they deride their father, as a doter, dreaming of vengeance, which they would not beleeve.

Quest. Why doth God send Lot unto such wicked men?

Ans. His reason is best known to himself, yet surely we may conclude, it was for the glorifying of himself. 1. In warning them to fly from wrath. 2. In rendering them thereby more inexcusable. 3. In declaring his judgments to be most righteous.

Learn.

messages of vengeance, are all but scorns and derisions to wicked men.

D. 10. Secure scorning of destruction from God is the immediate fore-runner of it: as here. Ver. 14.

3. The next particular noted about Lot's deliverance is the angels speeding him out of Sodom, Ver. 15. 16. 17. wherein wee have to note.

1. The angels urgency in word, and therein, 1. The season which they took to press him. — And as that very morning did ascend. — As it was the dawning of the day, Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. It was but a bad night with Lot by reason of the violence of the Sodomites, now early at the dawning of the day is Lot stirr'd up by the angels, because vengeance hastned on that wicked place. 2. Their urgency on him in pressing terms.

And the Angels pressed upon Lot, in saying, arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, herefound, or present. — The angels hastned Lot, saying, arising take thy wife, and the daughters which thou hast, and be gon out. Sept. — The angels forced Lot, &c. and thy daughters which are found faithful with thee. Cald.

(1) The manner of urging him was earnest, pressing, restless, giving him no pause. (2) The matter urged was to quiet himself, wife and children of the place, arise, take, be gon. So backward are Gods Saints sometimes to depart from sinners.

3. The reason of their speed and urgency. Least thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city. — That thou be not destroyed together with the iniquities of the city Septua. — Least perhaps thou be smitten in the finnes of the city. Cald.

1. Prevention of direful destruction from Lot and his, moveth the angels so to press him. 2. The provocation by the finnes and abominations of the city, on which God was now resolv'd to take full vengeance; iniquity is here, put for the punishment due unto sinners, and vengeance ready to be inflicted on them; from both the angels would save Lot; therefore they are so earnest. Ver. 15.

D. 5. Continuance with the wicked against Gods call, subject's such soules to destruction with them. Ver. 15.

Secondly. The angels urgency in deed. Wherein are, 1. The occasion, being Lots demeanour upon all this, — And he delayed. — And they were troubled, Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. This delay, implying loath to depart, discovers Lots hankering yet after his pleasant place in Sodom, it is by the Seventy spoken of all, Lot his wife, &c. that they were all troubled; that is, distracted about their affaires and sudden warning to be gon, and thereupon delay was made, to the indangering of him and his. 2. The urgency of the angels itself by action upon Lot, Wherein, 1. We have their act, which is twofold. 1. Apprehension of him, his wife, and daughters.

And the men caught by his hand, and by the hand of his wife, and by the hand of his two daughters. Here is a further demonstration of saving providence when words will not do, even to lay hands upon poore men to save them. The angels as men lay hold on Lot while he is lingering himself into danger. 2. Disposition, or placing them out in the way of escaping.

And they brought him forth, and set him at rest without the city. The Seventy leave out this. The Caldee as Hebr. In this case we see the angels of God move with effect toward the safety of Gods servants, 1. They move them from that inveigling place, which inticed them into danger; Lot under some temptation by divers occurrences is tossed between God and the creatures, probably with some doubts of the event foretold, being willing to keep his earthly place, now therefore by force they draw him out. 2. They set him in the way of deliverance out of the gates of the city, the exprellion, noteth, a setting of him to rest, that he might be at peace, being separated from the iniquities and desolation of the wicked; so as it is derived from one word; but as most agree from נָח or נָחַם it noteth, a placing or setting of him in the way of escaping onely.

2. The reason efficient of this act of the angels, thus expressed.

In the mercy of Jehovah toward him, or in the indulgence, and pardon of Jehovah — In the Lords sparing him, Sept.

Because God had pity on him, Cald. — The gracious acceptance, mercy, and indulgence of Jehovah to Lot, was the cause of this ministration of the Angels, who go and do at his word.

3. Now followeth Gods special command to Lot, being now set in the way of deliverance, Ver. 17th Wherein 1. The occasion of the command, is thus recorded — And it was, as they brought them forth. — Sept. and Cald. same.

At that time when by the angels Lot and his, were placed out of Sodom to be gon, God himself now appears, to warrant their action and advice, when ministry was done, God sets home his command. 2. The command itself, which God giveth to Lot is threefold.

And he said, deliver thy self in thy life, deliver thyself to the mountain. This counsel or command is double, the first and the last, saying, Save thine own life, be saved in the mountain, Sept.

Pity thine own life, and save thy self in the mountain. Cald. 1. The command here is God himself, who now appears to Lot as he did to Abraham, and giveth him express command to obey for safety. 2. The work commanded, in the same word doubled, which noteth the certainty and necessity of it to be done, Escape, Escape, or deliver, deliver. 3. The object, his life, and the life of all with him, escape for thy life, or deliver thy self in thy life. 4. The term of this escape, the mountain which was beyond the bound of intended destruction. There God would save him, but not in Sodom.

2. The next command is — Look not back behind thee. — Sept. and Cald. to same. This however directed to Lot was given to all, which his wife afterward felt by her transgression.

This doubtless forbade the very outward turning of the eye any more to Sodom; which yet intended the taking of their hearts utterly from that wicked place. God giveth command therefore that not one should look back toward it, as shewing any pity to it, or hankering after it.

3. And stand not in all the plain. — Stand not in all the region round about, Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. 1. Station prohibited, nor stand, nor stay, must be, before God appoints it. 2. Place prohibited, the plain, upon which God resolved to powre out his vengeance; stand not there, where wrath is determined.

Thirdly. The reason of Gods command, the same which the Angels urge for their haste upon him. Least thou be consumed or destroyed. — Least thou be taken away with them. Sept. least perhaps thou perish, Cald. Yea and all with thee. Though God can absolutely save, yet will he have his Saints use the means, and not abide among such upon whom destruction is coming. Gods commands must be obeyed if Lot be saved.

D. 4. Gods express mind is that his saved should not look toward, nor hanker after the wicked which are about to be destroyed.

D. 5. God would not have his redeemed stand, where destruction must be revealed.

D. 6. Commands and threatnings are needful to bring about Gods salvation to his Saints. V. 17.

Fourthly. Lots prayer for another place of refuge beside the mountain, unto which God had designed him, is the next particular about his deliverance, as followeth. ver. 18. 19. 20. Wherein these heads are observable.

1. Deprecation. ver. 18.

And Lot said unto them, nor I pray my Lord. — I pray Lord. Sept. I beseech you now my Lords. Cald. The originall expresth it by way of deprecation of some evil which seemed to be threatned, ver. 17. unless he escaped to the mountain. Wherein. 1. The petitioner, Lot, now fairly delivered, warned, and charged of God. 2. The manner of expresth his desire, he spake or said. 3. The witnesses before whom, the Angels, or men spoken of, to them, that is, in their hearing; for I conceive not that they were the objects of his prayer; but Jehovah who spake to him before. 4. The matter of his deprecation Let it not be now, that is, let me not be bound to the mountain, nor for falling short be consumed, as was threatened. And this he directs to the Lord, who spake to him, Adonai, which is by some read plural my Lords, but more apposit to the precedent, my Lord, in the singular; and so the 70 read. O Lord.

Quest. Why doth Lot turn his prayer against Gods command?

Ans. Surely this was his infirmity, not to acquiesce in Gods word, and yet some hope he conceiveth through Gods favour to be secure in a nearer place.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Saints warned of God and partly saved may yet be backward unto full salvation in Gods own way discovered to them. Lot is not for the mountains, but Zoar.

D. 2. The infirmities of Saints may put them on prayer for safety against Gods command; and deprecate that place or way of salvation which God promiseth. Ver. 18.

2. Confession, whereby he labours to mitigate his former deprecation, and make way for another prayer.

Ver. 19.

Behold now or I pray thy servant hath found grace in thine eyes, and thou hast magnified thy mercy, which thou hast made with me, to quicken or keep alive my soul. For as much as I thy servant have found grace before thee, and thou hast magnified thy righteousness, according to what thou doest upon me to keep alive my soul. Septu. — By sustaining my soul. Cald. In which confession occur. 1. The demonstration Behold I pray, he hideth not but proclaimeth all the mercy shewed him already, & this humbly as a suppliant.

2. The matter confessed. 1. That he had found free grace in Gods sight, he deserved no more than others to be delivered, but yet God of his free love shewed respect to him, this he had found experimentally thus far. 2. That God had shewed him great mercy as well as free, no small favour had God vouchsafed, which maketh him now so bold; (1) He acknowledgeth himself the subject of it, thou hast don to me, unworthy me, (2) The greatness of it, much goodness, great righteousness did God now shew forth, making good his promise.

3. That God had kept him alive, great was the mercy to quicken and keep his soul among the living, when he might have bin consumed; all this grace he maketh use of as an invitation to beg more.

3. Exception against Gods command for his escaping unto the mountain, thus expressed.

And I cannot deliver myself to the mountain, lest evil cleave to me, and I dye. — I shall not be able to be saved on the mountain, lest evils take me, &c. Sept. — Cald. to the same. A bad excuse to refuse the command of God his saviour. It is wholly a bewraying of the weakness of his faith. 1. In his position, I cannot be saved in the mountain, what not where God commanded salvation? Poor Lot! But the length of way and desolateness of place, it is likely did dismay him, and made his sense too strong for his faith; that he concludes impossibility of being saved, where God designs him. 2. In his fear, lest evil cleave to me, and I dye, Why was there any evil too hard for God? Could not God save him alive in the mountain as well as in the plain? O Lot, carnal fear weakens faith. But yet this exception he makes as one ground of his former deprecation, and following prayer, though it be but weak. All this is maintained as right by some, but all in vaine.

4. Supplication, whereabout these particulars are considerable.

1. His pointing out the place of safety after his mind.

Behold I pray, this city is near to fly thither, and it is little. — Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein Lots choice is opposite to

Ver. 20.

to Gods as for a place of security, in these respects. 1. Lot would have a city, and God a mountain, so he points out, behold this city. 2. Lot would have the place nearer, God further off. This city is near, which in his sense he could reach sooner, yet unto God it was as easy to save farther off; whome he had no cause to mistrust. 3. Lot would make his flight thither, though God gave him time to betake himself to the mountain. 4. Lot plead's the littleness of it, for his escape thither; it may be because a little refuge of mans owne seem's better than a great one from God, or it may be as the place was less then the other cities so were their sinnes also. Whereupon Lot was the more bold to intreat. However afterward he was weary of it, and chose the mountain before it. See ver. 30.

2. His petition about it.

Pray I will deliver myself there, or let me escape or deliver, &c. — And I shall be saved, Sept. and Cald. But the future here is used for the imperative, in way of prayer, Oh, now, pray let me escape there. Thus Lot's own mind make's him pray. 3. His reason, which is twofold.

1. Taken from the place, It is not a little one as if he should say, Lord it is but a small thing I pray for, and if iniquity be there, it is the less, oh spare that little one for a refuge.

2. Taken from himself, And my soul shall live. — And my soul shall live for thy sake. Sept. — Cald. as Heb. This he prayeth, and promiseth himself, that he shall rather live in the city then in the mountain; it is likely he thought better entertainment was there then in a wilderness; although a wilderness be better when God chooseth it.

D. 2. Sense even in Saints would choose evils rather then mountains for their safety.

D. 6. Gods Saints are too bold with God sometimes in lesser things.

D. 7. Saints sometimes pray for, and promise themselves life in their own way and places. Ver. 23.

Fiftly. Gods answer to Lots request now followeth, Ver. 21. 22. 23. Wherein these special heads are to be noted. 1. Gods acceptance of Lot in his prayer, ver. 21. Set forth, 1. By respect to his person.

And he said unto him, behold I have lifted up thy face also for this word or matter. — I have admired thy face, or made it admirable, Sept. And he said. Used in a bad sense as to corrupt men; Jude, ver. 16. But here of God it note's an excellent act of grace. Cald. as Heb. 1. The acceptor is Jehovah. 2. The accepted is Lot. 3. The acceptance itself, is regarding his person, expressed by lifting up his face; for however this sometimes is used to express respect of persons, which is an evil denied of God, charged on men, yet here it noteth a pure act of grace; that however Lot had crossed Gods command, and exceeded his bounds in seeking refuge in this city, for which God had cause to be angry, and to cast down Lots countenance, yet freely he indulgeth Lots infirmity, and accept's his person. 4. The matter wherein he was accepted, that very prayer, word, or thing, for which he intreated, ver. 20.

2. By sparing the place, for which he prayed, that it might be his refuge. That I am not overthrowing the city which thou hast mentioned. — Even in this word, not to overthrow the city of which thou hast spoken, Sept. — For which thou hast prayed. Cald. Herein is a real proof of Gods acceptance, that of the five cities on which vengeance was denounced, one should be spared upon Lot's intreaty: there is no difficulty in the words, only about the thing some questions are made.

Quest. 1. Was it God himself who thus answereth Lot? Or the angels?

Ans. (1) The singular expression notes but one answering. (2) This one was God himself to whome the prayer was directed, for the angels would not rob God of his glory, neither indeed was it in their power to save or exempt any thing determined by God to destruction.

Quest. 2. How can God grant this against his own decree, doth he change his mind?

Ans. (1) It is not against his decree, for no where it is found that God determined to destroy this city. (2) Gods threatenings carry usually some condition with them, as that to Nineveh; and doubtless God knew what he would doe concerning Lot and Zoar. When we see God grants respite for the place to him, we may safely conclude God determined to doe so. It is therefore but a fable which the Jewes report, that the angels spared Zoar against Gods will, and therefore were deprived of of their ministry until the time of Jacobs vision, 138 years after.

Quest. 3. Why did God yield this to Lot, to go to Zoar?

Ans. Gods reasons are not declared, yet something may be safely conjectured, 1. To let Lot see the comfort of his own choice, how empty it was, for he was quickly weary of residing there, and afterward goeth whether God bids him. 2. It might be to the greater conviction of that place, which was then spared, and the aggravation of their sin, who repented not. 3. Gods glory was his main end in sparing and punishing, where and when he pleased.

D. 2. God sometimes grants the thing to his servants, which is irregularly desired, though not so good for them.

D. 3. God would have his Saints take notice of his indulgence toward their desires, and to make right use of it. Behold.

D. 4. Wicked places deserving sudden destruction are sometimes spared from it for the Saints prayers. Zoar was beholden to Lot at this time, more than they were sensible of. Ver. 21.

2. Gods injunction to Lot hereupon, ver. 22. Wherein; 1. The matter of the injunction. Haste thou, deliver thy self there.

Haste therefore to be saved there. Sept. — Be saved there. Cald. Two things are enjoined him.

1. Haste, speed, no more lingering, judgment was hastning, and therefore time for Lot to run. 2. Self-deliverance though God saved him, yet Lot must walk and travel to have Gods deliverance made good unto him. Yea and to the place determined; deliverance no where else is to be expected; Lots deliverance of himself was but his obedience. 2. The reason of the injunction.

Because I am able to do not a word, a thing, a job, until thou come there. Sept. — and Cald. same. These words by some are transferred to the angels, that they could not proceed to execution according to their commission, until Lot was secured; but the expression is singular and concerneth God himself who heard Lot, accepted him, and enjoined him haste. This reason of Lots haste as urged by God is made up, 1. Of the obstacle put upon Gods power as expressed, because I cannot; why could not God do what he pleased? He would not, therefore could not, for otherwise Lot could not have hindered. 2. Of the let upon execution, not one thing was to be done upon Sodom, not a flash of fire to goe out, until Lot was secured. 3. Of the flint put upon the place unto which Lot was to betake himself, until he arrived thither, judgment could not proceed; therefore God commands him to hasten. 3. The issue of all this passage between God and Lot; to make a memorial of it, in the nomination of the place. Therefore he called the name of the city Tsoar. — Sygor, Sept. —

*Sogor, Cald. — Segor, Lat. 1. The imposor of the name is God, he who enjoined Lot to make speed, as it all run's in that third person most rationally. 2. The subject of this imposition, that city which Lot had beg'd for his refuge, heretofore called Bela. Gen. 14. 2. 3. The name imposed Tsoar, which signifieth little, which was the reason that Lot urged for his flight thither, It was but a little one; now that little one God granted him for his present repose; and to keep a memorial of Lots prayer, and Gods answer, this name is now left upon that city; as if God should say to Lot, this is the little refuge which thou desiredst rather than the place alligned by me, now thou hast thy desire, and hence forth know it by that name, the little one, or Lots little one, which yielded him but little rest, when he came thither to reside.*

Ver. 23.

The sun went forth upon the earth, and Lot came into Tsoar. — Sept. and Cald. same. Where we have to note, 1. The season of Lots entrance into this place of refuge, was at the sun rising. So soon as the morning dawned, he was rouled up to be gon, and by sun rising, he was at the place appointed. This point of time determined salvation to Lot, but destruction to Sodom and the other cities. There is a morning which brings joy after a night of darkness and trouble, and there is a morning that brings vengeance after a night of security. Isai. 47. 11. Thou shalt not know the morning thereof, &c. 2. The arrival itself, Lot then entered into Tsoar; happy day for them, that Lot came thither, it would else have bin heavy. Good haste, doubtless he made from Sodom to Tsoar notwithstanding lets by the way that he might not be backward unto Gods command.

D. 3. Destruction cometh as early on the wicked, as salvation on the just.

D. 4. Sad nights may have joyful mornings for the Saints, but nights of security bring the morning of misery to the wicked. Ver. 23.

Fourthly, the next general head containeth the execution of the threatened vengeance on Sodom, as well as a spectacle of justice upon backsliders in Lots wife. Two main peeces of judgment we have then to note, 1. Vengeance upon Sodom, ver. 24-25. Where about.

Ver. 24.

1. The author of it, — And Jehovah from Jehovah, — The Lord, from the Lord Sept. — The Lord from the face of the Lord, or from before the Lord, Cald. The eternal and almighty being from himself is the author of this vengeance, that God the son did act this judgment for God the father, who gave all into his hand, is truth; and to the distinction of relations in the Deity is here hinted. But to the unbelieving Jew this is no forcing argument, because it is a proper Hebraism, to say Jehovah did work from Jehovah, that is, from himself. As the Lord said, is any thing too hard for the Lord? That is, my self &c. Gen. 18. 13, 14. Yet the light of the Gos- pel may give Christians ground, rightly to understand it both of the Father and son. The eternity of the author is notable. Fifthly The acting of it set out in two direful expressions. 1. Rained, or made to rain brimstone and fire. Sept. and Cald. same. Here, 1. The matter used for their vengeance, is prodigiously tormenting; fire as hot as Gods wrath, and this spread all over by brimstone, horried stench and burning torment; punishment fitted, for unheard of uncleanness, and burning lust. 2. The manner of inflicting, God rained it down, which notes a real, full, and unavoidable execution, as the rain falleth on the earth, and that in fullness, and returneth not again until it hath done its work; so this storm and showre of vengeance fell certainly, fully, and unavoidably, none could cover himself from this storm, but it strook houses, caves, cities, and fields; no running out of this rain. 2.

And he overthrew or subverted. Sept. and Cald. the same, he overturned. This is the effect of the former execution, even an utter ruine and destruction brought upon those abominable provoking sinners. The same expression is used. Deut. 29. 23. 2. Pet. 2. 6. Burning them to ashes, he condemned them with an overthrow; that is, he made an utter end of them, as much as fire could do upon the fuel. Such fiery storms could do no less then burn up their foundations, and not leave a stone upon a stone. All this done suddenly. — Lam. 4. 6. And God never repented of it. Jer. 20. 16.

Thirdly, The place of its rise, whence this fire is rained down. — from heaven. So Sept. and Cald. Which must intend the middle region, where by the law of providence sulphureous meteors are generated and thence powred down at Gods command. However something was in this work more miraculous, the Angels doubt, less acting now at the command of God, and extraordinarily raising storm and tempest, raining down fire and brimstone, when it is conceived the sun shone in its brightness. From heaven thus God takes vengeance, whence there is no escaping. Heaven hath plagues enough to be avenged on earths transgressors. Fourthly. The object of all this vengeance set out under several expressions. 1. By special name.

Upon Sodom and Gomorrah. It seem's these were the two eminent and leading places for sin, so they are usually paired together. Math. 10. 15. Jer. 49. 18. 2. By a more general notation. — Those cities, That is, not onely these two, but the cities about them, which were two more, Admah and Zeboim mentioned by Moses. Deut. 29. 23. 3. By the whole continent. — And all the plain — Sept. All the region round about. All this was turned into the salt sea or dead sea, mentioned. Gen. 14. 3. That place which formerly was as the garden of the Lord. Gen. 13. 10. All that was turned into a sulphureous lake lake; the compass of which is diversly expressed, some say 580 furlongs in length, & 150 in breadth, others make it in breadth 5 or 6 miles, in length 4 or 5 dayes journey. Historians speak diversly of it, that no living thing is in it, and what lieth over, falleth down dead, but as to that we have no infallible author; yet such a subversion was of this plain to be turned into a sulphureous sea, called Asphallites.

4. By the inhabitants.

And all inhabiting the cities.

Sept. and Cald. same. In summe, all the people, men, women and children, they were all a cursed feed; and God makes them all examples. He left not one to live. Isai. 1. 9. Jer. 49: 18. Jer. 50. 40.

5. By the fruit of the ground.

And the bud of the ground, — And things that spring upon the earth. Sept. A good paraphrase; Where there were as fruits of paradise, now not a tree or shrub left, but all destroyed, or turned into most odious fruit. Wisd. 10. 7. Some report, that fruit like apples have grown there, and with a touch, they fall to ashes and stink of brimstone; such an universal, fatal overthrow did God make. So we read of the vine of Sodom, &c. Deut. 32. 32. This unparalleled example of vengeance is held out to all sorts of sinners in the world, both within and without the Church: To Israel. Deut. 29. 23. To Judah. Isa. 3. 9. To Babylon. Isai. 13. 19. To Jerusalem. Jer. 23. 14. To Edom. Jer. 49. 18. To Samaria and Jerusalem. Ezek. 16. 46. &c. Amos 4. 11. — To Moab & Ammon. Zeph. 2. 9. To all Gospel despisers. Math. 10. 15. Ch. 11. 23. 24. Mar. 6. 11. To secure sinners. Luk. 17. 29. To hereticks and ungodly wretches. 2. Pet. 2. 6. Jude. ver. 17. 2. The next peece of judgment executed was upon Lots wife. ver. 26. About which we have to consider. 1. The time of execution to be judged by the connection.

And, then, but, when, so this term is rendred. However it is connective to what went before, and though this verse may seem to belong more neerly to ver. 23. yet it is placed rightly as it is, and followeth in time the former vengeance; for doubtless this was acted upon her, when the shovre of fire and brimstone fell upon the plain which appears by considering. 1. God would do nothing in his execution upon Sodom, untill Lot was come to Soar, now if his wife had entred with him, she could not then look back, being within gates and walls. 2. That she lingered behind him in the plain, where the storm overtook her, and God made her such an example to backsliders, for had she bin in Zoar she had bin safe. Unto which agreeth the relation of historians, that the Pillar was between Zoar and the dead sea, which was the plain. 2. The sin provoking.

His wife looked back from behind him,

And his wife looked upon the things behind. Sept. — Behind her self. Cald. This must be before they came to Zoar. 1. The subject spoken of, is Lots wife, the neere relation. 2. The act was looking back, or looking upon the things behind herself Sodom; and the events spoken about it. Was this such an evil? Yea, if all circumstances be considered it was full of bitterness. 1. She knew the wickedness of the place. 2. She was brought out of it with her husband to be saved. 3. She was commanded to hasten with her husband and not look back. — 4. She was threatned if she did, to perish in the iniquity of Sodom. Now notwithstanding all this. 1. She lingereth behind her husband in the plain. 2. She beleeveth not Gods commands and threatnings. 3. She expressly rebelled, and did look back. 4. She foolishly affected the pleasures of Sodom which provoked God, seeming rather desirous to perish with them than to be saved with Gods remnant. These aggravations make the sin great. Wisd. 10. 7.

8. 3. The judgment executed on her. And she was a pillar of salt. — A stature of salt. Sept. 1. The subject of this punishment is the same that sinned. 2. The executioner though not expressed was God.

3. The punishment itself is a metamorphosis, or changing of her from the shape of a woman into a pillar of salt, — About which some queries may be expecting our solution.

Quest. 1. What was thus metamorphosed?

Ans. Her body onely, but not her soul, that is visible.

Quest. 2. Into what was it changed?

Ans. Into a pillar of salt; 1. The matter was salt really, something symbolizing with brimstone which God rained downe, and this hard as a rock. 2. The form was a pillar, statue, or image, that which might be looked on. It is a Jewish tradition that it shall continue to the day of judgment.

Quest. 3. Why was she thus changed into salt?

Ans. 1. Gods pleasure is reason enough. 2. Salt did note duration, as a Covenant of salt, and so might be used to be a perpetual monument against withdrawers; so Christ himself made use of it. Luk. 17. 32. Remember Lots wife. It is a fable of the Rabbins who say it was because she denied salt to her guests.

Quest. 4. What became of her soul?

Ans. 1. That is hid among Gods secrets; 2. Yet it is conjectured by the best, that God accepted and saved it, which may be safe for us to think in charity; for God hath laid severe strokes upon the bodies of his Saints often, and yet hath bin no enemy to their soules.

Fifthly, the next head of this Chapter containeth Abrahams sollicitousness about Sodom and his Nephew Lot. Ver. 27. 28. 29. And herein occur these particulars. 1. Abrahams care about this matter expressed. (1) In his early rising.

And Abraham stirred himself early in the morning — Or he gat up early in the morning. Sept. — He rose Cald. — He was doubtless affected with Gods discoveries on the day before, and could not rest well, but desired to see the event; to the letter, He morning'd it in the morning. He took the first peeping light to observe Gods dealings with the place for which he had so much interceded. 1. The subject is Abraham a praying soul. 2. The act, early stirring to see what became of his intercession, if there were ten in Sodom to preserve the place; he knew by Gods dealings, his own number was not found. This is continued to the former history, as appertaining thereunto. (2) In his address unto the place of discovery.

To the place where there he had stood to the face of Jehovah. — Before the Lord. Sept. — Where he stood in prayer before the Lord: Cald. This was the place of his parting with the angels the day before, and of his conference and intercession with God; it seems it was a convenient place for prospect, whence some signalls might be perceived at great distance. Whether he had any secret intimation for coming thither is not revealed; but this plain, where he made his prayer, thither he came for an answer of it. Ver. 27. (3) In his aspect to the place.

And he looked into the face of Sodom and Gomorrah, and over at the face of the land of the plain. — Of the region about. Septu. — Of the champion land. Cald. For all this he interceded and therefore to all this he had respect, having understood Gods purpose about it and how would know what God had determined. This was no sin in Abraham, God forbade him not. (4) In his observation of the event.

And he saw, and behold there went up the smoke of the land as the smoke of a furnace.

A flame out of the land, &c. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Now Abraham seeth, that his charity was mistaken, that God was most righteous in his proceedings, there such an universal contagion, that not ten righteous persons could be found. So judgment had freedom to proceed upon Abrahams tents. Ver. 28. He seeth smoke, but the execution was done.

H h 2 being

2. Gods care of Abraham and his prayer, wherein two things are observable from God to Abraham. 1. Gods remembrance of Abraham and his intercession.

Ver. 29.

And it was in Gods destroying the cities of the plain, then Elohim remembered Abraham. When God wore out or wasted the cities of the region about, &c. Sept. Champian cities. Cald.

1. The season, in the instant of destroying the wicked, and bringing them to destruction for their sin. 2. The act of grace, Elohim remembered Abraham, that is, his prayers, and desire of his soul, and accepted him and them, and resolved to grant beyond his desire, God bounds the fire to the plaine. 2. The effect of Gods remembrance.

And he sent Lot out of the midst of the overthrow in overthrowing the cities where among them Lot dwelt. Sept. and Cald. to fame. So far as God heard Abraham that he would not destroy the righteous with the wicked, and that he would preserve one dear to Abraham because dear to himself, wherein. 1. The just occasion of Lots destruction, he dwelt among Gods enemies, and probably somewhat taken with delight there. There he was among them upon his own choice. 2. The gracious exemption of Lot notwithstanding, that however justice proceeded to the subversion of the place, yet God sent Lot out before destruction came. 3. The just execution of all the rest, God overthrew them. And so Abraham was answered, the wicked were destroyed, and the righteous delivered. Ver. 29.

Sixthly. The last general head of the chapter containeth Lots demeanour and the effects of it after God had delivered him from the great overthrow of Sodom. Herein these particulars occur. A double sin.

1. Lots disobedience in leaving the place allotted without Gods present command ver. 30. Wherein are. 1. His motion.

Ver. 30.

And Lot ascended from Tsoar. He went out of Segor. Sept.

Cald. as Hebr. 1. The subject and author of this motion is Lot himself; here is no mention of any word from God about his removal at this time though he commanded him to go thither at first; when God would, then he would not; and when God biddeth not, then he goeth; this was his infirmity. 2. His motion, he ascended from this Tsoar one of the cities of the plain, toward the hill, or mountain, whereof God formerly spake unto him. He moveth more freely upon his own will, then Gods word. 2. His pitching there.

And he sat down in the mountain; he and his two daughters with him. Sept. and Cald. fame. Here are reported.

1. His fixing, he sat down, and dwelt and took up his habitation.

2. His place, the Mountain, doubtless that which God at first pointed him unto; when he had tried his own choice, though God promised him safety there, yet he is weary of it, and then though God bid him not, yet he betakes himself to an experience of the place, which God offered, and he formerly refused. 3. His company pany which sat down with him there, his two daughters were only with him as the history relateth. A deep silence is concerning any else which at this time should remove with him; although by reason of provisions to be carried with them it seem's probable to some, that servants went with them also. However the text speaks of no more, neither is it necessary for us to know more. This is again repeated in this verse, that he and his daughters sat in a cave, which was in this mountain; that no doubt might be of their cohabitation: in a naked, void uncouth place they take up their dwelling. 3. The reason of both the former, Because he feared to sit still in Tsoar, Or to dwell, &c. Sept. His passion here is the cause of his motion, fear possessed him in the place of his own choice. What might be the reason of his fear, may be guessed, though it be not expressed; either the wickedness of the place, which provoked God, or some apprehension of vengeance hanging over there, or other evils that might be offered to him or his in this city by the inhabitants, whether all or some of these or more besides might work this fear, it matters not much: but sure it is, he was heartily afraid to stay any longer in that place, for which he had intreated that he might live in it. How long his stay was there is not expressed, but doubtless long it could not be ere he was disquieted, and through fear removed his dwelling to the mountain.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Mans choice of rest and safety crossing Gods command will not content him long.

D. 2. Man upon the failing of expected comfort in his own way, may be then moved to try Gods.

D. 3. Weakness in the best of men may be such, as disobediently to do that which sometimes God justly commands: so Lot goeth when God bids not, to the place formerly commanded.

D. 4. Naturally mans own will maketh him move faster then the will of God.

D. 5. Solitary and sad may be the peregrinations and habitations of the best families here below. Lot and his daughters, in a cave, not a city.

D. 6. Fear of sin and vengeance and evil to come will make a soul fly from its desired refuge in the World.

D. 7. A cave or den in a mountain with God is a better habitation then a palace in a city of sin. Lot chooseth so. V. 30.

Sixthly, Lots incest is here observed as a bad return for one delivered out of Sodom to fall into any of Sodoms uncleannesses, about which evil we have these things declared. 1. The infamous counsel taken by his daughters, ver. 31. 32. 2. The betraying practise of his two daughters. v. 33. 34. 35.

3. The sad event of all in two effects. (1) The incestuous conception. ver. 36. (2) The incestuous birth from both, ver. 37. 38.

To the first, which is the daughters consultation, to bring their father and themselves into great guilt.

Herein are observable. 1. The consulters.

And the first born said to the younger, Ver. 31.

The elder said to the younger,

Sept. 1. The connective particle, and or then is to be viewed, this completh the present counsel to the precedent state, and experience of former occurrences; ere while they were delivered out of Sodom, were saved in Zoar, and but now for fear of further evil were come to their solitary habitation, where being alone, Satan visit's them and tempt's them unto this great evil. 2. The counsellor by whom Satan works, is the elder sister, she move's first whose example might prevail most. 3. The counselled, which is the younger sister, she that was aptest to follow, to the devils use his methods to deceive, to lead the leader, and bring on the follower.

2. The matter of the consultation, which is twofold. 1. About their Father. Our Father is old. Sept. and Cald. the same. In summe she seem's to speak thus, Sister you see into what a solitary condition we are reduced, hopes once we had, we might have bin the mothers of children but now unless we take a course more then ordinary, our hope must dye, here is our father with us, and a seed of him is more desirable then of other families of the earth, now you know he is old, he declines in life and in strength for generation, if we have any from him it must speedily be attempted, time must not be lost in this. 2. About other men which might be hoped for, to be more fit for this design then he.

And a man is not in the land to come in unto us, according to the way of all the earth.

As is convenient for the whole earth. Sept. According to the custome, Cald. In this passage, she concludeth, there was not any man for whom they might hope; therefore a necessity must be of making use of their Father for their intended event.

Quest. Was there no man upon Earth, or did Lots Daughters believe there was none? H h 3. Answ.

Answ. 1. Surely men were upon the earth, for Zoar was not destroyed.
2. They knew they came from thence, where men were alive.
3. The earth must be taken here for a limited place, as the place about them.
4. They could not be ignorant of their great uncle Abraham and his family who lived not very far off. The scope therefore of all must be, there was not a man of their stock to whom God was known, that the seed might be reckoned from their Father; and they being impatient of delay, conclude it in vain to look for any. To know man as the way of the earth was, is their desire, none is found suitable to their mind, therefore they plead a necessity of using their Father this way.

Quest. But suppose there had not bin a man indeed, doth this make their counsel and practise lawful?

Answ. No by no means, it being a sin against the light of nature: neither doth the instance of Eve taken out of Adam any way favour such a case, though it be presented for that purpose, to make these women wholly innocent in what they did; God made and gave them to each other, but God hath forbidden such knowledge between Fathers and Daughters.

It was therefore doubtless evil counsel given and taken about this matter. ver. 31.
3. The resolve of the elder sister upon these debates, which was to bring their Father into a double sin. 1. Of drunkenness.

Ver. 32.

Come, or so then, let us make our Father to drink wine; — Let us drunken him with wine. Sept. — Cald. to fame. The reason of this resolve must be a former debate, our father will not do this when he is sober and himself; the fact is too odious to motion it to him; therefore to bring about our design we must take away his understanding by wine. 1. The term of incitation, come, let us set about it. 2. The evil determined to make their Father drunk; herein doubtless they dealt also deceitfully, under pretence of his heaviness and sadness, they perswade him to cheer his heart, until they had befuddled him. To inquire how they came by this wine is needless, they themselves might bring it from Zoar with them; the Spirit thinks not fit to set down every circumstance, but wine they had for their purpose. 2. Of unnatural incestuous uncleanness.

And let us lye with him, We will lye with him; — And let us sleep with him. Sept. This is aggravated sin unto the former, to uncover the fathers nakedness, and to make use of him in such a way of uncleanness, when he knew not what he did. Yet this is their resolve by Satans suggestion, the sinful desire of their own flesh, and Gods overruling permission. 4. The end of all consultation and resolution, — And let us quicken, or keep alive a seed from our Father. — And let us raise a seed. Sept. — And we will receive sones from our Father. Cald. The terms are plaine, the drift herein seemeth to be to preserve their Fathers name by a seed on the earth; whereas yet he had no more but themselves.

Quest. Was this the onely end?

Answ. It is onely expressed, and some conceive it to be so, and therefore excuse them from all sin in this project. But it is hard to say that this was all; and that they had no lustful intention at all in it, circumstances cast them guilty.

Quest. But suppose that was their onely end, doth that excuse them from sin?

Answ. No by no means, for though the end may be good, we may not do evil that good may come thereof. Therefore it was sin and grievous sin. ver. 32.

D. 12. A seed to propagate the name of Fathers sometimes puts them upon wicked practises, who profess better both to God and man. V. 32.

2. The next step to this great sin of Lot is the treacherous practise of his daughters. ver. 33. 34. 35. Wherein these particulars occur.

1. Their attempt and execution of the first incestuous act upon the eldest Daughter, where are related, 1. The inebriation of him to bring him to their fowl purpose.

Ver. 33.

And they gave their Father wine to drink in that night. — Sept. and Cald. same. Thus they put the first part of their consultation into execution, it was bad to have in their thoughts to beset their Father, it is worse to act it.

1. The actors are here both daughters; their near relations and united strength make them so prevalent. 2. Their act, They drunken their Father with wine, that is meant, by giving him wine to drink; doubtless by intreaties and glossing arguments they circumvent him, and ply him with wine, to take away not only his sadness but his senses. 3. The time or season of this, in that very night which followed their consultations; sin delayeth not; however it takes the night as fittest for its fowl acts. Secondly. The pollution of him by the eldest.

And the first born came, and lay with her Father. — And the eldest coming slept with her Father that night, Sept. 1. The agent here is single, the first born, she led in counsel, and so she doth in execution. 2. The act, (1) The aggressor to her Fathers bed, too shameful this, (2) The incestuous use of him for deflowring her self. The Sept. repeat the time again, but that need's not. Thirdly. The fascination of him, to keep him from knowing the fact.

And he knew not in her lying down, and in her rising up. — When she lay down, nor when she arose, — In his lying downe, &c. Septu. That is, he was not sensible either of her company or of the fact, but wholly ignorant of what was done. The Sept. is much out here, reading, he knew not in his lying down to sleep, nor in his rising, that is, when he lay down, &c. But that could not be true. The text notes his ignorance either of her aggressor or departure.

Quest. 1. It is questioned, how Lot could be drawn so intemperately to drink who was grieved with such wickedness in Sodom?

Answ. Doubtless the causes of it were, 1. His own corruption remaining.

2. The subtle temptation of his daughters. 3. The secret assistance of Satan. 4. The wile and just permission and ordering of God for his own ends.

Quest. 2. How could Lot be so ignorant of such a fact?

Answ. 1. His stupefaction by wine was much. 2. His fascination by Satan permitted of God, who hideth sinne sometimes from knowledge and remorse. 3. The hand of God was not the least in this, so limiting him for his drunkenness; that after he might see the odiousness of it.

2. The second assault by these daughters followeth, wherein, 1. A new consultation is taken, ver. 34. And therein are, first. The time of it.

And it was on the morrow, or next day Ver. 34.

after, or from the morrow after, — The day following. Cald. Then begin new counsels of the same kind to sin, so the morrow is made as the day before it. Secondly. The precedent example urged.

And the first born said to the younger, behold I lay with my Father the night past, — Sept. and Cald. same. The elder to the younger. 1. The tempter, here the first born or eldest. 2. The tempted, the younger sister. 3. The temptation, her lewd practise leading, which she sets before her as a copy to follow, speaking of it in shameless boasting; as if she had done some notable prank in it, to be imitated. Thirdly. The counsel given, which is in two branches. 1. For inebriation of their father once more.

Let us give him wine to drink also this night, or let us drunken him with wine this night also. — Sept. and Cald. to same.

Sin keeps its method to draw in one by another. 2. For a second pollution of him in incest with the youngest.

And go in, lye with him. — Impudent counsel and horrid from a sister against their own Father. — Sept. and Cald. to same. Fourthly, The reason of it, the same as before.

And we will quicken a seed from our Father, — And we will raise up seed, &c.

Sept. — That we may reserve sones of our Father, Cald. This is their pretended end, to propagate, their Fathers name in their seed, otherwise there were enough in the world by whom they might have borne. The Fathers seed only pleaseth them, which was so much displeasing unto God, that daughters should bear seed to their Fathers. It is a bad excuse which some make from hence for these women.

2. A new execution speedily made of this counsel, ver. 36. Wherein, 1. Their joynt action is recorded.

And they made their Father drink wine in that night also. — Sept. and Cald.

same. Both are still conspiring to beset him; doubtless with inveigling words, and much subtilty, otherwise it is not likely kely that he should so soon be overcome; to return again to this beastly sin. 2. The single action of the youngest.

And the younger arose and lay with him. And the younger going in slept with her Father, Sept. 1. The assailant, the younger. 2. The assault. 1. In preparation, she arose at her appointed season. 2. In execution, she did the same wickedness as the elder before her, even in polluting her Father, and bringing on him a second incestuous act. 3. The fascination of the Father from knowing either person or sin that had bin with him. And he knew not. &c. As before.

Quest. Why should Lot so slowly fall thus twice together?

Anw. The sin of himself, daughters, and Satan being permitted was enough thus to foil him. But the overruling hand of God, took occasion thereby to glorify himself; by the nations to be born, by their enmity to his Church, by calling some of them unto Christ; and by judging the rest who were combined against him. He that can bring good out of evil, may permit and order it as often as he please, and none can hinder.

3. The last particular in the last general of the Chapter, is the sad event of this doubled drunkenness and uncleanness charged on Lot. Which is twofold. 1. An incestuous conception by both his daughters. Ver. 36.

And the two daughters of Lot conceived of their Father. Sept. and Cald. fame. In this first sad event, we have to note.

1. The connection of it to the precedent actions of uncleanness. And then, or thus. That is, immediately upon wickedness committed, God orders the fruit of it to appear; so in wisdom he makes sin come to light.

1. The subject of this bearing, the first born, she first sinned and is first delivered. 2. The act of bearing, she brought forth, without danger or interruption, she had her desired deliverance, as much as heart could wish. 3. The fruit born, a son, such a one as she desired, that might propagate her Fathers name, This was proper to sons. 2. The naming of the birth.

And she called his name Moab. So the Cald. The Septua. adds saying, of my Father, that is, she had him by her Father. In which passage are, 1. The imponent, the party naming, who was doubtless the mother, yet not without the overruling hand of God, ordering her therein. 2. The imposition, she called, that is, put it as a name whereby he was to be called by others. 3. The name itself imposed, Moab, which signifieth from the Father, and that the 70 note to be the reason of the name, because she had him from her owne Father. However it was good as God ordered it, for his own glory, yet it was impudency in her to spread her sin unto all generations even in the name which she giveth to her son.

3. The line of this birth, He the Father of Moab even to this day. He is the Father of the Moabites, &c. Sept. and Cald. That is the usual language with the Hebrewes, Israel, for Israelites, Gen. 34. 7. So Moab for Moabites. The summe of this history is, that this incestuous brat, was the original of a nation most notorious for enmity and persecution of the Church of God, concerning which nation, we have recorded in Scripture, (1) Their original here. (2) Their opposition to Israel Gods Church, Num. 22. (3) Gods care over them notwithstanding, not to dispossesse them, Deut. 2. 9. (4) Gods exclusion of them from his Church, Deut. 23. 3. 2. The birth from the younger sister, or her deliverance is next related. Wherein also are obvious, 1. The subject spoken of, the younger sister, she that followed in sin followed in the issue, starke, Sept. 2. The matter related of her, she bare a son also.

That is she found the same success of her sin as the elder did, God vouchsafeth safe deliverance to her also, and she brings forth a son so much desired, as that she took such a course to have it. Strange is Luthers conjecture that Abraham should direct to the naming of these sons. 3. The nomination of this son also.

And she called his name Ben Ammi, that is, the son of my people, or a son of her own kindred; bearing her sin also in her child's name, it is the son I had by the nearest of my people, even her own Father. No doubt God overruled in this act also for his own glory to be declared upon this issue, Ben Ammi, Sept. 4. The progeny of this son is also added.

He the father of the children of Ammon unto this day. He the Father of the Ammonites unto this day, these dwelt near to Moab and were confederates to oppress Israel the Church of God; they are made notorious in the Prophets, Psa. 83. 7. Of these also we have recorded, (1) Their incestuous original in this place. (2) Gods care of them, Deut. 2. 19. (3) Their enmity against Israel, Amos. 1. 13. (4) Gods excommunication of them. So these wicked people did hold up the name of Lot as his issue, which was the daughters designe, but it was an infamous record of him and his seed. D. 8. The children of Lot, Moab and Ammon are but a sad memorial of their Fathers sin to this day, and of Gods vengeance upon the same in their hardning. Ver. 37. and. 38.

A closing note to this history of Lot may be, The repentance of fallen Saints, though it be not always recorded in Scripture, yet it can not reasonably be doubted or denied. He hath a sweet record given him by Christ and Peter as before.

CHAP. XX.

THe history of Sodoms vengeance threatened and executed, and Lots deliverance, with his sin and progeny, being dispatched, as in a parenthesis. Chap. 18. 16. and Chap. 19. Moses now returneth to the relation of those things which concern the Church in Abraham, to whom God assured the promised seed to arise of Sarah.

In this chapter as in one intire Paragraph is recorded, a memorable trial of Abraham, with his slip and recovery in his sojourning with the Philistines; which giveth us also an account of the place, where the promised seed was born. Unto the narration whereof he proceedeth in the following chapter. The trial here declared is a second endangering of his wife, being taken from him by Abimelech King of Gerar.

About which we have reported.

1. The rapture of her by Abimelech. v. 1. 2. Gods dealing with Abimelech after it. ver. 3. to 7.

3. Abimelech's treating with Abraham and Sarah. ver. 8. to ver. 16.

4. Abraham's prayer for him and Gods healing him. ver. 17. 18.

In the history of her taking away from Abraham we have these particulars. 1. The occasion of it, which was twofold. (1.) Abrahams removal of his habitation from Hebron to Palsina, or from the plaines of Mamre to Gerar, where Abimelech was King. ver. 1. Herein we have to note. 1. His motion thitherward.

And Abraham went from thence to the land Ver. 15 of the South. — And Abraham moved thence to the South. 1. The subject of this motion, Abraham with his family.

2. The terme from whence, his tent in the plaines of Mamre in Hebron, where he entertained the Angels. Ch. 18. 1. 3. The term wherunto, was the fourth bound of the land of Canaan. Gen. 10. 19. Which was the country of the Philistines. 4. The reason of his motion now may be desired, but it is not expressed; conjectures men give, and some vain ones, as that it was for hospitalities sake, as Hebrewes; or forced away by ill neighbours, as others; or by reason of a famine, which is not likely, there being but one such eminent visitation in Abrahams time. Gen. 26. 1. Others conceive the stench of Sodoms plague infected that climate also where Abraham was. None of these are expressed, but doubtless the hand of God and his advertisement was in it, without which Abraham would scarce have moved. Under his providence therefore Abraham journeyeth this way, after about 36 year dwelling in Hebron.

2. His pitching or setting down in the particular place, described.

And he sat down between Kadesh, and between Shur, and he sojourned in Gerar. — And he dwelt, &c. Among the Gerarites. Sept. — And he dwelt between Recz and Agara Cald. Here we have related.

1. The end of his motion, He sat down, that is, pitched his habitation, between two eminent wildernesses, Kadesh and Shur, which afterward is called Beerseba Gen. 22. 19. Gen. 16. 7. 14. 2. The stay which he makes there, He sojourned in Gerar, that is, he spent time there and lived among them: here Isaac was born, and here Abraham lived with Isaac 25 years. This Gerar was the name both of a city which was a Metropolis and country also. It is noted to be a Kingdom by itself distinct from the five principalities of the Philistines. ym. Here Abraham came to live, which was the occasion of that which followeth. (2.) The next occasion was Abrahams concealing of Sarah to be his wife.

And Abraham said to Sarah, or of Sarah ours read, (but it seem's rather that he said to her, or added to what she said) my Sister is she. — And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, that she is my Sister. Sept. and Cald. This act however excused by some, yet doubtless was an effect of Abrahams weakness, and the greater, because he had former experience of Gods saving of him when he was in a like case afraid, and however he spake truth in part; yet he concealed that which might have brought upon his wife a great evil, especially at this time, when that very year God had assured him of the birth of the promised seed by her. This error of Abraham becometh a stumbling block unto Abimelech, (Sept.) for he feared to say she is my wife lest the men of the city should kill him for her.

2. The act endangering Sarah hereupon. And Abimelech King of Gerar sent and took Sarah. — Sept. and Cald. same

1. His mission, he sent his messengers upon his lustful errand. 2. His rapture, he took her into his possession for his lustful use. So the poor lamb is become a prey in the pawes of the lion, untill God deliver her. — If question be made, how Sarah was so beautiful; as to draw the hearts of men at such an age, even now being near ninety years old. It is answered. 1. Nature might keep more than usual strength and beauty then. 2. God who made her now fruitful could preserve her outward beauty: and doubtless did so.

2. Gods dealing with Abimelech, and their intercourse about this rapture of Sarah, wherein note these particulars.

1. Gods menacing charge on Abimelech, ver. 3. 2. Abimelechs apology for himself, ver. 4. 5. 3. Gods acceptance of his plea and direction, ver. 6. 7.

The first of these in ver. 3. Hath these particulars. 1. Gods accesse unto him. And Elohim came to Abimelech in a dream of the night. — Entred in by night. Septuagint. — And the word from the face of God came to Abimelech in a vision of the night. Cald.

Wherein, 1. The subject moving, Elohim, the almighty God, he followeth Sarah into her hold, to meet with him that took her and plead with him. He that keepeth his slumbereth not. 2. The term of motion, Abimelech, he though a king, who had done the wrong, no might of kings can keep of God. 3. The motion itself, he came to him, that is, drew nigh by way of discovery and apparition to him. As a man cometh to parly or speak with man, so after the manner of men it is spoken of God. 4. The manner of his approach, In a dream of the night. This was one way of Gods appearance to creatures to make known his will at that time; which we have mentioned in several places. Gen. 31. 10. Gen. 37. 5. Numb. 12. 6. 1 Sam. 28. 6. (1) The way of appearing is here noted. (2) The season, it was a dream, and it was by night. For we shal find sometimes such dreams in the day, as were trances and visions, and extasies wherein God spake. Acts. 10. 10. And more frequently in the night as here to Abimelech, and in 1 Kings. 3. 5. &c. But about this way of Gods discovery are some Queries to be resolved.

Quest. 1. What kind of dream was this here mentioned?

Ans. Dreams are two sorts. 1. Natural, which are apparitions of things in the phansy arising either from the temper of the body or from multitude of business running in the thoughts. 2. Supernatural, which are sent from without either by God himself, 1 Kin. 3. 5. or by an angel as to Joseph. Math. 1. 20. or upon Gods permission for trial, by Satan, as to Job. Ch. 7. 14. Now these have bin either aenigmatical, by vision of figures and representations, as to Pharaoh, Gen. 41. 1. And to Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 2. 1. or exegetical, declaring his mind plainly unto creatures, without a parable, as in this place and others, as Solomon, &c.

Quest. 2. How are supernatural from God distinguished from such dreams as are onely natural?

Ans. 1. By the matter of them, those from God are good, others but vanity.

2. By the form of them, they come with Gods image and impression on them, which sheweth the will of God, so it was to Salomon, &c. But these, have no other but the form of flesh.

3. By the effect of them, they move the soul and trouble it, until Gods mind be effected by them, so here in Abimelech, &c. As to the subject of these dreams we see God hath vouchsafed them to wicked men sometimes for his Churches sake as Pharaoh and Nebuchadnezzar, however usually he hath thus spoken to his Saints. Num. 12. 6.

Quest. 3. Are such dreams to be expected now?

Ans. 1. By the matter of them, those from God are good, others but vanity.

2. By the form of them, they come with Gods image and impression on them, which sheweth the will of God, so it was to Salomon, &c. But these, have no other but the form of flesh.

3. By the effect of them, they move the soul and trouble it, until Gods mind be effected by them, so here in Abimelech, &c. Num. 12. 6.

Ans. 1. By the matter of them, those from God are good, others but vanity.

2. By the form of them, they come with Gods image and impression on them, which sheweth the will of God, so it was to Salomon, &c. But these, have no other but the form of flesh.

3. By the effect of them, they move the soul and trouble it, until Gods mind be effected by them, so here in Abimelech, &c. As to the subject of these dreams we see God hath vouchsafed them to wicked men sometimes for his Churches sake as Pharaoh and Nebuchadnezzar, however usually he hath thus spoken to his Saints. 2. By the form of them, they come with Gods image and impression on them, which sheweth the will of God, so it was to Salomon, &c. But these, have no other but the form of flesh.

Num. 12. 6.

Ans. 1. As to understand the mind of God unto salvation, all the various wayes of Gods appearance are now conformed in his revelation by his own son, therefore none to be expected beside the discovery of himself, and his will in Christ, either for predication or doctrine. 2. Yet holy dreams may now be afforded, that may tend to personal comfort and confirmation of the way of truth. 3. Gods charge and sentence on him threatened.

And he said, behold thou art dead. — Thou dyest. Sept. — Thou shalt dye. Cald. 1. The judge is God, the most high, irresistible. 2. The guilty threatened, Abimelech, the king. 3. The sentence, death by sudden execution, onely conditionally pronounced, unless he repent, and return what he hath taken away. Ezek. 33. 14. 15. 3. Gods reason of charging and sentencing Abimelech.

For the woman which thou hast taken and she married to an husband. — Yet she cohabits with an husband. Sept. — For she is the wife of an husband. Cald. — In this is the crime judged. Which was violence thus far offered to an innocent party. More punctually is it aggravated. 1. From the person, it was a woman, Sarah, who was under special Covenant with God also, for her sake God make's inquiry. 2. From her relation, she was a wife married unto another man; and therein violence done to her, was to her husband. 3. From the act of violence, he took her away, upon his owne prerogative, not regarding any wrong to others. Hereupon God telleth him, thou art a dead man, that is, thou shalt surely dye for this, except thou repent.

2. Now followeth Abimelechs apology for himself, ver. 4. 5. Wherein these particulars occur. 1. A denial of the fowler fact, which was intended in taking her away.

But Abimelech had not come near unto her, Ver. 4. — Had not touched her. — Came not unto her. Cald. Herein two things are denied. 1. Expressly, Abimelechs act, he proceeded not to the foul sin intended, so he was not yet guilty of actual violation of the marriage law. 2. Consequentially, Sarahs pollution is denied, that however God put her upon this trial for her folly, yet he bring's her out again chaste and undefiled. If question be, how Abimelech was kept from her? It is probable not from his own disposition, who took her away to defile her, but by the hand of God upon him in some distemper, or disease suddenly inflicted on him. However he was kept from actual uncleanness and that by God himself. Ver. 6. Secondly, His defence, of what he had done, wherein, 1. He deprecates by appeal unto God the vengeance feared to fall upon him and his, from the foregoing threat.

And he said, Lord, wilt thou also kill a righteous nation? — Lord thou wilt not kill an ignorant and righteous nation. Sept. Herein are, 1. The object of his appeal, God who threatened him, he acknowledged his dominion over himself, Lord. 2. The manner of his appeal, by an expostulating deprecation, wilt thou slay? Do not Lord, or thou wilt not Lord, though it be in thy hand to destroy; 3. The subject for whom he appealeth, it is a nation, himself and people, in his family and territories, for it seemeth some tokens of displeasure were gon out upon them from God. 4. The ground of this appeal, their righteousness, wilt thou kill a righteous nation?

Quest. But how could they be righteous among whom Abraham observed there was no fear of God apparent?

Ans. Doubtless this cannot be said generally, with respect unto conformity to Gods Law: but onely in this particular fact concerning Sarah.

In this matter they were innocent. ver. 4. — 2. He makes proof of his innocency by two witnesses, and those the same whom this evil concerned. 1. From the mouth of Abraham.

Did not he say to me, she is my sister? — Ver. 5. Sept. and Cald. same. Doubtless he did say so, and no more, but concealed her to be his wife; the occasion of this rapture.

2. From the mouth of Sarah. And she also she said, he is my Brother. Sept. and Cald. same. So she confirmed Abrahams concealment and deceit, whereby she and others might have bin intangled in much sin. By these two witnesses he clearth himself, that he intended not not to defile another mans wife, and so transfer the fault on them.

2. He asserts his integrity to God.

In the perfection of my heart, and cleanness of my hands, I have done this. — In a pure heart, and righteousness of hands I have done this. Sept. — In uprightness of my heart, &c. Cald. 1. He confesseth the fact, he had taken away Sarah I did it, is his own word. 2. He mitigates it by the modification, I did it not to corrupt a mans wife with such lustful and injurious intentions, but in the perfection, sincerity, and integrity of heart, and innocency of my hands as to such an end. So we have his defense made. ver. 5.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Gods threats do bound the lusts of men to keep them from greater sin, and his Saints from greater wrong and danger.

D. 2. It is some ground of appeal from men to God, that they have not proceeded to the highest of sin.

D. 3. Gods menaces bring Kings to their appeals, and humble deprecations of evil and death.

D. 4. Personal righteousness and innocency of fact may be pleaded, by such as are polluted by nature. Ver. 4.

D. 5. The slips of the Saints may be occasions unto the wicked to sin.

D. 6. The wicked transgressions are justified in such cases by the mouths of the godly.

D. 7. The heart and hand of men though naturally corrupt may be sincere and clean in point of fact.

D. 8. Confession of sin with this mitigation of innocency and uncorrupt intents, lessens sin something in the sight of God. V. 5.

3. Gods entertainment of this plea and reply unto Abimelech now followeth. ver. 6. 7. Wherein are observable. 1. The manner of his reply, it was by dream —

And the mighty God spake to him in a dream. Sept. and Cald. same. The descension of God is eminent here also, in swooping unto man to give him answer, and that in peace. The manner of his appearing by dream was opened at ver. 3. 2. The matter of his reply, whereof are these heads. 1. Gods approbation of his plea. I also know that in the perfection of thy heart thou hast done this. — In a pure heart, Sept. — In rectitude of heart. Cald. Gods act here expressed, is known, ledg, under which is carried science and indulgence; the object was Abimelechs action with the manner of it. That he did it, and that he did it, not with such a wicked intent toward a mans wife, but as to that, in ignorance and so in simplicity of heart and innocency of hands. So far God approveth it and proceeds not to vengeance. 2. Gods restriction of him upon that account from doing greater evil;

And I also withheld thee from sinning against me, therefore I gave thee not to touch her. — And I spared thee that thou shouldst not sin against me. Sept. — And I prohibited thee also, least thou shouldst sin before me, therefore I suffered thee not to come near her. Cald. Two acts of restraint here are from God upon Abimelech. 1. He kept him back from sinning against himself, so God accounts, when any Law of his is broken that himself is abused. 2. He hindered him from sinning further against Sarah, he did not give him up to defile her, nor her to be defiled by him: That was fully in his hand to let out corruption, or to keep it in, ver. 6. 3. Gods direction to Abimelech in the way to seek his peace, ver. 7. Wherein we have, 1. The counsel of direction itself.

And now make to return the wife of the man Ver. 7.

Now restore the wife to the man. Sept. and Cald. The summe is, as God had kept him from defiling Sarah, so now he chargeth him to restore her untouched and deliver her into her husbands hand. Restitution and reformation God will have in this case, without which Abimelechs confession is vain. 2. The motives unto obedience hereunto, which are two. 1. The benefit of obeying, expressed. 1. In the state of the man Abraham, to whom he was to restore, — For he is a Prophet: So Sept. and Cald. that is, 1. Gods anointed. (2) Gods friend and acquaintance to whom the Lord maketh known his mind. (3) Gods officer to deal from him to men and from men to him. 2. In the work of this Prophet.

And he shall pray for thee. So Sept. and Cald. That is, powre out his soule to God by intercession for thee and thy house, to get healing and blessing from Heaven on thee and thine; by that means I am resolved onely to grant it. 3. In the good effect of his prayer, And live thou, or thou shalt live with thine house. — Thou shalt live. Sept. and Cald. Life here carrieth the cure of present evils as afterward expressed and the continuance of life with the comforts of it unto him and his.

2. The evil of disobedience. And if thou make her not to return know, that dying thou shalt dy, thou and all in thine, or to thee belonging. — That thou shalt die and all thine. Sept. — Cald.

as Hebr. Wherein we have. 1. Disobedience supposed. If thou restore not. 2. Penalty threatened. 1. In kind, Death. 2. In certainty know that dying thou shalt die. 3. In extent, thou and all thine.

Quest. Doth God in this acceptance of Abimelechs plea, justify his person or accept him as truly righteous?

Ans. Some think he was now converted, but that is not expreſs in the history. It must be left to charity. 2. It is evident onely in the text that God approveth his action alone in this matter, so God hath commended actions of wicked men, and yet never accepted their persons, as in Fe-hu, &c. It is safest keeping to the letter, ver. 7.

Several truths are here to be learned.

- D. 1. God disdaine's not to answer the just plea of transgressors in a way suitable for them.
- D. 2. God is the onely heart-knower, as he is the heart-searcher.
- D. 3. God knoweth and approveth natural sincerity in mens Spirits, much more spiritual. Pro. 21. ver. 2.
- D. 4. Sinnes against our neighbour are against God, Because against Gods law.
- D. 5. God restrains sometimes powerful and violent sinners from excess in sin; by intimation and correction. Pro. 21. 1.
- D. 6. God in whose hand it is to give up to sin, doth yet with hold transgressors from injuring his Saints. The mother of the promised seed is kept undefiled. Ver. 6.
- D. 7. Restitution of right and reformation must be acted where God spareth offenders. Lev. 6. 4.
- D. 8. Gods friends and Saints are his Prophets, his anointed, his dea. ones. Psa 105. 15.
- D. 9. Such Prophets of God are notable for praying and prevailing with God. Jer. 27. 18.
- D. 10. The prayers of Gods Prophets or holy ones, give life to sinners. A good cure of the kings evil. 1 King. 13. 6.

D. 11. As obedience hath life so disobedience brings surely death upon sinners.

D. 12. Exemplary sinnes of heads and rulers bring destruction upon them and theirs, Ver. 7.

3. The next general head is Abimelechs carriage after Gods intimation unto him, which respects three parties, 1. His owne people, ver. 8. 2. Abraham, ver. 9. to 15. 3. Sarah, ver. 16. First, as for his carriage to his own, and their resentment of his narration, it is in the eighth verse; wherein we have to observe, 1. Abimelechs deportment, whereof three things are related; 1. His early rising, after Gods appearance in the dreams of the night.

And Abimelech morning'd it, or rose early, and prepared himself timely in the morning. Sept. same. Abimelech arise. The connection of this to Gods warning sheweth the efficacy of Gods manifestation, kings cannot rest in their beds, when God pleads with them; whether this early motion were from grace and the love of God, as some do judge it the fruit of true repentance, or whether it were for fear of the judgment threatened, I will not dispute; which way soever, it appeareth, 1. That Gods word made a deep impression in him. 2. His readines and early preparation to do Gods will. Fear of judgment may make a man to do so much as to the outward act, therefore that is no such clear evidence of a sound change, yet it may shame the backwardness of many in the Church who make no haste to keep Gods commands.

2. His convocation of his people and servants, who likely had bin accessory unto this violence so far offered unto Sarah.

And he called all his servants. Sept. and Cald. same. 1. His act of calling carrieth in it an earnestness of Spirit to publish to others, what he had received from God, and to communicate counsel and threatening which he had received also. 2. The object called on; all his servants, God was pleased to make him a messenger of his mind unto the rest, whom it seemeth he had smitten for their consent in evil, through their wives as he had done in Abimelechs family, ver. 17. Self ends might also put him upon this.

3. His report unto them.

And he spake at those words in their ears. According to all these words, &c. Sept. Before them. Cald. Surely all this was moved by Gods appearance, the terror of which would not suffer him to sleep, and when he was up and had called about him his servants, he acquaints them with all passages from God to

Ver. 8.

to him. 1. The way of discovery was by speech, 2. The matter was all fully which God had revealed to him. 3. The evidence of his discovery. It was in their ears, or in their presence and before them. Secondly. The servants resentment of all this is here set down.

And the men feared greatly, Sept. and Cald. to the same. 1. The subject here spoken of, is, the men, the miserable men, as the word import's, the same servants whom Abimelech called, and who were in measure guilty with him. 2. The affection here attributed is fear, that which is raised up from evil foretold to any. 3. The measure of it, it was very great and superlative. Whether it were any more then slavish, I think need not be doubted. And whether Abimelechs were of any better kind seem's very disputable.

2. Abimelechs carriage hereupon to Abraham, wherein we have to consider. 1. Abimelechs summons and charge unto Abraham, ver. 9. 10. 2. Abrahams apologie in way of answer, ver. 11. 12. 13. 3. Abimelechs return in kind intreaties, ver. 14. 15. In the first these particulars occur. 1. Abimelechs summons to Abraham.

And Abimelech called to Abraham, Or called Abraham Sept. That is, he sent for him to parly with him about his concealment of his wife, &c. And with purpose to restore her to him as God commanded.

2. Abimelechs charge laid on Abraham, 1. By way of expostulation wherein he complaineth of him in two things. 1. That he had brought these Gods menaces and judgments on his house and people.

And he said, what hast thou done unto us? Why hast thou done this unto me? Sept. Wherein, 1. The matter of the charge, Abraham thou hast bin the cause of Gods threatening, and afflicting me and mine, by thy dissembling, when I asked thee. 2. The manner sets it out more fully, it is by a passionate question, O Abraham what hast thou done unto us? As a man struck with the apprehension of evil threatened, he complaineth very bitterly and feelingly. 2. That he had done this causelessly.

And what have I sinned against thee, that thou hast made to come upon me and my Kingdom a great sin? Because thou hast done a great sin, &c. Sept. Here, 1. The crime charged, thou hast brought a great sin, thou hast bin the cause of the rapture of thy wife, and mightest have bin of her pollution. 2. The extent of it, Thou hast brought guilt upon me and my kingdom, and not of a small but a great transgression, that might have pulled downe vengeance from God to the uttermost. So uncleanness is judged by Abimelech. 3. The causelesse of this. did I at all injure thee, or offend thee that thou shouldst bring all this evil upon us?

2. By positive crimination, avouching his offence.

Works which should not be done thou hast done with me, A work which none hath done, hast thou done to me. Sept. Works which are not fit to be done, &c. Cald. Here. 1. The crime, Things which should not be done, that is evill works against Gods law, a dissembling, exposing his wife to pollution, laying stumbling blocs in others way to make them sin. 2. The object against whom, thou hast done this to me, who have kindly intreated thee, and have not offended thee; and thou hast thus rewarded me to draw me into this great sin. ver. 9. 3. Abimelechs urgency upon Abraham to shew cause of these his dealings toward them, or els to acknowledge and be ashamed. Herein, 1. His instancy thereon.

And Abimelech said to Abraham. Again and again. 2. His demand of satisfaction in the reason of his doing, which concern's every man to give.

What sawest thou, that thou hast done this thing? What looking upon, hast thou done this? Sept. Herein, 1. He chargeth Abraham, that he had done this thing, or this word by which he dissembled and concealed Sarah to be his wife, and thereby gave him an occasion of sinning grievously. 2. He giveth him liberty to plead for himself, What sawest thou? Or what came into thy heart that thou shouldst do thus? Speak, if thou hast any thing to say. So he dealeth in moderation with him.

2. Abrahams reply by way of Apology now follow's, ver. 11. 12. 13. Wherein we have to note. 1. The reason rendred for his concealment of his wife. ver. 11. Which was his fearful suspicion of two things concerning this place of his sojourning. 1. Their regardlesness of God.

Ver. 12. And Abraham said, because I said, only the want of fear of God is in this place.

Sure there is no worshipping of God in this place, Sept. destituta. 1. The replier here is Abraham, making use of his liberty to answer for himself as he was required.

2. The reply, which is the first apologetical reason of his fact, I have done this faith Abraham even made this concealment, from mine own jealousie, and feare, for I said within my owne reasonings, there is onely the want or denial of the fear of God in this place; onely not feare of God in this place; the Sept. read, no worshipping of God; or calling on his name; and hereupon I concluded, where God was not regarded, I could not be secure. This first put me upon it.

2. The next reason of his fact, is their cruelty suspected unto men, especially professing God. And they will kill me upon this word of my wife. For my wives sake. Sept. and Cald. Here he discover's his jealousie and fear of hurt to himself was the cause of his concealment, not any hurt to come upon Abimelech and his; but such jealous imaginations were within him, impiety and cruelty dwell together, and if I speak but a word of my wife, these wicked men will kill me to enjoy her. It seemeth such practices had bin, otherwise Abraham needed not fear of such cruelty to be first used against him.

His Apology is further carried on by an explication of his concealment, that it was not altogether untrue. ver. 12.

Wherein we have.

1. His assertion.

And in truth, or yet truly she is my sister, and therefore in soe calling her, I did not speak untrue. 2. His explication.

She is the Daughter of my Father, but not the Daughter of my Mother.

Quest.

Quest. But how was Sarah Abrahams Sister?

Ans. 1. By his Fathers side, not the Mothers, so he saith expressly, yet this hath a special signification. 2. It is not therefore to be understood, that she was Terahs own Daughter by another wife, as some have thought, but Harans Daughter the Son of Terah who was born of Terahs second wife. So Terah was her Grandfather, and her Father dying before Terah, she is reckoned as Daughter unto Terah, and so Abraham meanes in this expression. Gen. 11. 28. 29. At this time such marriages were not forbidden. Quest. Doth this excuse Abraham from all fault, though she was his Sister? Ans. Surely no, for though the words had truth in them, yet they were used to deceive, and were an occasion of evill, both to Abimelech and Sarah; therefore not wholly excusable.

3. His confession of what was concealed.

And was to me for a wife. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Now he acknowledgeth what he had concealed, she became my wife, and she indeed is my wife also. As there was no law then revealed against such marriages and therefore it was not condemned; now there is Gods law against it, and therefore not to be imitated or commended, ver. 12. 4. His injunction on his wife, to do thus for him to conceal him in all places, therefore not intended to bring mischief on Abimelech or Gerar. Here we have to consider.

1. The occasion of this injunction. And it was when Elohim made me erre from my Fathers house. And it came to pass, when God led me out my fathers house Sept. -- and it came to pass, when peoples wandred after the works of their own hands, the Lord applied me unto his fear, out of my Fathers house, Cald.

The occasion in general was his pilgrimage up and down in the earth, about which are given, The author of the motion, Elohim, which is read by some, God, and by others angels, a reason whereof is given, because the verb is plural here; and when Elohim signifieth God it hath a verb singular, Cald. All may be reconciled, for God is the author principally, and angels instrumentally, being commanded by God. 2. The terms of motion, from his Fathers house in Ur of the Caldees to any strange place in his journey. 3. The motion, erring, wandring, moving from place to place. It was a pilgrims course which he took here below, accounting himself a stranger. Secondly. The injunction laid on her. Wherein. 1. The person injoyning, And I said to her, even Abraham her husband and Lord.

2. The periwative to enforce it. This the goodness, kindness or mercy, which thou shalt do for me. Righteousness for me. Sept. He layeth this charge upon his wife, as desiring it as the greatest favour and act of loyalty to him. 3. The injunction itself.

Ver. 12.

At every place where we shall come, there say to me, or of me, he is my brother. Sept. and Cald. to the same. 1. The extent of the injunction, all strange places which were peopled, unto which they might come, so it was no particular deligne upon Gerar. 2. The injunction itself on Sarah, that she should conceal him. Say of me he is my brother, so in his own policy he provides for his own safety, without consulting with God. Yet thus he stayeth Abimelechs displeasure, informing him, that he had done no more, but what also was acted in other places. Ver. 13.

Quest. Did Abraham well in this injunction laid upon his wife?

Ans. Surely no, it cannot be defended to be a lawful act to conceal any truth for deceiving another, and to give occasion unto others also to sin. It sheweth here some weakness in Abrahams faith.

Learn from it.

- D. 1. Truth may be spoken in that which may be designed to deceive.
- D. 2. Truth is to be spoken plainly, that it may not deceive others.
- D. 3. Relation marriages have bin neerer, which are now unlawful. Ver. 12.
- D. 4. God make's his choicest Saints Pilgrims here below.
- D. 5. Saints pilgrimage is an occasion sometime of using carnal policy.
- D. 6. Evil, under the name of kindness, may be desired of Gods own from their friends. It is their infirmity.
- D. 7. Every place of the Saints sojourning may prove the place of its temptations.
- D. 8. Superiour relations in Saints may sometimes miscarry, injoyning that, which the Lord commands not. Ver. 13.

3. The next thing in Abimelechs carriage unto Abraham, is his kind intreating him (after this apologie,) in three particulars.

1. His liberal donation to him, And Abimelech took, &c. Ver. 14. Cald. same. A thousand didrachmes. Sept. In the terme, which contain the doner, the gift, and the receiver, there is no difficulty; onely the expression of one sheep for a flock, and one oxe for an herd is figurative. Some queries may be about this giving and receiving.

K k

Quest. 1.

Quest. 1. Was it lawful to give men-servants and maid-servants as a man gives sheep and oxen?

Ans. Surely no, neither is it here to be conceived, that they were given in the same manner, but with the consent of the persons, passing out of the power of one Lord unto another. However there was a judgment on nations in those times to make bondmen, to buy, and sell, and give, and receive them.

Quest. 2. Why did Abimelech give these to Abraham?

Ans. Probably it might be upon these accounts. 1. With reference to the violence formerly done, in some measure to allay the bitterness of it. 2. It might be upon intimation that he was a Prophet to honour him. 3. To express also munificence and liberality unto him. These might persuade it.

2. His restitution.

And he made to return to him Sarah his wife. And he delivered to him, &c. Sept. and Cald. Herein he obeyeth Gods word, ver. 7. And provides for his own healing and safety. Ver. 14.

3. His commission to Abraham for liberty of habitation under his protection. And Abimelech said, behold my land is before thee, in that which is good in thine eyes, sit down. Dwell where it please thee. Sept. and Cald. to same.

Wherein, he grant's him.

1. Liberty for choice of habitation, here is great humanity.

2. Quietness of habitation, that he should sit down with his family without disturbance and in safety, Ver. 15.

Learn.

D. 1. God over-ruling in men, violence is turned to munificence and large benevolence to his own.

D. 2. Nature itself, under Gods power, makes restitution of raptnes for it's own preservation. Ver. 14.

D. 3. God can make oppressors, to be protectors to his people.

D. 4. God sometimes giveth quietest habitations to his Saints among their enemies.

D. 5. The Prophets and men of God are desirable inhabitants in the land of strangers. Ver. 15.

3. The last carriage of Abimelech after Gods warning, which is here noted, is toward Sarah, ver. 16.

Wherein we have to note.

1. The special item which he give th her, twofold. 1. Concerning his dealing with Abraham.

And he said to Sarah, behold I have given a thousand shekels of silver, or silverlings unto thy brother. A thousand didrachmes. Sept. A thousand shekels of silver, Cald.

Herein some terms are to be opened.

1. The parties concerned herein. Abimelech pagan, speak's as followeth unto Sarah a professed beleever, he that was deceived by her, who by concealment of her relation had offended him.

2. His speech unto her, wherein. 1. A term of advertisement, Behold, as calling her to special observation, Sarah takes notice of this. 2. The matter declared, which was in summe his gift to Abraham, himself was the doner, the gift, a thousand silverlings, the number is clear; but the weight and price of the silver disputed; yet by comparing Scriptures, and noting this use among the Hebrews, that where silver is expressed alone and not the price, shekels are understood. Num. 7. 13. 85. So when shekels are named and the metal not expressed, silver is understood, and no other metal. Exod. 30. 13. 15. Compared with Exod. 38. 25. 26. The Greek didrachmes is read for shekels also. Gen. 23. 15. 16. And the Cald. readeth shekels of silver expressly, which must be meant of the common shekel, which is conceived to be of the value of our shilling or 14. pound, but because coines were various in former and latter times, it is not punctually to be determined. It is enough to conceive it was a gift befitting the King of Gerar to Gods Prophet. The last term here to be noted is, the subject to whom this was given, to thy Brother, that is, as thou hast sinned him to me, wherein he hinteth her fault, in her concealment of her husband; to him and not to thee have I given this. It is conceived by some to clear her from suspicion of having the hire of an harlot; but more probably it was to note Abraham her head, from whom she was to expect all her alimony.

2. Concerning her duty to Abraham. Behold he to thee is a covering of eyes, to all which are with thee and to all that is strangers.

These shall be for an honour of thy face, and for all women with thee. Sept.

Behold that is to thee a vail of honor, because I sent to take thee away, and have seen thee, and all things which are with thee, and over all which thou hast spoken. Cald. Much trouble is made about the sense of this, by reason of the relative, (וְהָיָה) Which by some is referred to Abraham, and properly, is being a masculine; others to the silver spoken of which is a feminine, and therefore improperly. Those of the latter sort, say, that the silver was to get her a vail, to note her subjection to her husband, and hide hide her from all else, but laying aside that, the plain sense will appear by referring it to Abraham; and then, Abimelech minds her, Behold Sarah, look upon Abraham, whom thou calledst thy brother he is thy husband, and therefore a covering or vail to thee of thine eyes, that is, to terminate all thy sight or desire, that thou look not beside him, to any with thee in the family nor to any other: dissemble not any more, nor cast away this vail.

Secondly. The special use unto which this item was given, and that was reproof, mild indeed, but closely applied unto her.

And she was reproved, or thus she was rebuked or checked. It must cause blushing for an holy woman to be thus justly corrected by a stranger from Gods Church. It is read by the Seventy, And in all things dealt truly. And bethow reproved. Cald. Whether this were spoken by Abimelech, or related by Moses, that it was her reproof, it altereth not the matter.

Learn from it.

D. 1. God turneth lust sometimes into increption; or by his checks maketh lustful sinners turne reproovers.

D. 2. Sinners are sometimes made reproovers to the Saints.

D. 3. Saints should take notice of their offence to sinners, as the turning of their hearts toward them for good.

D. 4. Nature teacheth, husbands are coverings to wives eyes to terminate their desires.

D. 5. Holy women may need sometimes to be remembered of their vail or duty.

D. 6. Incitation unto duty may be a full reproof for the neglect of it. Ver. 16.

4. The last head of this chapter is Abrahams return unto Abimelech, in praying to God for him, with the success of the same. ver. 17. 18. Where we have reported unto us. 1. Abrahams act to God in his behalf.

Ver. 17.

And Abraham prayed unto Elohim. Sept. same. Before God. Cald. 1. The intercessor was Gods favorite Abraham. 2. The matter of his prayer, doubtless it was Abimelechs healing, &c. 3. The manner also is implied, which was in faith. 4. The object was the only true GOD. Afterward called the God of Abraham.

2. The effect of prayer in a gracious return from God. 1. By healing Abimelech, who doubtless was smitten in his body, which required this healing; as for the terrors on his mind he had ease before. 2. His wife and maid servants were healed also from the evil befallen them, expressed in the next verse. And the fruit of this healing, that they brought forth children; so is it said, and God healed Abimelech, & his wife, and is maid servants & they bare children. The Seventy read, beasts also. And they were refreshed. Cald.

Thirdly. The occasion of this prayer and healing, which was Gods judgment upon Abimelech and his house, wherein. 1. The punishment itself not before related.

For Jehovah shutting shut up over every womb of the house of Abimelech. Shut outwardly. Sept. Every opening of the womb, &c. Cald.

1. The inflictor is here reported Jehovah himself, he that onely shut's and open's. 2. The evil inflicted, shutting up of wombs, of which. 1. The nature is inquired what was it? Some conceive it, the first shutting against conception, but that is unlikely, seeing it could not appear in so short a time, for which reason, some think, that this is related by way of anticipation, some time before it was acted; but that cannot be demonstrated. Others conceive it a shutting up of their wombs, who were ready to bring forth and could not, because upon Gods healing, immediately they brought forth as in the former verse, the Jewish Rabbins say that God had shut up these passages of nature both in men and women so that they were in great pain; for Abimelech was healed as well as his wife. However, it seemeth to be a present, visible, and notorious judgment, upon the house of Abimelech; which though unknown, weaken's not faith in the truth reported. 2. The cause provoking this punishment.

For the matter of Sarah Abrahams wife. Sept. and Cald. to same. The rapture of Sarah is the sin here described. Which pulled downe present vengeance on them.

It learneth us.

D. 1. As God is author of all healing, so prayer is the way of obtaining it.

D. 2. It is an honorable thing for parties injured to pray for those who have done them wrong.

D. 3. Gods accepted ones, as Abraham, are his praying ones.

D. 4. Gods gracious answer followeth his Saints prayers.

D. 5.

D. 5. God sometimes punisheth sin upon the very place.

D. 6. Gods answers of love, make's fruitful. Ver. 17.

D. 7. God will regard the state of his owne, to plague the world for offences to them. V. 18.

CHAP. XXI.

IN this Chapter Moses returneth to the History of the Church, and of the bringing forth the promised seed, by whome the blessing should come upon the nations, which was broken of at the 16 verse of the 18th Chapter, where we had the last exhibition of the promise by God to Abraham, now followeth the history of it's performance.

In the whole Chapter are these three generally.

1. The history of the promised seed from it's conception to it's weaning. Ver. 1. to Ver. 8.

2. The ejection of the bond woman's seed out of the Church. Ver. 9. to Ver. 21.

3. The league of friendship between Abraham and Abimelech. Ver. 22. to 34.

In the former general are these particulars.

1. Gods performance of his promise, Ver. 1. 2.

2. Abrahams obedience in doing Gods will, Ver. 3. 4. 5.

3. Sarahs acknowledgment to God, ver. 6. 7.

4. Isaac's weaning. Ver. 8.

The first of these which is the history of Gods performing his promise comprehends these particulars.

1. Gods visitation of Sarah. ——— And Jehovah visited Sarah as he had said. ——— Sept. same. ——— The Lord remembered Sarah. Cald. Herein.

1. The visitor, Jehovah, the eternal & almighty, the highest God, the lofty one.

2. The visited, Sarah, poor Sarah his handmaid, in her low condition both of sin and exile.

3. The visitation itself, which carried in it Gods mindfulness of her, providence over her, appearance unto her, in his mercy, and love, to perform the good promised. God is said to visit two ways. 1. In mercy, as in this place and Gen. 50. 24. Exod. 4. 31. Luke. 1. 68. 2. In judgment, Exod. 20. 5. &c. Exod. 32. 34. Here God visits Sarah in love, to make her glad. 4. The rule of Gods visitation, according as God had said. Gods word of truth is the rule of all his performance, even as he had said many years before, Gen. 15. 4. Gen. 17. 19. And but the last year, when he came to destroy Sodom, Gen. 18. 10. 14.

2. Gods execution and fulfilling of his word, ——— And Jehovah did to Sarah as he had spoken, ——— And the Lord made Sarah as he had spoken. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Herein. 1. The agent, the same Jehovah in his power. 2. The patient, the same Sarah, 3. The act, he did to her, or he made her, that is, able to conceive and bear, though her womb was dead as to that office. Rom. 4. 19. So he had promised, and so he did revive nature after it was dead. 4. The rule repeated of his acting as well as visiting, according to that which he had spoken. That was, that Sarah should bear a son Gen. 18. 10. 14.

Not a title of Gods word faileth, but he fully bringeth it to pass. This is doubled, he visits according to his word, and acts according to his word; Gods truth is dear to him, none shall find him failing. Ver. 1.

3. The effect of both in Sarahs conception and bearing & bringing forth. ——— And Sarah conceived, and bare to Abraham a son. ——— And conceiving she brought forth, &c. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. The particle connecting, is rendered rationally, for Sarah conceived, which was a demonstration that God had visited her and done for her according to his word. Herein. 1. The subject spoken of, Sarah, visited and ordered by God, and now believing in him, for by faith she received strength and virtue prolifick for this work. Heb. 11. 11.

2. The effect wrought upon her twofold. 1. Conception, and the forming of the fruit in the womb. Which never she had received before, and now aged 90 years.

2. Bearing, and bringing forth, she travelled and brought forth a son, even the promised seed. 3. The subject to whom this mercy is given, 1. to Abraham, the promise was made to him, and the seed is accounted his, both this immediate and all other issues from him. Gal. 4. 8. Gal. 5. 1.

1. 2. This is the covenanted Father to the Church for ever. 4. The time of this effect, expressed, 1. By Abrahams age, it is said.

At his old age, which is interpreted, when he was an hundred year old, Rom. 4. 19; beyond hope in nature to have a child. And therefore against hope he believed in hope to be the Father of many nations. 2. By the constitution of God. ——— To the prefixed time by God. Gen. 18. 14.

Which was from that time, the ordinary term of womens conception, and bearing about nine months; in the year after Sodom's destruction. 3. The ground of this effect, it is Gods word twice mentioned before, which God now puts forth in power to bring the promised seed into the world, ——— Which he spake unto him that he would do, and because God had spoken it, he would not fail Abraham. His word only gave Abraham strength to beget, Sarah to conceive, and Isaac to come forth. Three times times is this repeated in these two verses, to make impression in our mindes of the original of this birth, and of the true children of the Church. Gal. 4. 28. Ver. 2.

Ver. 2.

These observations are gathered hence.

D. 1. After all delays and difficulties upon Gods Saints at last Gods promised mercy come's forth to them.

D. 2. Free grace in the eternal and almighty God make's him humble himself to come and visit in grace poor creatures.

D. 3. Gods gracious visitation, and creation of his will brings forth the blessed seed of the Church.

D. 4. Gods sayings and speakings are the rule of all Gods gracious actings to his Church. Ver. 1.

D. 5. Believers receive power to do above the strength of nature from the word of God.

D. 6. The seed typical and real wherein the nations are blessed is the son of promise.

D. 7. The seed of promise is reckoned or accounted onely to Abraham. Heb. 2. 16.

D. 8. Old age, and the most incapable state of nature hindreth not God to bring forth the seed of promise.

D. 9. There is a set time for all Gods promises, and at that time shall they be accomplished.

D. 10. Gods word onely ordereth times and meanes of bringing forth all the seed of promise. Ver. 2. And all the good that is promised.

2. The next particular in the first general is Abrahams obedience, together with his age when all these things fell out unto him, so that here we have to note. 1. His obedience unto Gods command in two things. 1. In naming his son, according as God had said. ver. 3. Where we have, 1. The Impotent, Abraham.

It was the Father, yet in this directed by God. Gen. 17. 19. 2. The subject of imposition, on whom he set's the name described, both by his present birth. ——— The name of the son now born unto him by promise, and by his mother, ———

Not any other, but that son whom Sarahs dead womb had now brought forth by faith in Gods promise. 3. The name itself imposed, 1. It'shak, Isaac as ours read. Which noteth gladness and laughter, the purpose of which name may be either something foregoing, viz. The fulfilling of Abrahams joy in believing expressed now in seeing that son, at the newes of whom faith made him laugh; Gen. 17. 17. So he joyced also in seeing the day of Christs true seed; or something to come, which was the gladdening of heart not onely to Sarah, ver. 6. but of all nations, that should hear of him and the myserie of Gods will in him for the blessing of nations.

We may learn here.

D. 1. The Saints obedience will follow close Gods performance of his promise. So Abraham.

D. 2. Extraordinary seed which God send's into the world, hath extraordinary providence in naming it.

D. 3. There is one eminent son or seed of promise, as given by God, so born by faith. Hebr. 1. 1.

D. 4. The son of promise make's good his name, to make all glad, and laugh for joy who hear of him and look unto him. Ver. 3.

2. In circumcising his son whom here he nameth, wherein. 1. His work of obedience, which containeth in it. 1. The act, Abraham. 2. The act of obedience.

And Abraham circumcised, that is, cut of Ver. 4. the foreskin of the flesh, Gen. 17. 11.

3. The object of this act, his son Isaac. ——— The very son of promise whom Sarah bare.

4. The age of this son which is the time of giving this Sacrament.

The son of eight dayes, or being eight dayes old, for this was given him in charge, Gen. 17. 12. Sept. and Cald. same. 2. His rule of obedience in this kind.

According to what Elohim had commanded him. 1. The almighty God. 2. His command is the onely rule which Abraham observeth, in performing this duty of obedience in applying the token of Gods Covenant unto his son Isaac. Gen. 17. ver. 9. 10. &c.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Seal of Covenant, as well as K k 3 the the Covenant itself is due unto the child of promise.

D. 2. The severest Sacrament is freely applied by believers, at, and according to Gods will.

D. 3. Gods word only can make Sacraments, appoint Subjects for them, and administrators of them. Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

2. Abrahams age is here added. ver. 5. And Abraham was the son of an hundred years in his son Isaacs being born unto him. He was of an hundred years, &c. Sept. Cald. as Heb. He was an hundred years old, as we use to say, and Sarah ninety. The reason of the inserting of this here may be. 1. To shew the strangeness of the miracle upon Gods part, who calleth things that are not, as if they were, and by his word effects them and make's them be, as here to bring the son of promise out of a dead body. 2. To shew the strength of Abrahams faith, who staggered not at sensible impossibilities in himself, when God had given forth his word. 3. To discover the certainty of Gods promise at last to them who wait for it.

It Learneth us:

D. 1. The Spirit commends to the Churches observation the time and way of Gods fulfilling his promises.

D. 2. Gods promised seed is called out of a dead body and dead womb against all difficulties. No difficulties can hinder the performance of Gods promise when his set time is come.

D. 3. The strongest faith appears when sense is out of all hope.

D. 4. He that believeth shall see Gods promise at last and be blessed. Ver. 5. Luk. 1. 45.

Thirdly. Now followeth Sarah's resentment of Gods dealings with her, as to the bearing of the promised seed: and bringing it forth. ver. 6. 7. Which is discovered. 1. In her profession of Gods work toward her and others. 1. Gods work upon her self is confessed.

Ver. 6.

And Sarah said, Elohim hath made laughter for me. Sept. same. Joy. Cald. Herein we have, 1. The confessor, Sarah, an heir of promise with her husband, yet sometimes incredulous, and weak in faith, but now by faith receiving the promise of the seed of blessing, she in sense of her own weakness, and experience of Gods faithfulness, break's out into this expression. 2. The confession itself, where about are considerable. 1. The scope of it, which doubtless is to exalt God in the work which he now had done for her being so unworthy, that she durst scarce trust God. 2. The matter of it, which is a thankful acknowledgment. 1. Of the author, Elohim the mighty God, he did all for her by his mighty power. 2. Of his work, he hath made laughter, it is a metonymical expression, the effect for the cause, that is, he hath given me cause of joy and laughing, by making a barren womb fruitful, and causing me to be the mother of a seed, which shall be a blessing to all nations. The cause of laughing about this was twofold, 1. Temporal, in bodily fruitfulness, and enjoying the fruit of the womb, this is Gods reward, and therefore to be rejoiced in. 2. Spiritual, in respect of all that blessing to her self and nations, imported in the seed, as he was type, of the true seed of the woman, even Christ in whom she had cause to rejoice for her person as Mary did, who bare him. Luk. 1. Hereupon the highest joy and most glorious is the work of God upon his Saints that believe. 3. The subject of this, Sarah her self, it was made of God for her. Isai. 54. 1. Gal. 4. 27.

2. In profession of the same work of God upon others, Sarah sheweth her now repentment of Gods dealings with her now

Every one hearing shall laugh with me. For whosoever shall hear shall rejoice with me. Sept. Shall congratulate me. The like joy is here spoken of as before, which shall be to all nations, that hear of this birth by whom Gods Covenant must come to them. Herein. 1. The subject spoken of, is every hearer, that is, Such to whom this newes shall come, which were contemporary with Sarah if it be terminated upon that seed then born: but if it be extended to the spirituality of the seed; it must needs be all them who do hear and believe. 2. The Gospel or good tidings sent to these, they shall rejoice and be glad with Sarah, with joy unspeakable by believing.

This sense is not strange, if Sarah be here considered as a believer looking to the end of the promise. ver. 6. Isai. 66. 10. Gal. 4. 22. 26. Laughing must be as before, not of scorn. 2. Sarahs admiration is expressed, wherewith she entertaineth this work of God.

Wherein we have, 1. The admiration in self.

And she said, who would have spoken to Abraham, that Sarah should have suckled sons? Who shall declare to A-bra-

Ver. 7.

brahim, that Sarah suckleth a son or Child? Sept. And she said faithful is he who spake to Abraham, and hath fulfilled it, that Sarah should suckle sons. Cald. A good paraphrase this may be, none could say to Abraham but God. In the whole note.

1. The term of admiration, who would have said? Surely none among men would have ever thought or spoken that such a thing should be, how strange a thing is this? 2. The matter of admiration. 1. About Abraham being old and dead for generation. 2. About Sarah being old and barren, with whom nature ceased as to such a work. 3. About the work itself, that she should have a fruitful womb, and full breasts, what a thing is this! I could not believe it myself, and who among men could reasonably expect it? She wonders not at the duty of giving suck, that was natural, but at the power of giving suck, which was wonderful. As to the plural of Sons or children, it is an usual change of number; for of more then the Son of promise we read not by Sarah; yet otherwise the phrase is interpreted by many; but there needs not any more to be said, but the common use of putting one number for another. In all we see, Sarah, who was great enough, gave suck her self, and so performed the duty unto the fruit of the womb as God would have her.

2. The true cause of her admiration.

For I have borne a Son to his old age. Because, I have brought forth a son in my old age. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. This was the cause of the wonder, not so much to bear a son, but when both Father and Mother were so old, that there was no hope of such a thing, against hope to believe in hope, and see it effected, was the just ground of her admiration.

So in the spiritual application the Church wonder's at her seed. Who hath begotten me these? Isai. 49. 21. Isai. 66. 8.

grew. This preced's his weaning, but how far this growth extended, whether, unto two, three or five yeares (as opinions among the Jewes are various) it matters not; sure it was until he was fit to be taken from milk unto stronger meat, and was grown something great, according to the accustomed time of weaning; this is enough for us to know about it. 2. His weaning

The word used is noted by some, to signify the change of one thing for another, and so of milk for stronger meat, a taking of from the breast, to grow by stronger nourishment. So it is used. Pla. 13. 1. 2. επιγαλιωθη, Sept. 2. That which concerns Abraham is reported.

And Abraham made a great feast in the day of weaning Isaac. Sept. and Cald. To the same. Herein. 1. The subject of this history, is Abraham the Father, not a little affected with joy for Gods goodness unto himself and son, that now he saw Gods promise more and more fulfilled unto him.

2. The work of Abraham to express his joy, he made a great feast, so doth nature suggest and God allow his servants to delight themselves upon occasion of his goodness to them. Where we may read.

1. The nature of his work, a feast, which is most likely to be an holy festival annexed with sacrifice to give God praise. So it was.

1. Sam. 1. 24. 2. The greatness of the work, it was a great feast, no ordinary solemnity to express thanks and joy. 3. The freefreeness of it, Abraham made it freely of his own ready mind, to call others to praise God with him. 4. The time of it, in the day of weaning Isaac. Many conjectures are about the reason of Abrahams choice of this time; some making it spiritual to signify the joy of regeneration and weaning souls from the world; others that therein Abraham might cross the custom of the gentiles in keeping dayes of nativity. But little weight of reason in these. Two considerations are more probable, 1. This was the fittest time in all respects to remember the kindness of God, to the child, mother, and himself, wherein he take's occasion of publick rejoicing in God with those whom he loveth. 2. This was now providentially ordered as an eminent time for the child of the bondwoman to discover malignity against the seed of promise; upon which occasion it seemeth here to be related, and hereupon the history of his ejection followeth. It is queried, what the guests were now at this feast? The Spirit is silent of them, yet probably those eminent ones, that were acquainted with God and were near to him might be invited by him. Some think Schem, Selah, Heber, &c. who were then surviving. But nothing of this being expressed, it is not matter of faith.

Learn now from it.

D. 3. Joy or rejoicing in God is suitable to such degrees of goodness unto the promised seed.

D. 4. Holy feasting is allowed by God to his servants for expressing their joy in him. Ver. 8.

2. The next general head of the Chapter followeth, which containeth, the ejection of the bond child out of the inheritance of the Church, from ver. 9. To the end of ver. 21.

In the whole we may observe, two heads.

1. The ejection itself described, ver. 9. to 14.

2. The consequents of the same. Ver. 15. 21.

In the former we have recorded.

(1) The cause of his abdication seen and urged by Sarah. ver. 9. 10. 11.

(2) Gods ratification of it. ver. 12. 13.

(3) Abrahams obedience. ver. 14.

In the first of these we may observe in Ver. 9. special.

1. The cause of his ejection discovered, ver. 9. Wherein.

1. The discoverer Sarah, the mother of the seed of promise, yet tender enough to Ismael in his education in the family, therefore not prepossessed with any indignation against Ismael, is it probable, she might observe such carriage of the bond child before, and hide them, but now seeing it in the solemn time of rejoicing, and in the face of the assembly with them, she could not bear it longer. Whether Abraham saw it also and winked at it, there is no great matter in that. And Sarah saw Sept. and Cald. same.

2. The party discovered, is set out by his relation. Sept. and Cald. same.

The son of Hagar the Egyptian whom she had born to Abraham. That is, Ismael, whom Abraham begat by abusing Hagar his handmaid, by original from his mother he was an Egyptian, which is observable in this matter; by his Father the fruit of uncleanness. Hagar, not his wife, bare him,

3. The crime discovered, mocking.

Laughing. Playing with Isaac her son. Sept. Playing. Cald.

This must needs be a bitter, sarcastical jearing, and scorning the son of promise, which the Apostle calleth persecution: Gal. 4. 29. It note's a contemptuous and malignant carriage. Job. 30. 1.

2. The urging of this to Abraham by way of complaint for casting him out of the family. Wherein occur.

1. The plaintiffe, Sarah said unto Abraham. She that had observed, told all the carriage doubtles to Abraham, desiring just recompense on the offender. That she spake not wholly of her self, nor from misguided passion may appear in that God ratifieth what she now requireth of Abraham.

2. The penalty required from him.

Cast out this bond woman, and her son.

Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The penalty required, abdication, ejection, casting out from the Church and inheritance of the Lord.

2. The parties on whom it is required, The bond woman and her son. It is more then probable that this Egyptian woman did abbet her son, and from them both is conceived to begin the Egyptian persecution of 400 years spoken of Gen. 15. 13.

3. A reason urging this exaction.

For the son of this handmaid shall not inherit with my son, with Isaac. Shall not be heir, Sept. and Cald. The reason given is somewhat peremptory, Sarah was not wont to speak so to her Lord, but this comes from God as afterward appears, and the Apostle saith, the scriptures speaketh this cast out, &c. Gal. 4. 30. (1) The subject spoken of, is Ismael the persecutor, the son of the Egyptian bondwoman, like mother like son.

(2) The

2. The

2. The matter spoken of him which urged his ejection, he shall not inherit, neither in whole nor in part with Isaac the son of promise; and for securing that, cast him out. ver. 10.

In this history as spiritually applied by the Apostle.

1. Sarah note's Jerusalem above.

2. Isaac all the true seed of God by promise in Christ.

3. Hagar the literal Covenant of God abused by false teachers.

4. Ismael all hypocrites and bond children hereby brought forth in the Church; the mother of the true seed espieth them that are born after the flesh mocking and persecuting the children of promise, therefore calleth to God her husband to cast them out all, that the true seed may enjoy the inheritance alone, Gal. 4. 22. to the end.

3. Abrahams resentment of this complaint and exaction, ver. 11.

And the word was very evil in the eyes of Abraham, for the causes of his son, or for the sake of his son. And the word appeared very hard before Abraham for his son Ismael, Septua. The word was too much displeasing, &c. Caldee.

Herein are considerable.

1. The party resenting, Abraham, a Father.

2. The resentment of the exaction, it was very bitter and distastful to him, he could not think upon it with patience, perhaps conceiving it only to proceed from Sarahs pallion; for when God appears in it he saith no more, neither stop's he from putting his will into execution.

3. The reason of his resentment, his affection to his son, it was his son, and to cast him out and abdicate him, this was not easy for a tender Father to do, it was therefore a very hard saying to him; both his sin, and punishment required, were grievous to him.

1. Gods speech to Abraham by way of mitigation of his grief upon Sarahs complaint and desire.

And Elohim said, let it not be evil in thy eyes for the child, and for thy bond woman. Ver. 12.

Let it not be hard before thee, &c. Sept. Let it not be displeasing in thy sight, &c. Cald.

Herein occur.

1. The comforter, who now speaketh to the case of Abrahams heart, it is Elohim the mighty God; It is conceived by some, that he spake by a minister, as by Schem or some other, but the text is silent; and God was wont many times to speak immediately to Abraham, and no other way is expressed here. It is however doubtles Gods authority which interposeth.

2. The word of comfort or support, which may be read.

1. By way of counsel, Let it not be evil that which is spoken of the lad and his mother, as concerning their ejection, be not grieved nor vexed at it, so God is pleased to come in for the help of his afflicted.

2. By way of command, This thing shall not be evil in thy sight, (See thou grieve not jis is good in mine. 2. Gods speech of injunction which ratifieth what Sarah had said, and discovereth it to be of God.

All which Sarah hath said unto thee, or, shall say in this matter) hearken to her voice may say, &c. Sept. Rest contented with her. Cald. Wherein.

1. The injunction, and therein.

1. The authority injoyning, Elohim who must not be resisted.

2. The person injoyned, Abraham.

3. The matter injoyned, to hear all that Sarah had said, about the ejection of the bond woman and her son, and to be obedient to it. Not hereby subjecting the husband to the wife, but only to Gods will in this matter first discovered by her.

2. The reason of this injunction, which is here urged, twofold.

1. In respect of Gods gracious purpose to Isaac.

Because in Isaac shall the seed be called unto thee. Sept. same. Shall sonnes be called unto thee. Cald. The general force of this reason is to this purpose, Abraham, all my promises reiterated unto you, I am resolved shall be made good in Isaac the promised son, therefore sequester any corival from him, that he may be alone, by whom it is my purpose to gather my Church; send the bond-child away therefore, that in thy family I may carry on my intended work. More especially these terms are in it.

LI you

1. The party whom God will honor, it is Abraham to whom he had promised a seed, unto thee, or by thy name shall a seed be called.

2. The honor which is here mentioned, a seed shall be called to thee or under thy name, which according to the interpretation made by the Spirit is fourfold.

1. The eminent seed, even the Son in the flesh. Hebr. 2. 16.

2. The seed natural and Spiritual in the Church. Rom. 9. 7. 8.

3. The seed spiritual but not natural, as gentiles. Rom. 11. 15.

4. The seed natural and carnal but not spiritual, such as was Israel after the flesh but not according to promise. Rom. 9. 16.

Now as to these last, they bore the name of Abraham, as being in the visible Church, but were not of those to whom the promise came. The three former are mainly intended.

3. The means whereby God will bring this to pass, viz. In Isaac: this is the only seed of promise by whom all shall be accomplished in time; upon all which considerations it is my will, let this Son of promise be singled out, and the bond-son sequestered. ver. 12.

2. The next reason concerns Ishmael, that however God shut him out of this line, yet he will not utterly cast away care of him as to outward good. So it follow's.

And also the Son of the bond-woman, I will set him for a nation, because he is thy seed.

I will make him for a great nation, &c. Sept. — Because he is thy Son. Cald. Herein we have. 1. The act of providence mentioned, I will make the Son of the bond-woman for a nation, yea and that a great one, as the Sept. expresseth, of which many nobles. Gen. 17. 20. This was as much as ever the mother or the son desired, to be great in the world, and as good as Isaac in worldly power. This God vouchsafeth, and of him is the greatest nation on earth, the Turks, the bitter enemies of the Church of Christ. 2. The reason of this providence also, because he is thy seed, i. e. his son in the flesh, and so sprung from Abraham; now though God shut him out from the inheritance of his Church; yet he provides a portion in the world for him; and that for Abrahams sake.

ken at his providence.

D. 8. All worldly good is granted to Ishmaels for Abrahams sake. So the wicked fare the better, for the Church. V. 13.

3. The last thing considerable in this ejection is Abrahams obedience, wherein are to be noted. 1. His preparation for it. And Abraham morning'd it in the morning, Ver. 14. or dawning of the day. — And Abraham arose, at the first peeping of the light. Sept. — Cald. same. Herein note. 1. The connection, this obedience is coupled to Gods command, not to Sarahs intimation.

2. His act of preparation, he was up early at the dawning of the day, when he knew it was the will of God, he delayed not to do Gods commandment. 2. His provision, which he makes for them.

And he took bread, and a bottle of water and gave to Hagar putting on her shoulder. — And put the child upon her shoulders. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr.

The provision is but slender, especially for so great a man, and so much affected toward his son; to suppose that under these all other provisions are carried, is not so rational in this place, where the bottle of water is mentioned. The quality of the provision is common sustenance; the quantity no more it seemeth then she carried upon her shoulder, for it was soon spent. Why this should be so, many conjectures are made; but in short the safest is, that this was done by Gods special order, and by way of correction, as well as to be an occasion of his discovery to them in the way. In that the Seventy read, he put the child upon her shoulders, it is neither suitable to the grammar of the text, nor consonant to reason, he being conceived now.

now by most to be about 18 years of age for he was 14. when Isaac was born, and now he was weaned. 3. His delivery of his son to her. — And the child or lad begate to her, that is, according to Gods sentence to be gon from his house. 4. His dismissal of them.

And he sent her away. That is, with the bond-son to depart. Once she run away, & now is she sent away by Gods special order, with her son also. 5. The peregrination of the mother with the child.

And she walked and wandred in the wilderness of Beer-sheba. 1. Their motion, she with her son went away. 2. Their wandering, this was Gods hand in displeasure, both are observable: and the place, a wilderness between Canaan and Egypt. Here by a prolepsis called the wilderness of Beer-sheba, which was so named afterward upon some special occasion, as weread. ver. 31. — ver. 14.

D. 3. The bond-woman & bond-children are sent out of the Church: at last wrath meets with their sin.

D. 4. Such subjects from the Church, are wanderers in the wild places of the world. V. 14.

2. Now follow the consequents of this ejection, which are.

1. The failing of provision.

2. The fainting of the bond-son. ver. 15.

3. The mothers sorrow for him. ver. 16.

4. The respect of God unto them both. ver. 17. 18. 19, &c. The two former events consequent are in ver. 15.

1. The failing and want of water.

And the waters failed from the bottle. —

The water of the bottle failed, Sept. —

And the waters were spent out of the bottle. Cald. This was a sad consequent of their ejection and wandering in such dry wilderness places. 1. The matter wanting was the greatest necessary for thirsty travellers, Waters. What more needful than this for poor travellers in hot and dry places? 2. The defection of this was total, they had none left, when their souls were ready to faint for thirst. Their bottle was dry, it was but a stined vessel, therefore not long likely to afford them drink. A great trial and affliction upon poore creatures. 2. The misery of the son especially expressed in this act of his mother.

And she cast the lad or child under one of the trees or shrubs. — Under one firre tree. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. This whole action supposeth Isaac in a fainting condition, not fit or able to travel any farther. — Wherein.

1. The agent is the Mother, doubtless full of discontent and trouble for these adverse providences. 2. The action, is the casting of her son under some tree, or shrub, or thicker; not from her shoulder, (as some vainly speak) but there disposed him; when he could go no further, as the fittest receptacle in the wilderness. This was a sad repose for any sick man, but the worse for Abrahams son who had enjoyed better places and entertainment before. Yet this providence casteth upon the bond-child, who began so soon to persecute the seed of promise, and to despise the privileged of Gods Church: He is made now to feel, it is worse in the wilderness, then in Gods portion.

D. 6. Ejection out of the Church of God may bring outward wants and miseries with it upon corners.

3. The next event is the mothers sorrow & bitterness for her son and these evils now come upon both.

Herein. 1. Her discession from him. And she walked and sat by her self over a gainst, drawing forth about the shot of a bow, or, as those who shoot in a bow, that is, so far, or thereabout. — As a bows cast. Sept. — A far of, as much as a bow can shoot. Cald.

In this motion and posture, may be read her bitterness and trouble.

1. Her motion, speak's her weariness of beholding misery justly fallen upon the bond-child, which both her and his wickedness brought on him.

2. Her posture speak's her sadness further sitting down in discontent and passion.

3. The distance notes her affection to be out of the cry or groaning of the child there depending and giving it up for dead. So nature seeks its ease, it would go far from misery. 2. Her passionate reason concerning him.

For she said, I will not, or let me not look upon the death of the child. — I will not see the death of my child. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr.

Herein may be.

1. Nature's prevention of God, it casts upon death when God intends it not, the child must die, so she cast's.

2. Nature's averiness from bearing the hand of God, let me not see, or I will not see, though it might be affection to the child, yet it is impatience as unto God, this being his hand upon him.

3. Her lamentation over him. And she sat over against, and lift up her voice, and wept. — And the child crying out wept. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Here is nature's vent when charged with evil. 1. It sets itself over against its misery, to view something of it at least.

4. The next event is Gods respect to child and mother, under this bitter distress and fear of death which was upon them, which is described, ver. 17. to 21. Note herein. 1. Gods audience of the child.

And God heard the voice of the lad. Ver. 17.

From the place where he was. Sept. This maketh the Seventy render the last clause of the former verse of the crying of the child.

The voice of the lad was heard before God. Cald. In this is discovered, the inclination of Gods ear to the voice of misery, even in them which are out-calls from the Church. So was Ismael; yet in his faintings, and groanings, God in his providence, heareth so, that he commeth in for help. No doubt also, but God heard Hagar crying and weeping for her son, so as to succour them.

2. Gods providence in this strait, expressed in the mission of his angel to them, whose work is evident. 1. In his advocacy to Hagar.

And the Angel of God called to Hagar from heaven, Sept. and Cald. same. 1. The messenger calling, is an angel of God, such as are intended ministers for the heirs of salvation, yet here speaking to one cast out of the Church. 2. The party called unto, is Hagar, one that brought forth a bond-child to Abraham and was set in opposition against the free woman, yet now in misery. 3. His call unto her, with its scope, 2. In his exhortation.

And he said unto her, what is to thee Hagar? — What is the matter Hagar? Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. This he inquires not as ignorant, but urgent upon her, for her complaint, to correct her, and comfort her.

3. In his consolation. Wherein.

For God hath heard the voice of the child, there where he is. — In the place where he is. Sept. — Cald. to the same. The same that was expressed before, and to the same sense: it noteth Gods observation, acceptance and salvation of him from his present danger.

Cald. or take thy hand upon him; that is doubtless, hold him fast, stay him up, let thy hand be still upon him to sustain and comfort him.* 2. His reason of this advice, which is Gods former promise repeated, For I will set him for a great nation. — Cald. same.

I will make, &c. Sept. Here the angel speaketh in the name of God, for he alone is the promiser; and this promise he now repeateth to encourage her to duty in all the former particulars to take care of the child: for God was resolved to set him as the head of a great nation in the world, therefore it became her to follow counsel, and provide for the child's life. This was revealed to Abraham, Gen. 17. 20.

It Learneth us.

- D. 1. Natural sorrow or discontent is sullen and sluggish to help, until roused up by God.
- D. 2. It is Gods counsel to nature, not to despond in afflictions, but to use means of help, while there is hope.
- D. 3. It is Gods will to strengthen hands for help in lawful ways of healing misery.
- D. 4. Gods promise engageth duty for bringing about salvation, whether temporal or eternal. Ver. 18.

5. Gods providence appears further in opening Hagar's eyes, and discovering to her means of saving life which she saw not before, ver. 19.

Wherein we have. 1. Gods act of goodness reported.

And Elohim opened her eyes. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The agent is Elohim the almighty God. 2. The act is opening eyes. 3. The Patient Hagar. How God did this, is the question. That it should be by making a spring miraculously out of the earth is not probable, for that had bin an opening of the earth, and not of her eyes. It is therefore rationally conceived that there was a well neerer, but either by her overflowing passion with weeping, or by Gods restraint of her sense, she did not discover it until God removed the veil and opened her eyes. This seem's to be the bare history. 2. The consequents of this act of grace, observable in Hagar.

1. Her discovery of the well.

And she saw a well of water. — Of living water, i. e. Springing. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Here beginneth the healing of their misery, even in the discovery of the means which God affords. Water was their want, they had none, neither did she know where to get it; now God giveth her to see that at hand which might preserve life. When God opens eyes, they discover good.

2. Her supplying from thence the present want.

And she went and filled the bottle with water. — Cald. same. The Septuagint mentions not water, but that must be understood. Now her bottle-comfort is supplied, and a more lasting store continued by the special care of God, who alone makes springs in the wilderness. Isai. 35. 6.

3. Her refreshing of her Son.

And she gave drink to the lad. — To her child, Sept. — And she gave the child to drink. Cald. All to the same sense. Hereby God was pleased to provide, for recovery of the Spirits of the lad for present; though out cast from the Church. So was he pleased to make a stop unto their present fear: for doubtless he revived thereupon.

Learn hence.

- D. 1. It is Gods special goodness to open the eyes and mindes of the afflicted to see a way, and means for their own help.
- D. 2. Discovery of means seasonably inviteth the afflicted to receive supply.
- D. 3. Means must be applied, if healing be expected. Ver. 19.

6. Gods providence to them in the after time of their being, when this distress was over. Ver. 20. 21.

Wherein.

1. Gods respect to the lad. — And Elohim was with the lad. — And Ver. 20. God was with the child. Sept. —

L1 3 And

And the word of the Lord was for the help of the child. Cald. This presence of God with him was of common providence not of special indulgence, as to the Saints. Jof. 1. 5.

2. The consequences of this general presence of God. as, 1. The growth of the child. And he waxed great, i. In stature. Sept. and Cald. to fame. This growth doubtless was according to years of life until he came to maturity in the age of man. This was of God. 2. His habitation, expressed, 1. Generally, ver. 20.

And he sat down in the wilderness. And he dwelt, &c. Sept. so Cald. 2. Specially, ver. 21. And he sat down in the wilderness of Paran. It was a wilderness adjoining to the desert of Sinai, thorough which the Israelites journeyed in coming out of Egypt. Num. 10. 12. Numb. 13. 1. 4. Deut. 33. 2. It is storied to be a wild barren place; yet such as God hath appointed for the seat and dwelling of a wild man. Herein was much of his providence. 3. His profession or trade of life.

And he was a shooter of the bow, or shooting the bow. That is, an archer, which is a paraphrase of a fouldier or warrior. An archer, Sept. The Cald. is as the Hebr. In summe he professed to live by violence, and what he took he held; so he lived and got his territories. 4. His marriage.

And his mother took for him a wife out of the land of Egypt. Out of Egypt. Sept. Cald. as Hebr.

Where we may note,

1. Under God the chief orderer of his marriage was his mother. This is a natural right. 2. The choice she make's, it is among Pagans, that know not God, an Egyptian Idolaters, fit for him that was cast out of the Church. 3. His acceptance included, he entertained his mothers offer: thus Gods providence permits and orders to accomplish his word.

It Learneth us.

D. 1. A general presence of God with reprobates is allowed by providence. God fill's heaven and earth.

D. 2. General providence causeth growth of children to maturity.

D. 3. Violent professions are permitted and ordered in the world by his general providence. Ver. 20.

D. 4. God sit's in his providence wild places for wild men.

D. 5. Parents have right by the law of nature to dispose their children in marriage.

D. 6. Carnal parents are ready to match their children with Egypt, rather than the Church. Ver. 21.

3. The last general head of the Chapter followeth, which is the league made between Abimelech and Abraham, ver. 22. to 34.

Wherein these particulars.

1. Abimelechs proposal, ver. 22. 23. 2. Abrahams answer, ver. 24. 25. 3. Abimelechs reply by apology, ver. 26. 4. The Covenant striking between them, ver. 27.

5. Abrahams purchase of a well, ver. 28. 29. 30. 31.

6. Abimelechs departure, ver. 32.

7. Abrahams plantation and work, ver. 33. 34.

To the first, in Abimelechs proposition note, 1. The time of it.

And it was in that time, Sept. and Cald. Ver. 22.

fame. The notation of the time which was about the weaning of Isaac, and the ejection of Ishmael, is not to be passed over; that the following treaty with a stranger, should be upon the ejection of a son, something of good may be in it, or at least a new trial commeth upon another; for making leagues with strangers and mighty men seldom goeth without its snares. 2. The proposer of the following motion.

And Abimelech said, and Phicol the Prince of his host unto Abraham in saying, or chief Captain and Commander.

And Hophad his Usher, Sept. addeth. Cald. as Hebr. The crown and sword come together here to make league with Abraham, and they are first in proposing. Doubtless an awe set upon them by God maketh them do thus; otherwise such would not stoop. 3. The reason of their proposal rendered by them.

Elohim is with thee in all that thou art doing. Sept. same. The word of God is thy help in all things which thou doest. Cald. In general, they urge, that Gods presence with Abraham was the cause of their addresses to him, and soliciting such a Covenant with him.

Quest. How did they see God with him? Answ. Doubtless in visible ways of discovery, such as they could not deny to be demonstrations of Gods gracious respect.

1. His rebuking Abimelech formerly for Abrahams sake.

2. The strange birth of Isaac, which made all wonder.

3. The daily providence visible upon Abrahams Tabernacle prospering him. These and such like made them conclude God was on his side, and therefore thought it good to be in league with such a man to prevent evils.

Fear more then love provoketh this overture from them.

1. The proposal itself made, wherein are desired.

1. The

Ver. 23.

1. The form of making league by oath. And now swear to me by Elohim. By God. Sept. By the word of God. Cald.

1. The form of confirmation is an Oath, this was taken among them and other nations as a Sacred rite.

2. The object terminating this Oath, the true GOD only, the almighty who could avenge himself upon treacherous dealers, and recompense the just. In and by him Abraham is desired to swear, but by no idol of the Philistines.

2. The matter of the league is expressed.

Wherein.

1. A note of attention. Behold, attend to what I say Abraham, Sept. and Cald. want this; but it is emphatical as to the work in hand.

2. The thing itself adjured. wherein. 1. The negative.

If thou shalt lye, That thou wilt wrong. Sept. Hurt not. Cald. The expression in Hebrew is the proper way of swearing, if thou shalt lye, God is witness and judg, he will require it. Or positively thus, swear that thou wilt not lye, that is deceive, injure, wrong, against these is oath taken; which carrieth in it faithfulness, goodness, and truth to be performed.

2. The positive, According to the kindness that I have done to thee thou shalt do unto me. But according to the righteousness which I have dealt with thee, thou shalt deal with me. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Here we have the affirmative matter sworn, whereof. 1. The matter is observable, thou shalt do kindness, mercy, all the duties of friendship.

2. The rule or measure, as I have done to thee; thou hast found good from me, do no less to me or mine.

3. A motive added. Because thou hast sojourned in it, even the land, for which I desire to make league with thee. Sept. and Cald. to the same.

As if he should say, thou hast bin a stranger in the land; and hast found kindness here, this I adjure, make retaliation, shew kindness to me and to this land still, wherein thou hast bin a stranger.

3. The parties for whom this Oath is made. To me, and to my son, and to my grandson, and with my land. Not me, nor my seed, nor my name. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Thus he provides for all interests private and publick, wherein he is concerned; to secure peace, safety and good from Abraham unto them.

It learneth us.

D. 1. The time of trouble from one side may be a time of peace from another to Gods Saints.

D. 2. Trials from without as well as in their own families may be the Saints portion. Leagues are trials.

D. 3. Crowns and swords God can awe to seek a league with his Church.

D. 4. Gods eminent presence with his Church make's the enemies seek peace with them. V. 22.

D. 5. An Oath is a sacred bond even in the school of nature.

D. 6. Nature teacheth that God alone is to be sworn by, in matters due and right.

D. 7. Nature abhors falsehood, wrong, injury, and seek's to secure itself against it.

D. 8. Natures law is retaliation of kindness for kindness.

D. 9. Sojourners even Saints owe respect to the places where they have found mercy. Ver. 23.

2. Abrahams answer to this proposal followeth. ver. 24. 25. Which standeth in two branches.

1. His concession to him. And Abraham said, I will swear. Ver. 24. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The concessor here is Abraham to Abimelech, the friend of God to a stranger, yet in matters just and equal he is not averse to yield.

2. The concession, I will swear, i. e. In form and matter proposed, I will lift up my hand to the Almighty, that I will not deceive thee, nor thin to injure you, but I will shew kindness to you, as I have found it in this land of my sojourning.

Quest. But should Abraham swear at the demand of Pagans and strangers from the Church?

Answ. 1. It is not a lustful demand to have him swear for his pleasure, this were evil.

2. It is required in a just cause, and upon good terms such as God oweth.

3. In such cases it is lawful to swear to strangers and it is duty to keep such oaths toward them.

2. His reprehension. ver. 25. About which is reported.

1. The act. And Abraham reproved Abimelech, or Ver. 25: discoursed with him, and convinced, and checkt him. Sept. and Cald. same.

2. The ground, occasion, or cause of this reproof. Upon the causes of a well of water which the servants of Abimelech took away by violence.

violence. — About wells of water, Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Wherein.

1. The crime charged; violence in taking away a most necessary support for life, a well of water. 2. The parties charged, Abimelech's servants, who, was supposed would not adventure to do it, but upon his liking or connivance at least; and therefore in making league he provides to have restoration of properties, and to be secured from violence in such cases afterward.

Quest. Why did not Abraham complain before?

Ans. 1. His patience in a strange place he thereby expreth. 2. Now was the fittest time when the offender commeth to desire peace for himself and servants. Just was his exception and increpation in this matter.

Learn thence.

D. 1. It is just for the children of the Church to yield unto a lawful peace with strangers.

D. 2. It is just that Gods servants should swear against all wrongdoing, and for well-doing to strangers. Ver. 24.

D. 3. It is equal for Saints in making peace to heal their own wrongs and provide for future good.

D. 4. Servants violence in some cases is to be required from their masters. Ver. 25.

3. Now followeth Abimelech's Apology to Abrahams crimination. Ver. 26. wherein something is implied, which is restitution of the well, as the sequel sheweth, and something is exprest, in order thereunto.

Ver. 26. 1. He plead's ignorance of the fact. And Abimelech said I know not who hath done this thing, or work or matter. — Sept. and Cald. same. Whether ignorance pretended, were simply so of persons and fact altogether, is questioned by some, and thought rather to be feigned; however this is surely a fault that rulers do neglect to visit and take account of their servants and commissioned officers, upon which occasion, servants are more bold to do evil, yet this plea, if true, excuseth a tanto.

2. He plead's Abrahams remissness in complaining. And also thou hast not declared it unto me, i.e. Not brought it before me for justice. Sept. and Cald. to same purpose. As if he had said, could justice be done for thee, and thou conceal injuries offered? Why Abraham did not complain before now, is not exprest; conjectures may be, that a remedy was not so easily to be had before, as now when a league of friendship is desired by the king. Abraham therefore takes his opportunity. 3. He plead's his ignorance of any rumour about this matter. And also I heard not besides to day, — Sept. and Cald. same. So that negligence of fact and rumor he pleads as his excuse, until this very time, and then was ready to do him justice.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Towers awed by God may be content to answer for themselves unto injured plaintiffs.

D. 2. Ignorance of wrong acted, which is not feigned nor wilful, may excuse magistrates in measure for not doing justice.

D. 3. Concealment of wrongs from rulers by plaintiffs may be a vindication of judges for not righting them.

D. 4. Restitution made in the time of wrong discovered, is some satisfaction for injuries sometime incurred.

D. 5. Court-servants do wrong sometime, which Kings know not. Ver. 26.

4. The Covenant-making between these parties followeth, ver. 27.

Wherein are considerable.

1. An act preparatory from Abraham to Abimelech, — And Abraham took Ver. 37. sheep and oxen, and gave to Abimelech. — Calves, Sept. and Cald. — The reason of this act may be conjectured.

1. To expresse homage to the king of the country. 2. To expresse Abrahams readiness to peace by these tokens of love and friendship rendered to the king.

Quest. Did Abraham well to submit himself when he had all from God to be Lord of it?

Ans. Yea doubtless. 1. It is to be presumed that Abraham did it not without God. 2. The time of Lordship promised to Abrahams seed was not yet come, therefore he looeth nothing hereby, given him of God.

2. The act consummatory, — And both they shake a Covenant. — And both Covenanted a covenant. — Made a Covenant, Cald.

Wherein note.

1. The parties, both Abimelech and Abraham. 2. The act done by them, they strooke a Covenant, which is as much as, made a Covenant; onely in the expression are are carried. 1. The matter of it, which was about the very things proposed by Abimelech, not to injure one another, but shew kindness, and do justly from one to other. 2. The form of it, they strook it. A phrase taken from smiting in pieces the sacrifice, between the parts whereof they used to pass; it is probable by the phrase, they did so here: but that is evident, that by oath they did confirm the Covenant between them.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Wrongs being opened and redressed, Gods servants are not backward to a lawful peace.

D. 2. Saints are just and ingenuous to give superlours their dues, and deserve their just favour.

D. 3. Covenant-striking between the Church and the world, against evil and for good is very lawful. Ver. 27.

Fifty Abrahams purchase of Abimelech after Covenant, to avoid future quarrels about the well, is here recorded, ver. 28. 29. 30. 31.

Wherein.

Ver. 28. 1. The price set apart by Abraham. — And Abraham set seven ewe-lambs of the flock by themselves. — Sept. and Cald. same.

This act is distinct from the former, and tends not to sacrifice but a civil contract, for the well in question, and the confirmation of the purchase of it to Abraham.

Wherein.

1. The agent, Abraham, solicitous to prevent future contentions after Covenant. 2. The act, set apart, that is for special use, as after he declare's. 3. The matter sequestred, seven ewe-lambs, the matter were lambs, the sex female, the number seven; some conceive many mysteries in all these, but Abraham declareth the use of them plainly without a riddle, ver. 30. That they were as a testimony of Abrahams propriety in the well for him and his. The conceits of these lambs to be impressions upon silver, and that the number seven should note seven things to be refused, if the Covenanters brake, are but vain Cabalisms. Ver. 28.

Ver. 29. 2. Abimelech's question or inquiry, after this act of Abraham. — And Abimelech said unto, &c. This querie discovers, that these lambs were not set as ordinary pledges in Covenant-making, for then Abimelech would have known, what they did mean; but he did not understand Abrahams mind in them yet, and therefore, they did concern some special matter, as the confirmation of his right in the well. Yet being done among other rites of making league, Abimelech enquireth rationally about the use of them, and thereby must take more notice thereof in the returne of Abraham unto him. Ver. 29.

3. Abrahams resolution.

Wherein he declare's.

1. The donation of them to Abimelech, Ver. 30. — Thou shalt take at my hand, I give them.

2. The use of them, — That they may be for me a witness that I have digged this well. Sept. and Cald. same. So that the plain use of all these is, that they might be as seven witnesses for confirming the purchase of this well to Abraham, to avoid disputes in time to come. Ver. 30.

4. The nomination of the place by a signal name that might always be a memorial of this confederacy.

Wherein.

1. The imposition of the name, — Therefore he called that place Beer-Sheba. Ver. 31.

2. The reason of the imposition, — Because there both were sworn. — Sept. and Cald. same. As to the name, it is found upon two places, one in the tribe of Dan as some report, the other the fourth bound of the land of Canaan in the Lot of Judah. Josh. 15. 21. This is the place here intended: the end of imposing it, that it might be a signal and memorial both of their Covenant and Oath. ver. 31.

Learn hence.

D. 1. It is prudence in Gods Saints to provide for future peace as well as present quiet with the world, in good ways.

D. 2. It is wisdom to part with a little goods for much quietness in the world. Ver. 28.

D. 3. It is but rational for men to enquire and understand all particulars in undertaking confederacy with any. Ver. 29.

D. 4. It is just and good to secure propriety in the lot which God giveth from the exceptions of men.

6. The close of the history followeth in Abimelech's departure to his place. Wherein are recorded.

Ver 32. 1. The finishing of the league between both parties. Eccl. And they strook a Covenant in Beersheba. Sept. and Cald. same. Here we read, the work was done.

2. The discession of Abimelech, &c. to their place. And Abimelech arose and Philistines, &c. That is, they departed in peace and security, and sat down with much satisfaction in their own places.

D. 1. Such as come in peace, go away in peace from the Church of God.

D. 2. Leagues being lawfully concluded, reason requireth that men should walk securely. Ver. 32. In their own places.

7. Abrahams condition after all this conclud's the Chapter.

Ver. 33. Wherein are reported, ver. 33. 1. His plantation, — And he planted a tree in Beersheba. — And Abraham planted a field at the well of the oath, Sept. — He planted a plantation, &c. Cald. The man spoken of here must be Abraham, his work is planting a grove, say ours, a tree in the original, one put for many which make a grove or a field of trees as the Sept. seemeth to favour.

It is sure, that after league of amity with neighboring powers made, he falleth to planting, what he did not before.

2. His religion, — And he called there on the name of Jehovah God eternal.

He is God eternal. Sept. — And he called there in the name, &c. Cald. — After rest confirmed with men Abrahams next care is truly to serve God, making of his peace and security to serve him only. His act was Worship, the place, the grove occasionally where he dwelt, not superstitiously consecrated, as some afterward did, it may be, in imitation of this, which God forbid them; the object of his Worship, the name of Jehovah, God eternal: He and none but he. ver. 33.

3. His duration in sojourning with Abimelech, ver. 34. — And Abraham sojourned in the land of the Philistines many days. Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein.

1. His condition, he was a sojourner only among the Philistines, he counted himself no other in his most peaceable time.

2. His duration many days, yea many years, how many is not expressed; but it is certain, to the time of offering Isaac, which is conceived to be about the 33th year of Isaacs age. Chap. 22. 19. Ans. worth. Some think toward the time of Sarahs death which was some four year more. But it is sufficient to know that God gave him some breathing time and respite longer then usual to encourage him in his way, ver. 34.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Times of peace God make's to his servants times of plantation. Such leave he giveth his people.

D. 2. What was done by Abraham with Gods approbation, might be turned to sin by mans superstition. So the groves.

D. 3. The Saints peace with the world set's them more seriously to serve God.

D. 4. The name of Jehovah, even the eternal God is the Saints satisfaction in all plantations. Ver. 33.

D. 5. God allow's his Saints sometimes a longer space of respite after troubles than at others.

D. 6. The longest space of quietness below is but a sojourning time of Gods people. They are not at home. Heaven is the place of his rest, and so is to every true believer. Ver. 34.

CHAP. XXII.

IN this section two things chiefly are related.

1. Abrahams great trial from God. ver. 1. to the end of ver. 19.

2. Nahors line, who was Abrahams brother, ver. 20. to 24.

In the history of the former we have to note.

1. Gods call and command for trial, ver. 1. 2.

2. Abrahams ready obedience. ver. 3. to 10.

3. Gods interposition to save Isaac. ver. 11. 12.

4. The use which Abraham makes of it. ver. 13. 14.

5. Gods confirmation of Covenant by oath. ver. 15. to 18.

6. Abrahams return in peace, ver. 19.

1. In Gods call to Abraham at this time occur, 1. The season thus described, — And it was after these words or things formerly spoken of. — So Sept. and Cald. This must needs refer to the immediately precedent occurrences mentioned, of Gods giving Abraham rest as a sojourner in the land of the Philistines many dayes. Now after God had spoken so much rest unto him, in his wife providence he rouseth him with one of the hardest trials that ever he met with in his pilgrimage. Dayes of rest are not continued to him here.

2. Gods acts at this time towards Abraham are three, 1. An act declaring his scope. And Elohim tempted Abraham. Sept. and Cald. same. This act note's the scope of all Gods dealings with Abraham, it was to put him in his faith, love and obedience, unto proof. Wherein.

1. The author or agent, God himself, not Satan, however sometimes by him God trieth his dearest son also. Math. 4. What ever therefore is done by him must be presumed to be good. 2. The act, it is said, he tempted. The word properly signifieth to make trial or proof of any thing, as David had not proved the warlike habit which Saul would have him put on, 1 Sam. 17. 39. As the trial of mettals whether good or bad. Now this is used in a double sense, 1. Evil; when it signifieth to suggest evil unto any, and prompt on to do it, which is the proper work of the Devil and mans own lust. So God cannot tempt any, Jam. 1. v. 13. 14. 2. Good, when men are put upon high and eminent undertakings to try the strength of grace, or other abilities in them.

This the word seems to import; in this sense only can it be spoken of God; and so we know God often put Abraham upon such points of doing and suffering, in leaving his Fathers house, in changing habitations, in opposition of Kings, in the rapture of Sarah, &c. This at present is reckoned to be the tenth trial, wherewith God proveth his faith what strength it had; and indeed this putteth him to it, to the purpose.

Quest. Is not God said to lead into temptation, and to move David to sin? 2 Sam. 24. 1.

Ans. 1. Judicially; God may be said to lead; that is, to leave men to be tempted by Satan. So he did to David, but Satan suggested him to evil. 1 Chron. 21. 1.

2. Permissively God may tempt, that is, by suffering false Prophets to do it. Deut. 13. 3.

3. Efficiently sometimes he leads unto temptation, to magnifie his grace in overcoming as he did to his own Son. Math. 4.

Quest. How shall these temptations be distinguished?

Ans. 1. In the matter of them, Gods are hard but not evil, Satans are all sinful.

2. In the issue, God carrieth his out to evidence his grace more, Satan to increase sin.

3. In the end; Gods glory is the end of Gods tempting as in Abraham, but blasphemy and reproach the end of Satans.

2. An act of calling, wherein are joy.

ned. 1. Gods word to Abraham. — And he said to him, Abraham. — The Septuag. doubles Abraham. — Cald. same as Heb. This by Gods accustomed way, by vision, or other discovery God did use to summon Abraham unto the following work.

2. Abrahams reply to God. And he said behold me. Sept. and Cald. same. He attends presently upon Gods call, and is at his beck. He is not grown sluggish by his ease. ver. 1.

3. An act of command, wherein are included three duties strictly enjoyned on Abraham, as first, the taking of his Son.

And he said take now thy Son, thine only one Isaac whom thou lovest. — Sept. and Cald. to same. Herein. 1. The object concerned set out. 1. By name of relation, thy son, such as was precious enough, long desired by Abraham, and now comfortably enjoyed, a son, and a son of old age. 2. By a term of individuation even thine only one, not only so styled because Ishmael was gone, but in respect of his generation, that he was the only child of promise, so miraculously born, from a dead body and a dead womb. That only son, in whom all nations were to be blessed, this eminent seed. 3. By a periphrasis of affection, whom thou lovest, thy darling, thy soul, thy life, unto whom thy heart goeth forth in the first of love. 4. By the name of his person, even Isaac, the son that made all glad. 2. The act commanded, take him, that is, whether I shall send thee take him with thee from mother, family, &c. to dispose of him as I shall order.

Secondly, the motion enjoyned.

And walk for thy self to the land of Moriah. — And goest thou to the high land. Sept. — And goe to the land of divine worship. Cald. 1. The motion commanded, is to be gone from house and wife, and take his son with him for the purpose which God made known, go thou for thy self. 2. The term of the motion, the land of Moriah, which some read the land of Gods worship, so the word signifieth, the fear of the Lord: it was the place where Solomon built the Temple. 2. Chro. 3. 1. That which was called mount Zion afterward. This was three dayes journey from Beersheba as they made it, far enough out of hearing of Mother or any that might hinder. The Jewes report but groundlessly, that Adam and Noah sacrificed here: but it is certain, this became the place of worship, where the visions of God were, and his fear professed afterward.

Thirdly, the oblation imposed on him. And make him ascend there for an ascension upon one of the mountains which I shall tell thee. And offer him there for an whole burnt offering, &c. Sept. — And offer him before me there for an whole burnt offering or ascension, &c. Cald. — where we have, 1. The matter of his oblation, that very son before expressed. 2. The act of oblation.

M m 2

Offer.

Offer him or make him to ascend in the fire, which was the way of offering: wherein are carried, slaying, burning, and consuming to ashes: all this he was to do to his beloved. 3. The form of this offering, it was an ascension, or an whole burnt offering as it is styled by the Grecians because all was to goe in the flame toward Heaven: yet it was in an holy way of burning and consuming. 4. The place where it must be offered, one of the mountains, whatsoever God should dictate to him. No other place pleaseth God for his worship, but what he chooseth for Abraham most subservient unto his own ends. All these particulars put together, make up that difficult temptation, whereinto God leadeth Abraham. 1. He put's him to reconcile contradictions in Gods commands. God saith, thou shalt not kill; and God injoyneth Abraham to slay his son. God had promised this to be the seed of blessing from whom must arise a seed like the stars of Heaven, and yet he must dye now in his youth, without an offspring. 2. He puts him upon unnatural actions as a man, as a Father, to shed mans blood, and destroy his own child. 3. He put's him upon the greatest self denial in all that was dear unto him, that ever was commanded; and all to try what his faith and love would doe for God. How Abraham acquit's himself we shall see in the sequel of the history. T hus far is Gods call and command to him. Wherein also Gods dealing with his own son for the redeeming of poor sinners is sweetly represented.

But from the letter learn.

- D. 1. The longest time of the Saints rest below, hath a storm of temptation coming after it.
- D. 2. God himself sometimes leads his Saints into most difficult trialls for good. They need it.

- D. 7. God doth sometimes command that to his Saints in point of trial which he will not have effected.
- D. 8. In matters contradictory and unnatural may God tempt his Saints for his own good ends.

- D. 9. Oblation of mans blood, God hath sometime commanded for trial, though yet he abhors it in execution.
- D. 10. All circumstances of worship for time and place are determinable by God himself. V. 2. And by man at his direction.

(2) Abrahams obedience to Gods call is related from ver. 3. to the end of ver. 10. Wherein are reported.

1. The acts preparatory, ver. 3 to 8.
2. The acts executory, ver. 9, 10. The former are various and to be named in order.
 1. His early attendance upon Gods call, And Abraham hast'ned early in the morning. — Ver. 3. Arising. Sep. — Arose. &c. Cal. — Abraham non suit Quasiſta, Luth. The immediate connection of this to the former seemeth to import, that God so appeared, and called Abraham by night, as he was wont to do; and again that Abraham knew it was certainly Gods voice, and no delusion: hereupon he is so early as if he would prevent the morning in hastening to do the command of God.
 2. His provision for his journey in these particulars, 1. And he girt or fasted his ass and he covered his ass. Sept. ἵψαυ. That is doubles he commanded one ass to be prepared & harnessed to bear their utensils for the work unto which he was commanded. 2. — And he took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son. — Sept. And Cald. same. No great retinue he hath, but two servants for help in the way, and Isaac whom he was to offer; enough for his work. 3. — And he cut the wood of the burnt offering; Such doubles, which was fit for the service, the green trees, being unapt in the place whither he was to go. All necessities are provided.
 3. His motion to the place, — And he arose and walked to the place which Elobim told unto him. Here is expressed his progress to do the will of God though never so cross to his own, being commanded by him; He riseth and goeth on whither God had him. He pursued it as well as began it, ver. 3.
 4. His discovery of the place, — In the third day also Abraham lift up his eyes and saw the place from a far. — Sept. & Cald. same. Herein are reported, 1. The time, on the third day, about which, variety of conjectures are in the letter, whether this space contained two short parts of a day, and one whole one, It is evident, Abraham was early up on the first day, and doubtless travelled that out, and the second must be spent also, and how early on the third day, he made the place is not spoken. The distance of Moriah from Beerſheba breed's breed's this question, some determine it but one dayes journey, some making it 20 German miles, which are 60 of ours, and might wel take up so much time, they going on foot. That Abraham should go but softly and delay is not probable, he being so early up about his journey; it is likely the work was done the third day, and therefore that he discovered the place betimes. Others make the number mysticall to answer something about Christ three dayes being in the earth, but the Spirit maketh no such application here. 2. The discovery, He saw the place, How could he know it to be the same? Doubtless God told him that he would shew it him, and so surely when he came within view God gave him some signall of it; so that he plainly saw it and knew it to be the place. 3. The distance, it was afar off; though not mentioned how far, yet doubtless so far that his servants could not hear nor see what was to be acted there by Abraham. The certain measure is not set down.

- D. 1. Gods faithfulness is early up at his call unto the hardest services.
- D. 2. Prudence will direct Gods servants to provide all requisites for his worship commanded.
- D. 3. Motion and progress must be made according to Gods direction as well as entrance on his work. V. 3
- D. 4. Continuance in progress must be to the third day by Gods Saith, that is, unto the time of discovery of Gods will.
- D. 5. God doth sever his servants after three dayes, servants, his set time, the discovery of his will in place of meeting.
- D. 6. Saints must use their senses to discover, that which God make's out to them in his time. Var 4.
- D. 7. From Abraham seeing the place afar off, Sometime God is pleased to discover the ends and issues of his providence afar off.
5. Another act preparatory is his charge to his servants, ver. 5. Wherein may be observed.
 1. His command imposed upon them — And Abraham said to his young men, sit ye by your selves here with the ass. — Sept. same. — Wait, &c. Cald. — 1. He that injoyneth here was Lord to them, but servant to God, now especially designed to be a sacrificer, one that in both respects had power. 2. His injunction is to bind them a while to the place where they were, to sit and wait there. What thoughts might be in the young mens hearts about such an order, is not revealed, yet doubtless they had their misgivings, and words about it. 2. The reason of the command suggested. Noting, 1. His purpose of going further with his son, — But I and this lad will walk thither; His pleasure in this was reason enough to his servants; but his will was after God, that they two should be alone.

2. The end of their motion, — And we will worship, or in the letter, bow our selves. Sep. and Cald. same. Which incurvation synecdochically note's all manner of worship and so this of sacrifice; wherein that Abraham might not be hindered, he leave's them behind.

3. His promise of returning so soon as his work was done, — And we will return to you — Sept. and Cald. same. — How Abraham could promise this knowingly when he purposed to sacrifice his son, is a question. 1. It is certain he believed that God could raise him from the dead, though he slow him, Heb. 11. 19. yet whither so soon as he had slain him is not expressed. 2. It is conceived he prophesied what he knew not. 3. It may be a speech out of his present troubled thoughts without any impeachment of his integrity.

 1. The lading of Isaac, with the wood for the burnt offering. — And Abraham took the wood of the burnt offering, and put it upon Isaac his son. Sept. and Cald. same. The sense of the letter is plaine; Abraham the Father, layeth the wood for the burnt offering upon Isaachis son; M m 3 son: which supposeth him to be at maturity of age to bear the afflic burden; and the wise providence of God to make him bear, that which was intended for the sacrifice of himself. It is applied by fomes, 1. To the father tending and burdening his son for sinners. 2. To the sons ready bearing the instrument of his own offering. No small matter was this with Abraham to make his son undergoe such a burden, yet this is done at Gods word.

Ver. 6.

2. The taking of other necessities to the work himself. And he took in his hand fire and the knife. The fire and the sword, Sept. and Cald. These were the sacrificers utensils; these Abraham carrieth, which also may be presumed to be such as God himself appointed for this work, such as the Priests of God afterward used.

3. The joynt progress, And they walked both together Sept. and Cald. same. Thus prepared for their worship they make on together willingly to the place, ver. 6.

Ver. 7.

4. The mutual conference in the way. Wherein note. 1. Isaacs advocacy, And Isaac spake to Abraham his father, and said my father. Saying father, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. In which expression may be noted. 1. His simplicity. 2. His humility. 3. His duty to inquire of his father in such matters of God. Grace and nature may make him call him father, which doubles wrought not a little upon Abrahams spirit.

2. Abrahams answer, And he said, behold me, my son. What is the matter son? Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Natural affection, makes him reply, and fit himself to converse. Behold here am I faith Abraham what is the matter my son?

3. Isaacs question, And he said behold the fire, and the wood, but where the lamb for burnt-offering? Sept. and Cald. same. That this is a question of one ignorant or doubting, is to be presumed; he was bred up in the course of sacrificing to God, therefore must he know the requisits hereunto; and when he saw fire, and wood, and knife, and no lamb, this puts him upon the question and this occasion's a full answer. ver. 7.

Ver. 8.

4. Abrahams reply, And Abraham said, my son, God will provide for himself a lamb for a burnt offering. Son, God will see for himself a sheep, &c. Sept. My son there will be revealed before God for himself a lamb for a burnt offering. Cald. The reply is not direct as to that which Abraham knew was commanded, but yet an answer of truth. Carrying in it perhaps more than Abraham thought of at that time. 1. It carrieth tenderness of a father to his son, not willing to terrifie him with the discovery of God that he must be the sacrifice himself. 2. It carrieth full satisfaction of truth, that God would provide for himself an offering, where-with Isaac was quieted; which providence did effect. 1. That Isaac was the oblation in faith. 2. That the ram was the burnt offering in type. 3. That Christ the Lamb of God was to be the sacrifice in truth. All was carried in his reply, though Abraham did not for present understand it.

Fifthly. The issue of all the conference, which was their proceeding to the work, And they walked on both together. Sept. and Cald. same. In short, Abraham is not stopped nor Isaac startled at this answer, but hearts are carried on together to the intended work, ver. 8.

D. 4. Soules prepared for Gods Sacrifice, must move onward to do it. Ver. 6.

D. 5. Children of promise have confidence to call on their father in time of doubt and trouble.

D. 6. Gracious fathers offer themselves for good unto the call of such children.

D. 7. Gracious soules are inquisitive after all requisits for Gods worship or sacrifice. Ver. 7.

D. 9. Gods providence alone doth prepare that sacrifice which is pleasing to himself.

D. 10. Soules satisfied with Gods providence, go on cheerfully to perform the hardest duties. Ver. 8.

2. Now followeth the act of execution by Abraham, whereabout we have to note, these more immediate passages.

1. Their attaining to the place of offering And they came to the place which God had told unto him. Sept. and Cald. same. After all their motions they reach the place appointed, and sat not down until they came came thither, where God must have his service performed to him: faith and love to God carrieth them home, both father and son.

2. The structure of an Altar there for the service to be done. And there Abraham built an Altar. Sept. and Cald. same. 1. The builder is said to be Abraham, but doubtless not without his son; It is to be presumed that he helped his father in the work. 2. The building was an Altar, such as God had commanded, to be made of earth, according as the law afterward declared; Hereabout they both labored doubtless, and quickly finished it for the oblation to be made thereon. So their faith maketh them also observe Gods will for Gods work.

3. The ordering of the wood. And he ordered or disposed the wood. Cald. same.

Put on the wood, Sept. Surely herein is to be supposed that Isaac was helpful to his father also, though the ruling of the action belong to Abraham.

1. The matter disposed, is the wood and fessel to consume the sacrifice. 2. The order is a fit disposition of all for the present service: It was not contumeliously to be laid on an heap, but fittest for consuming the sacrifice. Faith make's them work orderly in Gods service.

4. The binding of the sacrifice. And he bound Isaac his son. Sept. and Cald. same.

Herein Abraham is agent and Isaac patient. Neither can it be credibly thought, that this should be done in silence without any conference between the father and son. Doubtless now Abraham openeth to him the will of God, and what sacrifice he required, even Isaac himself, the son of his fathers love; And sheweth how faith had carried him out against natural affection to do the will of God, and therefore how much it concerned the son of promise to be obedient thereunto. Isaac resisteth not, but being strong in faith no less submits himself to the will of God for suffering, than his Father for acting in such a sad tragedy as was commanded.

Josephus personates both Father and son speaking to each other in this matter. It is evident in the issue, Isaac yields himself to be bound, for otherwise his Father could not do it, he being able enough to resist him, and having reason enough that might be suggested thereunto. Two examples of mighty faith. Something like was Jephthahs daughter: Judg. 11. 36.

5. The laying of it on the pile of wood, the next act foregoing the fatal stroke.

And he put him on the altar upon the wood.

Sept. and Cald. same. 1. The agent, the same Father. 2. The patient, the same son, who as a lamb before the shearer so opened he not his mouth, willing to be laid on, to be an oblation unto God. 3. The act transient from Abraham to Isaac, the one laid him on, and the other content so to be placed upon the wood. So much further faith works in both, ver. 9.

6. The last act for execution, which now commeth even to Isaacs throat And Abraham put forth his hand and took the knife to kill his son. Cald. same.

Ver. 10.

Stretched out his hand to take a sword, &c. Sept. 1. His hand is put forth by faith. 2. The knife is taken up toward the throat of his son. 3. The act was now in doing to shed his blood upon the altar. So far Abrahams faith was justified by his obedience, in such an hard temptation as this. Two memorable examples of faith.

1. In Abraham, (1) He preferred God and his will. (2) He denied himself. (3) He offered his son. Heb. 11. 17. Jam. 2. 21. 22. 23. Herein he was a type of God the Father, making the soul of his son an offering for sin.

2. In Isaac, (1) He preferred God before his own life. (2) He denied himself to the uttermost of his being. (3) He was willing to become a sacrifice unto God. And herein was he a type of the son of God. Both are examples imitable, in exercising faith towards God, ver. 10.

It Learneth us.

D. 1. Children of faith go thorough and reach home to the place and service which God appoints. So Abraham and Isaac.

D. 2. Faith raiseth the altar and useth it to the end which God commandeth. So now Christs God-head.

D. 3. Faith ordereth all things sweetly for the sacrifice and Worship of God as he commandeth.

D. 4. Faith offereth a dearest son in sacrifice to God in purpose, though he be kept alive in event. Ver. 9.

D. 5. Indeavors and works to the utmost must justify such faith until God stop them.

D. 6. The son's of promise are willing by faith to be made sacrifices to God at his call. Ver. 10.

3. The next general head of this Chapter is Gods coming in to save Isaac, and comfort Abraham. As is related, ver. 11. 12. Wherein we have.

1. Gods call to Abraham with his reply, ver. 11. These terms are considerable in this passage. 1. The term of connection, which immediately knits this call to Abrahams act of taking the knife. No sooner corncommeth Abraham to the pinch, extremity, or last act of execution but in that moment commeth God in to help. Then he calls back to save.

Ver. 11.

And the Angel of Jehovah called to him out of the heavens and said Abraham, Abraham.

Angel of the Lord, &c. Sept. and Cald. — 2. The party calling, the Angel of Jehovah or the Angel Jehovah; for this was not a created Angel, but Jehovah himself as appears by his word, ver. 11. It was therefore the Son of God, who was the angel of the Covenant, he calleth here in a fit time. 3. The place whence the call came, it was expressly from heaven; this circumstance was apparent, and this Abraham knew, none but heavens call could stop his hand. This is emphatical here. 4. The call itself, which was of Abraham by name. He called and said, Abraham, Abraham. Wherein note. 1. The truth of the call, the voice of God appeared. 2. The importunity of it, by doubling his name, Abraham, Abraham, speaking thus in a kind of passionate expression, being intent upon Abrahams action to stop it.

3. Abrahams reply, — And he said, behold me. — Sept. and Cald. same. 1. The replier is Abraham called. 2. The reply itself, an expression of his attention unto God, knowing it to be his voice; he hath respect to God before and in his work still to follow Gods will, and to stop where God bids him stop. ver. 11.

2. Gods charge to Abraham, ver. 12. Wherein.

1. A stop enjoined him in his present work of offering in his son.

Ver. 12.

And he said, thou shalt not send or put forth thy hand against the young man, and thou shalt do nothing to him. — Lay not thy hand upon the child, Sept. — Stretch not out thy hand, &c. Cald. The whole is an inhibition upon Abraham from proceeding further in the sacrificing of his son. Where we may note.

1. The power inhibiting, God, the same who tempted him.

2. The party inhibited, Abraham, at the point of execution.

3. The thing inhibited; the killing of his son, in a double expression. 1. Put not out thine hand against the young man, draw back Abraham, lay down the knife, proceed no further. 2. Do nothing to him, that is, of hurt, much less kill him; for doubtless good he must do unto him, unbind him, set him at liberty, and let him live to see Gods promise. Here was a kind of resurrection, for in a figure or parable Abraham now received his son from the dead, Hebr. 11. 19.

2. The reason of this injunction is added here. — Because now I know that thou fearest Elohim, and hast not kept back thy son, thine only one from me. — Cald. same. — Thou hast not spared.

thy beloved son for my sake. Sept. The whole reason of the prohibition is, the evidence given sufficiently now by Abraham, of his faith, love, and feare towards God; which experiment God aimed at in this trial, and that being effected there was no more need of going farther in the work. In the whole, these particulars come to notice.

1. Evidence to satisfaction made to God, for now I know. Did not God know what Abraham was before? Surely yea, therefore is this to be understood as spoken after the manner of men concerning God; he needs no experiments to know men, he must needs know the work of his own hands; but now he speak's thus for our sakes, that this act of Abraham was abundantly scintillical to any.

2. The conclusion evidenced, that Abraham feared God, the exercise of one affection is put instead of the whole work of obedience, faith, love, &c. So the fear of God is used often. Now this was demonstrated concerning Abraham. That God doth acknowledge it.

3. The medium of this demonstration, for he withheld not his son, his only one from God. He that denieth himself to the uttermost, and spareth not the dearest thing from God, he must needs fear God, but Abraham did so, therefore he must fear God. There is no difficulty in the terms, most have bin spoken unto already. To that Querie, why God would not have Isaac offered when he had commanded it? I shall return thus. 1. The will of God is reason enough. 2. It was enough to prove Abrahams faith and obedience. 3. God would have Isaac to live and receive his promise, rather then raise him from the dead. 4. God would teach Abraham and all, that he delights not in mans blood; and so condemn the insatinations of Satan this way. 5. God would thus comfort Abraham and no otherwise. 6. God would have us learn, that faith suffers no prejudice by obedience, and so encourage us to believe.

Learn now from it.

D. 8. Gods inhibition comes timely in, when such prejudice is like to be done to his Law. So it was here.

D. 9. God speaks and works sometimes after the manner of men, to prove the faith and love of Saints.

D. 12. When God hath evidenced enough the faith and love of his, he stops his fiery trials. So here. Ver. 12. In the end he will comfort his Saints.

4. The next head in the history of Abrahams trial, is his return to God, ver. 13. 14. Which is by way of sacrifice and praise, in which passage are considerable. 1. Abrahams discovery of a sacrifice.

Ver. 13.

And Abraham lifted up his eyes and saw, and behold a Ram behind holden in a thicket by his horns. — One ram held in a shrub, fabeck, &c. Sept. — Behold a Ram after he was caught in a tree, &c. Cald. All here expressed is about Abrahams discovery, but how came he now to see it? Who brought it to him? Surely here was the word made good, which he spake to Isaac, God will provide a Lamb. It was his providence onely, that brought this to be sacrificed instead of Isaac. It seems to be as if he had said, Abraham, Abraham, spare Isaac, see here is the sacrifice which for this time I have provided for my self. Hereupon, Abraham lift's up his eyes, and seeth. Herein.

1. The connection sheweth the occasion of Abrahams discovery, it was immediately upon Gods call. 2. The means of discovery, lifting up eyes and looking. 3. The matter of discovery, A Ram behind him; about which various idle fancies there be. 1. Of Rabbins, who say it was one created at the beginning, and kept 300 years, which agrees with other fables, that the Devill hath taught them to make, for abusing scripture. 2. Others argue, how could this be the same, of which Abraham spake? That was a lamb, and this a ram; which may very well agree, that a ram may be a lamb of such age as to have horns; but suppose Abrahams word was onely general, a lamb, for any other kind which God required for sacrifice, which is most probable, this knot then is easily untied. 4. The manner of discovery of the ram, he was tied in a thicket by the horns, there God offered him to Abraham so intangled, that he might soon take him. The conceit of the word Sabeck to signifie a goat is groundless, as some. Or to make it as a proper name: It notes a perplexed thing and in the woods, any thick briars, or shrubs out of which it is hard to deliver any thing intangled. Whether this were created newly, or brought to that place by a special hand is not worth contending, this being certain that it was a fruit of Gods special providence. 2. Abrahams sacrificing of it.

And Abraham went and took the Ram, and made him to ascend for an ascension and offered him for a burnt-offering instead of his son. — For Isaac his son. Sept. — Cald. same Hebr. In which passage may be observable. 1. The connection of Abrahams work to his discovery, so soon as he saw what God had provided, he stops not to follow his providence, and word. 2. His action, He went, he took, he offered the ram, herein he is not backward to give unto God his own.

Quest. It is questioned, how Abraham could take that which was not his own to offer unto God?

Answ. It is as easily answered; that it was Gods, & he brought it unto him, who is the God of all the earth, and he is Lord of all, he giveth it to Abraham, therefore he wronged no man by giving it again to God. 3. The form of his acting, it was Worship by burnt-offering, which God appointed unto the time of the coming of the lamb of God into the world. Abraham and his, had need of expiation by blood, and so God disciplined them and his Church to guide them unto the true blood of sprinkling, which they must have in his own Job. 33. son. 4. The end and use of this action, v. 24. it was instead of his son; so Isaac was the oblation of faith, the ram of sense in type, but the Son of God in truth; who instead of all the children of promise offered himself to God. Either they must dye or some for them, & none but the son of God will serve, who is the true lamb that God provides. ver. 13. Thirdly Abrahams memorial in thankfulness for such reasonable appearance of God, to end his trial so sweetly.

Where

Wherein are to be observed. 1. The memorial itself, in giving that place a name for ever.

Ver. 14. And Abraham called the name of that place, Jehovah will see, or provide. The Lord hath seen. Sept. With respect to that past. — And Abraham prayed and sacrificed in that place, and said before the Lord, here generations shall serve. Cald. Note herein. 1. The imposor of the name, Abraham, not without inflict from God. 2. The name imposed, God will provide, as now he had done; the Caldee paraphrase read's with respect to the Church of God, which after should serve there in Gods temple; but this is from the letter. 3. The object of imposition, that place where he was brought to the extremity of temptation; and then God gave in a ransom. This beareth the name, as a signal of Gods providence. Such means of perpetuating Gods memory to generations have bin used by the Saints of old.

2. The use of this memorial expressed, That it is said to this day, in the mount, Jehovah will be seen. The Lord hath been seen. Sept. — Therefore it was said in this day, in this mountain Abraham sacrificed before the Lord. Cald. This from the letter. In which are two uses carried. 1. One implied, which is thanksgiving unto God, that his name should be spoken of with praise. 2. Another expressed, that it should be a perpetual doctrine for faith in the Church; that in the mount of extremity, God will appear, and provide sweetly for his tempted ones, that soules might be perswaded to trust in him. ver. 14.

5. The next particular in the first general of Abrahams trial, is Gods confirmation of his Covenant unto him by oath, after all the trial of his faith and obedience.

Wherein occur.

1. Gods call, vers 15. — And Ver. 15.

the Angel of Jehovah called to Abraham the second time out of heaven. (Sept. and Cald. same.)

1. The terms of connection she-weth that all this immediately followeth upon Abrahams faith, obedience, sacrifice and praise given to God. Immediately hereupon God appears again. 2. The author of the call is no created Angel, but the angel Jehovah, as was shewed in his former call, ver. 11. 3. The object called is Abraham now escaped out of his fiery trial. 4. The order of it, the second time, once before he called him to stay his hand from Isaac, and to offer the sacrifice which God provided; all which being done according to Gods will, he call's now again to him for his consolation. 5. The place from whence the call commeth, it is from heaven the throne of Gods holyness, whence all that is revealed is full of majesty, and power and truth; the highest and the best of things are from thence. Thus the call is set out.

D. 4.

D. 4. Heavens consolation is sent downe here upon Saints below, while they conscientiously serve God who is above. Ver. 15.

2. Gods oath, ver. 16. 17. 18. About which we are to note.

1. The form of it. — And he said, by my self have I sworn, saith Jehovah. Sept. same. By my word have I sworn, &c. Cald. — This is the first time we read of Gods swearing, and the highest way of confirming promises. It is a sweet condescension of God, thus to bear up poor creatures by such wayes, which to them seem the surest. God hath no need of swearing for himself, but for our fakes. Herein note.

1. The authority herein appealed unto, Jehovah himself. Swearing must be by the greatest, now because God had no greater he swore by himself, as the Apostle speaketh. Hebr. 6. 13. So we read, he swore by himself, Jer. 22. 5. Sometime by his great name, Jer. 44. 26. Sometime by his soul, Jer. 51. 14. Sometime by his holyness, Amos. 4. 2. All which denote but God himself the most high.

2. The appeal or force of the oath itself, which is the form, I have sworn, that is, put my self and being as it were to pledge, all I am and have, do I make over to thee by oath, for making good of what I have spoken. Let my being not be, if I fail thee. O infinite obligation!

2. The occasion of it, — Because for that thou hast done this thing, and kept back thy son, shine only one. — And hast not spared thy beloved son for me. Septu. — Hast not spared thyne only son. Cald. Herein.

1. The rational particles do not here intend causality, that Abraham by this should deserve of God this ingagement, but to note only the series and order of Gods manifesting himself unto him; God gave the promise freely to Abraham before, when he called him out of Ur of the Caldees, therefore he could not now deserve it of him; however in the way of duty God vouchsafeth to give him further confirmation of it.

2. The thing itself whereupon God offereth this oath is expressed two wayes, 1. Thou hast done this word or thing, viz. that which I commanded, thou hast fully done it. 2. Thou hast not withheld thy son shine only one. Thou hast parted with thine only inderaments for my sake. In doing this thou shalt not loose thy labour, I will swear to thee all the good I have promised.

Quest. Why should God swear yet to Abraham?

Answ. 1. It was Gods free will. 2. Though Abraham was strong in faith, yet this made him stronger. 3. It was done for the Churches sake to the end of the world, that they might also have strong consolation in the truth and certainty of Gods promise.

It learneth us.

D. 1. God of his free grace sweareth promises to faith, as well as make's them.

D. 2. In obeying, not for it, doth God confirm his promise unto faith.

D. 3. God spare's not his oath to them for their comfort who spare not inderaments for him. Ver. 6. Gods oath was better then Abrahams Isaac.

3. The matter of Gods oath followeth, with a repetition of Abrahams work wherein God met him, ver. 17. 18. First. The matter unto which God here sweareth containeth these heads.

1. Benediction in general. — Ver. 17.

That in blessing I will bless thee. — Truly blessing I will, &c. Sept. —

Cald. as Hebr. Herein, God sweareth to Abraham, that is, pledgeth his very being to him. 1. To give him all sweetness of good, spiritual and temporal, as before opened, Chap. 12. Carried under the name of blessing; which is an effectual speaking good, or doing good for him. 2. To give him all fullness which is imported in the reduplication, blessing I will bless. 3. To give him assurance of all this good, which is carried in that asseveration Surely I will bless; as well, as in the doubling of the terms.

2. Multiplication of him in his seed, — And multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens, and the sand upon the lip of the sea, or the sea shore. — Sept. an Cald. same. Herein God sweareth the multiplication of the seed of Abraham to receive the former blessing. 1. Positively expressed, I will multiply. 2. Comparatively, with respect to stars and sand on the sea shore, formerly compared with the dust on the ground; this was performed very much in his natural seed, but much more in his ingrafted branches from the gentiles.

3. Dominion of his seed. — And thy seed shall inherit the gate of his enemies. — The cities of their adversaries. Sept. — And thy sons shall inherit the cities of them that hate them. Cald. Hereunto also God sweareth to Abraham, that his seed should prevail, judge, and have dominion over all enemies, all which is carried in the possession of their gates, where judgment was wont to be executed, and the strength of cities usually lay. 1. This might partly and at somtimes mes be made good to his natural seed. 2. Eminent was it made good indeed by Christ, the special seed of Abraham, who vanquished the very gates of Hell, and before he have done, he will have all the gates of his enemies. ver. 17.

N n 2 mes

Ver. 18.

4. Propagation of blessing by his one eminent seed thorough all nations, And in thy seed shall be blessed all the nations of the earth. Sept. same. — And for thy sons shall be blessed all the people of the earth. Cald. — The nations shall bless themselves in that promised seed by faith, &c. Hereunto also God tweareth, and ingather his very being to Abraham. 1. The subject of this good is all Nations, such as beleeve among all. 2. The good sworn is as before, blessing of adoption, righteousness, holiness and glory, with all appurtenances here below. 3. The means whereby this good is to be conveyed, is the mediating seed, the Lord Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of God, and by the flesh assumed, the transcendent seed of Abraham. So the Apostle expressly interpret's these words against Jewish and heretical glosses, he said, in thy seed as one, and that is Christ. Gal. 3. 16. Psa. 72. 17. Secondly, the duty wherein God found Abraham, when he gave out this oath, which is in his faith and obedience.

Because that thou hast heard by my voice, or hast bin persuaded. — Because thou hast obeyed, &c. Sept. — For that thou hast obeyed my word. Cald. 1. The rational particle argueth no deserving cause of Gods oath to Abraham, but only the consequence of one grace of God upon another, assurance of blessing upon obedience, both which God gave. 2. The matter itself which God regarded, obedience to his word, wherein while Abraham was servant, God was pleased to adde his oath unto his promise for greater consolation. This is the seventh, the last, and the greatest appearance of God to Abraham toward the shutting up of his pilgrimage.

Wherein two terms are noted.

1. His coming to his servants. And Abraham returned to his young men. Sept. and Cald. same. Now he maketh good his word better than he thought of, when he went from them, he and Isaac, doubtless both come together, however the Father is onely named. He left not his son in the mount, nor sent him to Schem, as the Jewes fable is, but they went to their own family now to walk with God there; but first they reach the young men left behind at a distance for this time.

2. Their return home. And they arose, and went together to Beer-sheba, and Abraham sat down and dwelt in Beer-sheba. Cald. same. — To the well of the oath. Sept. 1. His safe returne to his own place. 2. His safe habitation is here reported; which carrieth not onely his bare coming home, and abiding there; but doubtless all his conversation in family duties, walking before and with them in Gods fear. Ver. 24. Quest. 1. Why is this line of Nahor here inserted?

Answ. It seemeth, 1. To shew whence Rebekah was, whom not long after this, Isaac took to be his wife, and therefore it serveth to give light to that history. 2. To shew the descent of Gods true visible Church on the fathers side from Abraham, and on the mothers from Nahor, as it descends from Isaac. 3. To shew that in those parts God also had his Church or some families fearing his name, so it was in Nahors, whome therefore Joshuah reckons as a father of Israel, though it seemeth Gods worship was not so pure among them.

Quest. 2. What was this concubine, and were such lawfull?

Answ. 1. They were halfwives, their name commeth from a word noting division; They were enjoyed as wives, yet in subjection to the true wife as to household government, neither did their children inherit. 2. As to their use, surely it was irregular, for from the beginning it was not so.

CHAP. XXIII.

IN this Chapter the history of the Church is continued to the end of Sarahs dayes. Some space of time there was spun out, from the time of Isaacs offering, to his mothers death, which was about twelve years, wherein nothing is mentioned of the churches affaires in Abrahams family; where-as doubtless some charges were in altering his habitation from Beersheba to Hebron, &c. where now Sarah expired. But this is the liberty of Gods Spirit to shew us as much of those times, as he thought needful for us. Here we see he passeth from the mention of Rebekahs birth, to the relation of Sarahs death. One mother of the faithful ceaseth, and another is now preparing by whom God maketh good his promise of propagating his church. In this Chapter may be noted three generalls.

1. Sarahs Expiration. ver. 1. 2.
2. Abrahams provision for her burial. ver. 3. to 18.
3. Sarahs funeral. ver. 19. to 20.

In the first general we have to consider these particulars.

1. The term of Sarahs life set down, Ver. 1.

And the lives of Sarah were an hundred years, and twenty years, and seven years, (even) the years of the lives of Sarah. — The life of Sarah was 127. years. Sept. 127. years. Cald. Wherein these terms are considerable. 1. The subject of this history spoken of, 1. By her name Sarah, the wife of Abraham, the mother of the promised seed, a Princess in faith, and renowned with God, 2. By her condition viz. Her lives, It is a plural expression here, which hath given occasion to some of vain commenting upon a threefold life in man; but the reason of this plural expression is given better from the true significance of life here, which is not barely life and being in the world, but all the adjuncts and varieties of changes in this time of life, whereof she had experience, being a Companion of Abraham in all his pilgrimage. Sometimes it was a life of faith, sometimes of fear, sometimes of peace, sometimes of trouble; Now her life in respect of all this variety of providence adjoined, may well be called lives, these lives are here recorded. 2. The duration of these lives asserted, an hundred twenty seven years, and this not only spoken singly, but once and again; These the years of Sarah's lives. The fable of the Jewes is foolish, about the threefold repetition of years; for it is the usual expression in numbring the years of all the Patriarchs, to adde years still to every number. That to be noted here is, 1. The rarity of this record, this the Spirit doth for Sarah, which is not done for any other woman. 2. The plain sense of it, which is no more but the utmost extent of her life below under all providences, and that she was not taken away until the promised seed was established by her. 3. The certainty of it in the reiteration, these the lives of Sarah. ver. 1.

Nn 3 com.

Ver. 2.

Secondly. Sarahs expiration, wherein are related, 1. Her death, And Sarah died. (So Sept. and Cald.) that is, yielded up her Spirit to God who gave it, and left her body for the earth. That she should dye for grief upon sacrificing Isaac, is a fable, her death was twelve years after that trial; but doubtless God then had numbered her dayes, beyond which she must not pass, and at that term of life she expired; ceasing to be with men, that she might be with God. 2. The place of her death set out under two names. 1. Kiriath Arba, In the city of Arboch, Sept. So it was called from Arba, a gyant either the founder or conqueror of it sometimes. Jos. 14, 15. 2. Hebron or Chebron in the land of Canaan, which was so called in the time of Moses, and therefore not imposed by Calebs son, at his vanquishing of it. Jos. 14. 14. Sometimes also, it was known by that name of the plain, grove and city of Mamre, Gen. 13. 18.

3. Abrahams lamentation over her, And Abraham came to mourn for Sarah, and to weep. To bewail Sara, and lament. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. —

1. The mourner here is Abraham, the Lord or husband of Sarah, The father of the faithful, yet he puts not of natural affection, upon such a stroke of God. 2. His motion; He came; It is inquired whence he came? For it is expressed whither, even to the place where Sarah dyed. Some think he came now from Beersheba, and that Sarah was removed before to Hebron, and died in her husbands absence; but it seems improbable that these two companions should now part houses at such a distance;

but the thing is not expressed, however I conceive it likely, they had removed back from Beersheba to Hebron again; And that Abraham came now from his owne tent to bewail his dead, where she lay in her tabernacle. How ever no danger in conceiving either way, when things are not revealed. In fine the phrase of comming to lament, is no more than setting himself to lamentation, without any bodily motion. 2. The end of his comming, it was to pay the duty of natural affection to the dead, as to the living he had done. Wherein as acted by Abraham may be noted, 1. The naturalness of this sad posture for the dead. 2. The greatness, in doubling expressions, lament and weep. 3. The goodness of it, as it was (doubtless) ordered, moderated, and directed by faith. It is noted by some, that the writing the middle letter in Bacah, to weep in a smaller character, notes moderation in weeping; but it is a phanly. Abrahams faith giveth better aime to guests at that, then the will of scribes.

2. The next generall containeth the history of Abrahams provision for her buriall which was by a new purchase of a burying place: Hereabout are severall discourses. 1. First between Abraham and the Hittites.

In which passage note.

1. Abrahams motion about it unto the inhabitants of that place, Ver. 3. 4.

Wherein we read.

1. His stop in his mourning, And Abraham rose from before his dead, from upon the faces of his dead. Sept. and Cald. to fame. 1. The subject, Abraham the believing mourner. 2. His action, he riseth, doubtless he was sitting or lying in a sad posture before Sarah, but that duty being being ordered by faith now he stirrs himself up from immoderate grieving, and put's a stop to naturall affection, not mourning without hope. So sitting note's a posture of sadness as in Jobs friends, and rising a posture of comfort, in many places. 3. The term from whence, is from before his dead, so Sarah is ruled severall times. The relation of saints ceaseth not, though other relations of husband and wife do. She is Abrahams dead now.

2. His bespeaking the inhabitants, wherein. 1. His address to them, And he spake to the sons of Heth, that is, the Hittites which come from Heth the son of Canaan. Gen. 10. 5. — Sept. and Cald. fame. 2. His preface to them humbling himself, A stranger, and sojourner I with you. So he win's into their affection.

Ver. 4.

He challengeth nothing, but as a stranger present's his desire. So he and the saints of God by faith accounted themselves pilgrims below. Psa. 39. — Heb. 11. This alio he urgeth to their humanity to yeild to a stranger. Sept. and Cald. same.

3. His petition to them, Give me a possession of a grave with you, and I will bury my dead; from before me. — Give me a possession with you, &c. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. 1. The matter desired is a place for buriall, which he would have as his own from them; though he were heir of all, yet he had not a foot in his own possession but this purchase. The time was not yet come. 2. The manner of his request, he desireth it to be given him as to his own peculiar possession, but yet not without the due price, as after. 3. The end of his request, to bury the dead out of his sight; 1. Nature urgeth this according to Gods injunction: to give dust to dust. Gen. 3. 2. Grace guided him thus to bury by himself, both to separate from the nations in death as well as in life; and to keep possession of the promised land by dead though not yet by living; and mainly to lye together in hope of a resurrection.

As to that conjecture, that Abraham came now from Beersheba to Hebron; to mourn; because he faith I am a stranger. &c. It seemeth not to be concluding. For, 1. So he called himself in every place where he lived, at Beersheba as well as here. 2. He dwelt in this place before he went to Beersheba, and therefore could not be altogether unknown in those parts. 3. In the Hittites answer they acknowledg him to be a mighty Prince among them. It is therefore most probable that there he lived with Sarah when she died, onely by faith call's himself a stranger.

1. The repliers, the children of Heth, or Hittites, Ver. 5.

2. Their answer, which consists of two parts. 1. Their courteous gratulation, Hear my Lord, thou a Prince of God with us. — Not so fir, hear us, thou art a king from God among us. Sept. — Yeild to us, our Lord, thou art a Prince before God among us, Cald.

Ver. 6.

The Seventy make this answer to deny what Abraham meaneth, and to offer somewhat els not directly proposed by him, not so my Lord, as you have proposed it; and indeed look upon Abrahams reply to them again; and it imports, that though their answer were kind, yet it was not full to what Abraham intended. So the Caldee seemeth to imply, yeildous, and rest in what we shall say, &c.

Herein then note.

1. Their call to Abraham, hear us my Lord, what we shall propose to you in this.

2. Their compellation, agnition of him, thou art a Prince of God among us, or in the midst of us. — From God. Sept. — Before God. Cald. Such acknowledgment Abimelech gave him before. Now a Prince of God, note's a most excellent, mighty and puissant Lord, set up of God eminently above the rest. So Cedars of God. Psa. 80. 11. Mountains of God are expressed, Psa. 36. 7. such as are most excellent. So these Hittites esteem esteem Abraham, God had made him so glorious before them. 2. Their concession, wherein are to be noted. 1. The matter granted, not a possession of his own for burial, as he desired, but a liberty to bury with them in the best of their Sepulchres.

In the choice of our Sepulchres bury thy dead. Sept. and Cald. to fame. So they give him leave of mingling his family in burial with them, even in the best of their Sepulchres.

2. The assurance given him of this grant, A man from us shall not withhold his Sepulchre from thee, from burying thy dead. Sept. and Cald. to same purpose. Wherein is granted. 1. Security from opposition. 2. Liberty to dispose of, and bury his dead, where and when he pleaseth.

Honored the people, &c. Sept. and Cald. In his demeanor his actions are two. 1. He arose from the place, where likely he was set, in token of respect unto them. 2. He bowed himself, that is, by way of civil respect towards them, respecting kindly their free proffer and so expressing thankfulness to them. 2. His communication with them. ver. 8. 9. Wherein. 1. A repetition of their kind answer.

And he spake with them saying, if it be with Ver. 8.

your soul to bury my dead from my face.

If ye have it in your souls, &c. Sept. If it be the pleasure of your soul, &c. Cald. This he repeats with a thankful mention of it. Onely the phrase is remarkable, if it be with your soul, that heartily and cordially ye grant me this. 2. A request unto them for their mediation, wherein note.

1. The work he intreateth. Hear me, and intreat for me, or meet, and intercede for me. 2. The object of this intercession With Ephron son of Zoar.

Saar. Sept. Zeor. Cald. ver. 3.

3. The matter of intercession.

And he shall give, or that he may give to me, the cave of Macpelah, which is his, which is in the end of his field. And let him give me the double cave, which is in part of his field. Sept. The side of his field. Cald. This was all, the making over to Abrahams right that cave, which is called double by the Seventy, but read here by ours as a proper name, it might be double also as some think.

4. The condition mentioned.

For full silver or money let him give it to me in the midst of you. For silver worth it, &c. Sept. For money worth. Cald. So he desireth it no other-wise than a purchase, where he profer's 1. A full price. 2. A desire of rendition to him upon this condition. 3. That this be done in the midst of them; which may be taken, either as a testimony of transaction between them, or els may note the circumscription of the place, that which is in the midst of you; so our Translators take it and add it to the last.

2. Now followeth Ephrons answer to this motion of Abraham. ver. 10. 11. Wherein we have to note.

1. His description by his place. And Ephron was sitting in the midst of the sons of Heb. Sept. same. stood, &c. Cald. (1) His dignity by his posture is noted, he was sitting as a chief among them. (2) His presence with them in the assembly. 2. His answer is observable. 1. In the form of it.

1. In word and exprellion he replieth. Ephron the Hittite answered Abraham saying.

2. In publick before witnesses, In the ears of the sons of Heb even all that enter the gate of his city; or all that entered the gate then in this solemn assembly. ver. 10.

Ver. 11.

2. In the matter of his reply, which containeth.

1. A correction of Abrahams desire, Not so my Lord, hear me. Byno means my Lord. Cald. Be with me Sir, and hear me. Sept. In all Ephron, corrects Abrahams desire, as to purchase it.

2. A concession more free than Abraham desired. 1. In the matter, both the field and the cave; Abraham desired the cave onely. 2. In the freeness of it, I give it thee, without money, three times is that word here repeated, I give it thee. 3. The evidence of this gift in the eyes of the sons of this people; who were witnesses enough.

3. A commillion for the end unto which it was desired, Bury the dead. Sept. and Cald. same. Where he giveth him full licence, that no more needed of discourse about it, but that this doth not falsifie Abraham, as appears in his further reply.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Men of the world have their place, dignity and respect among their own. So providence allot's them for orders sake.

D. 2. God make's great men of the world give answers of peace to goodmen in their straits.

D. 3. Ingenuity and freedom of Spirit, is comely for a man, much more for a Christian.

D. 4. Gods providence somtimes inlargeth the hearts of men to his people above their expectation. Especially in times of their afflictions as now it was. V. 11.

Thirdly. Now followeth the last discourse between Abraham and Ephron, which compleat's the purchase, wherein.

1. Abrahams proposition made again to Ephron, and thereabout, may be noted.

1. His deportment upon the preceding offer of Ephron. And Abraham bowed himself, &c. Worshipped, &c. Sept. and Cald. It was civil reverence as before, now repeated by him for the repeated kindness of the Hittites, and especially of Ephron. ver. 12.

2. His motion which now again he maketh to Ephron. Herein note 1. The form of making it. And he spake unto Ephron in the people of the ears of the land, saying. Sept. & Cald. to same. 1. It was by word of mouth. 2. It was publick before witnesses that all might be observed. 2. The matter of his motion, wherein. 1. He supposeth Ephrons former kindness, But if thou, a short speech, but supposing that he would do him the kindness profer'd.

Because thou art toward me Sept. present with me. If thou indeed doest good to me Cald. Here he layeth ground for what followeth. 2. He intreateth him. I would thou would'st hear me. Hear me. Sept. Yield to me. Cald. viz. In what he was now proposing. 3. He profereth and urgeth to take the worth, I will give the silver of the field, take of me, that is, the silver worth the field. Take the silver of the field from me. Sept. I will give silver for the field Cald. This he presseth without denial. 4. He promiseth acceptance to make use of it. And I will bury my dead there. Sept. and Cald. same. Upon the former condition of burying, thus he accepts a place for burial, and no other-wise. ver. 13.

2. Ephrons answer as to the price which Abraham desired. ver. 14. 15.

Herein. 1. The form of his answer. It was by speech as Abraham proposed to him. And Ephron answered, &c. ver. 14. Sept. and Cald. same. 2. The matter of his answer, wherein also.

1. His reverent bespeaking of him My Lord heard me. Not so Sir. Sept. Yield to me my Lord. Cald. He reverenceth him that counted himself a stranger.

2. His price mentioned, The land is of four hundred shekels of silver. I have heard of four hundred didrachms of silver. Sept. Which is worth four hundred shekels of silver. Cald. This he proposeth but not exacteth.

3. His sighting of the money. O o

Ver. 14.

Ver. 15.

Be.

Between me and between thee, what is this?

What should this between me and thee? Septu. — Cald. as Hebr.

4. His concession for the burial. Bury thy dead. (So Sep. and Cal.) Which is no more but a former grant. ver. 15.

3. Abrahams payment of the price. Wherein.

Ver. 16. 1. His yielding to Ephrons word. — And Abraham hearkned, &c. — Sept. and Cald. same.

2. His payment itself. — And Abraham weighed, &c. — Restored. Sept. Wherein are mentioned.

1. The manner of payment, by weight, not by tale. 2. The measure, 400 Shekels, the price set; what worth these shekels were of, is not agreed, but conceived to amount unto 25. 6d. a peece: which was called shekel of the sanctuary, because it was there to be a standard for the trial of other weights. These he weighed in full. 3. The evidence of the payment, it was before the children of Heth.

4. The quality of the money. It was, silver current with the merchant, that is, good and lawful money. The discourses of Ephrons sin in taking money, and the numeral letters in his name to four hundred, are but Cabalistical conceits. Here is a good pattern for buying and selling, no over-reaching, but the price fairly set and paid. So Abraham had this by possession, though God gave him not a foot to inherit as yet, so Stephen relate's it true. Acts 7. 5.

Ver. 16. — Approved to merchants. Sept. — Which was taken for merchandise in every promise. Cald. — 4. The assurance of the purchase made unto Abraham upon payment. Wherein.

Ver. 17. 1. The matter of purchase rehearsed in particulars.

1. The continent. — The field of Ephron, that which was his possession. Sept. and Cald. 2. The situation, which was in Macpelah, which was before Mamre, the field and the cave which was therein. Metonymically the field and cave are said to be in each other. — Double cave, Sept. and Cald. 3. The matters contained, and every tree, which was in the field, which was in every bound of it about. Sept. and Cald. to fame. 2. The ratification of all, it stood up, or was made to stand, that is, made sure to Abraham for a peculiar possession. — Sept. and Cald. have the same phrase. That is, surely, it was made over and delivered to Abraham as his own purchase. Ver. 17.

Ver. 18. 3. The evidence of this confirmation. In the eyes of the children of Heth, among all that go into the gate of his city. — Sept. and Cald. to fame. All that were in power, and people present, were witnesses to this purchase. So it could not be denied. And this was conceived to be a token of future possession of the land by Israel. As Jeremiahs purchase was of the return from captivity. ver. 18. one doubt upon all remains to be satisfied.

Quest. How may this be reconciled with that text. Act. 7. 16. Where it seemeth to be said, that Abraham bought a sepulchre of the sonnes of Emor, &c. If so, how could it be here of Ephron?

Ans. The distinguishing of the sentences rightly will clear this doubt. Stephen had proceeded so far in his relation of Israels ancestors, as to Jacob and the Patriarchs; whose death he mentions. ver. 15.

Their burial he shortly toucheth ver. 16. And indeed the brevity of his report begets this obscurity. The sentence is read altogether, which if distinguished according to the light which other scriptures afford, the knot may be untied. The Fathers therefore spoken of, must be divided into two ranks, of which 1. Some were carried or transported from Egypt to Sichem, as Joseph, &c. Jos. 24. 32. Here must one distinction be made. 2. Some were put in the sepulchre, which Abraham bought with a price of silver, as Jacob, when he died in Egypt, was carried thither, which was this of the cave of Machpelah, bought at this time of Ephron: now here at the summe of money, ought to be a distinction. 3. That which followeth should be read, besides that, of the sonnes of Emor the Father of Sichem. True it was, that Jacob bought a parcel of a field of Hamor the Father of Sichem for an hundred lambs; in which portion Joseph was buried, &c. But besides this, some of the Fathers were buried in Abrahams purchase, as Jacob, &c. Gen. 49. 29. Ch. 50. 13. Thus the sense is made plain, and no opposition between Moses and Luke. All the difficulty is about the defect of an article, הַשָּׂדֶה הַהוּא. The preposition וְ properly signifies, besides, and supplying that article, which is usual, the sense runneth clearly: that some of the Fathers who came out of Egypt, were laid in Abrahams sepulchre, besides those who were buried in Sichem.

CHAP. XXIV.

THE history of the Church being so farre carried on in the former Chapter as to the end of Sarahs life, and withall her death and funeral being recorded, with the purchase of a grave made by Abraham, to distinguish the Church from the world in death, as well as life. Three years providences toward Abrahams family are silenced, for Isaac was 37 years old, when his mother died, and now he was 40, when his Father in this Chapter, under Gods providing for him a wife. So that what events were in these three yeares intervenient, the Spirit concealth from us.

The next special matter therefore related in this Chapter after Sarahs funeral, is Gods remarkable Providence about the marriage of the promised seed Isaac, wherein we shall see how God ordereth the propagation of the Church, and in what line he is pleased to continue the same; wherein many sweet providences are observable all along.

In the whole Chapter these generalls may be observed.

1. Abrahams consultation with his servant about it. Ver. 1. 9.
2. The Servants execution of his Masters will. Ver. 10. 49.
3. The successe which God giveth to all. Ver. 50. 60.
4. The return of the servant with Rebekah. Ver. 61. 67.

In the first generall do occurre these particulars.

1. The occasion of this consultation. Ver. 1.

O o 2 2. The

2. The proposal made by Abraham to his servant. Ver. 2, 3, 4.
3. The execution made by the servant. Ver. 5.
4. The reply of Abraham for his satisfaction. Ver. 6, 7, 8.
5. The servants yielding to Abrahams desire. Ver. 9.

The first of these is contained in the first Verse wherein a twofold occasion of this consultation is noted.

Ver. 1.

1. Abrahams age. And Abraham was old, was gon into dayes. Hebr. Sept. and Cald. the same. This giveth him occasion now of looking out to settle the son of promise in such a place, wherein the propagation of the Church might be carried on. His years were 140. no great age compared with the Fathers before, but great indeed with respect to ages following; neither was it a decrepit state, but much of strength in it as after will appear. Yet at this time he thinks it duty under God to guide for his son.

2. Abrahams wealth and family. And 7 hovah had blessed Abraham in all things. Sept. and Cald. to the same. It is a foolish phantasy and false of the Jewes, that Becol is the name of a woman which should be Abrahams daughter, for he had none, and sacred History is silent of any such thing. It is an universal term onely, noting the universality of Gods blessing and prospering Abraham with all substance, though he had no possession but a grave. This he thinks of also to dispose his son according to Gods will.

Learn these morall truths hence.

- D. 1. Parents especially in the Church grown old should under God provide for children in marriage being ripe for it.
- D. 2. It is duty for parents under God to consider of disposing their estates, when old, unto their children. Ver. 1.

2. Abrahams proposal to his servant is made. Ver. 2, 3, 4. Wherein we have to observe.

Ver. 2.

1. The subject to whom he speaketh, his servant, set out in two expressions.
 1. By his age. And Abraham said to his eldest servant of his house, no youth he trusts with this.
 2. By his dignity. He that ruled over all that he had or was to him. that is.
 1. The Chiefe.
 2. The faithfullest of all.
 3. The wisest, who was as his steward. This is judged to be that Eliezer of Damascus, spoken of. Chap. 15.

2. Abrahams demand of him, which was to take an oath about his executing a special service faithfully. Herein note.

1. He calleth him to the form of swearing not read of before this time. Put I pray thee, or now, thy hand under my thigh. Sept. and Cald. same. Of this rite or ceremony of swearing we read here and in Jacobs case to Joseph. Gen. 47. 29. The Jewes conjecture it to be the place near Circumcision, as if it were to call upon the God of Circumcision in this matter. Some Christians have conceived the thigh to be the Hieroglyphicks of Generation, and thence look upon the Messiah to come out of Abrahams loins, and so to swear by him; but neither are convincing. It was doubtles a form used of subjection in such cases, of those who did swear fealty in any matter, and doubtles lawful. Ver. 2.

Ver. 3.

2. He demands his oath in the right power and authority of it, And I will make thee swear by Jehovah the God of the heavens and the God of the earth. Sept. same. By the word of the Lord God of heaven &c. Cald. In these Abraham draweth him onely to God, he that made all and is Judge of all, whose name is honored by swearing in judgement and truth: to the worship of the onely true God in this matter Abraham invites his servant.

3. He proposeth the matter of his oath which is expressed.

1. Negatively. That thou shalt not take a wife for my son of the daughters of the Canaanite, where I sit in the midst of it. Cald. same. For Isaac &c. with whom I dwell among them. Sept.

1. The subject prohibited was his servant; who is not to be understood, as if he had power of himself to bestow Isaac in marriage; but as one instrumental to persuade him or to lead him to such an act. It is probable Isaac had bin under his tuition.

2. The thing forbidden upon oath, the marriage of Isaac with any daughter of the Canaanites, among whom, Abraham was then set down. He would not bury with them, neither would he marry his son to them, no doubt he had warrant from God for this; and it was Gods law not to marry with Idolaters. Ver. 3.

2. Positively. But thou shalt go to my country and my kindred, and shalt take a wife to my son Isaac. Cald. to the same. Where I was born and to my tribe, and thence shalt thou take &c. Sept. Herein nothing unlawful is required from him, but according as God had appointed, so he binds his servant to perform punctually; place, family, person, were all pitched on by God. Ver. 4.

Ver. 4.

Quest. How should the servant take a wife for him, as a proxy?

Ans. Surely no, but as a messenger to deal deal in such a business, and treat about it by commission from him, and bring her to Abrahams place for marriage and cohabitation.

Quest. Why did he not send Isaac himself, as it may seem, more fit for such a business?

- Ans. It might be upon various accounts.
1. Because he was his onely son whom he could not spare.
 2. Or because he might fear his stay with them if he had gone.
 3. But the providence of God is the high reason who so ordered it.

It teacheth us.

- D. 1. Under God it becomes parents to be provident in bestowing children for marriage.
- D. 2. The gravest, wisest, holiest, and faithfullest counsellors are fittest for such work.
- D. 3. Forms of swearing are usefull though not essential unto the duty. Ver. 2.
- D. 4. Jehovah alone is the God of all, who must be honored in swearing by his name.
- D. 5. The oath of God is justly taken against marriage with Idolaters. Ver. 3.
- D. 6. Gods oath may bind members of the Church to marry in the families where God is known. Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

3. The exception or limitation made by Abrahams servant before he took his oath. Ver. 5.

Wherein observe.

1. His care supposed about the matter of his oath. And the servant said unto him, Perhaps the woman will not go after me to this land. Sept. and Cald. same. Holy prudence it was in him to avoid scruples in swearing, that he might do it in judgement, and truth, therefore he supposed such an event which in such cases might be usuall, woman love their own families.

2. His care thereupon. Shall I in reducing bring back thy son to the land where thou art gone out from thence? Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein he desires to know his mind plainly, that he might not be intangled about the matter which he sweareth, but exactly understand what was the mind of his masters imposing this duty on him: therefore he querieth to remove all scruples.

Learn hence.

- D. 1. In taking oaths imposed it, is a Saints duty to foresee snares and to avoid them.
- D. 2. Godly prudence teacheth in swearing to undertake nothing but possibilities. To swear in judgement. Jer. 4. 2.
- D. 3. In swearing about matters of contingency, it is just and duty to expedite difficulties by apposite queries there-about.

4. The reply of Abraham to his servant followeth. Ver. 6, 7, 8. Which containeth in it three things.

Ver. 6.

1. A prohibition. And Abraham said unto him, keep to thy self or take heed to thy self that thou return not my son thither. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein is an answer to his question, that by no means Isaac may go thither, whence God had called Abraham, when his son was in his loins.

Quest. How could Isaac return, seeing he was never there?

Ans. It is answered. 1. In Abrahams loins he was there, and so called out thence with his Father.

2. The term of returning may be used for any motion, so that the sense is onely, Isaac must not go thither.

3. It may be used in respect of Abraham that the son should not return thither whence his Father came.

Quest. Why might not Isaac go to that land?

Ans. 1. Gods call to Abraham was to come off, he and his seed.

2. Abraham would not have his son fall under a temptation of being withdrawn from the land of promise.

3. It was appointed of God that he should sojourn in Canaan as Abraham did. Otherwise it was no more a sin for him to visit his Fathers Country, than for Jacob afterward.

Learn hence.

- D. 1. Imposers of oaths ought to give just satisfaction to the scruples of them who take them.
- D. 2. Express denial of any matter in oath must be strictly observed with all caution.
- D. 3. Reversion from Gods promise to mans own choice is sinfull, and not to be allowed.

O o 3

D. 4.

D. 4. A wife must be left and forsaken rather than God disobeyed.
Veri 6.

Ver. 7.

2. A prædiction promisory, wherein we have to note.

1. The undertaker here expressed, Jehovah, described.

1. By the name of his being, He that was, and is, and is to come. He that puts into being all good events promised.

2. By his Power and propriety of place. The God of the Heavens, that is, that mighty one, whose throne is in heaven. Isai. 66. 1. and from on high can do what he pleaseth.

3. By his Act of grace in separating Abraham from his Country, who took me from the house of my Father and from the land of my kindred, where I was born, Sept. The land of my nativity. Cald. In this is a periphrasis of God, in a special act of separation of Abraham, that under him he might gather his Church; wherein his grace had eminently appeared; this was a just ground.

1. Of his not suffering Isaac to go back.

2. Of hope, that God would bring others from thence by the same grace, who might build his family.

4. By his Covenant both spoken and sworn unto. Both who spake, and who swore unto me saying to thy seed will I give this land.

To thee and thy seed, &c. Sept.

To thy sons, &c. Cald. Here be repeated the two immutable things wherein it was not possible for God to lye; given, that the heirs of promise should have strong consolation in all works and conditions whereunto God appointed them. As if he should say; that God who hath promised and sworn this land unto my seed, will bring a wife hither, and not carry my son back, whence I came.

2. The promise itself for encouragement. He shall send his Angel before thee or to thy face, and thou shalt take a wife to my son from thence. Sept. and Cald. same. Two things are here fore-told by Abraham in promise.

1. Help. God shall send his Angel before thee.

1. The power sending, God.

2. The assistant sent, an Angel of God a ministering Spirit appointed an helper to the saints.

3. The end of his mission, to make the way of the servant prosperous as to the work about which he was now sent.

Quest. How did the Angel help him in this matter?

Ans. 1. In guarding him in his way from evil Angels who might oppose him.

2. In ordering the motions of parties, to places of meeting, and actions tending to good success.

3. Possibly as instruments suggesting unto minds, and inclining them to yield to what was proposed.

2. Success. Thou shalt take a wife to my son from thence, Sept. and Cald. same. The verse is in the preter-tense but must need be read future here, because it is a promise, and is connected with that future God will send; but herein he notes the certainty of the event, as if it were done already, doubt not, thou shalt prevail to bring a wife from thence for my son, without peradventure. Ver. 7.

3. A clear resolution to the case supposed, wherein.

1. A discharge of him from his oath, if the matter he supposed shall fall out. But if the woman be not willing to come after thee, then thou shalt be clear from this my oath. Will not go with thee unto this land, &c. Sept. From my curse. Cald. Herein his doubt is cleared in the matter of the oath, that he may not be intangled.

2. A strict charge repeated of not bringing back his son Onely thou shalt not return my son thither. This an expresse answer. Sept. and Cald. same.

It instructs us.

D. 1. It is just to impose oaths, when men can assure them of Gods promise to help them.

D. 2. The engagement of Jehovah, God of heaven, for help, is a just ground of imposing work.

D. 3. Experience of Gods acts of grace to ourselves may encourage to expect it for our children in his way.

D. 4. God who hath Covenanted and sworn greater things for his Saints, may be trusted for lesse.

D. 5. Gods Angels are used by him toward making marriages in his Church. Ver. 7.

D. 6. Where God hath engaged by promise for any blessing, his Saints may surely expect it. Ver. 8.

2. The servants yielding to Abraham is recorded. Ver. 9. Wherein he submits himself to his masters will.

1. In the form of swearing. And the servant put his hand under the thigh of Abraham his Lord. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein is no more but his just obedience unto a lawful command. He did acknowledge his subjection and fealty by this rite.

2. Ip

Ver. 8.

2. In the act of swearing. And he swore unto him, that is, in calling upon the Lord God of heaven as witness and judge of his true intent, whose Majesty might make him fear to offend.

3. In the matter about what he swore, upon this word or matter proposed. Sept. and Cald. same. that is, that he would faithfully performe his will about the marriage of his son, not to match him, so farre as in him lay, to the daughters of the Hittites, but procure one for him of the house of his kindred.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Matters of duty being cleared, inferiours may submit to a lawful form of swearing thereunto.

D. 2. The Oath of God may justly be taken for faithfulness by inferiours in civil matters. Ver. 9.

1. The next general containeth the servants execution of his Masters will, & performance of his oath in matters which he had sworn. Ver. 10. 49. Wherein are,

1. His provision & journey. ver. 10. 11.

2. His prayer to God. ver. 12. 13. 14.

3. Gods providential answer. ver. 15. 21.

4. His treaty with Rebeckah. ver. 22. 28.

5. His entertainment by Laban. ver. 29. 33.

6. His declaring his message. ver. 34. 49.

To the first. Herein are recorded these particulars.

1. His provision for his journey thus expressed. And the servant took ten camels of the camels. &c. Two expresse heads of his provision we have here named.

1. Beasts, for their journey, by nature camels, by number ten, and by propriety his Masters. These were plentiful in those countries, and reported to be swift for pace, and strong for bearing, some say 800 or 1000 weight each. These however onely expressed, we must understand, had all their several men for guidance, and several burdens and furniture which they carried, all which must be understood with them; he took them not empty.

2. Goods, fitted for the business about which he went. And all the goods of his Lord. This is read causal to the former, in a parenthesis by ours (For all the goods of his Master were in his hand), therefore he took the camels, and all that he thought fit with him. The 70 read. And of all the goods of his Lord with him, which interprets well the Hebr. Some of the precious things and substance he took, to give presents unto them with whom he had to do. So the Cald. And carrying of all the best things of his Lord in his hand.

Ver. 10.

1. e. with him. Great preparation is this.

2. His motion. And he arose and went to Aram Nabaraim. To Mesopotamia. Sept. To Syria by Euphrates.

Cald. It was the country lying between the two rivers Euphrates and Tigris. So the Hebr. and Gr. both expresse. Again further is it described to the city of Nabor. This was Carra where Terah died, whether it steemeth Nabor came, and dwelt there, but moved no further. Sept. and Cald. same.

Quest. How is this called Abrahams country?

Ans. 1. Not that it was the place of Abrahams nativity, for he came out of Ur of the Caldees.

2. But taking the continent at large for all the country between the two rivers, so are we to understand it to be stiled Abrahams. ver. 10.

3. His stage or resting place, where we have to note.

2. The time. At the time of the evening, the time when women who draw water goe forth. Sept. and Cald. to the same, the time is expresse 2 ways.

1. It was evening, the latter part of the day.

2. By the work or business of it, when the women use to come forth to draw water.

Quest. What evening was this, and how long was his journey?

Ans. 1. It is a fable that he should finish his journey in one day, it being conceived no lesse than 360 English miles.

2. It is safely conceived that he lingered not, but a competent time must needs be granted to finish such a journey, the Spirit is silent in all but onely the season of the day: how many dayes his journey was, it concern's us not to know, because the Spirit thought not fit to reveal it.

4. His judgment upon the event

And herein I shall know that thou hast done mercy to my Lord. Abraham is added by Sept. and Cald. so he desireth in this Way to be confirmed.

Quest. Was it lawfull for him to begge this signe?

Ans. 1. It appears lawfull in him because God answered it, and gave in his desire.

2. This was not asked without Gods instinct.

3. It was proper to discover the ingenuity of the party desired for a wife. Yet this may not be brought into an ordinary example to limit God in prayer, but reasonable discoveries in doubtful cases may be desired with submission to Gods will. ver. 14.

3. Gods

3. Gods providentiall answer to the mans prayer followeth. ver. 15. 21.

Wherein are to be considered several steps of Gods providence in this matter.

1. The immediat coming of Rebekah unto the place. ver. 15. 16.

Ver. 15. The infancie of it is exprest, And it was before he had finished to speak, behold Rebekah came out. — Speaking in his mind.

2. Before he ceased to speak. Cald. It seemeth that providence had ordered a present return to his prayer, and sends Rebekah instantly to the place, which is marked with a behold.

2. The description of the party, inserted here by Moses.

1. By her line. Which was born to Bethuel, &c. One of the same family to whom he was sent, and of the same line declared by Abraham.

2. By her posture, also her work, and her pitcher upon her shoulder. Having a pitcher &c. Sept. Such was her employment, when God sent her as an answer of prayer for a wife; she was about honest labour ver. 15.

Ver. 16. 3. By her personal feature, And the maid was exceeding good in countenance. Sept. and Cald. same, that is, very beautiful, of an exceeding fair countenance. This is joined with labour.

4. By her virginity and chastity, a virgin and man had not known her. Sept. and Cald. same. This double exprestion of her purity is not in vain, to note what a wife God provides for prayer, she was und-filed, untouched, fit to be a mother in the Church. This also is joynt to her beauty.

5. By her work. And she went down to the well and filled her pitcher or water pot, and came up. Sept. and Cald. to the same. She went about her business without delay or gazing upon any thing, and comes up to return to her place again. ver. 16.

Ver. 17. 3. The servants ad-dresse to her for making trial. And the servant ran to meet her and said, refresh me, I pray thee, with a little water of thy pitcher. Give me drinke, &c. Sept. Let me take a little, &c. Cald. Here providence orders him to begin the signe which he begged; he did not onely pray but act, and herein works together with God. ver. 17.

4. The next work of providence in giving the signe desired, is upon her yielding in all particulars which were begged.

Ver. 18. 1. Her courteous grant to him. And she said, drink my Lord, &c. Sept. and Cald. same. She answereth his heart in this, and that with due respect unto strangers.

2. Her haste to do what she said. And she hastened, herein providence quickens her, and satisfieth him.

3. Her performance to him. And she gave him drinke. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein she answered Gods motion and his desire. ver. 18.

4. Her respect to his beasts, as he also desired might be in the token, wherein we have to note.

Ver. 19. 1. Her proffer, And she finished to make him drinke, and said, also for thy camels will I draw, untill they have finished to drinke.

Untill all drinke. Sept. Herein is the signe more fully answered, God so moving her Spirit to give in the answer desired, wherein much ingenuity, goodnes, and humility appears, to be a servant to a strangers beasts. ver. 19.

Ver. 20. 2. Her speed in this also, And she hastened and emptied her pitcher into the trough, and ran again into the well. So God moveth and so she runneth.

3. Her performance of her word, And she drew for all the camels; so his signe was finished.

5. The mans observation of Gods fulfilling his desire in all this carriage of hers. Wherein are recorded.

Ver. 21. 1. His speed to see things so fall out.

And the man was wondering at her. And the man learned or confided her. The answer of God so eminently and so presently and in the same kind as desired could not but put him to a maze, and serious thoughts about the sweet carriage of this maid.

2. His silence for a time. He was silent. Being silent in contemplating. Cald. This notes his serious pondering such a rare event as this to receive Gods mind in that, and meditate thereon.

3. His scope. To know whether 7 hours had prospered his way or not. Sept. and Cald. same. This signe he had prayed for to assure him of Gods blessing of him in his journey and undertaking, and now when God had so fully made it visible, he desires to take knowledge of what was done, that himself might be encouraged to duty, and God glorified. ver. 21.

4. The next thing in the servants execution, is his treaty and dealing with Rebeckah. ver. 22, 28.

Wherein occur to view.

Ver. 22.

1. The opportunity of it. And it was as the camels had finished to drink. Sept. and Cald. to the same. The point of time was when she had finished her courtesy, and the camels as well as himself were satisfied with water. This kindness being finished, and so soon as her labour was ended. This notes the time of succeeding actions.

2. The mans preparing to it by providing some token of gratitude for her voluntary pains. And that or then the man took an ear-ring or Jewel of gold half a shekel the weight thereof, and two bracelets for her hands, ten shekels of gold were the weight of them. — Two ear-rings a drachm weight, &c. Sept.

— Ear-ring weighing one shekel, &c. Sept. Cald. In these we have but his providing or getting them in readiness for her as her-ports afterward. v. 47 He was satisfied whose daughters he was before he gave them to her; now he had them at hand to bestow.

Qu. It is queried here about the weights, because shekel is not named in the text, but only the words half and ten, what the due estimate should be?

Ans. 1. It is usual to understand shekel when the number or measure is only named, with the Hebrews.

2. It is conceived by some that the half is referred to ten, and so notes five shekels; but there is no sure footing for that, because they are referred to divers things; and such as may be thought not to be clear of that weight.

3. The right judgment of weights in that time can only be made by conjecture, which is uncertain. This is to be presumed they were of worth suitable to the persons and business intended.

Quest. Are these ornaments concluded lawful for all, from this example of Rebeckah?

Ans. 1. That they may be lawful with all circumstances of persons; times and places as they were used now is not doubted.

2. To draw from hence a liberty for all sorts to be as profuse as they please in apparel and ornaments, is wicked; the Spirit of God speaketh expressly against it. 1. Pet. 3. 3. &c.

3. It is more safe to gather a rule of imitation from Rebeckahs labour, than ornaments; many strive to wear her Jewels, that think it shame to do her work. Her heart adorning was better than that of her body. Ver. 22.

3. His expostulation with her in two questions.

1. About her parentage. And he asked Ver. 21. her or said, &c. Sept. and Cald. the same with Hebr. Wherein he inquireth to know whether it were the family unto which he was sent, whose daughter art thou, tel me I pray thee; declare it before me.

2. About his entertainment. Is there in the house of thy Father place for us to lodge? — Is there with thy Father, &c. Sept.

Place sufficient to house or stay in. Cald. Herein he prudently seek's occasion of imparting his business, to take up his lodging where his affairs lay. Ver. 23.

4. Her answer to both his questions proposed. Ver. 24.

1. To the former. And she said unto him, I am the daughter of Bethuel, the son of Milcah whom she bare to Nachor. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Her in he hath satisfaction that God had directed him unto the right family. Ver. 24.

2. To the latter. And she said unto him, both straw and much provender are with us, also place to lodge. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein also he is satisfied of Gods further giving him opportunity to perfect the business about which he came, of which he taketh no small notice, as appears by his turning to God, in the next verses. Ver. 25.

5. The mans acknowledgment of God in all these occurrences, wherein are to be noted.

1. His thankful posture, And the man bowed down the head, and bowed himself to Jehovah

Learn from all.

Jehovah. — And the man being well pleased worshipped the Lord. Sept.

— And the man bowed his knees and prayed before the Lord. Cald. Herein he turns from the maid and betakes himself to God again; the creatures return was good, but God gave the answer by her, therefore he worshippeth now before the Lord. Ver. 26.

2. His thankful expression unto God, wherein observe.

1. His blessing. And he said blessed be Jehovah God of my Lord Abraham. Sept. and Cald. same. As his heart was affected, so his tongue expresseth praise and blessing unto God; magnifying his being and his grace expressed in outward providences to his people.

2. The reason of his blessing, which is twofold.

1. To his matter. Who hath not left of his mercy and his truth from my Lord. — Who hath not left of thy righteousness, &c. Sept. Cald. to the same with Hebr. It is a figurative speech periphrasis, where less is expressed than meant, God had not only not left of, but continued and pursued to shew mercy and truth to Abraham his Covenanted servant; even in this outward providence for his son; his faithfulness and goodness were still continued to him.

2. To himself as the instrument. I being in the way Jehovah led me to the house of the brethren of my Lord. — And God hath prosperously led me to the house of my Lords brother to take a wife for his son. Sept. — And God hath led me in the right way, &c. Cald. In it.

1. He acknowledgeth himself used, he was in the way.

2. He ascribes his guidance to Jehovah, not the Angel.

3. He expresseth the terms of his journey even the place whither Abraham sent him, therefore he blesteth Jehovah.

6. Rebeckahs relation of these providences at home, which made way for further transactions. And the damsel ran and told her mothers house according to these words. Sept. and Cald. to the same.

1. Her speed is expressed.

2. Her relation of all passages.

3. The parties to whom, her mothers house, or as many as were there.

Quest. Why it is called her mothers, is questioned, rather than her Fathers who was yet alive?

Ans. No great moment is in it. Doubtless all were in the same family, and her mother might have special roomes to her self, as they several tents, where Abraham lived; It might be the nearest and the speediest way to communicate it to Father and mother also, by whose direction Laban was sent to invite the man to come near.

D. 12. Though Angels minister to us, God alone must have the glory of all good events. Ver. 27.

D. 13. In such returns God speed's instruments to further on his own designs of good to his servants. Ver. 28.

5. The next particular is his entertainment by Laban expressed. ver. 29, 33. Wherein we have to note.

1. The invitation made unto the man. Ver. 29, 30, 31. And therein.

1. The party inviting, described both by his relation, he was brother to Rebeckah, and Laban is he called.

Ver. 29.

2. The speed for invitation. He ran forth to the man unto the well, doubtles not without command and license from his Father, and having that, he carrieth not but hastens to dispatch it. Ver. 29.

Ver. 30.

3. The motive of his speed which was twofold.

1. From what he saw, even the mans courtesies unto his sister. And it was as he saw the eare-ring, &c.

2. From what he heard. And as he heard the words of Rebecca his sister.

1. Relating the mans word to her.

2. Declaring where yet he was. When thus he had seen and heard, he speeds unto him and there he finds him standing, Behold he stood by the camel, there he was expecting further movings of providence and discoveries of Gods will before he would stirre. Ver. 30.

4. The invitation itself.

Ver. 31.

1. By advocacy. Come in thou blessed of the Lord, wherein is considerable.

1. His acknowledgment of Jehovah as the author of blessing, God was known in that place though but in obscurity and worshipped, though not so purely as with Abraham.

2. His honorable respect unto the man in his title used, thou blessed of Jehovah. A stile of great dignity, such a one whom God honored. All sheweth that some religion of God was among them.

2. By expostulation. Wherefore standest thou abroad. Wherein is a kind of reasoning with him about his stop, as being unseemly that such a one should not have better entertainment.

5. By his preparation, And I have prepared the house and room for the camels. All is ready, therefore I pray thee come in. This the invitation. Ver. 31.

Ver. 32.

2. The acceptance of this invitation, And the man came into the house. He thankfully accepts the invitation from God and him.

3. The entertainments.

1. As to beasts. Ungirding and giving them provender.

Ver. 33.

2. As to man, water for feet as in these countreys needful, and meat for their bellies. All set out.

4. The mans refusal to eat till his business were done which he had to propose, and his liberty for speaking, And he said I will not eat until I have spoken my words, and he said, that is, Laban spake to him, speak on. Ver. 32, 33.

1. His Masters name, I am Abrahams servant. Wherein he professeth his own subjection and his Masters dominion, minion; which noteth his ingenuity that he cometh not in his own name. Ver. 34.

Ver. 33.

2. His Masters greatness of which also he mentioneth.

Ver. 35.

1. The authour. And Jehovah hath blessed my Master exceedingly; herein he speaketh as one fearing God, acknowledging Abrahams wealth in respect of its rise, was not mans procuring, but Gods blessing. Jehovah onely the authour and donor of Abrahams riches. And all this is blessing. Otherwise wealth is a curse in the tents of the wicked. The donor God, the gift, a blessing. The measure exceeding greet.

2. His state itself, And he is magnified or made great. He is exalted, as the 70 read. This exprellion note's that however he were a sojourner, yet he was a Prince, greatly enriched and exalted among the Princes, that he was a fear to them, great in the earth, and great with God.

3. His particular substance set forth in its kinds. And he hath given to him sheep, and oxen, silver and gold, and men servants, and maid servants, and camels, and asses. All these tend but to shew greatness of the estate where with God blessed him; which all together declare him to be very rich. Ver. 35.

Ver. 36.

3. His Masters wife and issue. And Sarah, my Lords wife, bare unto my Lord a son, after that she was old, or after her old age. The 70 read, one son after he, that is, Abraham, was old. Where he toucheth.

1. The wife of honorable report Sarah.

2. Her fruit to Abraham, a son, one onely son, and that an eminent son Isaac.

3. The miracle of the birth, after that both he and she were old, and past hopes of having children; such a miraculous son doth he mention here unto them, that Abraham had.

1. Negatively, Thou shalt not take &c. Ver. 37.

2. Affirmatively, But thou shalt go, Ver. 38.

&c.
The form of this exprellion in the letter is by way of imprecation, if thou shalt not go to the house of my Father, then the oath imported some evil to befall him; our translators read as the 70, thou shalt go, &c. For that was the intent of the imprecation, onely the form of words in the original is more pressing.

But the servant seemeth not to repeat his Masters words, no mention was of his Fathers house; Ver. 4, &c.

The servant dealt faithfully in his relation, for though not the same words, yet the same mind of Abraham was related by him, which was enough. Ver. 38.

1. Abrahams faith is discovered concerning 3 things.

1. That God would send his Angel as a guide, onely here he describeth God in another manner, Jehovah to whose face I have walked. The 70 read, The Lord whom I have pleased before him. The Calde, In whose sight I serve. Before, he describeth God by an act of grace to Abraham, and

2. About their denial, but if not, tell me also, let me have your answer one way or other.

3. The end of his importunity, that he might know unto what to trust, and I will look, or turn my self, to the right hand or to the left; a proverbial expression to note indifference of taking other ways; if this be not the right: it is but fabulous which the Jewes adde, that he would offer a daughter of his own. His desire is only in the way of God to have their consent, or if not, to depart whether God called him.

D. 1. Fidelity in servants is very instant in the dispatch of their Masters business.

D. 2. Parental consent is necessary to be required in marriage, that it be in the Lord.

D. 3. Freeness from compassion is due to all whose consent such matters concern. V. 49.

3. The next general head of this chapter, is the successe and good issue of this business, ver. 50. 60. Wherein.

1. The answer of Rebeckahs Father and friends unto this proposal: and therein note.

1. The parties answering. And Laban answered and Beithel, and said. — And Laban and Beithel answering said. Sept. The Father and brother do here give answer to the matter proposed, yet not exclusively to the consent of the mother and Rebecca her self, but inclusively. The only scruple here is, why Laban is named before his Father, which being not orderly, some take Beithel for another brother, as conceiving the Father to be dead, but without ground. Other of the Hebr. charge Laban as faulty in being so forward, But the scripture observeth no such fault in him. The order of naming is arbitrary with Gods Spirit; and it may be that Beithel spake by Laban in giving his consent, the Father by son. However it be, the matter here is their joint reply and answer.

2. The matter of their answer expressed 3 ways.

1. By acknowledgment that God was the author and guide of this affair, The word word or thing is gone forth from Jehovah. — From the Lord the word is gone out. Cald. Wherein they acknowledge.

1. Jehovahs authority in managing the affairs of men, and such of this kind. 2. The actual progresse of this matter so farre as to be brought about by him. Though they lived in corrupt times and places, yet they acknowledge God in the ways of his providence. So God did preserve some discoveries of himself, out of his Church.

2. By denying any opposition to this providence. We cannot speak to thee evil or good. — We shall not be able to gain-say evil or good. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. In which passage they acknowledge such clear discovery of Gods will in this matter, that they take it as irresistible; therefore the meaning of the expression is well paraphrased by the 70. we cannot gain-say thee any thing in this matter, either in pretense of evil or good, to urge any thing against Gods mind, which seemeth to be so clear to us, that we are concluded in it. We cannot deny. Ver. 50.

3. By consenting to his desire, wherein are delivered.

Ver. 51. 1. Their grant. Behold! Rebeckah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be wife to the son of thy Lord. — Taking her return, &c. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Here is as much as they can say for themselves, they grant Rebeckah for wife to Isaac. But doubtles with her own consent also included.

2. Their reason of granting. According to what Jehovah hath spoken. Sept. and Cald. same. Gods will is the rule of their grant; God will have it so, therefore we will have it thus also. Let the will of God be done.

2. The servants resentment of this answer and his return to it, which is two ways expressed.

1. Toward God. And it was when the servant of Abraham heard their words, that he bowed himself on the earth to Jehovah. — He worshipped the Lord, Sept. He adored before the Lord. Cald. Wherein we have.

1. The event mentioned which was their consent given and heard by their words.

2. The duty incumbent expressed, humble prostration to Jehovah, which notes his faith, humility, and thankfulness unto the Lord to whom he ascribeth all these events which he had seen. This is the third time mentioned in this Chapter of his dealing with God in this matter by prayer and praise. Ver. 52.

Toward them. And the servant brought forth vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, and gave to Rebeckah herself and precious things he gave to her brother and to her mother. In all which he dealeth with creatures according to their kindness, after he had worshipped the Lord for his goodness in guiding all their hearts.

1. His presents are costly Jewels, and vestments of gold and silver, with other precious things. — Gifts. Sept.

2. The hast which the servant makes after his business complicated to return to his Master. And he said send me to my Lord. — Send me away that I may go to my Lord. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Here his sedulity and faithfulness appears more to give his Lord a speedy account of the performance of his Oath, and Gods prospering of him; therefore he craves speedy dismissal. Ver. 54.

Ver. 55. 3. The stop indeavoured for a time by the brother, &c. And her brother said and her mother, let the maid abide with us dayes, even ten or a tenth, afterward thou shalt go. This demand for a little stay was from natural affection doubtles being unwilling to send away a daughter so faire upon so little warning, all the difficulty in the letter here is about the number 10, the Sept. read, — Daies about ten. The Cald. Sometime, or ten months, which seemeth to be an unreasonable demand. It is again conceit of the Jewes that 7 dayes she should mourn for her Father now dead, for here is no mention of his death, neither is it probable the departure would have bin so sudden, had such an event fallen out. Ver. 55.

Ver. 56. 4. The servants indeavour to remoove this stop. And he said unto them, delay me not for the Lord hath prospered my way, send me away, and I will go to my Lord. Sept. and Cald. to the same.

1. He intreats away all hindrance.

2. He giveth his reason, Jehovah hath prospered me, and speeded me, therefore delay me not.

3. He reneweth his desire. Send me away that I may go to my Lord. Ver. 56.

6. Their yeelding to the man at his importunity, wherein we have to note.

1. Their dismissal of their sister, &c. Ver. 59.

And they sent a way Rebekah their sister and her nurse, and the servant of Abraham, and his men. It is reported but shortly. Yet doubtles their dismissal was honorable, and with more circumstances than are reported, — Her goods. Sept. So farre as is spoken Rebekah is attended with her maid, or nurse, and Abrahams servant sufficiently attended. This nurse is conceived to be Deborah whose death is mentioned. Gen. 35. 8. V. 59.

2. Their benediction. And they blessed Ver. 60. Rebekah, and said, our Sister, be thou for thousands of ten thousands, and let thy seed inherit the gate of them that hate it. — For thousands of miriads. Sept. — Thy sons possesse the gates of their enemies. Cald. Herein are observable,

2. The form of blessing, it was by speaking well to them, and wishing good upon them from God, whom they blessed; no more can creatures do in blessing. Yet here it is observable that the fear of God was in some measure among them.

2. The matter of their blessing standing in two petitions.

1. For multiplicity of seed. Be thou for thousands of millions, as ours read. e. The mother or grandmother of so many, even of innumerable seed. A quiver full of these arrowes were accounted mercies indeed in those and after times. Ps. 127. 4. 5.

2. For dignity of feed in prevalency and victory over their enemies and haters; which, in the letter, notes temporal power, prevalency and greatness; but as given by God, it carrieth in it, power in the Church, spirituall, over the gates of hell. Gen. 22. 17. This blessing God gave to Abrahams seed, and unto the same in words are their hearts guided in blessing Rebekah their sister. Ver. 60.

4. The last general of this Chapter is the history of the servants return with Rebekah unto his Masters house. V. 61. 67. Wherein we may note. 1. Her departure from her fathers house, of which is observed briefly something of Rebekah and Rebekah arose, &c.

1. Her taking leave she arose, so Sept. and Cald. & doubtles as in order to her journey, so in duty to her relations; though every action be not expressly named with she did, yet doubtles, she could not leave her fathers house, but with expression of natural affection and duty to all, and this done she hasteth to her journey.

2. Her retinue, and her damselfs or maids, so that not only her nurse, but many attendants seem here to go with her.

3. Her taking camell with her maids, they were carried or rode on camells. They got upon the camells. Sept. and Cald. or attended.

4. Their motion, and they went after the man with them, as Sept. That is they followed him as their guide in their journey.

2. Something of the servant.

1. His reception of Rebekah to his charge and the servant took Rebekah, that is, as doubtles solemnly she was committed to his tender care, so he entertains her with all respect, and taketh her under his protection.

2. His motion, and he went away or departed. With all his company and charge upon him. So she leaveth father and mother and relations to go to an husband in the Church of God. It is allegorized by some to set out the Churches leaving all for Christ. V. 16.

Sept. And Isaac came from the well where on the Angel of life appeared. Cald.

1. His motion. He came toward them.

2. The place whence. From the well of him

Ver. 62.

him that liveth and seeth. which was the name given by Hagar when God discovered himself to her, when she fled from Sarah. Gen. 16. 14.

3. The reason, he dwelt now in the land of the south. It is conceived at Beersheba, where Abraham dwelt with him, for thither the servant returned to his Master, & there Sarahs tent was; however it is conceived by some, that Abraham and Isaac had parted habitations, and that the Father dwelt at Hebron, and the son at Beersheba. No such thing is expressed, and it is most probable that they lived together, where the father as well as the son might consummate the marriage. V. 62.

Ver. 63.

2. The end of that walk or motion. And Isaac went forth to pray in the field at the looking out of the evening. To exercise himself in the field toward the south or noontide. To pray in the field in the evening. It seemeth this was the main end of his walking now, to meditate and converse with God in prayer by himself in some solitary place, the word carrieth both in it. This was Isaacs exercise in the evening.

3. The event while he was about this duty. And he lifted up his eyes, and saw & behold the camells were coming. He saw the camells coming. This God ordered to this servant. It is thought by some that he was praying about this matter, and that God sent them in at this time unto him. V. 63.

1. The providential sight of him. And Rebekah lifted up her eyes, and saw Isaac. And Rebecca looking up with the eyes saw Isaac. Sept. So God brought to her sight first him, who should be her husband. The reason of her knowing him to be Isaac, is in the next verse. The man had told her.

2. Her demeanour.

2. And she fell or lighted of the camell. She lighted of, Sept. Shebo. She bowed her self upon the camell, Cald.

This was in reverence to the man, whom God had appointed her head, Shee came of from the beast to honour him.

Ver. 65.

2. The reason of her coming down, the discovery made by the servant, made by her question and his answer. She said who is this man? & the servant said, it is my Master. meaning Isaac. 3. Her further submission of her self, And she took a veil & covered herself, a cloak, a mantle or covering and clad herself Sept. 2. The marriage of her, she was to him for a wife. This is a short account, but doubtles a solemne act, it was not done rashly nor foolishly, but with his Fathers approbation, and as the way of Gods people was in his Church at that time.

3. His

3. His performance of duty to her, and he loved her. Which comprehends all conjugal duties of marriage under Gods own exprellion.

4. His consolation in her, after mourning for his mother. And Isaac was comforted after his mother, that is after she was dead. Concerning Sarah his mother having now got an help. Sept. After his mother was dead Cald. Three years now his mother had bin dead, yet he keepeth a remembrance of her: some note it a fault, but the Spirit of God doth not so charge it, for doubtles it was not without hope but now when God had pointed out an help meet for him, it was a cause of reviving him. CHAP. XXV.

After the history of the Church ended unto the 40th year of Isaacs life, in this Chapter it is continued to the birth and life of the sonnes of Isaac, Esau and Jacob, that while they were grown to some stature.

In this whole Chapter, the history concerneth mainly 3 generall heads treated of.

1. The last state and end of Abraham V. 1. 10.

2. The line and posterity of Ismael. V. 12. 18.

3. The blessing, place and line of Isaac. V. 11. 19. 34.

In the last head concerning Abraham are reported.

1. His second marriage. V. 1.
2. His issue by it. V. 2. 3. 4.
3. His position of his estate V. 5. 6.
4. His Age, death and buriall. Ver. 7. 8. 9. 10.

To the first. And Abraham added, and took a wife, and her name Keturah. And Abraham adding tooke, &c. Chetoura. Sept. Cald as Heb. Herein occurs to note.

1. The burden of this history in the connective particle, And, or then which in the present place sets all that which followeth, to come to passe after Isaacs marriage, and so it seemeth in order of words to follow after, that Abrahams second marriage succeeded Isaacs first. It is indeed conceived by some, that this wife was taken while Sarah was yet alive and that the order of the history is inverted, that reported last which is supposed to be done first; but what convincing ground is of this conjecture I find not, but more probability that this second marriage of Abraham is reported in its due place and time, the Sept. here relating it in consequence to what went before.

2. The subject here undertaking this second marriage, Abraham now aged 140 years. It is questioned why he at so great an age should have thoughts of marrying, and it seemeth to some uncomely for such an age, therefore they would imagine it to be done in his younger time, while Sarah was living, and here onely reserved to be spoken of for the issues sake which afterward is related, but this were strange, if it were so that after the death of Sarah no mention should be made of this but onely here, after Isaac was betrothed in marriage, to answer that uncomeliness of marrying at such an age, it seems to be more than ordinary providence not imitable, and to be intended of God for the multiplying the seed of Abraham which God had promised.

3. The ad. He added and took a wife. So the Hebr. phrase is about repeated things, that is, again Abraham took him a wife in marriage, after Sarah was buried; And as probable is it that Abraham might mourn as long for his wife, as Isaac for his mother, before he took another.

4. The name of the woman taken to wife, Keturah, no more but her name is here related, neither line nor kindred, probably she was brought up in Abrahams family, and in the faith of God with whom Abraham should join himself. It is conceived by some to be Hagar, onely under another name, but altogether unlikely, both in respect of her years, seeing that this woman was so fruitful, and in that Hagar is expressly mentioned under another relation in that Chap.

D. 3. God hath distinguished by name the mother and Children of the Church, from others that were estranged.

To the second, the issue of Abraham by Keturah is here recorded, where we read.

1. The mother mentioned. She viz. Keturah.

2. Two grand children from the second son, Jokshan Shebi and Dedan.

3. Three great grand children from Dedan, Ashurim, Letushim and Lemnim.

Ver. 4. 4. Five grand children from his 4th son

Midian Sephar, Yapher, Chanoc, Alidab Eldub, 16 in all are numbred, as being doubles most eminent in the families, all which are conceived to plant Arabia and Syria which were east from Canaan, of whom are several conjectures, but little of certainty of their speciall places and situations. It is added. All these were the sons of Keturah that is, of Abraham by her, yet are they reckoned by their mothers name, because they were not the eminent seed of Abraham.

Quest. How could Abraham beget these seeing at 100 years old his body was noted to be dead as to generation as well as Sarahs womb. Rom. 4?

Ans. To omit vain disputes. It appears that God gave him new strength then by miracle for begetting Isaac, which was either continued or renewed to multiply others seeds, which God would give him. This is enough to satisfy.

Learn from it.

D. 1. God giveth common seed as well as children of promise unto Abraham.

of his estate, and that which was to be the inheritance of the Church, which the Lord himself intailed on him, therefore Abraham neither could, nor would alter it. So farre and no farther is that universall to be understood, for something was reserved for his other Children.

2. To the sons which he had by others, where-about note.

1. His donation, and to the sons of the concubines which Abraham had, Abraham gave gifts. — The concubines. Cald.

1. The legates are all the fleshly children of Abraham which he had by Hagar and Keturah, both called here concubines although Keturah were taken to wife upon better terms, yet she was not indowed as Sarah was. She is so stiled also, 1 Chr. 1. 22.

2. The restatour Abraham.

3. The legacies, he gave them gifts, doubles honorable enough, yet not comparable to the portion of Isaac.

1. His amandation of them, wherein.

1. His Emillion And he sent them from Isaac his son, doubles to prevent future quarrels and divisions which might arise about their possessions.

2. The time of this emillion, yet he himself living, so wisely in his time orders he his family.

Sept. and Cald. So that he was a sojourner in Canaan 100 years with patience, and in faith expecting Gods promise; as it is computed, he lived 25 years after them, 100 years after his Father Terah, 38 after the death of Sarah, 35 years after Isaacs marriage, and saw his twins. He finished his course in the years of creation 2183. after the flood 527. V. 7.

2. Abrahams death is related. Where-about we have.

2. The event itself, and he died, that is body and soul parted, and he ceased to be among the living.

3. The condition wherein he died, set out in these expressions.

1. In a good old age, in a good hoary age, or gray head; that is, with a crown of righteousness upon his hoary head; Good it was morally, and not only naturally.

2. An old man. This notes his natural term, which was longer than most which followeth him.

3. And full, we adde full of dayes or years, but this seems to be the same with that before, it sounds rather, he was full and satisfied with living here; desiring now to depart unto God in peace, he was full with life below, and now makes unto life above — Full of dayes Sept.

4. The consequent of all. And he was gathered to his people — He was added. Sept.

This cannot be meant of his body laid by Sarahs, but of his soul now taken to the spirits of just men made perfect, which properly were his people, sometime called his Fathers, Gen. 15. 15. So Ishmael is said to be gathered to his people, but not to Abrahams. The just are gathered to the just, and the wicked to the wicked at their dying. V. 8.

He beginneth with Gods respect to Isaac. V. 11. But breaketh of unto V. 19. And first disparteth shortly the history of Israel. V. 12. 18. That so he might go on without further interruption in recording the matters of the Church. To keep the order of the Scripture I shall open the eleventh verse & referre it to the history of Isaac where unto it doth belong, which followeth. V. 19.

In the eleventh verse we have reported concerning Isaac.

1. His benediction from God, where-about are touched.

1. The time And it was after the death of Abraham, or it came to passe after Abraham died. Sept and Cald. Gods faithfulness did not forget his promise upon Abrahams death, but remembers it to his Son, he dieth not though Abraham be gone.

2. The Author of blessing, Elchim the almighty God.

3. The object of it Isaac, Abrahams son, the seed of promise.

4. The blessing itself, he blessed, doubles by renewing the discoveries of his love, applying, & confirming the promises made to Abraham. Gen. 12. 2. Gen. 14. 19. Gen. 17. 19. Gen. 22. 17. So by degrees bringing about all that spirituall good promised, with all other comforts belonging to the promise of righteousness. All this is in the blessing.

2. His habitation And Isaac sat down by the well Labi-roi, — By the well of vision vision Sept. — By the well whereat the Angel of life appeared. Cald.

1. The place is that where Hagar found water to refresh Ismael, spoken of Gen.
16, 14. Gen. 24, 6.

2. His residence, there he sat down with his family to sojourn so long as God did vouchsafe him peace, and continued him in that place, it is conceived not to be farre from Bertheba where Abraham had dwelt,
Other things that may fall in about this blessing to be considered, will offer themselves in the following history of Isaac.

D. 1. Gods promises and goodness survive to Children of promise, though Fathers dye. Abrahams death ends not Gods promise, his goodness is to thousands of Generations extended.

D. 2. The almighty is faithfull to bless them whom he hath promised to blesse. none can curse them

D. 3. God sets the habitation of his people here below where he will appear to blesse them.

D. 4. *Gods life and providence makes up the habitation of the promised seed (From Lachai-roi) to be sweet and comfortable unto them.*
Ver. 11.

Ver. 12. Now followeth the History of Ismael which was noted the second generall of the Chapter, wherein are,

1. The title of the record which is here made of him. V. 12. And these are the generations, &c.

1. The scope is noted which is a record of the line of Ismael; why the spirit inserts this in the holy register is guessed by some to be upon civill accounts in respect of genealogies, for clearing some doubts; but I conceive to clear up the faithfulness of God to Abraham in performing his word to Ismael is the main reason of it.

2. The Head of this line is set forth by his name Ismael, by his relation, son of Abraham, by the kind of this relation, it was collateral and not regular, it was by Hagar an Egyptian, Sarahs maid, so he was a bond son. V. 12.

2. The record itself, wherein are reported.

Ver. 13. 1. The Children of this line recorded by their names, And these are the names of the sons of Ismael, in the names of their generations
The names of the sons of Ismael, and the names of his generations. Sep.

By their names in their generations. Cal. The first born of Ismael Nebaiosh
&c. Twelve Princes God promised to arise from him. Gen. 17. 20. And here God makes it good fully, these twelve were principle heads of families, whose names are therefore recorded to prove the same.
Much stirre there is about some of the names, and people issuing from them; but of such controversies there is no need, seeing tyme and succession of ages have both changed places, names, and people. It is enough here to note, That these son's are registered.

1. By their names. V. 13, 14, 15. Ver. 16.
2. By their places, villages, castles.

3. By their dignity, 12 Princes, according to their families, nations, or people. V. 16.

2. The term of Ismaels life, And these Ver. 17.
are the years &c. Wherein are reported.

1. His age. 100 years and 30 years and 7 years. — 137 years Sept.

2. His expiration and death, he gave up the Ghost and died.

3. His state for his spirit afterward,
He was gathered to his people. Even to the spirits of bondmen, of which kind he was.
He died in the year of the world 2231. after the flood 573, after the death of Abraham. 48. years. Now Isaac being about 123 years of age. — He was added to his generation. Sep. V. 17.

3. The borders of their habitations And Ver. 18.
they dwelt from Havilah unto Shur which is before Egypt, as thou goest to Assyria.

1. The compasse it was the region about Euphrates toward Egypt. Josephus writeth that these sons of Ismael possessed all the region from Euphrates unto the red Sea; and gave names to many of the people of Arabia, it was doubles a great continent as it was a numerous issue. So God made good his word to Abraham for a temporall portion unto Ismael.

2. The lot of it which doubles fell upon him from God, so it is read. Before the faces of his brethren did he fall. So our translatours well read it in the margin. —
He dwelt before his brother. Sept. and Cald. So that falling here is more properly of his lot for his seed, than of his life, that being expressed in the former verse, and in this mention is onely made of his habitation. So he dwelt before his brethren Isaac and the sons of Keturah. The word sometimes notes a fall by death; if this be striven for, then it speaks no more than was said before, he died, onely his brethren surviving and seeing his fall.

vants, though it be concerning the hath any.

D. 4. *Great dignities, commands, &

D. 8. God giveth the lot of habitation, motion, and cessation unto the world of man on earth. Ver. 18.

3. Now followeth the third generall head noted in this Chapter: where, with the Jewes beginneth the 6th Section of the Law, called the generations of Isaac.
The history whereof in this Chapter is continued to the mature growth of Esau and Jacob. In that portion of it contained in this Chapter, we have to note.

Ver. 19.

1. The title of the history. These are the generations of Isaac the son of Abraham. The title is figuratively expressed. Generations, for the history of the line of Israel both in his predecessours and posterity; which carrieth also in it all those providences which befell them in their severall times.

2. The matter declared, the generation of Isaac, which, as here reported, is twofold, whence the plural expression may arise generations.

1. As passively taken in respect of Isaac, that is shortly touched Abraham begins Isaac. So his generation is mentioned as begotten, Ver. 19.

Ver. 20.

2. As actively taken, so it notes those whom Isaac did beget, with their respective conditions. In the recording whereof these particulars are obvious.

1. The age of Isaac at his marriage.
And Isaac was the son of 40 years in taking,
&c. The use of mentioning his age may be both, historical, to give a better aim at times, or moral, to let men see that he came not as others in the heat of youth into that condition, but prudently and maturely under takerh such an estate.

2. The wife by whom his line was drawn out; set out.

1. By her name Rebekah.

2. By her Father, daughter to Beth-uel.

3. By her brother, sister to Laban.

4. By her country, they were Syrians, Padan-Aram was the region, not the city of Bethuel. It is the same in signification with Aram Naharaim. All that country between the two rivers Tigris and Euphrates is intended by it. Ver. 20.

D. 1. God hath a special care to commend unto posterity the line of his Church, and his providences toward it.

D. 2. The eminent line of the Church visible begins from Abraham.
Ver. 19.

D. 3. The holy seed run not foolishly nor hastily into the marriage Covenant, but in maturity and prudence.

D. 4. God separates the mother of his Church from all superstitious relations. In calling any to his Church God separates them from corrupt relations. Ver. 20.

3. The means which Isaac used to obtain the generations which were to issue from him, in summe it was prayer; of which we have to consider.

1. The petitioner Isaac, of whom the promise was formerly revealed to Abraham, that in Isaac the seed should be called.

2. The object of the prayer Jehovah.
He that had promised and was able to perform it.

3. The work. And he waited, the Ver. 21.
word noteth the abundant, multiplied, and continued desire of the soul to God.
Doubles Isaac in the compasse of 20 years wherein he expected this blessing, was very often and earnest with God for it.

4. The matter where about he prayeth, over against his wife because she was barren.
The 70 read, he prayed for Rebecca his wife or concerning her.

1. The party prayed for. The word may note either that he prayed in her presence, with her as well as for her, or against her, i.e. Against her barrenness, not against her person; this way Isaac bends his prayer directly: Luther reads it, he prayed directly, his heart wen up without distraction; but the word seemes to intimate the praying

נכה אשרו

praying for his wife, and that he must do by setting his desires more earnest against her barrenness.

2. The reason of such desire is given, because she was barren, as if the power of conceiving were rooted out of her, and there was no hope. Sept. and Cald. are the same. So that it was against that sad temptation that now Isaac prayeth.

5. The success of the prayer set out in two expressions.

1. And Jehovah was exorable or intreated by him — God heard him. Sept. — And God received his prayer. Cald. The great Lord to whom he betakes himself in his best time, and after multiplied praying, accept's the petitioner and yields to his desire.

2. And Rebekah his wife conceived — In the womb. Sept. That is, God gave her power by faith and prayer to conceive the seed at last by which the Church might be continued. V. 21.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Multiplied, instant, and faithfull prayer is the way wherein Gods children must wait for his promise.

D. 2. Gracious husbands desire to be in prayer often for and with their wives.

D. 3. Barrenness of womb hath bin a temptation incident unto the holiest women.

D. 4. Jehovah alone open's and shut's the womb.

D. 5. God yields himself exorable to the multiplied prayers of his people.

D. 6. Barrenness flieth away and fruitfulness cometh in, when God hears the prayers of his humble Saints. V. 21.

4. The seed spoken of
- 1. In the womb.
 - 2. In the birth.
 - 3. In education.
 - 4. In conversation.

1. The state of the seed, or issue obtained by prayer, while it was in the womb, wherein are three remarkable events.

1. Rebekahs suffering by her new conception, And the sonnes struggling or clashing together within her. — The children leaped in her. Sept. — Smote one against another in the womb.

1. The combatants, the two lately conceived sonnes, for which Isaac and she had prayed.

2. The strife with which they afflict Rebekah, not an ordinary stirring but a boisterous, turbulent clashing together, even to the afflicting of the mother exceedingly, twins usually may make more motion in the womb than single children, specially toward the birth, but this was extraordinary, such as women in these cases usually feel not, therefore was it signal of the strange events, which were to be manifested in the generations of them who now strove in the womb.

3. The place of this combat, it was within her, even in the womb, the place of the first formation of them. The Apostle paraphraseth, while they were not yet born, neither had done good or evil, yet here by special instinct from God they clash, and put the mother a little besides herself.

2. Rebekahs acting, which is twofold here observable.

1. Toward the present event, and that way she expresseth a little discontent, And she said &c. a quarrelling expostulation she gives to God, wherein.

1. The condition promised if so, If so it must be to me Sept. Cald. as Hebr. That is, if I must endure these broiles and shakings in my body.

2. The discontent consequent, why am I thus — why is this to me? Sept. Why have I conceived? Cald. It seems to be a question of discontent concerning her present conception, why am I with child better it had bin to be barren, than to suffer such turmoiles. The speeches are imperfect, which some supply thus; it were better I were dead than be in this case. However it be supplied, it is certain it was an irregular motion of her spirit under this temptation.

2. Toward God, And she went to seek Jehovah — And she went to ask of the Lord Sept. — That she might seek an oracle before the Lord Cald. Here in the Spirit prevaileth over the flesh, though she seem to repine under the temptation. Some question is.

1. About her motion, whither she went.

2. About her inquisition, how she sought after God, various conjectures men make. Some false, that she went to Shem who was dead ten years before, others that she went to Abraham, or Heber, the patriarchs then surviving, but this is only conjectured. It seems most likely that she went secretly immediately to God. And by prayer desired Jehovah to satisfy her about this great trouble within her; and thereby the events to befall the generations that were now breeding in her womb. Ver. 22.

D. 1. In Gods answer of prayer the greatest mercies may be given in, with the greatest temptation.

D. 2.

D. 2. Hard temptations may sometimes cause gracious souls to be discontented with their mercies.

D. 3. In such temptations gracious hearts make their recourse to God to know his mind and do it. Ver. 22.

3. Gods answer to Rebekah concerning the children now struggling in her womb. Ver. 23. Wherein occur.

1. The author of the reply, And Jehovah said unto her. It is the eternal truth which maketh reply unto her. He was, and is, and is to come, he who had formed the children in the womb, and determined of them to their special ends, and therefore could well satisfy her concerning the present trouble, and commotion within her.

2. The reply itself which God maketh. It is his oracle wherein Rebekah doth acquiesce. Four things he declareth unto her concerning the seed conceived.

1. The dignity of them. Two nations in thy womb. — Are in thy womb. Sept. — Two peoples in thy bowels. Cald. The oracle here declareth that it was no ordinary burden she carried, but nations, figuratively so called, because they were the two heads of those nations, Esau of the Edomites, Jacob of the Israelites, hereby slaying her heart, that she should not be dismayed with her unusual troubles in bearing, for she was to bring forth an extraordinary seed above other women, even two great nations. Where Israel is expressed by Goyim as well as Edom.

2. The division or contention of these two, and the nations arising from them, And two peoples shall be separated from thy bowels. — Two peoples shall be divided from thy belly. Sept. — And two kingdoms shall be divided from thy womb. Cald. This giveth her satisfaction concerning the struggling in her womb, the meaning was the future condition between the heads themselves, & the nations issuing from them. Which came to passe, for Esau meditated Jacobs death, and Jacob contended with him about the birth-right & blessing; and afterward what enmity was between Edom & Israel all the Prophets speak abundantly thereof. Their denial of the Israelites passage thorough their country, and their rejoicing in Jerusalem's downfall, declare this sufficiently. Thus God tells her that the present contention in her womb presaged great divisions to come between the nations that should issue from her.

3. The strength of one above the other And a people shall be strong above a people. — And a people shall overcome or bring under a people. Sept. — And a Kingdom shall be stronger than a Kingdom. Cald. The people stronger here were Esim, & the Edomites his offspring, the people weaker were Jacob & the Israelites, so they were in outward show a long time; Jacob was therefore afraid of Esau at his return, and Israel much oppressed with Edomites.

4. The victory upon one side. And the great shall serve the little, or the elder who is called great in ages shall serve the younger which is less in age, Sept. and Cald. same. that is, Esau who was the first born and strong people, after all contentions shall be brought into subjection to Jacob the younger and the weaker, & so the Edomites unto the Israelites, 2 Sam. 8. 14. This oracle is variously unfolded, as the parties concerned are variously understood.

1. The elder and the younger, note the persons of Esau and Jacob, for they were now struggling, and of them it must needs be true, that Esau must serve, that is, be subject unto Jacob. How could that be when Jacob was afraid of him and calleth him Lord? It was not then, in respect of any earthly power, which Jacob had over him, for Esau was at this time stronger, but in better respects.

1. Jacob was above him in the privilege of birth-right, which was much in the spiritual intent of it.

2. Jacob was above him in respect of blessing, wherein Isaac made Esau his servant. Gen. 27. 29.

3. Jacob was above him in respect of Church Covenant, which from Abraham and Isaac were continued unto him, but Esau was excommunicat, or rather an Apostate from it. God maketh him a servant to Jacob in his person, sending him to the mountain.

2. Esau and Jacob are considered as heads of their issues, noting the distinct people arising from them, and so the Edomites though they were strong and malicious against Israel, yet were subdued by David and brought in subjection to Israel. 2. Sam. 8. 14. It is true they broke their yoke afterward, as Isaac prophesied, but never became Lords over Israel. This is aimed at in that expression, Was not Esau Jacobs brother? yet I loved Jacob & hated Esau, and laid his mountains & his heritage waste. Mal. 1. 2. 3.

3. Esau and Jacob under these titles of elder & younger are made patterns of Gods election & reprobation in respect of eternal life, which the Apostle eminently declareth; Rom. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. Which however the adversaries of Gods decrees labour to elude by making them only typical to several ways which men take to righteousness, yet the Apostle speaketh expressly of these persons as by the oracle of God they were disposed of, before they were born, or had done good or evil, to their several ends as to eternity. Against such a sense of this oracle much is objected, not to be punctually dealt withall in a way of explication, only two main objections I shall touch.

Object. 1. It is unjust with God to passe by one, or to hate one in the same condition wherein he loveth and chooseth another, Rr there, therefore this not competent to him; onely in earthly cases?

Ans. The answer whereunto is.

1. That it is onely presumed, and not proved that the oracle concerned their temporal conditions alone.

2. Suppose it did, no lesse injustice were in God, about unequal disposition of temporals than eternals. If the birth-right temporal and blessing belonged to the eldest, how can it be transferred to the younger (by the objectors rule) but by injustice? For by the law it belonged to the elder, if God be bound to his own law. Now if these men can grant that God may dispose of mens bodies and states after his own will and not be unjust, sure it will follow that he hath as much power over souls, and the spiritual conditions of men.

Object. If such should be the meaning of the oracle as to the spiritual condition, then it would follow that all the seed of Esau would perish, and all the seed of Jacob be saved, which the Apostle denies. ergo, &c.

Ans. But this is not so, for something doth concern their persons; and not the seed, as losse and gaining of birth-right, &c. So also the eternal disposition of them as to their spiritual estates. Therefore it followeth not, that though Jacob be loved, all his seed should in the like sense be loved also. The Sept. hath shewed us that many of Jacobs seed perish, and yet Gods word is not broken.

2. The seed issuing from Isaac is described here in the birth of it. Ver. 24, 25, 26. Wherein we have reported.

Ver. 34.

1. The time of bearing. Thm were ac- complished her dayes to bring forth. Sept. and Cald. same. The providence of God was to her for good in carrying her safe to her full time, a mercy not to be neglected; a miscarrying womb were no lesse evil to her and others then that which is barren.

2. The number of the seed conceived, which was according to what God had told her. And behold twins in her womb. Sep. and Cald. same. So the Oracle had said, two nations were in her, that is the two heads of them, which at this time were twins in the womb together. The number is of Gods making as well as the matter of the seed. Ver. 24.

3. The birth of the first, concerning whom we have here to note.

1. His egress. And there came forth Ver. 25.

the first. The first born. Sept. A safe deliverance thus farre was to mother and child.

2. His portraiture. Red wholly he as a garment of haire. Fiery totall and hairy as an hide. Sept. As an hairy cloak or garment. Cald. Herein note.

1. His colour being so excellently red did preface the cruelty of the man as it proved.

2. His habit being all hairy, as if born a man, noted strength and subtilty. Such was this first born. Gen. 27. 40. Ezek. 25. 12. Obad. 12.

3. His name. And they called his name Esau. The name imposed signifieth made or perfected, because he came out hairy as a man, in much strength. The imposers were doubtles his Father and mother, not without the guidance of God in so naming him. V. 25. He named. Sept. and Cald.

4. The birth of the second son, wherein are recorded.

1. The order of his birth. And afterward came forth his brother. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein the order of nature was seen appointed by God, he was the youngest son in birth though conceived together.

2. His posture. And his hand holding on the heel of Esau. Holding the heel of Esau. Sept. This was the posture before the birth, but doubtles changed by the midwife, otherwise could he hardly have bin born with the safety of his mother, this prefiged his turning up Esaus heel & getting the birth-right and blessing from him. God seemeth to make it something propheticall. However this was a good providence unto Jacob for the present. Hof. 12. 3.

3. His name here-upon given him. And he called his name Jacob. Sept and Cald. same. The name imposed notes a supplanter; not given to him as an ill cognifiance, however Esau applied so, but as good from God, who had appointed him to birth-right and blessing. The imposer was surely Isaac directed by God.

4. The time of these births set out by the age of Isaac. And Isaac was then son of six- ty years in the bearing of them. When Rebecca brought them forth. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. This is here noted.

1. For a spirituall use, to shew how long Isaac waited in beleaving for a seed before it came, even 20 years.

2. For a civil use to clear the Chronologie, and carry us on to understand the succession of times. At this time was Abraham 160 years of age, and therefore must needs see these grand children, untill the 15th year of their age, Isaac also was now about 74. Therefore the history of both their deaths in the beginning of the Chapter was by way of prolepsis or anticipation. ver. 26.

D. 8. Eminent postures in the womb may be types of great achievements by souls through God.

D. 9. Bad names may be ordered sometimes to good men and for good ends. Saints wait long for promises to be performed, which by faith they have received. V. 26.

3. The seed of Isaac is here further described by their education and several dispositions of life, wherein these particulars are observable.

1. A general proposition of their growth. And the lads grew great.

Increased were the young men. Sept. This onely giveth an account equally that both these births did thrive towards the outward man, grew in stature to be youths, and toward mens estate. This was common to both.

2. A special description of their inclinations is two fold.

1. Of Esau. And Esau was a man knowing hunting, a man of the field. A wild man skillful to lead dogges, or to hunt. Sept. A hunts man, a man going out into the field. Cald. This description of Esaus disposition and course whereunto he betook himself, when he was a little grown up, fites with his natural temper, wherein he was born.

1. He is said to be a cunning hunts man, whose work is to catch and to destroy, so he was described to be red and bloody like Nimrod and the former generation of persecutors.

2. He is called a man of the field, a wild man, rather choosing to converse with beasts than men; to such wild courses he addicteth himself. This is Esau.

2. Of Jacob. And Jacob a man perfect inhabiting tents. A simple man inhabiting a house. Sept. A minister of the house of doctrine. Cald. Two characters are given of this son.

1. Intrinsicall, concerning himself. He was a perfect man, so the Hebr. and Cald. read; he was a man unmixed, simple, sincere and plain, so the 70. and our translators render; this concerneth not onely his natural constitution, that might be of a milder and better temper than Esau, but his moral disposition, and that by grace spiritualized and bettered. He was made perfect, simple, like unto God, through grace.

2. Extrinsicall toward others, he inhabited tents, which noteth his relative disposition, to those who were in relation to him; his bent was to deal with men, and to be doing good to all family relations, unto which he was bound, not spending himself in hunting and hawking, &c. but submitting himself to righteous and holy discipline in his fathers house, and tents, which were pitched about it. Some emphasis seems to be in that word tents, that he continued in faith, counting himself a stranger on earth as Abraham and Isaac, not affecting strong holds and cities whereunto others fled, but delighting to be kept by the wall of Gods providence.

Quest. It may be inquired how these twins conceived together and born together should be of such contrary dispositions?

Ans. 1. No influence of the stars could make this difference, for they were born as near as could be in the same time, so that if the aspect of stars did favour one it must do both, or if they crossed one, they must also the other.

2. No power of education could make this this difference, for doubtles both had the same, Esau as well taught and natured as Jacob; therefore education aim's them both to good.

3. Nothing then but the hand of God could make this difference, being born of the same parents; he frames constitutions, and he orders hearts even as he pleaseth, he sheweth mercy, and hardeneth justly, whom he will. Ver. 27.

3. Their character with respect to the affection of their parents.

1. Toward Esau it is noted.

Ver. 28.

1. His Fathers affection. And Isaac loved Esau, that is, he affected and respected him more than Jacob; for doubtles natural affection was to both, but Esau was preferred with Isaac.

2. The reason of this affection, Because the venison, or hunting, was in his mouth. — Because his venison was food to him, 70. — Because he eat of his hunting, Cald. This can intend nothing but a carnal reason, some think his flattery to his Father was his hunting, to insinuat into his favour, but it is not consonant to the letter; the plainer sense is, that he brought the fruits of his hunting to his Father, and this pleased Isaac, and stole away his heart.

2. Toward Jacob. And Rebekah loved Jacob. Sept and Cald. same. Doubtles she could not but have natural affection to Esau also, but Jacob was preferred more with her; and therefore her eminent love is noted to go out to him. Here is no reason added why she loved Jacob best, but it may be safely guessed; the Oracle of God took hold of her, and the disposition and frame of Jacobs heart in his demeanour toward her in obedience, and toward all, did more incline her affection to him.

Quest. Why should Isaac knowing Gods Oracle concerning his sonnes preferre him, whom God had set lower?

Ans. Doubtles this must be reckoned among Isaacs infirmities to ind lge him so in his bad manners, which gave him occasion to become a greater crosse unto him and his mother, as appeareth in his match. Carnal respect carried him aside in this matter.

Quest. Is it fit that parents should love one child before another?

Surely, it is unjust to be partial, and respect persons, for outward carnal considerations, to preferre one before another, but not so, to put a difference upon a gracious account where God himself maketh it, by sanctifying one, and leaving an other to vile affections, and wild carriages. Ver. 28.

D. 1. Providence appoints natural growth equally and alike to good and bad.

D. 2. Providence alone maketh a difference in the inward dispositions of his creatures.

D. 3. Where God rejects and passes by soules, they grow wild, brutish, cunning at any thing, but good.

D. 4. Where God chooseth, there soules are perfected by grace and made simple and plain-hearted to do good in their places. Ver. 27.

D. 5. Gracious Fathers may have their affections warped toward ungracious children upon carnal grounds.

D. 6. The weaker vessels sometimes shew greater strength of grace, to lovewhere God loves. Ver. 28.

4. The seed or sonnes of Isaac are described by their conversations, and dealings toward God & toward man, from V. 29. to the end. Wherein are considerable.

1. The occasional events, which provoke them to shew their dispositions. Ver. 29.

2. The transactions hereupon about the birth-right. Ver. 30. 31. 32. 33.

3. The conclusion of all. Ver. 34.

To the first the occasion of this discovery of these two brethren, as to their disposition and conversation, is their sold.

1. Jacobs busines at home. And Jacob Ver. 29 boiled a boiling. — Of lentile. Sept. Boiled pulse. Cald.

1. The subject is Jacob whether by himself in his tent he were doing this, or by his servant, it matters not (for Masters are said to do what servants do at their command) he was in his house providing necessary, though mean food.

2. The work, he boiled a boiling, it seem's of lentiles or pulse, such as our tares or small pease; it was plain homely wholsom food; no great delicat's.

Foolish are the conceits of the Jewes.

1. That Isaac was grown poor and could afford no better, for God blessed him after his Fathers death. Ver. 11.

2. That it was the day of Abrahams funeral, and therefore that they fed on lentiles, which was sorrowfull meat: for at such a time it is not probable Esau would not have bin hunting, nor Jacob so employed. It was no other but a daily provision of food.

2. Esaus wearines. And Esau came from the field, and he weary. — From the field fainting. Sept.

1. Esaus work is mentioned here. He came from the field from hunting, and ranging up and down, that was his course of life, wild like beasts, unprofitable to any, any, unless now and then to bring a fruit of his hunting.

2. Esau wearines, he was tired and faint in following his pleasures, wearing out his life in vain sports, and now seeming to faint for hunger, these passages though they be low, and seemingly childish, yet are they mentioned here, upon weighty considerations, that they should administer occasion of discovery of mens spirits toward God, and the precious privileges vouchsafed unto men.

Learn from it.

D. 1. It becometh the faithfull to make needfull provision for themselves and theirs.

D. 2. Such employments may be occasions of greater good under Gods providence to them. So to Jacob. It is good to be found in them.

D. 3. It is the character of a profane worldly soul to be trying out itself in pleasures & works of the world.

D. 4. Such expense of time may prove occasions of good bereaving them of better things. Ver. 29.

To the second. This occasion falling out, these brethren come to discourse about the birth-right, wherein.

Ver. 30.

1. Esaus entrance. Note herein.

1. His desire to Jacob. And he said, make me taste, feed me, cause me to sup or swallow (the word is used no where but here) I pray thee of the red, that red, viz. Boiling or pottage, or I am weary. Make me taste Sept. — Give me of this red boiling to taste. Cald. Herein observe.

1. His request, it is in the form of it hasty, and for the matter but some poor mean refreshing which Jacob had provided for himself.

2. The reason of his desire, for I am weary or faint; he had spent his strength and had need of some refreshing. This puts him on.

2. The consequent of this desire that he acquired a new name hereupon. Therefore his name was called Edom. Sept and Sam. same. That is, Red. Another emblem of his cruelty, as it was presented also at his birth; by whom this name was given him is not expressed, but under Gods providence so it was, that he was made a proverb in his name upon this occasion, he the Red, so set upon red pottage.

Ver. 31.

2. Jacobs answer to his request, And Jacob said sell to me as this day thy birth right. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein note.

1. The replier is Jacob the younger.

2. The reply, not by way of grant, but of conditionall compact, wherein is demanded.

1. The price of his pottage, thy birth-right, such as God gave him by precedency in nature, though Jacob seemed signally to strive for it by holding his heel.

2. The conveyance of it unto him by sale, sell unto me upon this price.

3. The infancy of his demand, do it as this day, now at present while we have this opportunity. It is conjectured that Esau had made overtures of it before, and now Jacob puts him to it. Some queries may justly be made here about the demeanour of both these brethren thus farre expressed.

Quest. 1. Whether Esau did any evil in asking that red red pottage of Jacob.

Answer. 1. As to the matter desired in it self as answearing his need, it was that which nature may desire without sin.

2. Yet Esau may not be acquitted from evil in his desire.

1. In respect of the rise of it, which was his excessive pleasure and wearying himself in his game.

2. In the enormity of his desire, not looking to God at all, but carried on to that which satisfied his fence, and pleased his palate, without respect of any rule of desire.

3. In respect of the end. It was the satisfaction of his own carnal appetite not eying Gods glory, and surely all this was sin.

Quest. 2. Whether Jacob did well in demanding such hard conditions from his brother for his passage?

Answer. 1. Consider wether persons in relations, with thing and thing, in this demand of sale ordinarily, it cannot be excused from evil.

2. Yet this being an extraordinary way of fulfilling such a rare oracle given of both in the womb, from the independent will of God, in Gods extraordinary way it may be just but not imitable in ordinary providence.

3. God herein makes Jacob onely an instrument to try the spirit of Esau, at what a rate he would value the birth-right, which at that time was a privilege of excellent worth and signification, therefore such a demand is here by Jacob proposed to him. In this Jacob sinned not. What workings might be in his flesh by it, as they are not known, so they are not excusable.

Learn hence.

D. 1. The first-born under providence may be brought to stand in need of the younger in the flesh. So Esau.

D. 2. Sinfull, wild, and wasting courses usually bring the greatest to such straits.

Rr 3

D. 3.

D. 3. Sense of outward want in the wicked, leads them no further than to sensual satisfaction. God is not regarded by them.

D. 4. God sometimes brands the wicked with the names of their own lusts. Esau, Edom, red from his pottage. Ver. 30.

D. 5. God hath his time to trans-ferre priviledges of grace to the least, unto whom they are promi-sed.

D. 6. Extraordinary wayes, seem-ingly sinful, may God allow his servants in bringing about his pleasure.

D. 7. God sometimes puts the wicked upon trial whether they will sell him and his gracious priviledges for the trifles of this world.

D. 8. Saints infirmities may be ex-pressed in way of bringing about Gods promises to them. Ver. 31.

3. Esaus reply to Jacob about his demand, wherein are obvious to consider,

Ver. 32.

1. His consultation with himself about it. And Esau said, behold I go to dye. Sept. and Cald. same. This is the reasoning of Esau within himself about the danger wherein he was. He spoke thus in his own heart or perhaps he might expresse it, I am faint and going to death, in respect of the present fit of wearines upon him, or whether in respect of his dangers in hunting he might speak it, is a question. Whether upon one or both occasions, thus he upon present sense of some inconvenience in the flesh reasoneth himself out of faith, and dependence on God. Thus my case is.

2. His determination in a question. And what this birth-right to me? Sept. and Cald. same. In which expostulation he sets light by that great priviledge, as if he had said, the right of first born is worth nothing to me in such a case, take it Jacob if thou wilt give me some of that red. Where may be noted.

1. The thing valued, the right of first born, which according to divine ordinance, was of high price.

1. Literally it carried in it the highest place in the family, the Prince & the Priest were designed by this.

2. Typically it sets forth the highest priviledge in heaven, figuring out Christ the first born, and the Church of the first born united to him. So that the choicest blessing in heaven and earth is here now raised by Esau. Rom. 8. 23. Col. 1. 15. 18.

2. The price at which this is valued, nothing, What this to me?

3. The subject by whom. Profane Esau. It is he that puts this price upon it. Ver. 32.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Carnal men have nothing but carnal reasonings about the spiritual things of God.

D. 2. Present pressuress upon sense drive out all faith or hope in God.

D. 3. Sense of death in carnal men work's only a desire of present ease. The highest spiritual priviledges in grace are worth nothing in the judgment of a carnal heart. V. 32. And what is this? &c.

4. Jacobs acceptance, and desire of Ver. 33. confirmation by oath. And Jacob said swear unto me as to day. Sept. and Cald. same. He taketh his profer and requirerth ratification in the highest way of men.

1. The subject demanding is Jacob.

2. The demand is, confirmation of the sale of the birth-right by Esau's oath, swear unto me. Wherein he requires that the name of the almighty God might be called upon as witness and judge of this passing away of the birth-right from Esau to him. So it should be made sure and irrevocable.

3. The infancy of this demand, do it this day, even now out of hand without further delay.

5. Esaus performance of all that was desired. And he swore to him, and sold his birth-right unto Jacob. — And Esau sold a way his birth-rights. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Two acts of Esau are here recorded.

1. His swearing away his birth-right, not hastily by word, but resolvedly by oath he confirms the parting with it.

2. His sale accomplished, and he sold his birth-right unto Jacob, that is, upon his former condition of having the red pottage, which he desired; thus he confirm's a sale not to be reversed. In all this Esau's wickedness was eminent.

Quest. But did not Jacob sin in requiring him to swear, he being so profane, and in requiring it for this end.

Ans. 1. It was not sin to require the duty of him, for wicked men are bound to the best duties, though not to do them wickedly.

2. As to the end.

1. This was a sale extraordinary, therefore not to be tried by an ordinary rule.

2. This was to discover more the profaneness of Esau's heart, who would so desperately swear away such a sweet priviledge from himself.

3. Ia-

3. Jacobs desire of such a spiritual priviledge, and prizing the same is some ground also of these transactions between them. He would have it secure.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Gracious hearts take up those spiritual things which carnal men refuse.

D. 2. Good souls may desire the best security for spiritual priviledges, even in the way of having them from men. Swear to me, &c.

D. 3. Soules spiritual are instantly desirous of spiritual things. I his day.

D. 4. The just desires of good men may be an occasion of sin to the wicked.

D. 5. It is proper for wicked hearts to swear and sell away all the tokens of spiritual advantages.

D. 6. Gods providence order's wicked hearts in putting away from themselves, mercy & good natural, which was otherwise bequeathed by grace to them. Ver. 33.

3. The conclusion of all this transaction followeth between these brethren, wherein are reported.

Ver. 34.

1. Jacobs closing action in paying the price demanded. And Jacob gave to Esau bread and boiling of Lentils. Sept. and Cald. same. Here it is declared that Jacob gave to Esau his desire; satisfaction to his appetite, bread and pottage are but for all other things present; for it is said he did drink as well as eat. Therefore doubles Jacob gave him a full meal, though it were but one; a carnall feast for a spiritual; However mean it were, yet it was satisfaction to his fleshly lust.

2. Esaus closing work see forth.

1. In several acts.

1. And he did eat. Sept and Cald. same, he satisfied his sensual appetite in the meal.

2. And he drank. Sept and Cald. so. i. e. Satisfied his thirst as well as his hunger, which was importunate.

3. And he rose up. Sept. and Cald. to the same, that is, after he had satisfied his glut, he moved from his place.

4. And he walked away. He departed Sept. He left Jacob with his birth-right and went to his place.

5. In the end, and scope, and interpretation of all the actions, which is the last expression. And, or thus, Esau despised the birth-right. — וְעָשָׂא He made vile, &c. Sep. — Lightly esteemed his birth-right, Cald. This is the account of the whole action, it was wholly a contempt and despising of that priviledge, unto which God had ordered him by precedence in nature, the Apostle hence giveth him his name, profane Esau that for one meals meat, or one morsell of meat, sold his birth-right, Heb. 12. 16. The summe is, it was Esaus contempt of God and his gracious priviledge, which was the cause of all his wicked twearing, and bargaining, and selling away such a dignity which the Saints prize highly. V. 34.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Heavenly souls easily part with earthly for heavenly things, lentils for a birth right.

D. 2. Carnall soules go away very well contented with sensual portions.

D. 3. Sensuall men despise and count vile the choicest of spirituall priviledges.

The Spirit of God brands all such as Esau to be beastly and profane wretches. Ver. 34.

CHAP. XXVI.

In the former Chapter it is probable the history of the Church was carried on about or beyond the 80th year of Isaac, for the transactions between Esau and Jacob reported in the former Chapter suppose them to be at mans estate about or above 20 years, and the end of this Chapter we find Esau to be 40 years of age. So that several years providences are here shut together in a short narration, and to distinguish every event to its peculiar time, is hard, and indeed not to be done, it being not revealed.

The general heads of this Chapter according to its distribution by our Translators may be five.

1. Isaac's removal from Lahai-roi to Gerar. V. 1. 6.

2. The events befalling him in that place. Ver. 7. 16.

3. Isaacs removal again at several distances Ver. 17. 25.

4. Abimelechs seeking amity with him by oath. Ver. 26. 33.

5. Esaus marriage. Ver. 34. 35. Others

Others make other partitions, some into 4. some into 3. but I conceive all matters here are more clearly reducible to these 5. heads named.

1. In the first general head fall these particulars.

1. The occasion of Isaacs removal. A famine.

2. Isaac's motion there-upon. Ver. 1.

3. The reason guiding him to that place Ver. 2. 5.

4. Isaacs pitching for a time. Ver. 6.

In the first verse we have the two first particulars noted.

1. The occasion of Isaacs moving his family, thus expressed. And there was a famine in the land besides the first famine which was in the days of Abraham. — שָׁמַר אֱבְרָהָם בְּלִבּוֹ אֶת אֱיִשָּׁתוֹ וְאֶת יִצְחָק וְאֶת רֵעֵהוּ אֶת אַבְרָהָם Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Herein is declared that Gods judgment in sending a famine upon Canaan brought affliction upon Isaac to make him pluck up his stakes and travel from his place. This providence is here reported.

1. In the kind of visitation, it was famine, one of Gods great plagues, and commanded only by him, he opens and shuts heaven, he makes fruitful and barren. Herein God himself afflicts and trieth Isaac.

2. In the place named, in the land, which was Canaan, the land of promise, where Isaac sojourned; there dwelt the wicked Canaanites, whom God visited with this plague several times, though otherwise it was a land flowing with milk and honey.

3. In the specification of it, by distinguishing it from that which was before. It was another besides that in the days of Abraham, which made him go into Egypt. Gen. 12. 10. So this was an iterated famine upon the inhabitants; as a new affliction and trial upon Isaac.

2. Isaacs removal of his habitation hereupon. And Isaac went to Abimelech king of the Philistines unto Gerar. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein.

2. The mover, Isaac the son of promise, blessed of God, yet now tempted.

2. The motion, he walked, he went, he travelled or journeyed.

3. The term of his motion, set out, both by the person to whom he went for succour, Abimelech king, &c. And by the place, it was Gerar, a chief city of the Philistines. It is only here queried.

Quest. Was it the same Abimelech with whom Abraham sojourned?

Ans. It is the same name, yet whether the same person is much doubted.

1. It might be for age, according as men lived then.

2. It is yet conceived that it was another to whom this name was still continued, as Pharaoh to the kings of Egypt.

3. Yet it matters not as to faith to be ignorant of it, seeing it is not revealed, whether Isaac comes upon this occasion.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Fruitful lands are made barren for the sins of the inhabitants.

D. 2. Multipled famine God sends upon multiplied abominations.

D. 3. In common judgments on nations Gods Saints have special afflictions.

D. 4. God provides a place of refreshing for him in times of straits.

D. 5. Saints may avoid public judgments in the way which God sheweth them. In the day of such a public calamity they may retire from place of judgments, especially when God points them out places of safety. Ver. 1.

3. The reason of Isaacs betaking himself at this time to Gerar is laid down. Ver. 2. 5. In which passage occur.

1. Gods appearance to him about this matter. And, for, or but Jehovah appeared to him. This is the first time we read of Gods appearance unto Isaac, now when he was put to this trial by famine.

1. The subject appearing Jehovah, He that had all being in himself, and therefore could make to be plenty in the midst of famine.

2. The apparition itself, doubles it was a real notification of the most high; as to the manner, whether it were by dream, or vision, whether immediately by himself, or mediately by an Angel, is not expressed, this is enough, that it was a true, sure manifestation of God to him for his support at this time.

3. The subject to whom he appeared now, Isaac under full straits & troubles by this heavy visitation of Canaan, his condition needed Gods help.

2. Gods bespeaking of him, which is after three ways.

1. By way of prohibition. And he said, go not down to Egypt. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The prohibition supposeth Isaac had a mind at least to go thither, if he were not going when God met him.

2. It expressly forbids a thought or motion that way, think not of going into Egypt Isaac, that is no place for you; it is probable for the fruitfulness of that country, Isaac thought he should be better provided against the famine, but Gods thoughts are otherwise. Thou shalt not go thither. What Gods reason was is not expressed; his will was was enough for Isaac; but his will was good; God knew Egypt might yield more dangerous temptations; and it was not yet time for Abrahams seed to go thither; providence therefore thus ordereth Isaacs motions, so as to further Gods ends foretold, as well as to help him in present straits.

2. By way of command expressed.

1. More generally. Dwell in the land which I shall tell to thee. Sept. and Cald. same. This is but a general pointing out of the place where God will have him abide, what ever it be, that I shall shew thee, there pitch thy tent and dwell until I remove thee. Ver. 2.

2. More distinctly. Sojourn in this land. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Here note.

1. God giveth in command the manner of his living and biding, it must be by sojourning; build no houses here, but only sojourn for a little time.

2. God points out the place singularly. This land, that is Abimelechs country, bordering upon Canaan, and therefore subject in measure unto the same famine with them, yet hither God points Isaac. Sit down here.

3. By way of promise encouraging him unto present obedience. Wherein we have expressed.

1. The promise itself, which is manifold, as here related.

1. Of Gods presence. And I will be with thee. That is, dwell with thee in grace, and watchful providence over thee. Sept. same. — And my word shall be an help to thee. Cald.

2. Of Gods blessing generally. And I will bless thee. That is, I will speak all good, and do all good for thee. Sept. and Cald. to the same.

3. Of Gods blessing specially in 4. particulars.

1. In a possession of inheritance. For to thee and to thy seed will I give these lands. — The land Sept. — To thee and to thy sonnes. Cald. That is Canaan with all the borders and territories of the Philistines, which is to be understood as formerly opened to Abraham; to Isaac as a sojourner should it be given, but to his seed, in Gods time, to inherit.

2. In performance of his Oath to Abraham. And I will make to arise or stand, or be performed the Oath which I swore to Abraham thy Father. שָׁמַר אֱבְרָהָם בְּלִבּוֹ אֶת אֱיִשָּׁתוֹ וְאֶת יִצְחָק וְאֶת רֵעֵהוּ אֶת אַבְרָהָם Sept. and Cald. the same. This was it which we read Gen. 22. 16, &c. Which was the solemn confirmation of all the Covenant from God to Abraham, the exposition of it is in the fore-mentioned place. Ver. 3.

3. In multiplying his seed to fill the promised possession, whereas Isaac had but two sonnes at this time. And I will make to multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven, and I will give to thy seed all these lands. Sept. same. — Sons Cald. This is opened before Gen. 22. 17.

4. In the eminent seed of blessing to all nations. And in thy seed shall all nations bless themselves or be truly blessed. Sept. same. — For thy sons shall all people of the earth be blessed. Cald. This was meant, not of his seed collective, but of the seed singular and eminent to come of his loins, which was Christ Jesus, the Son of God manifest in the flesh, which also was opened. Gen. 22. 18. Ver. 4.

2. A reason of Gods performing this to Isaac. Ver. 5. For as much, or, for that Abraham obeyed my voice and kept my charge, my commands, my statutes and my laws. — Obeyed my word, and kept the charge of my word, my precepts my Covenants, &c. Cald. The reason of this blessing on the son was the faith and obedience of the Father.

1. The matter of the reason is considerable, which is double.

1. Abrahams faith. He heard my voice, that is unto faith. Gen. 15. Ver. 6.

2. His obedience noted in keeping Gods charge, in three particulars. That is all that which God committed unto him to keep.

1. All his special commandments, as leaving his country, offering his son, and such like.

2. His ordinances of worship in building his Altar offering sacrifice &c.

3. His constant morall walking thereby, perfectly with God.

2. The force of this reason; Was Abrahams obedience the cause of Gods covenant & promise? Surely no. Therefore the force of this reason is not meritorious neither of congruity or condignity; but only as rational to the way, wherein all Gods promises are made good; not for obedience but in obedience to Gods commands. v. 5.

4. The last particular in the last head is Isaacs pitching at Gods word, And Isaac dwelt in Gerar. — Among the Gerarims. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Herein is Isaacs obedience to Gods command. He bends his way, and sits down presently where God would have him. V. 6.

Learn hence.

D. 7. God will have his only to sojourn in their places below.

D. 8. Gods gracious presence will be with his sojourners.

D. 11. The Fathers faith and obedience may help on the blessing to the child. Ver. 5.

D. 12. Sons of promise sit down and dwell where God would have them. Ver. 6.

2. The next general head containeth those events which befall Isaac while he sojourned in Gerar. These may be reduced to three heads.

1. His Temptation about his wife. V. 7. 11.

2. His prosperity given in that place V. 12. 14.

3. His afflictions from men. Ver. 14. 15. 16.

To the first. In the history of this temptation, note.

1. The occasion of it, which was the inquiry made by the men of Gerar. And the men of the place asked of his wife. — Rebekkas, Sept. Cald. same.

1. The inquisitors are but generally named men of the place, it is probable none of the best, whose hearts and eyes were apt to take up objects to please their lusts.

2. The matter of inquisition, concerning his wife, as of what relation she might be to him; or whether so that she might be fit for them. The nearest or dearest thing wherein they could tempt Isaac, or put him to trouble.

2. Isaacs slip in his return to them. Wherein we have.

1. His answear, And he said, she my sister, wherein covertly he concealeth truth, puts his wife in danger, and deceiveth the men that parlied with him. This was his fall in this temptation.

2. His reason for this answear was his fear, wherein are expressed.

1. The fear itself. Because he feared to say, my wife. Unbelieving passion put him here upon sinning.

2. The ground of his fear.

1. The lust and cruelty of the men, Lest the men of the place should kill me for Rebekkah. Such it seemeth they were at least in his suspicion, who cared not much to kill any that stood in the way of their lust.

2. The beauty of Rebekkah, because she was of a good countenance, or beautiful in visage to look unto. And therefore might be an object abused by wicked men. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Unbelief, dissimulation, and prostitution of his wife to danger was Isaacs sin here, as twice it was his Fathers, who yet is highly commended for his obedience.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Places of sojourning may be places of temptation unto Gods servants.

D. 2. After promise of presence with him, God may try them by mens queries, whether they will trust to him.

D. 3. It is a hard temptation when God suffers wicked men to inquire of Saints dearest relations to in-share them.

D. 4. Great Saints may slip upon such trials so as to dissemble the truth, and discover their distrust of God.

D. 5. The unruly passion of fear puts Saints sometimes upon dishonorable practices and sinful.

D. 6. Lusts and cruelty of men stirred up by the beauty of women may put Saints to such a fear. Ver. 7.

The discovery of Isaacs failing made by Abimelech. Ver. 8. 9. Wherein.

1. The time is observable. And it was when days were prolonged to him there. — And he was much time there. Sept. — When he had staid there many days. Cald. How long it was is not expressed, yet a considerable time doubtless; in all which God preserved him from his tears and his wife from injury.

2. The means of discovery in two particulars.

1. In respect of Abimelech, his accidental looking forth. And Abimelech king of the Philistines looked out by a window and saw. Sept. and Cald. to the same. This was providential, but casual to Abimelech.

2. In respect of Isaac acting something which which in Abimelechs judgment did not seem a brother. And behold Isaac sported with Rebekah his wife. — He saw Isaac playing, &c. Sept. Cald. same. The word rendered sporting, is the very root from whence Isaac is derived, signifying to laugh, play, rejoice, one reads Isaac Isaacab with a like Paronomasia as in the Hebr. 4. The company attending, under two expressions.

1. And Achuzzah his friend. — ἄνθρωπος φίλος. — His usher, Sept. Accompanied with his friends. Cald. Here Onkelos makes it an appellative noun, noting a company of friends; but it is taken for a proper name, noting one near the king, that was of his counsellors in this undertaking. Such kings use.

2. And Phicol general of his army, Sept. and Cald. to the same. This name is thought also to have bin given to all the Captains general among the Philistines, signifying the mouth of all. But if it were the same King it was also probably the same Captaine.

Quest. Why should such potentates wise and valiant men seek for amity and peace with a poor private man?

Ans. Surely something more than ordinary must cause this, for great men use not to seek peace from such as are in a low condition, but to make it. The cause therefore must needs be Gods extraordinary work.

1. Making Isaac after his departure mighty, prosperous, and formidable to these men.
2. Striking some awe and fear upon their Spirits.
3. Setting conscience of guilt before them.

- D. 3. Such as envy the prosperity of the Church, God makes sometimes to stoop to them, what ever their intents be. Ver. 26.

Ver. 27.

2. Isaacs expostulation by way of salute. And Isaac said unto them, why came ye to me? Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein we have to note.

1. The question wherewith he entertains them. Which is not to be conceived to proceed, either from churlishness, or self revenge or pride of heart, scorning them that seek peace, but onely of prudence, inspired by God, not to be rashly overtaken with their wiles, as being not fully satisfied of the end of their coming, whether to betray him as they saw opportunity, or to enter a Covenant of peace with him as they pretend.

2. The reason of his expostulation, And ye hate me, and have sent me from you, Sept. and Cald. same. The experience of their former dealings could not but make him careful, seeing at the first they pretended so much love unto him, and afterward drove him out to destroy him. Their inward hatred and outward expulsion were apparent before. Hereupon he entertains them more cautiously; and desires the reason of their coming to him, when they had so injuriously intreated him. This was no more but wisdom from God to search them as they were deceitful men.

It instruct's us, that

3. The answer and proposal which Abimelech and his do make unto Isaac. Ver. 28. 29. Wherein note.

1. The reason rendered of their coming. And they said in seeing we saw that Jehovah was with thee, Sept. same. — Because the word of the Lord was for thy help. Cald. Herein are observable.

1. Their confession, they said, all jointly concurring.

2. The evidence of what they do acknowledge. Seeing we saw, that is, evidently and certainly we saw.

3. The matter of the reason confessed, That Jehovah was with thee. That is, the eternal God was on his side and in Covenant with him, and gave out the tokens of his presence, that he was for him against all that hated him. Therefore they tell him plainly they were come to be confederat with him also. And doubtles some intimations from the Lord put them upon this; seeing that God pleaded against them who were against Isaac.

2. Their proposal unto him. And we said, let there be a prayer thee an Oath between us, us, between us and thee. — Let there be a vow, imprecation or execration, &c. Sept. — Let now the oath be confirmed that was between our Fathers Cald. In their proposal they demand terms of amity with Isaac. Wherein they propose:

1. The form of making this peace, which is two ways.

1. By Oath, that each of them should take the bond of Gods execration upon them and call upon his name as judge.

2. By Covenant. And we will strike Covenant with thee. — And we will Covenant a Covenant, Sept. — We will enter a Covenant. Cald. That is, by making articles of agreement and confirming them by striking the sacrifice as the custom of Gods Church was, whereunto they now submitted, this was the strongest way of binding creatures. Ver. 28.

2. The matter of Oath and Covenant, wherein we read.

Ver. 29.

1. The work itself. If thou shalt deal with us or do evil to us. — Not to do with us evil, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. The form of words is conditional, if thou shalt do evil to us and not good, Jehovah require it, or to that purpose. This in short is the matter of the Oath.

2. The regulation of it. As we have not touched thee, and as we have done with thee only good, and have sent thee away in peace. Here also they do at least mitigate Isaacs charge, though wholly, and in terms they deny it not; q. d. How ever you charge us, yet we have not touched you, nor yours, by violence, but have dismissed you in peace; so let your dealings be with us; and this Covenant make and swear unto us.

3. Their insinuation into him to win him to all this in the close. Thou now art blessed of Jehovah, Sept. Cald. Which passage may be read.

1. As an advocacy unto him.
2. As a confession of him; as thou art blessed of Jehovah so deal with us; or thou art blessed of Jehovah therefore needst not fear, God hath filled thee with blessing, therefore shouldest thou agree to bless and to do good.

2. Their natural and free communion; they did eat and drink, that is, courteously communicat for mutual refreshment, and rejoiced together in their peace.

2. By swearing to them according to the terms of Covenant. Wherein.

1. Their readiness, And they rose up early in the morning. — And rising in the morning. Sept. Cald. same. After matters debated on the former day, and cheerful entertainment, and rest enjoyed in the night, they were all ready early in the morning to call upon God in this matter.

2. Their performance mutuall, And they swore a man to his brother. That is, every one swore to Isaac, and he again swore to every one of them matters of peace; Jehovah being called on as judge.

3. By a friendly dismissal of them, And Isaac brought them going, and they went from him in peace. — And Isaac sent them away. Sept. and no more. Cald. as Hebr. Herein was there a courteous & peaceable dismissal of them who came to seek peace. Ver. 31.

2. The event itself contained in the tidings which his servants bring him. And Isaac's servants came and shewed him concerning the well which they had digged, and they said unto him, we have found water. Sept. and Cald. same.

2. A narration or account of their labour.

3. A discovery of the success in finding water, take up all this passage; It is probable that it was one of the wells that the Philistines stopped, which was formerly digged and named by Abraham. This new cometh to him upon his contumacy. Ver. 32.

And he called the name of it the Oath, therefore the name of the city is Beer-sheba unto this day. The well of the Oath, &c. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. It is justly determined to be the same well and the same name, that Abraham had imposed upon the like occasion in his dayes, which had it seemed bin forgotten; as the Philistines had forgotten their Oath, kept in remembrance by it. Now Isaac renewing the Covenant and Oath with Abimelech, and God making discovery of the same well, he conceiveth the name which his Father first had imposed. Some think that Abraham left the name upon the place or region, and that Isaac puts it now upon the city. We may leave this at liberty; the end of all was to make a memorial of the Oath of God, that it might be kept & not broken.

The last head of this chapter is the history of Esau's marriage in the two last verses, which by some are made the beginning of the next chapter, wherein the history of Esau is continued, and the issue declared of his irregular courses as ordered by Gods providence. It being added by our translators here, we shall dispatch it as the close of this chapter. Herein these things are eminently recorded.

1. The age of Esau. And Esau was the son of 40 years. Sept. and Cald. He was 40 years old, that is, he was fully now reached to 40 years.

2. The marriage of Esau. And he took a wife Judith, the Daughter of Beeri the Hittite, and Basemath the Daughter of Elon, the Hittite. Sept. &c. to the same. These evils are evident in this marriage.

1. The number that he marrieth, two, which however tolerated with men, yet was displeasing to God.

2. The nation with whom he joineth; Hittite, the worst of the people in the land, against whom Abraham gave a charge that his son should not marry with them, and doubtless Isaac gave him no less charge against it than he did to Jacob.

3. Their religion, they were Idolaters, with whom God would never have his people mingle. As to their names they are called otherwise, Gen. 36. 2.

2. The sad fruit of this marriage to Isaac and Rebekah. And they were bitternes of spirit to Isaac and Rebekah. They were contending, &c. And they were rebellious & stubborn against the command of Isaac and Rebekah. Cald. The evil of this marriage here described, is with respect to the parents of Esau idolatrous & rebellious wives, who neither feared God, nor revered their parents, must needs be a burden to gracious fathers and mothers, whose delight is to see their children walk orderly in Gods fear; bitterness of spirit is a paraphrase of all the heart-breaking evils, that could be done to wear out the lives of Isaac and Rebekah.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Wicked children usually increase sin with their age.

D. 2.

D. 2. Reprobate spirits take all the ways of sin, to put away blessing and bring on the curse.

D. 3. Idolatrous wives and multiplicity of them hasten ruine to them who take them. Lust loves idolatrous yoke-fellows.

D. 4. Bigamy and unholy matches prove greatest griefs to gracious Parents. These were bitterness of spirit to Isaac and Rebekah.

CHAP. XXVII.

AFTER a short mention of Esau's impiety in marrying to the grief and heart-breaking of his Parents, Moses proceedeth to declare the fruit of such his impieties in the translating of the blessing from him to Jacob, according to the Oracle first given of him, The elder shall serve the younger. In the execution of which decree, though it were given when neither had done good or evil, it is to be observed wickedness precedes both in despising his birth-right, and giving up himself to all profanities of spirit, before he was actually rejected from the blessing which he desired.

The history of which event being 37 years after his marriage, is here recorded by Moses who passeth over other particular occurrences of that time, and falleth upon the relation of Gods dealing with Esau. In the whole Chapter three generals may be observed.

1. The translation of the blessing from Esau to Jacob. Ver. 1. 29.

2. The access and attempt of Esau to regain it, with his demeanour. Ver. 30. 41.

3. The care taken for securing Jacob against Esau's threats. Ver. 42. 46. In the former general are concurring these particulars.

1. Isaac's purpose and call to bless Esau. Ver. 1. 2. 3. 4.

2. Rebekah's diversion of it from him to Jacob. Ver. 5. 29.

To the first. In Isaac's endeavoring to bless Esau, these special things are considerable.

1. The time and occasion of it. And it was when Isaac was old, and his eyes were dark from seeing. Were dull to see, Sept. And he could not see. Cald.

1. This event as was noted, was 37 years after his marriage. So that Esau and Jacob were 77 years of age at this time, which will appear by computing the age of Jacob, when he went down to Egypt, together with his time of service to Laban, and Joseph's time of birth and age when his father came into Egypt. Compare these texts, and it will appear he served Laban 20 years. Gen. 31. 38. Joseph was born in the 14th. year of his service. Gen. 30. 25. 26. In the 40th. year of Joseph came Jacob into Egypt. Gen. 41. 46. with. Gen. 45. 6. And then Jacob was 130 year old. Gen. 47. 9.

2. The Age of Isaac which at this time was 137 years, hereupon it seems he was moved to settle his house.

3. The blindness upon him which we read not befell others, of as great and greater age; yet here providence so orders it upon him for his own glory, that by his sight the blessing might not be turned instrumentally from him, unto whom God had designed it.

2. The attempt of Isaac to bestow the blessing upon Esau as may appear.

1. In his calling for him. And he called Esau his elder son, and said to him, my son. Sept. and Cald. same. This calling and sending for him was in order to blessing. Two things are considerable in this.

1. The fathers call which was

1. Special, to Esau his eldest or first born.

2. Kind and loving. My son.

2. The sons ready reply. And he said unto him, behold me, Sept. and Cald. same. Here I am. He answered his fathers call; so farre it proceeds. Ver. 1.

2. In his charge unto him, wherein note.

1. The rehearsall of the occasion of his calling him, made up.

1. Of the knowledge of his age. And he said behold now I am old. Sept. and Cald. same. Good Isaac here numbers his years and perceiveth himself decay whereupon he determin's, as he thought to provide for his son.

2. Of the ignorance of his death. I know not the day of my death. Sept. Ver. 2. same. When I shall dye. Cald. It seemeth he had apprehension of it to be nearer than it was, for he lived above 40. years after this. Yet being uncertain he deferred to make use of present time. v. 1.

2. The command which he giveth him.

1. To arm himself. And now take I pray thee thy weapons, thy quiver and bow. Sept. same. Thy sword and thy bow. Cald. All this was but in preparation for some other work.

2. To hunt for him. And go forth into the field, and hunt for me an hunting. Which was venison, Sept. and Cald. same. Thus Isaac puts him in his own delightful course to run and hunt for a blessing. Ver. 3.

3. To provide him some refreshing. And make for me savory meat according to what I love. Sept. and Cald. to same. With such food food Isaac was delighted before; and that with cheerfulness of Spirit he might bless his son, he desired to eat and drink thus at his hand; however God frustrated all. This is the plain sense of the history; and allegories here are beside the matter, but only such as the Spirit of God maketh.

3. In his end proposed, And bring it to me and I will eat that my soul may bless thee before I die. That I may eat. Sept. and Cald. His end is made up.

1. Of his sonnes collation, he must bring it.

2. Of his own repast, Isaac should eat of it.

3. Of his fathers return, which was the blessing. Wherein.

1. The matter intended, was the blessing which God instrumentally did convey by the Patriarchs to the promised seed, which was the confluence of all spiritual and temporal good, under types at this time held out.

2. The manner of despoising it, in that expression my soul may bless, which though it signify a mans self, yet in acting, it notes the intimacy and cordialness with which the blessing was intended to be bestowed.

3. The time, presently, this was intended before his death, which he knew not how soon it might fall out. At this Isaac aimeth, to fasten the blessing on Esau surely before his death. Thus farre his attempt.

Quest. 1. What was this blessing so much desired?

Answer. Blessing falleth under various considerations.

1. It is taken for any good generally, which is either wished or done to any.

2. It is taken specially for that blessing which God gave to Abraham, and by him to Isaac, and by him to Jacob. Which was that Covenant whereby God severed them to be his Church, on whom all blessings in Christ should be completed.

Quest. 2. Could the Patriarchs bless what children they would?

Answer. 1. With common good they might, as Abraham to Ismael, &c.

2. With this special blessing of the Church they could not, because it was intailed upon Isaac & upon Jacob by God. But afterward all the sons of Jacob were blessed, God making his Church of them.

Quest. 3. Did Isaac desire to part with the blessing for venison?

Answer. No, but blessing being an action of cheerfulness, for age to be refreshed to the discharge of this duty, cannot argue sensuality, nor the undervaluing of such a blessing. He had a mind, to bestow it on Esau; but not for his venison.

Quest. 3. Did Isaac well in aiming the blessing to Esau?

Answer. Surely herein he cannot be excused.

1. He was not to give that blessing at pleasure but as God had appointed it.

2. God had revealed by his oracle, that the elder should serve the younger.

3. He could not be ignorant of the meaning of this Oracle, that God intended the blessing to Jacob.

4. He knew Esau despised the birth-right, and that Jacob had it by Covenant, therefore to alter Gods mind or frustrate God Covenant must needs be evil.

Heard him speaking. Sept. — when he spake. Cald. It is likely she was present, or near at hand where providence ordered her then to be, to prevent Isaacs designe; and hearing his resolution to crosse the Oracle of God, this stirs her up now to call about for directing the blessing where God had appointed it.

2. Isaacs absence after this, And Esau went into the field to hunt venison and to bring it. — To hunt a hunting for his Father. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. This he did in order to the blessing intended by Isaac.

2. Her advise or injunction upon Jacob. Where.

1. She required obedience. And now my son obey my voice according to that I do command thee. — Hear me as I do command. Sept. — Acquiesce in my word, &c. Cald. Wherein she bindeth him peremptorily to be obedient to her command whatsoever it should be.

Quest. But can any mother so absolutely command obedience whether it be right or wrong?

Answer. Surely she supposed her command to be according to Gods Oracle, and therefore she so prelieth it; for otherwise no parents can command children against God. And now was Jacob 77 years of age when under this command. Ver. 8.

2. She giveth him her charge what she would have done.

1. To get meat for his Father before Esau. Wherefore.

1. She sends him to the flock. Go now I pray thee to the flock, and take for me from thence, two good kids of the goats. — Tender and good. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. she directs.

1. To a shorter way, onely go to the flock of sheep and goats.

2. To an easy work, bring me two good kids of the goats.

2. Her encouragement therunto. And I will make savory meats for thy Father, such as he loveth. Sept. and Cald. the same. So farre she helps to speed before Esaus return from hunting, whose journey was longer, and labour greater, and yet in the issue to little purpose. Ver. 9.

manded. Some queries here would be answered. Ver. 10.

Quest. 1. Was it fit for such a wife to crosse such an husband in blessing their seed?

Answer. 1. Had the matter concerned no more but husband and wife in economical affairs, it was not just but sinfull.

2. But this having relation to God and his Oracle, it was no evill for the wife to crosse her husband, that she might please God, God is neerer then Isaac to her.

Quest. 2. Was it just to attempt this by deceit and deluding her husband?

Answer. 1. Gods promises need not the deceit of creatures to bring them about.

2. So farre as the counsaile of the flesh was used it was surely evill, yet God beares with the infirmities of his, when their rise and end are good. Faith may principally move, though fence do warp.

Quest. 3. Why doth she command two kids to be brought?

Answer. 1. It might be to take choise of the best of them.

Quest. 4. It is askt, why God would suffer things to goe on after this manner?

Answer. Truly, God may doe & suffer what he will. It is conjectured, that the corruption of one may crosse another who would crosse Gods Oracle and purpose. So is Isaac crost here by Rebekah.

2. It might be to take some of the choicest parts from both.

He doth not presently yeeld to his mothers advise, but first as becometh a man, he replyeth to her something, that might be a reasonable stop in the way; prudence taught him at that time, to consider upon what grounds to obey his mother.

2. His objection proposed, which consists in two parts.

1. The sensible description of this brother, Behold Esau my brother is an hairy man, Sept. and Cald. same. The very outward form of him was like an hide, as may be safely conjectured by the kids skinnes which Rebekah put upon Jacob to deceive Isaac.

2. The description of himself, And I a smooth man, Sept. and Cald. same. His outward frame was soft and smooth, like the flesh of a man. Now these were very different; and discernable by one who had his feeling, though he had lost his sight.

3. His supposition, Perhaps my father will feel me. Left haply therefore my father feel me, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. This was no more than rationally was to be supposed, considering many circumstances els which might bewray him; and he supposed not this in vain, for his father did feel him, being put to doubt by his voice.

4. His conclusion which is twofold.

1. And I shall be in his eyes as one that maketh to erre, As one despising him, Sept. As one mocking, Cald. This of necessity would have fallen out, if he had gon in his own garb; his father would have judged him as a deceiver upon such defrauding practises.

2. And I shall make a curse to come upon me, but not a blessing, Sept. same. Curlings and not blessings, Cald. This was not causelessly feared, for a curse was pronounced, upon him that should make the blind to erre, Deu. 27. 18. In plain terms he was suspicious of this way, and therefore pauseth, Ver. 12. His judgement concerning a curse due to deceivers and not a blessing, maketh him put this stop to his mothers motion. Thus farre Jacob dealeth uprightly.

4. In this diverting of the blessing Rebekahs reply to this objection of Jacob followeth for his satisfaction, which carrieth in it these two things.

1. A resolute securing him from any curse, by interposing her self, notwithstanding all the difficulties that might seem to be in the way, and this in a kind of an imprecation. And his mother said unto him upon me be thy curse my son, Sept. same. It is told me by prophesie that curses shall not come upon thee but blessings. Cald.

2. The replicer his mother, full bent at this time to disappoint the counsailes of the flesh.

2. Her reply is considerable.

1. In the matter of it, which is an assurance to him, that no curse shall come upon him, that is the scope of the expression, as the Caldee paraphraseth.

2. In the form of it, which is a kind of imprecation, if any curse be, let it be upon me, I will bear it, thou shalt be free.

Quest. What maketh Rebekah so peremptory and confident as to wish evil upon her self?

Answer. 1. The rise of it doubtles was from faith on the oracle of God, which she knew must and would stand.

2. The manner of her acting in it seemeth to be from her passion & hastines of Spirit to set Jacob about the busines. Wherein some sin might not be wanting.

2. An instant command upon him for obedience. Only obey my voice and go and take for me. Go and bring unto me, Sep.

1. The forme of her command is instant and restrictive.

2. The putting of them on. And she put them upon Jacob her younger son, Sept.

2. The matter, is harkning to her voice and dispatch of the busines, as if she had said, trouble not your self with such fond feares, go and do what I would have you, I will stand between you and danger, if any curse be, let it be upon me; some reflection on the promise though mixt with corruption, must be conceived here to act her. D. 4. Natural affection may be instant to have things done irregularly upon a ground of faith. Ver. 13.

5. The next thing in this diversion of the blessing observable is the preparation made for procuring it to Jacob. Wherein we have to note.

1. Jacobs work in his obedience, And he went and took and brought to his mother, Sept. and Cald. same. That is, he fetched two kids unto her, as she had appointed him, so farre is his obedience exprest.

2. Rebekahs work for her purpose intended, which is taken up in 4 actions here recorded.

1. She made the meat. And his mother made savory meat, such as his Father loved, Sept. and Cald. same. That is, some dainty dish that might please Isaacs palate, to cause him to mistake it for venison. Ver. 14.

2. She attired him in Esaus habit. Wherein note.

1. The taking of them being in her keeping. And Rebekah took the desirable raiment of Esau her eldest son. The beautiful robe or stole of Esau her eldest son, &c. Sept. Garments which were fair, &c. Cald. what kind of garments these were is questioned, as whether they were Priestly robes, which is conceived did belong to the elder, or princely garments; or common wearing apparel of the best sort. Unto all which the text is silent in determining; we have here mentioned nothing but desirable garments, which doubtles were choice, and kept up in some sweet chests; or otherwise probably perfumed; because Isaac speaketh of the smell of them afterward.

2. The putting of them on. And she put them upon Jacob her younger son, Sept.

and Cald. fame. So Jacob is translated into Esau's clothes, so farre to gain the blessing. Ver. 15.

Ver. 16.

3. She takes care at least to assimilate him unto Esau's skin, if his Father should feel him. And the skins of the kids of the goats she put, or made him put upon his hands, and upon the smooth of his neck. Upon his arms and the bare of his necke, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Thus she provides against his fear of his Fathers feeling of him, because his brother was rough and hairy it seemes, even like a beasts hide. Ver. 16.

Ver. 17.

4. She dispatcheth the meat into his hand to carry to his Father, & now act his part. And she gave the savory meat & the bread which she had made into the hand of Jacob her son, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Thus now all things are ready by Rebekah's contrivance, that Jacob should prevent his brother, & carry his Father the refreshing appointed and get the blessing. Other difficulty in words there is none.

Quest. Was not all this contrivance fraudulent, and so sinful against God, against Isaac, against Esau, against Jacob, and against herself in imprecating a curse? &c.

Ans. 1. Were all these transactions nakedly between creatures and from themselves wholly, doubtles all is to be condemned, God hates guileful dealing, and was offended, Isaac had bin abused, Esau injured, Jacob seduced, and herself voluntarily laid under the curse.

2. The ground of all this her acting was the Oracle of God, though flesh might worke irregularly thereupon. Therefore her infirmities are not to be excused, onely God had the ordering of all this, and crosseth Isaac because he walketh contrary to him; and sets Esau beside the blessing, for it was none of his; and suffers Jacob to go the way which his mother sheweth, and spareth all Rebekah's rashnes in the flesh.

3. This whole was of extraordinary concernment, therefore not to be judged by the ordinary command, nor to be exemplary unto ordinary practise.

D. 10. God suffers and orders in extraordinary wayes the sensual preparations of creatures to take away the blessing from sensual men. Ver. 17.

6. The last particular noted in the diverting of the blessing is Jacobs address to his Father with his provision, wherein several things are observable.

1. The discourse between Jacob and his Father. Ver. 18, 24.

2. The yeelding of Isaac to eat and drinke. Ver. 25.

3. The collation of the blessing on Jacob. Ver. 26, 29.

To the first. The discourse containeth 5 interchanges.

1. Jacob bespeaking his Father with his return, And he came to his Father and said my Father. And he said behold me, Sept. and Cald. fame. Herein.

1. Jacobs entrance and speech, my Father, as became a son honoring his Father, Ver. 18.

2. Isaacs reply in love, suitable to a sons honour, behold me, here see me my son, I am ready for thee.

2. Isaacs question and Jacobs answer, Who art thou my son? Sept. and Cald. fame.

1. This is the Fathers question, which notes his doubting by reason of his blindness, therefore inquireth of him who bespeakes him as a Father, perhaps also fearing some attempt to prevent Esau. V. 18.

2. Jacobs answer, where,

1. He pretends his relation and personats Esau, And Jacob said to his Father I am Esau thy first born. Where his words are expresse, and justified by some to be as true as Iohn baptist was Elias. Matth. 11.

14. But sure this being spoken to deceive, will hardly admit of such an evasion.

2. He declares his expedition pretended to be at his Fathers command, I have done done according as thou spakest to me, Sept. and Cald. fame. Herein also was there a dissimulation.

1. Of person, as if he had bin Esau to whom Isaac spake.

2. Of work, as if he had brought venison hunted, when it was none, yet to he personates his brother.

3. He petition's his blessing. Arise I pray thee, sit and eat of my hunting or venison that thy soul may be blessed, Sept. and Cald. fame. Here he mentions what he commeth for, and desires.

1. His Fathers acceptance. Arise, sit, eat.

2. His Fathers blessing which is intended to Esau. Ver. 19.

3. Isaacs question and his reply about the fiddennes of his provision, wherein are delivered.

Ver. 20.

1. Isaacs querie, And Isaac said to his son, how this, that thou hast hastened to find it, my son. — What this that thou hast found it so quickly. Sept. Cald. to the same as Hebr. In this he discovers some jealousy, seeing more quick dispatch than usual in getting venison, and by the question, he puts Jacob to it for an answer to bewray himself.

2. Yet Jacob hath an answer at hand, And he said because Jehovah thy God made it meet before me. Or brought it before me. — For the Lord thy God gave it before me, Sept. — Prepared it before me, Cald. This was a quick and full reply, yet not without dissembling, that he had it from the stocke. Wherein is.

1. A fallacious return to his Father, who supposed it to be venison caught by hunting, and might be perswaded God could bring it to hand.

2. A profanation of Gods name, in making use of it to cover his dissimulations; yet thus farre God suffers it. Ver. 20.

4. Isaacs demand for further satisfaction. Wherein we have.

Ver. 21.

1. The Fathers desire, And Isaac said unto Jacob, come near I pray thee, and I will handle thee my son whether thou be my son Esau, or not, Sept. and Cald. fame. Here he discovered his suspicion notwithstanding his fair pretence, and now puts Jacob to the trial which he feared, he will feel him before he trust him, as much as a blind man could do for his satisfaction Ver. 21.

Ver. 22.

2. The sons readiness to satisfy his Father, And Jacob came near to Isaac his Father, Sept. and Cald. fame. Herein he doth nothing but right to answer his Fathers demand, yet with hope to deceive him.

3. The Fathers satisfaction discovered.

1. In his action, And he handled, or felt him, Sept. and Cald. fame. Doubtles with what care he could, he laboured by feeling to discover him.

2. In his speech, And he said the voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hands are the hands of Esau, Sept. and Cald. fame; Here he inclineth to judge his feeling better than his hearing, by the hands though borrowed, than by the voice though natural. Just was this from God. Ver. 22.

4. The event, which was twofold.

1. Isaacs mistake, And he discerned him not because his hands were as the hands of Esau his brother hairy. — He knew him not, Sept. and Cald. Herein is declared.

Ver. 23.

1. His ignorance that he did not discover him to be Jacob.

2. The reason of his mistake, because his hands were rough like Esau's, hereby God suffered him to be deceived, that he might not crosse his Oracle.

2. His concession to Jacob, And he blessed him. Sept. and Cald. fame. In short, he yeilded to give him that for which he came. The fuller discovery of which followeth. Ver. 27. &c. So farre. Ver. 23.

5. The last parly between them, where in the Father puts himself upon the truth of his son. Herein.

1. Isaacs question. And he said, art thou he my son Esau? Sept. and Cald. fame. Here he presseth his credit, as if he should say, tell me in truth art thou my very son Esau?

Ver. 24.

2. Jacobs answer I, or I am he. And Ego, I am. Sept. and Cald. fame. Herein, he at last confirms his former falsehood, and in plain terms replieth, I am that Esau, and so deludes his father.

Quest. Here it is inquired whether Jacob did not grievously sin in all this carriage?

Ans. Some deny that he sinned at all in lying, either because it was an officious lye, or els from Gods special command indulging him; But neither of these grounds can clear it; officious lyes are sins, neither is God to be accounted the author of them, it is abominable.

2. It must therefore be granted that Jacob spake against his own knowledge, and therefore sinned.

3. Figurative speeches none can be found in this passage.

4. The case was extraordinary in the whole, God may order the sins of men to his own glory, but they are no whit the more excusable in themselves. Jacob doubtles did sin in all these dissimulations, yet God pardoned it and ordered the blessing to him.

1. His call for it. And he said, bring me, my son, Sept. same. Come neer to me. Sept. same. Come before me, Cald. Here onely he calleth for the meat prepared. Ver. 25.

2. His grant to eat it. And I will eat of my sons venison, Sept. and Cald. as Hebr. Here he accepts his provision.

2. Isaacs reception. And he eat and drank, Septuag. and Cald. same. These were but signal actions preparatory to the cheerful conveyance of the blessing on his son. In all we find him brought to do that by wiles, against which he was resolved in himself.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Providence sometimes orders misguided Spirits to be won unto the right way by wiles.

D. 2. Person and gift shall be accepted at last which God appointed for the blessing.

D. 3. God ordereth him to be blessed with the soull, who was not by the man intended to be blessed with the mouth.

D. 5. Eating and drinking are suitable preparatives to praise God and blesse man. Spirits revived more chearefully discharge their duty. Ver. 25.

3. The last thing noted in the diversion of the blessing, is the actual conferring of it upon Jacob. Whereabout we have to observe.

2. Isaacs invitation of him and that unto two things.

1. To accesse. Come neer I pray thee, Ver. 26. or now, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Approach is the first step unto blessing. He giveth him new boldnes to come.

2. To

2. To sweetest acceptance, And kisse me, my son, Sept. and Cald. same. This was a sign of the sweetest indearment, and the best subjection of the soul to be blessed unto him that blessed it. This draweth neer the blessing still. Ver. 26.

Ver. 27. 2. Jacobs obedience. And he came neer, and kysed him, Sept. and Cald. same. All this was but due from the blessed to the bleaser.

3. The collation of the blessing itself. Wherein note.

1. The occasion taken. And he smelt the smell of his garments, Sept. & Cald. same. It is likely this rich apparel of Esau was perfumed, and gave a fragrant savour unto Isaac; whereupon he takes occasion to give his blessing.

2. The act of blessing itself, of which are observable.

1. The form, it is propheticall and promissory, given out in the truth & strength of God; therefore it is said, by faith Isaac blessed, &c. Hebr. 11. 20.

2. The matter of it, which stands in several good things here prophesied and bequeathed to him.

1. He makes him so blessed that he becomes the cause of blessing to others. In that passage, And he blessed him, and said, see, The smell of my son is as the smell of a field which Jehovah hath blessed. The relative is doubled to set out that field emphatically. The field which the Lord hath blessed even that. A full field, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. It is evident to be a part of the blessing, wherein he maketh Jacob a fountain of blessing to others; even as a field is blessed when full of corn, not for itself but for others, so was Jacob filled with good to blesse many, Ver. 27.

Ver. 28. 2. He blesseth him with plenty, Now the mighty God shall give thee of the dew of heaven and of the fatnes of the earth, & plenty of corn & new wine, Sept. same. — Of good of the earth, Cald. Heavens influence, earths fruitfulness or fatnes, multitude of corn and wine are the full paraphrase of a rich estate. This Isaac from God giveth unto Jacob, Ver. 28.

Ver. 29. 3. He blessed him with victory over Nations, People shall serve thee, and Nations shall bow down unto thee. Princes shall adore thee, Sept. Kingdoms shall be subject to thee, Cald. In this Isaac as a Prophet of the Lord foretelleth not onely the subjection of all nations to the Church in him, but their adoption also. As to Jacobs person little or nothing of this appeared; but to the Church his seed; and to Christ the head; this was eminently performed and will be more.

4. He blesseth him with dignity over his brethren, Be thou a lord to thy brethren, and the sons of thy mother shall bow down to thee, Cald. same. — Lord of thy brothers, and thy fathers sonnes shall adore thee, Sept. This as to Jacobs person was not in outward power; he feared Esau, as to his po- terity, they brought down the Edomies sometimes. The eminent performance of it therefore must be in Church priviledges.

5. He sets him above every curse and fills him with blessing, Cursed be they cursers, and blessed be that blesseth thee. Both singular in Sept. Both plural in Cald. It is that which God himself gave to Abraham, I will blesse them that blesse thee, &c. Which was an evident exalting of Abraham above all curse, and setting him ever with all blessing. This Isaac from God conveyeth to Jacob as the heir of promise with himself; and herein pronounceth himself blessed in blessing Jacob. Cursing from man is wishing evil to any out of hatred. Cursing from God returned, is the speaking of all evil to them with effect. So blessing from man is wishing good out of love; but blessing from God is speaking good to make it rest upon soules. So Isaac hath blessed Jacob.

Quest. Was all this blessing onely in earthly things?

A. 1. Surely no, then it had bin no better than Isaacs.

2. It is the same which God gave to Abraham and Isaac before, which took in all spiritual good things in Christ.

3. The Saints themselves contented not their hearts with the outward things but fought heaven in them, Heb. 11. 13. All good things therefore in Christ are carried here.

Quest. 2. Whether Jacob could take that blessing with a good conscience, and keep it which was gotten by guile?

Ans. To answer. 1. His evil doubtles was to be lamented.

2. Under these infirmities of his, faith did work from Gods Oracle.

3. God himself had given him the blessing; therefore any failing of his could not make it invalid, or give him ground to relinquish it.

Quest. 3. Whether the blessing given against the intent of his father could be confirmed to Jacob?

Ans. 1. Isaac himself saith, I have blessed and he shall be blessed. Ver. 33.

2. God had given it, therefore it could not be reversed; so he comforts him with it in his way. Gen. 28. 14.

3. The act was extraordinary which God ordered in pardoning all the evil, & so confirmed the blessing as it was given. And what God confirm's none can disannul. V. 29

The second general of the chapter now followeth which is Esaus return from hunting, and attempt either to regain the blessing, or get one as good as that. The transaction of this business is taken up from Ver. 30. to 41. Herein occurs to observation.

1. Esau addresseth to his father. V. 30. 31.
2. Isaacs passionat entertainment of him. Ver. 32. 33.
3. Esaus resentment of his fathers answer. Ver. 34.
4. Isaacs crimination upon Jacob in this. Ver. 35.
5. Esaus censure of his brother and suing to his father. Ver. 36.
6. Isaacs straight what he should do for him. Ver. 37.
7. Esau importunity for blessing still. Ver. 38.
8. Isaacs return to him at last. Ver. 39. 40.
9. Esaus revengefull resolution on Jacob. Ver. 41.

In the first of these Ver. 30. 31. we have to note.

1. The instant of time which providence ordered for Esaus return and addresseth to his father, expressed two ways.

- Ver. 30. 1. As to his Fathers action, And it was even as Isaac had finished to bless Jacob. After Isaac had ceased blessing Jacob his son, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. In that very point of time that the blessing was finished.

2. As to the sons departure, And it was one in going Jacob was gone out of the presence of Isaac his Father, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Which noteth also the season of dispatch, that Jacob was newly departed, enough to escape discovery by Esau. So providence ordered the blessing past, & Jacob gone, before he that ran to hunt returned.

2. Esaus part acted in several things.

1. In his return, And Esau his brother came from hunting, Sept. and Cald. same. He had bestirred himself and hunted and taken, and returned with good hopes. Ver. 30.

2. In his preparation of meat, And he also made savoury meats, Sept. and Cald. same. This was according to his Fathers command, thus he doth also in order to blessing.

3. In his accesseth unto his Fathers, And brought it to his Father, Sept. and Cald. same. This was also in obedience to his Father, and in pursuance of the blessing, and no way yet dashed in his hopes.

4. In his petition, which is threefold.

1. Let my Father arise, Sept. and Cald. same. The phrase is a little more peremptory and confident than that of Jacob. Ver. 19. Yet petitionary.

2. And let him eat of his sons venison or hunting, Sept. and Cald. same. This he desireth as it was promised him before he went out to hunt. Ver. 4. Yet not availing.

3. That thy soul may bless me, Sept. & Cald. same. This also his father had offered him, when he sent him out to hunt, and this now confidently he demands. Ver. 31.

- D. 7. Esau may have more boldnes in in demands for blessing than Jacobs.

- D. 8. Presumption maketh no question to have the blessing, though it be gone. Ver. 31.

In the second, which is Isaacs passionat entertainment of Esau we have to consider.

Ver. 32. 1. Isaacs question of him, And Isaac his Father said unto him who art thou? He was startled at another voice and now doubles begins to question with some zeal, having blessed one before, Sept. and Cald. same. This expostulation carrieth some of that passion which followeth.

2. Esaus answer, And he said I am thy son, thy first born Esau, Sept. and Cald. same. This answer doubles startles him more, having blessed one already under that name, and now hearing of another Esau more like the man he aimed at. This the son replyeth, yet ignorant of with was done. Ver. 32.

3. Isaacs passionat reply, wherein we have to note.

Ver. 33. 1. His posture, And Isaac trembled a great trembling unto vehemency. Astonished, or was in an extasy vehemently Sept. — Isaac wondred excessively. Here nature work's, when man seeth he is crossed.

1. The affection expressed, fear, extasy, admiration.

2. The measure of it is above, superlative, set out by many aggravating terms. So poor Isaac is transported when disappointed of his aim's & seeth his error.

2. His exclamation or calling out upon him that had deceived him, Who, where he that hunted an hunting & brought to me; and I have eaten of all before thou camest & have blessed him, S. & C. to the same. This is like the speech of a trembling astonished man, complaining of his mis-hap, crying out against him that had prevented him, and taken away the blessing; in such confusion was his Spirit upon this discovery of his mistake.

3. His ratification of what he had done, He also shall be blessed, Sept. and Cald. same. Here eminently God over-ruleth man in passion. By his temper one would conjecture, he would have called for Jacob and reproved him and have reversed the blessing again; but we hear of no such thing, onely he doth peremptorily ratify what he had done. He shall be blessed, and none can undo it. This can be no other but the over-ruling hand of God, who can make man do his work, and not reverse it. Eminent is this work of God.

Quick 1. Was his trembling onely natural?

Ans. It is probable that it was not only so, but however his disappointment might occasion it, yet the remembrance of his error against God in attempting to cast the blessing from Gods Oracle, may now make him tremble to repentance.

Quest. 2. But how doth he ratify the blessing when he saw his own mistake?

Ans. 1. Herein he testifieth his repentance of being the occasion of so much evil in transmitting Gods blessing.

2. He did bless in faith from God, and so confirmed it, as the Apostle speaketh. Hebr. 11. 20.

It teacheth us.

- D. 1. Gods providence may make ministers of blessing question them on whom they had resolved to cast it.
- D. 2. Men may answer to the right name to which blessing was intended, and yet go without it. Ver. 32.
- D. 3. Passion may make disappointed men tremble, but grace turneth it onely to repentance.
- D. 4. Providence may well astonish men at their doings, when they heed not Gods oracle.
- D. 5. Good men admire sometimes that they are carried out to do these workes of God, which they intend not.
- D. 6. God makes his instruments at his pleasure to confirm his blessing, and they cannot gainsay. Ver. 33.

3. Esaus resentment of his Fathers first answer, wherein.

Ver. 34. 1. His hearing of it, which was the ground of all, As Esau heard the words of his Father. And it came to passe when Esau heard, &c. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. The first effect of his Fathers reply was by way of impression: He heard all the words of the translation and confirmation of the blessing, which tidings doubles made deep impression upon his Spirit.

2. His crying out and complaint, And he cried with a great cry & bitter to vehemency, Sept. and Cald. same. This is his first expression by way of complaint. He cries, he howls; in bitter passion, vehemently, he complaineth that the blessing should be so irrecoverably gone, so as the Apostle note's he seeks now the blessing with tears, Heb. 12. 17.

3. His praying and intreaty, And he said to his Father bless me also, the my Father or, also I my Father. Elliptically, that is, I also am thy son my Father. Bless me also my Father, Sept. and Cald. same. Here is express an earnest desire, such as he had in the flesh after this blessing; he cried & prayeth to his father the instrument, but not a whit mourning after God, nor seeking his face.

1. His hope in his Father.
2. His care is for the blessing.
3. His aim is himself. This is the summe of his resenting his Fathers reply. Ver. 34.

Ver. 35.

4. Isaacs crimination of Jacob to excuse himself in this matter, And he said thy brother came by guile and hath taken thy blessing, Sept. to the same. Thy brother came wilyly, &c. Cald. Or in wisdom, &c. Wherein he seemeth to charge Jacob.

1. For his wile, he came with deceit.
2. For his stealth, he took thy blessing. As to his wiles, all are not excusable; but to steal from Esau he did not, for it was his own, given him of God. However Isaac faith thy blessing. So indeed he intended, as by fleshly birth-right. But God did shew his mind to the contrary: and his the blessing must be by right, unto whom God giveth it. Ver. 35.

D. 2. Good men may slip in overcharging evil on others, which they do not deserve.

D. 3. Instruments of blessing may complain that the blessing falleth not where they would have it. But no help for that. God so disposeth it. Ver. 35.

5. The next thing is Esaus censure of his brother hereupon, which carrieth in it these particulars.

Ver. 36.

1. A branding of him by name, And he said, did he not truly call his name Jacob? Justly was his name, Sept. and Cald. Here his carnal witt beginneth revenge, to play upon his brothers name, and so to grieve him, was he not truly, called Jacob? He is Jacob indeed. Sarcastical is this expostulation.

2. A pleading of it by pretended reason, And, or for, he hath supplanted me at two turns, he took my birth-right, and behold now he hath taken my blessing, Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein he discovers his wickedness in false accusing.

1. That he took his birth-right by supplantation, when as, his profane heart despised it, and sold it for a morsel of meal.

2. That he took his blessing, when it was his own, given to Jacob by God. So sinners vent themselves against Gods righteous ones.

3. An appeal hence again to his Father for a blessing, And he said hast thou not reserved a blessing for me? And Esau said to his Father, is there not a blessing left for me Father? Sept. Cald. as Hebr. g. d.

Father thou hast seen his supplantations and couzenage, and hast thou not kept a blessing for me? Ver. 36.

D. 3. Carnal souls seek their own blessing by charging the just.

D. 4. Blessing is desireable by the profanest heart even the leavings of the righteous. Ver. 36.

6. Isaacs streight as he makes it out to Esau. Wherein note.

1. He declareth what he had done for Jacob, in two things.

1. In casting upon him the dominion. And Isaac answered and said to Esau, lo I have set him a Lord to thee, and all his brethren have I given him for servants. Ver. 37.

If I have made him thy Lord, &c. affirmative, Sept. I have appointed him a prince to thee. Rab. Cald. In this is nothing but a declaration of what he had done for Jacob, and it could not be reversed. That the principality of the kingdom was from God by him settled on Jacob, and the blessing of it could not be had but by being subject unto him: For doubles of the spiritual and ecclesiastical preeminence is thus mainly to be understood, in respect of which Esau in his person and for his time was subjected unto Jacob, because he scorned it, and rather will have no blessing in the Church, than join by submission unto Jacob for it. Otherwise if it be meant of the posterity onely of these two, we see, as to temporal power, it had its vicissitude between between them, and more worldly power seemeth to be on Esaus side. But as to Church power and preeminence in spiritual things, unto which Gods oracle seemeth most to look eminently was Jacob Lord over Esau, both in his person and seed; and none of his brethren were further blessed than as they were subjected to him. As father also, in the tents of Schem.

2. In filling him with all temporal blessing, And with corn and new wine I have supported him. or corn and new wine have I added to him. I have established him, Sept. and Cald. That is, from God as his minister, by way of his Covenant, have I supported, sustained, or established him, with all good things for this life, according to Gods oracle and promise, and so it must be.

2. He now is at a losse what he should do for Esau, And for thee now what shall I do my son? Sept. and Cald. to the same. This question discovers his streight, that he was at his wits end, and knew not what to do for Esau his son. What shall I do? Surely I know not what to do for thee my son. I am in a great streight.

D. 6. It is an inextricable streight unto gracious Fathers, how to blesse their children out of the church. Ver. 37.

7. Esaus importunity is yet continued. Wherein.

Ver. 38.

1. His passionate expostulation, And Esau said unto his Father, is there this one or onely blessing with thee or to thee my Father? Sept. and Cald. same. See here the frame of his spirit to be content with any blessing out of the Church, if he might not have the preeminence there, therefore he expostulates, Is there no more but this one Oracle-blessing in thy power my father?

2. His importunate petition, Blesse me, also, Is my Father, Cald. as Hebr. blesse me also Father according to the expression, Ver. 34. The second pronoun my may be read also in recto, Blesse me I also am thine, my Father or els in apposition, Blesse me, me also, & so noteth his importunity which way soever it be. As if he had said, if I may not have that Oracle-blessing, give me any other out of the Church. Something he would have, though but a bare worldly portion.

3. His discontented lamentation, And Esau lift up his voice and wept, Cald. as Hebr. And Esau cried out with his voice Sept. Herein appears the rottenness of his heart, he howles and weeps out of passion and envy to his Brother, and vexeth himself, but all this while no repenting for his profane spirit. Crocodiles tears they be, which would end in revenge.

8. Isaacs last answer unto Esau which is not so much by way of blessing as of prediction of the state of him & his posterity, whereof these particulars occur.

Ver. 39.

1. The manner or form of his answer, And Isaac his Father answered and said unto him, Sept. and Cald. same. Where note, it is not said, that Isaac blessed him; but gave him the answer that followeth, which was as much as he could do, but a blessing properly it was not, because it came not by commission from the love of God.

2. The matter of his answer, which was prediction of three things; concerning Esau.
1. His outward estate and lively hood, Behold of the fannes of the earth shall be thy habitation, and of the dew of the heaven from above, Sept. same. Of the best of the earth, &c. Cald. The particle demonstrative doth

X x. but but shew his portion without wonder. His Father telleth him, God will allow him in his providence a portion in the earth of the fat and sweet. He shall have enough of the creature, which he acknowledgeth afterward, Gen. 33. 9. So God makes his sun to shine and his rain to fall upon the wicked as upon the righteous. Ver. 39.

Ver. 40.

2. His course of life, And by thy sword shalt thou live, and thy brother thou shalt serve; Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The phrase of living by the sword noteth contention, disquietness, and trouble, though with self defence.

2. The phrase of serving is according to the word of Gods Oracle, which foretold spiritual inferiority of the elder to the younger, in Gods account; to serve him is to come behind him, short of the grace which he obtaineth of God: yet as an embleme of this outward subjection of his seed to the posterity of Jacob, is declared in the Prophets. So the Edomites were brought under by David. 2. Sam. 8. 14. Ps. 6. 8. But this was the last of his servitude.

3. His escape out of this servitude mainly in respect of the outward state of subjection wherein his children were unto the seed of Jacob. And it shall be when thou shalt get dominion, then thou shalt break his yoke, rom off thy neck. — And it shall be when thou shalt put off and draw his yoke from thy necke. Septuag. And it shall be when his sonnes shall transgresse the word of the law, thou shalt take away his yoke from off thy neck, Cald. This escape as it concerned Esau in his seed, from serving Jacobs seed in the house of David 150. years after their captivity; then they revolted from under the hand of Judah, &c. 2. Kings. 8. 20. 22. But if this respect spiritual servitude, it must be meant.

1. That Esau should get from subjection to persecute the Church.

2. Offsome of Edom, whom grace might convert as the promise of grace opens a way to all nations to the liberty of children, and so their bondage should be taken away by conversion. Ver. 40.

Some queries would be satisfied to clear all.

Quest. 1. Wherein differed Esaus blessing from Jacobs?

Answer. 1. That spoken to Esau was no blessing but a prediction.

2. What he had was from common providence, not from promise.

3. The very head of Jacobs blessing was in spiritual things, tending to the kingdom of God, which Esau prized not.

Quest. 2. How doth the Apostle say that he found no place for repentance when he wept so much? Heb. 12. 17.

Answer. 1. It is certain Esau did not repent or weep for any sin, but was under his losse of birth-right and blessing.

2. Repentance, with the Apostle, respects his Father, not Esau. He could not make his Father repent of his bestowing the blessing on Jacob, so as to reverse it.

Qu. Did not Esau obtain a blessing at last? Answer. 1. He had not that blessing of the Oracle which was given to Jacob.

Answer. 2. In propriety he had no blessing at all, for the love of God was not in it; neither was it a fruit of his promise, but a prediction of the various events which under providence should befall him and his.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Importunity to wicked children may obtain an answer of well-wishing, though not the blessing from their parents.

D. 2. Portions in the world and plentiful habitations, God may in his providence allow to Esau; Ver. 39.

D. 3. A contentious and quarrellous life profane soules usually lead in the world, and that against the Church.

D. 4. Providence orders sometimes such as are hypocritically subject to the Church, to break off its yoke.

D. 5. External dominion is allotted to the wicked, in providence, as well as to the Church.

D. 6. God can of slaves and servants, make free children to the Church. This follows, if the sense of breaking the yoke, be by conversion to the Church in Jacob. Ver. 40.

9. Esaus revengefull resolution to help himself, wherein the character of his wicked heart is fully given.

1. Of his inward disposition and affection toward his brother, And Esau hated Jacob for the blessing where with his Father blessed him. — Sept. and Cald. same. Esau was angry, &c. Sept.

1. His affection, deadly, inward hatred, or boiling of choler to extremity of indignation. Pl. 55. 4.

2. The object, poor Jacob beloved of God, he is hated of Esau.

3. The reason working up this hatred, it was the blessing which his Father gave him of principality in the Church and kingdom of God, he hated him because he was blessed; and his Father falleth under it in measure, in that he should offer to bless Jacob; this is purely devilish hate hate a man because God blessed him: so did his predecessor Cain. 1. John. 3. 12.

Ver. 41.

2. In his heart and tongue resolution And Esau said in his heart the dayes of mourning for my Father draw nigh, and I will kill Jacob my brother. Cald. same. And he said in his mind, or with his mind, let the dayes of mourning for my Father come neer, that I may kill my brother Jacob, Sept.

1. The manner of his resolution is observable, it is said he spake in his heart, that is, not onely in his secret soliloquies, for then Rebekah could not have known it, but he spake this with his heart and mind, as well as secretly resolved it within.

2. The matter of his resolution. Wherein note:

1. The opportunity desired, viz. the death of his father, which according to the Greek is by way of wish, so the Hebr. may also be read. Let the dayes, &c. or O that the time of my fathers death were come. A desperate patricide. See what kind of teares he wept; wish death of parents and all relations in his revenge.

2. The main resolution. And or then, will I slay Jacob my brother. Here his repentance ends in blood; q. d. The old man Isaac stands in my way, but his time will not be long, we shall make a short mourning for him; and then I shall talk with that blessed man Jacob, I will make him sure enough from his blessing: I will kill him, and then let his blessing follow him. Note this combination of sins.

1. Sacrilegious contumacy against God, that though God and his father had blessed Jacob, yet he would make him fall short of it.

2. Desperate hypocrisy in pretending to cry for a blessing, and mourn for his father, and yet bent to seek blood, and desiring to shorten his fathers dayes.

3. Bloody cruelty against the blessed of the Lord. He is resolved to be the death of him that should attain the blessing before himself. Yet this expectation failed, for Isaac lived 40 years after.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Esaus, wicked hypocrites, hate always bitterly such whom God loveth dearly.

D. 2. Gods blessing on his own is the cause why the wicked do so much hate and curse them.

D. 3. The hearts of the wicked are meditating mischief and their tongues belching it out against the righteous.

D. 4. Pretended mourning for the dead is the hypocrites cloak for the death of the living.

D. 5. Mischievous hypocrites in the Church, stick not to hasten the death of parents, when they hinder from their ends.

D. 6. Resolutions of the wicked are for the slaughter of the righteous and blessed, were it in their hand. So farre of the second general. Ver. 41.

3. The next head is the care for Jacobs security and the issue of it in his deliverance, where about we have considerable.

1. His mothers care. Ver. 42. 46. The end of chap. 27.

2. His fathers dismission. Chap. 28. Ver. 1. 4.

3. Esaus use of it. Ver. 6. 9.

4. Jacobs departure from Beersheba to Bethel with special occurrences. Ver. 19. 22. The end of Chap. 28.

5. Jacobs arrival at Padan-Aram. Ch. 29. 1. &c.

1. The first of these finisheth this Chapter, according to our division, where in we have to consider.

1. The occasions of Rebekahs Sollicitousness, it was the rumour of Esaus intended revenge; therefore he vented it with his tongue as well as devised it in his heart; by whom Rebekah heard it, it is not expressed, but probably by some of the family which told her, for no need was of revelation here. And there were declared to Rebekah the words of Esau her eldest son, Sept. and Cald. same. Her ear heard Isaac resolve to bless Esau and prevents it. And again she heareth Esau purpose of revenge and diverts it. This tidings could not but sadly affect her, to consider into what streights she had brought Jacob her son; yet she bestirreth herself to deliver him.

Ver. 42.

2. Rebekahs addresse to Jacob immediately hereupon, Wherein we have to note.

1. Her mission for him, And she sent and called Jacob her younger son, Sept. and Cald. same. Immediately doubtles she maketh meane to speak with him about this matter.

2. Her declaration of the busines to him, Behold Esau thy brother cometh himself also thee to kill thee. — Threateneth thee to kill thee, Sept. — Layeth wait for thee to kill thee, Cald.

1. Her earnestness and intention in discovery appears, she said, Behold. A note of attention to him that he might look to it, as well as her heart was troubled about it.

2. The matter discovered, that Esaus consolation was to be Jacobs death, so it is to the letter. He comforts himself in it; to revenge is sweeter than honny to the enraged, doubtles so this reprobate quieted his own wicked heart in this hope that he would make his brother fall short of the blessing for all Gods Oracle and his Fathers confirmation. Ver. 42.

X x 2 own

3. Her advise to Jacob in this streight, wherein are obvious to view.

1. Her counsaile expressed two wayes.

Ver. 43. 1. Generally, And now my son hear or obey my voice, Sept. same. Rest upon me. Cald. Here she ingageth his obedience again, in what God makes her instrumentall for his safety.

2. Specially, in two things.

1. For present escape, And rise, fly for thy self to Laban my brother to Charan. Run into Mesopotamia to Laban, &c. Sept. and Cald. as Hebr. Herein she seemeth to fear that Esaus revenge might fall out sooner, therefore she dispatcheth Jacob with all haste.

1. The speech advised, delay not, away.

2. The place, Charan her brothers city, where providence directed him for other ends than present safety. Ver. 43.

2. For some future abode, which advise carryeth in it.

Ver. 44. 1. His sitting down with him And sit down or dwell with him, Sept. and Cald. to the same. In this she propoeth safety and sufficiency for life there with Laban her brother.

2. The time expressed.

1. In measure or number, a few dayes, dies inos. Some single dayes which notes a little space of time.

Ver. 45. 2. In circumstance or adjunct of that time, Untill thy brothers fury turn away, &c. And again untill thy brothers anger turn away from thee. Ver. 44. Untill the wrath & anger of thy brother shall turn away from thee. Sept. Untill thy brothers anger be appeased. Untill it return, &c. Cald. Yet further it is added, And he forget what thou hast done unto him, Sept. and Cald. same. Herein the term of time is bounded with two circumstances or adjuncts.

1. cessation of Esaus wrath and quenching his spleen.

2. Oblivion of the pretended injury, which Jacob had done him; which was none, but as it was mistaken. So time is apt to wear out anger and injuries; these being, over she promisseth to send and fetch him thence again home unto her, Then, or And, I will send and take thee from thence, so she comforts him and her self with hopes of his return from his exile.

2. The reason of all this advise, even her fear of the losse of both her sonnes at once, Why should I be deprived of you both in one day? Least I be made childles of you both. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. This she had cause to fear. For if Esau should slay Jacob, either man must shed his blood, or God would, or some other way curse him for a murderer as he did Cain. Therefore she is earnest with him to be gone.

Quest. Was not this sollicitousnes in Rebekah from unbelief? Could not God secure Jacob at home?

Answer 1. Doubtles God could, yet providence doth order to save him other wayes.

2. Avoidance out of Esaus reach, was the present means more rational to secure him, and it destroyeth not faith to make use of meanes lawfull.

3. Probably this way God would chasten both mother and son, for their irregularities in seeking the blessing.

4. Providence had other ends there to match him and to bring forth the tribes of Israel. All which together may excuse Rebekah from unbelief.

Learn we.

D. 1. Providence ordereth the counsailes of the wicked to be revealed, that they may be prevented.

D. 2. God maketh sometimes the Instruments of their streights to be Instruments of deliverance to his. So Rebekah was to Jacob.

D. 3. It is but meet that such who bring into danger should a besollicitous to prevent it.

D. 4. Timely advise for safety should be taken with greatest heed, as given with greatest care.

D. 5. The murder of the Innocent is the comfort of the cruel and wicked man. Revenge comforts the hypocrite, when no harm is done to him. Ver. 22.

D. 6. The mothers voice must be heard when it tends to the good of children.

D. 7. Flight from danger into exile is many times the lot of persecuted Saints.

D. 8. God can make the wicked habitations sometimes shelters to his people. Ver. 43.

D. 9. Gracious parents and children would part but for a little time, if it might be.

D. 10. Time weaves out anger and memory of all pretended injuries in the wicked. Ver. 44.

D. 11,

D. 11. Tender mothers long to preserve the lives of children, evill and good.

D. 12. To be childles, or bereft of all, is an evill deprecated by the saints. Ver. 45. Jer. 31. 15.

3. The last expression of her care is in bespeaking Isaac about this matter, and the manner of framing the same. Wherein we have to note.

Ver. 46. 1. Her plaint, And, or then, Rebekah said to Isaac, I am strained in my life by reason of the daughters of Heth. I am pained in my life for the daughters of the sons of Cheth, Sept. I am grieved, &c. Cald. Herein her plaint was not unjust nor feigned, for she had long sufferance under that evil complained of.

1. The plaintiffe here, is Rebekah a wife and mother, burdened under many pressuress, speaking here onely of one, which she conceived might take best.

2. The judge to whom she appeales, is Isaac, an husband and a father, who also bore part of her burden with her, and was grieved as well as she.

3. The evil complained of, is the streightning or anguish of her life, that is, her life was made a burden to her, she was willing as it were to cast it up, as something lying on her stomach so the words in Hebr. and Greek do intimate.

4. The reason of these straights the daughters of Cheth, which were Esaus wives; their wickednes toward God, and man, did weary out Rebekahs life to abide near them. Such heavy burdens are rebellious children.

2. Her fear pretended, If Jacob take a wife of the daughters of Cheth, as these of the daughters of the land, Cald. same. If I shall take to Jacob a wife of the daughters of this land, Sept. Her fear is of an evil contingent, though she might have more confidence in Jacob; and this she supposeth to Isaac might fall out, & therefore insinuat's to him a necessity to go and match in a better place.

3. Her despair of any comfort of her life if such a thing should fall out, What is life to me? or to what purpose should I live? Cald. same. What then is it for me to live? Sept. It is a passionat exprellion, declaring her despair of life and comfort therein, if such a thing should come to passe.

The vulgar latine reads. I will not live. But this is no true translation. The holy woman is to be supposed, not so to determine against Gods wise providence. Thus farre she labours to worke Isaac to a willingness for Jacobs departure.

Quest. Was this pretence all that Rebekah aimed at?

Ans. No doubtles, for the fear of Esaus rage put her upon this course to secure Jacob, yet this which she speaketh was one real cause to match Jacob as God had ordained, to bring others under the Church-Covenant with him from the place of his ancestors. Good reason therefore might be of concealing the present instigation by Esaus threatening, in respect of her husband and son; prudence in such cases may conceal matters prejudicial to safety.

Quest. Was it not passion in Rebekah to be so troubled?

Ans. 1. Infirmitie doubtles might appear in not being able to bear something.

2. Grace doubtles did set her heart against the Hittites for their wickednes, and her zeal appear's in testifying against them.

3. She served herein the Oracle of God in sending Jacob from those tents of wickednes in Canaan, to marry where he had appointed, for raising of his Church.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Good wives are ready in straights to unbosom themselves to good husbands.

D. 2. Good mothers are in great trouble for the Good and safety of their Children.

D. 3. Gracious women are burdened with the impieties of rebellious and wicked allies in their families.

D. 4. Wicked matches are burdens to the very life of gracious parents.

D. 5. God sometimes makes gracious mothers more sollicitous to strive up fathers for right disposing of their Children. Ver. 46.

CHAP. XXVIII.

2. The next step of providence for Jacobs security is Isaac's acting of his part upon the motion of Rebekah. Wherein.

1. His advocacy or calling for his son Jacob, And Isaac called Jacob, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein note.

1. His call, Isaac by his wife or some other, sends for Jacob upon her motion; Here the Fathers care begins to appear now at the 77th year of his sons age to direct him toward a wife, which would seem past time with us, yet providence so ordered it; now Isaac bethinkes himself of this, and sends for him upon his mothers motion.

2. The specification of his call from the end of it. Which was twofold,

Xx 3 I. To

1. To bless him, And he blessed him.

2. To lay his charge upon him. And he charged him. Sept. & Cald. same. Both these ends are more fully declared in a transposed order.

1. Moses relates the charge, and that is twofold.

1. Prohibitive, And he said unto him, thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan. Cald. same. — of the Canaanites. Sept. This was Rebekahs pretended fear; against this Abraham had charged Isaac; and he from the Oracle of God had charged Jacob, which afterward was a written law to Israel, not to marry with Idolaters. Ver. 1.

2. Mandatory, wherein he enjoyneth him.

Ver. 2. 1. Preparation, arise. Sept. and Cald. same. That is, prepare thyself and fit for your journey; so the phrase of arising here must note it.

2. Motion, And go to Padan-aram to the house of Bethuel thy mothers father. — Fly to Mesopotamia, &c. Sept. Cald. as Hebr.

1. His motion commanded was to go and travel.

2. The term of his motion.

1. General, the country of Padan-Aram, that is Syria, between the pair, or two rivers, Mesopotamia, Gen. 25. 20. Gen. 24. 10.

2. Special, Bethuels house or family who was Rebekahs father, whence she came, & so the Church must.

3. His business or worke there, And take to thee a wife from thence, of the daughters of Laban thy mothers brother. Sept. and Cald. same. In short, there he must marry, and take a wife from whom the promised seed was to come; and the people which were to inherit the promised land. The place and person seem to be pointed out of God, from the charge given, note onely.

1. That as to person it was his mothers brothers daughter, which was not then judged unlawful.

2. That Isaac points him out but to one wife, and no more, however the event was otherwise.

Note hence.

D. 1. Good Fathers disdaine not the wife and gracious advice of Mothers for their Childrens good.

D. 2. Good men may change their minds upon Gods convictions for disposal of blessing.

D. 3. Blessing and command go together from God, by his instruments, unto his Covenant ones,

D. 4. Matches of the true seed with the Idolaters are expressly forbidden by God, Ver. 1.

D. 5. Fathers have their due power to dispose of Children in marriage.

D. 6. It is good for Fathers herein to follow the discards and guidance of God, to dispose Children, where the knowledge of God is. Ver. 2.

2. Moses relates the blessing, for which he calleth his son Jacob, somewhat different in words from the former, but aiming at the same scope. In the conferring whereof may be observed.

1. The manner of blessing, it is now done by Isaac knowingly, willingly, purposely, according to the will of God, to confirm the blessing on Jacob.

Quest. What need was there of this second blessing?

Answer. Much in respect of man.

1. On Isaacs part, to expresse now, that he did as willingly bless, as God would have him, which he did dubiously before.

2. On Jacobs part, it was to add strength to his faith, who might be tempted to thinke, that a blessing gotten by deceit, and under another name might be frustrate. Now therefore he is blessed under his own name, and in an upright way.

3. On both parts in respect of their parting, it was meet the father should send his son away blessed.

2. The matter of blessing now confirmed, which is laid down in 4 particulars.

1. And God almighty, or all sufficient Ver. 5. blessed thee. — And my God blessed thee my son Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Here note.

1. The connection of the blessing and command precedent, do what I charge thee, and the Lord bless thee.

2. The fountain of the blessing prayed on him, God almighty or allsufficient God, as he appeared to Abraham, mighty to do what ever he promised to do unto him, from the all-mighty spring of blessing doth Isaac fetch his benediction for his son.

3. The issue from this fountain blessed, that is, out of his all-sufficientnes shall give out streames of good spirituall & temporall. It is either promisory or prayer-wile.

4. The object terminating this emanation of blessing, thee Jacob my son, let all Gods springs empty themselves on thee, be thou the receptacle of the almighty God, and all his blessings.

2. And make thee fruitful and multiply thee, and be thou for an assembly of peoples. — And thou shalt be for the synagogues of the nations, Sept. — And be thou for companies of tribes. Cald.

All this part of the blessing concerneth the increase of the Church by him prophesied in 3 expressions.

increase of the Church by him prophesied in 3 expressions.

1. In the cause of its fruitfulness, which must be to make increase of seed, God maketh thee a fruitful root.

2. In the effect of it, multiplicity of seed, God causeth out of thy fruitful stocke to arise multitudes of seed.

3. In the end of it, to be assemblies, or Church, or synagogues of people for God: such as the Tribes of Israel were, to whom the nations also were gathered.

Ver. 4.

3. And give thee the blessing of Abraham to thee and thy seed with thee.

He will give thee the blessing of Abraham my father; &c. Sept. — And to thy sonnes with thee. Cald. Herein he prophesieth and prayeth upon Jacob Abrahams portion, about which is expressed.

1. The freeness of it, God shall give it, or God give it.

2. The nature of it, Abrahams blessing, which was all Covenant-mercy to be a God to him; it containeth all grace, adoption, righteousness, &c. and all temporal good annexed in the promised land, which afterward is expressed. Gal. 3. 13. 14. Rom. 4. 7. 8. 13, &c.

3. The term of reception or object of it, thee and thy seed, according as God had intailed it on Abraham and his.

4. To inherit the land of thy pilgrimages which God gave to Abraham, Sept. same.

Of thy habitation. Cald. This is exegetical as to part of Abrahams blessing, for God gave the land of Canaan to him wherein he journeyed also. Gen. 17. 8.

1. The good promised, inheritance of the land of promise which now was but the place of sojourning & pilgrimage; that wherein thou art but a stranger now shall be thine inheritance, which God made good when he brought Israel out of Egypt.

2. The right title to it, which was Gods gift unto Abraham, so that no claim could be laid unto it by others, seeing the God of heaven in whose dispose heaven and earth are, had thus made it sure to Abrahams seed, and so to Jacob in the line of promise.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Gods blessing needs to be repeated and confirmed unto soules, to answer temptations, and to prevent unbelief.

D. 2. Obedience, yielded to the charge of God foregoing, the blessing shall follow after.

D. 3. God almighty and almighty is the onely fountain of blessing.

D. 4. The issues of good from God almighty, upon poor creatures, they are blessings indeed.

D. 5. Gods almighty giveth fruitfulness for the increase of his Church, Ver. 3.

D. 6. Abrahams blessing from the Almighty is that which passeth from generation to generation upon the Church.

D. 7. The rest typical as well as spirituall and eternal, is made the inheritance of Gods Israel from his almightines.

D. 8. Gods gift to Abraham is the just title of all the seed of promise to that inheritance eternal, typed out in Canaan. Ver. 4.

2. Isaacs dismissal of his son followeth, wherein note.

1. The fathers act of power, And Isaac sent away Jacob, Sept. and Cald. Ver. 5.

same. That is, with the solemne collation of the fore mentioned blessing he gave him leave to depart, and sent him from the place which was to be his inheritance into another country; for that end which he had given him in charge.

2. The sons act of obedience, And he went to Padan-Aram, &c. Cald. same. — Mesopotamia, Sept.

1. His discession from his father is noted. He went away.

2. The term of motion aimed.

1. In place, Padan-Aram.

2. In person. To Laban described relatively, by his father the son of Bethuel, and by relation to his sister, the brother of Rebekah, &c.

Quest. Why doth Isaac send away Jacob so bare and single, Abraham took another course for Isaac?

Ans. 1. God doubtles had an overruling hand in this providence, so to order it for greater ends than were now apparent.

2. Jacobs faith was to be tried more in this way.

3. Gods glory more appeared in it, in his journey and issue of it.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Providence makes parents willing to part with dearest children in order to accomplish his will.

D. 2. Providence ordereth childrens hearts in readiness to obey the fathers charge to execute Gods purpose.

D. 3.

D. 3. Providence sometimes sends out creatures naked and helps the more to glorify itself. Ver. 5. He keeps them while they believe on his promises.

3. The appendix to this, Isaacs dismission of Jacob is the use which Esau makes of it. Whereabout note.

1. The occasion or cause of Esaus doing, which was his observation of some passages in Jacobs dismission.

Ver. 6. 1. He observes Isaacs blessing of Jacob, And Esau saw that Isaac had blessed Jacob, Sept. and Cald. same. This, it is like, he overheard, or by some means had notice of it, in the solemn dismission of his brother, therefore he might have some fond hope of a blessing yet.

2. He observes his fathers dismission and charge to Jacob against marriage with the daughters of Canaan, And he sent him away, &c. Sept. and Cald. same. Here Esau perceiveth his fathers charge as to marriage, which he formerly regarded not. Ver. 6.

Ver. 7. 3. He observes Jacobs obedience, And Jacob had obeyed his father and mother, &c. Sept. and Cald. to same. Here he considering that his brother listened to his father and mother in this matter, and had the blessing; this puts him upon thoughts of what he had done, and what was best to be done yet. Ver. 7.

Ver. 8. 4. He observes that his father was not pleased with the Canaanitish women, And Esau saw that the daughters of Canaan were evil in the eyes of Isaac his father. — Before Isaac his father, Sept. — Were displeasing in the eyes, &c. Cald. This he gathers from the charge which Isaac gave Jacob against matching with them. Ver. 8.

2. Esaus action hereupon. Twofold. 1. His journey unto Isaacs family, And Esau went to Ismael, Sept. and Cald. same. This must be meant of Isaacs family, for he himself was dead 14 years before in the 123 of Isaac who was now 137 as may be seen. Gen. 25. 17.

Ver. 9. 2. His work, And he took Machalath the daughter of Ismael, son of Abraham the sister of Nebajoth unto his wives, to him for a wife, Sept. and Cald. to the same. This Machalath is called Basemoth. Gen. 36. 3 who was daughter of the same mother with Nebajoth Isaacs eldest son. Her Esau now takes as a third wife to the two former, aiming, it is likely to please his father, by marrying one of his fathers kindred, as his brother by taking a wife among his mothers brethren. So he adds sin to sin in multiplying wives, and those bitter enemies to the Church.

Quest. Did this mend the matter with Esau?

Ans. Surely no, for 1. He turneth not to God at all.

2. His aim at best was but to please his father.

3. He matcheth among enemies to the seed of promise.

4. He multiplied sin in multiplying wives, which Isaac did not give in charge to Jacob.

It teacheth us,

D. 1. Hypocrites hearing of blessing upon others, pretend to make to it as well as any.

D. 2. Hypocrites hearing Gods charge to accompany his blessing, would seem to observe it. Ver. 6.

D. 3. Hypocrites seeing the obedience of Saints, would seem to imitate it. Ver. 7.

D. 4. Hypocrites perceiving what is displeasing to God & his servants, would seem to avoid it. Ver. 8.

D. 5. Hypocrites in all their pretences for God take the wrong wayes without his counsell.

D. 6. Hypocrites in all their pretended imitations of the Saints do but add sin to sin. Ver. 9.

DDD

Hitherto Moses hath continued the history of the Church and its affairs; in the dayes of Isaac, & we have no more of it under his name until the mention of his death. Ch. 35. 29. Here now is the history of the Church continued under the name of Jacob; which taketh up the most of this book following, saving a little of Josephs time afterward. The occasion of Jacobs mention now, was his intended security from Esaus rage, and the saving of the line of the Church in him; how God moved father and mother in this matter we have heard & how the Lord moveth him & goeth with him we shall hear in the sequel of the history. At this verse the Hebrews begin the seventh section of the law; which was ordered to be read in their Synagogue, as one lecture on the Sabbath. In these sections, as it is observed, they noted some for distinction onely, and called it Parasha, marked with 3 letters DDD The first of that word, others they observe for order, called sefer, and marked with these 3 DDD This continueth to the end of the 36 Chap. Where at the 37th another of the like becometh. This here in present is called by the Hebr. Vajese. From the first word which becometh the section.

In this history of Jacob so farre as it is con-continued in this Chapter, we have 3 notable characters of Gods providence toward him.

1. Events before his going to sleep. Ver. 10. 11.

2. Events from God in his sleep. Ver. 12. 13. 14. 15.

3. Events after his sleep and refreshing. Ver. 16. 22.

To the first. Therein we read these two things.

Ver. 10. 1. His onset and posture for his journey, And Jacob went out from Beer-sheba, and went toward Charan. — From the well of the Oath, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Herein we have to note providence ordering.

1. His out-setting from his fathers house at Beer-sheba.

2. His on-setting toward Charan, noted to be 500 miles distant in English account.

3. His solitariness in his undertaking, it was Jacob alone without retinue or associates, so God ordereth his entrance upon his journey. Ver. 10.

2. His first stage is recorded, wherein he maketh a stay for refreshment of nature, wherein may be observed.

Ver. 11. 1. The pitching of Jacob, And he lighted on, or met with a place, & lodged there, because the sun was gone or set. — And he met with a place and slept there, &c. Sept. — And he came to a certain place and stayed there. Cald. Herein note.

1. His providential access, for to the word noteth a meeting of place or person, unthought of by him but so ordered by God.

2. The place itself set out under a general notion here, but afterward it appears to be an open field, or place near Luz. Ver. 19.

3. His stay, he carried but one night there, a nights lodging onely, he took in the place, and no more. This place is conceived by some to be 48 English miles distant from Beersheba, therefore also is it conjectured that this fell out the second or third night after he left Beersheba; the Spirit expresseth not that what stage it was, yet it may not be impossible to be the first dayes journey, as day and strength might serve Jacob.

4. The reason of his pitching there, because the sun was set, so it seemeth he travelled late, and now it being not convenient to go further, here upon this occasion he sits down. Time called to rest, such as Cod vouchsafed.

2. His provision for his rest, And he took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows. — And laid them at his head, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Here are reported.

1. His labour, he gathered, or took of the stones of the place.

2. His fitting of disposing them for his ease, hard pillows they were to comfort a weary head; yet such are many times the best retirement of Gods dearest Saints. The ground for a bed, the stones for pillows, and heaven for a canopy.

3. His reposing himself to rest, And he laid him down in that place. Cald. same. — Slept. Sept. Here is a bare relation of his setting and reposing himself to sleep. Doubtles as to this also he lookt up to God, and providence layeth him sweetly to rest.

Quest. Why did Jacob lye out in the field, seeing the place was so near to Luz?

Ver. 19. Ans. It is conceived by Josephus, that it was in dislike to those wicked inhabitants, being not willing to lodge there; but the scripture mentions no such thing. Therefore no other cause appeareth, but that providence by the lateness of the evening, appointed him to take a lodging there, where God would entertain him.

Learn from it.

D. 1. As from Abraham to Isaac, so from Isaac to Jacob, is the true history of the Church continued by Gods Spirit.

D. 2. The Church in Jacob was an exile and went in a long pilgrimage.

D. 3. It is no new thing that providence sends the dearest Saints from friends to strangers.

D. 4. Providence orders Saints from Beersheba to Haran, to bring souls from Haran to Beersheba, from the world to the Church. Ver. 10.

D. 5. Gods care provideth all pitching places for his Saints in their motions.

D. 6. An open field under God may be a better receptacle for Saints, than townes or cities.

D. 7. It is but a nights lodging which is ordered unto Saints, in the hardest places. A little time.

D. 8. A stony pillow and a dusty bed, is good lodging when God makes it.

D. 9. Good rest may they have whom God layeth down upon the earth to sleep. Saints are willing to rest where God will have them, and where he layeth them they shall sleep. Ver. 11.

Y y where

2. The providential events to Jacob in his sleep now follow; In general it was a dream which God was pleased to present unto him; for so it is expressed that God appeared in it. Wherein 2 objects general were held out.

1. Something to his eye. Ver. 12. 13
2. Something to his care. Ver. 13. 14. 15.

Ver. 12.

1. In general the event is thus expressed, And he dreamed, Sept. & Cald. are the same. As God laid him to sleep, 'so to sweeten it he giveth him a comfortable apparition in a dream, that he might rest without fear, and be comforted when he awaked. This was one way wherein God was wont to reveal his mind unto his Prophets. Num. 12. 6. Which afterward the Devil did imitate in false Prophets and filthy dreamers. Jer. 23. Nevertheless the way of Gods discovery is never the worse, nor in case of truth therefore to be doubted. In this way God is pleased now to reveal himself to Jacob; so that this was no natural dream that may arise out of a mans constitution, or multitude of business, but a divine inspiration.

2. In this dream some things are presented to sight.

1. A ladder, And behold a ladder erected upon the earth, and his top reaching to heaven, Cald. same. — firmly set on the earth, whose head reached, &c. Sept. Wherein as to the letter we have to observe.

1. the term of animadversion. And behold, calling for observation in this place, as to the matter exhibited.

2. The thing itself presented, a ladder, which is an instrument used among men for scaling high places, and motion up and down; such a thing appeared to Jacob in a dream, as if he had looked on it.

3. The posture of it.

1. It was set up between earth and heaven, its foot upon earth and its head reaching to heaven.

2. It was firmly set, fixed, and established, beyond any shaking, or removing.

2. The next matter presented in the dream is a vision of Angels, And behold the Angels of God ascending and descending on it. Cald. same. — ascended, and descended. Sept. Herein also.

1. The note of attention, behold this too, even that which followeth.

2. The matter here pointed out, Angels of God, such as were his ministering spirits sent out to minister for them who are heirs of salvation, mighty, and swift, and willing messengers of providence, to effect Gods will upon his chosen.

3. The motion of these heavenly ministers; they were always going up and coming down, converting between God and Jacob, these expressions are but fitted to the instruments, and can note nothing but the continued motion of Angels between God & his Church. Ver. 12.

3. The last thing presented is God himself, And behold Jehovah stood upon it, or above it. — And the Lord was firmly set upon it, that is, at the top. Sept. — And behold the glory of the Lord stood upon it. Cald. We have here also.

1. A call to observation. Behold more.

2. The matter exhibited, Jehovah the eternal God.

3. The posture of him, he stood upon the top of the ladder, as commanding all, sending down and calling up his Angels at his pleasure, and appointing them their proper motions in order to his creatures. This is the plain meaning of the letter thus farre, but some queries would be resolved hereabout.

Quest. 1. What is Gods scope in giving Jacob this dream?

Ans. Doubtless to afford him suitable comforts to those present fears, doubts, and troubles that might be upon him as to his exilement, solitary condition, fear of danger, &c. that might stir up troublesome thoughts within him.

Quest. 2. What is Gods meaning of this dream of the ladder, &c. as may serve to the fore mentioned end?

Ans. 1. God teacheth him that Jehovah the eternal being and cause of all things is above, ordering and ruling all events toward his poor creatures below.

2. God maketh him know there is a settled way of his coming down to man, and mans ascending unto him. This the ladder noteth in the letter, but a means to bring heaven and earth together; but besides this, that the Son of God to come in the flesh is properly the onely way of Gods communion with poor sinners. Other way we know there is none; therefore this is best understood by the ladder; Christ himself also having assumed to himself the ministry of angels toward his Church, that they ascend and descend upon him. Ioh. 1. 51.

3. God informeth him that his Angels are his special messengers by whom he sends to man and receiveth from him; the Angels of his little ones behold the face of their father in heaven. In summe, this God would let Jacob know, that he & his Christ and his Angels were with him sleeping and waking, though he were left by creatures.

Quest. 3. How could Jacob see Angels, or God?

Ans. 1. This was but presented in the dream, not really acted.

2. In the dream God and Angels might be apprehended under such shapes, which sometimes they assumed. The Caldee reads, the glory of the Lord.

In summe, the main end why this dream was given, was to let Jacob know the way of of performing all that followeth to him, therefore unto the signe is added Gods word, which he undertakes thorough Christ and by his Angels to make good unto him.

3. In this dream God sendeth something to Jacobs ear, and repeats the word of Covenant which should be made good in the way formerly signified. All here spoken may be reduced unto two heads.

1. A word of narration what he is who appeared to Jacob now, And he said I am Jehovah the God of Abraham thy Father and the God of Isaac, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein he sheweth to Jacob it was no vain apparition that came to him, but that which must cause everlasting good; God declareth therefore.

1. His eternal being as cause of all, enough for Jacob and his Church.

2. His relation, God of Abraham and God of Isaac his father, therefore in Covenant to be his God also.

2. A word of promise, in confirmation of what God had spoken to Abraham and Isaac before. It stands in these following expressions.

1. A promise of inheritance, The land in which thou livest upon it, to thee will I give it and to thy seed. — Fear not the land in which thou sleepest, &c. Sept.

— And to the sons. Cald. This is the same which God gave to Abraham and Isaac, and now sheweth in a dream how he will do it for Jacob. God will make it good for an inheritance to him and his seed Ver. 1.

Ver. 14.

2. A promise of multitude of seed, And thou shalt spread abroad to the sea and to the East, and to the North, and to the South. — As the sand, Sept.

Thy sons as the dust, and shalt prevail. Cald. So God promised Abraham. Gen. 13. 16. So Balaam admired the multitudes of Israel. Num. 13. 10. The sea signifieth the west. Gen. 12. 8. And so all the corners of the land promised shall be filled with the numerous seed of Jacob.

3. A promise of making him in his seed a meane of blessing all others that are blessed, And blessed shall be in thee all the families of the earth, and in thy seed, Sept. same. — And blessed shall be for thee and thy sonnes. Cald. Herein.

1. The subject of blessing, all nations, or families of other nations whoever are blessed.

2. The meane of conveying, even Jacob, as sending forth Christ, but especially Christ himself the promised seed, the mediator of all blessing.

Ver. 15.

4. A promise of special and personal protection in Christ of himself, now in his going forth and returning, And behold I will be with thee and I will keep thee in all the way where thou shalt go, and will return thee again unto this land, Sept. same. — Behold my word shall be for thy help, &c. Cald. Herein.

1. A note of attention, behold Jacob what I say.

2. The good promised, gracious presence and preservation.

3. The extent of it, even in all the way of his moving, both in going out and returning.

5. A promise of perfecting his will, which is the reason of the former, For I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken unto thee, Sept. and Cald. the same. Herein.

1. The rational particle maketh this the reason of all the former, which is another superadded promise, I will make good all, for I will not leave thee, &c.

2. The good promised, his uninterrupted presence and providence, I will not be absent from thee a moment, Jacob, from keeping thee and doing thee good.

3. The term of duration unto this promise, until I accomplish all that I have said, not one tittle shall faile, and until every word be fulfilled I will never leave thee nor forsake thee. All this hath Jacob given him in his sleep, which makes him awake with admiration.

These observations may be taken hence.

D. 1. God can communicate himself to his Saints sleeping as well as waking. Sometimes in dreames.

D. 2. God can recompence a hard lodging with a sweet dream of his care and presence with and over his.

D. 3. Signalls, as well as promises, doth God afford of his care and dear respect unto his pilgrims.

D. 4. The intercourse of divine providence keeps heaven and earth, God and man together.

lights to be known the God of Abraham Isaac and Jacob.

D. 10. God repeats the promise of the inheritance to Jacob and his seed for establishment. Ver. 13.

D. 11. The seed of Jacob or the Church shall spread into multitudes in Christ.

D. 12. In Jacobs seed, even Christ, all families of the earth reach to blessing. Ver. 14.

D. 15. God will never leave nor forsake his covenanted ones, until he perform all his promises to them.

D. 16. God will in his appointed time accomplish all that he hath spoken unto his. Ver. 15.

2. The last event of Gods providence is upon Jacob at his awaking, wherein some notable impressions are made upon him from his dream, & also expressions suitable thereunto. These things are remarkable.

1. Jacobs opinion or Judgement made on it. Ver. 16.

2. Jacobs affection raised thereupon. Ver. 17.

3. Jacobs dedication of the place to God. Ver. 18. 19.

4. Jacobs devotion or vow made hereupon. Ver. 20. 21. 22.

To the first. We have herein related two things.

Ver. 16.

1. Jacobs awaking, And Jacob awaked out of his sleep, Sept. and Cald. same. Herein is onely noted the season of this event, It was when Jacob awaked; yet herein the goodness of providence is not to be slighted, that as mercy laid him down to sleep, mercy awakened him again; yea and as his sleep had a superadded revelation in a dream, so his awaking had an access of grace to make a right use of it.

2. Jacobs estimation of the place where he lay, impressed by his dream and expressed by his word, And he said surely Jehovah is in this place and I knew it not, Sept to the same. Verily in truth the glory of the Lord dwelleth in this place, &c. Cald. In these we may conceive what impression the dream had made upon his mind by his expression; surely more working thoughts of God he had in his repose on this place, than he had before. Two special things here delivers,

1. His apprehension of Gods presence, verily Jehovah is in this place, wherein he discovers his thoughts.

1. About the owner of the place, it was Jehovah or the glory of the Lord; even the Son of God, the splendour of his Fathers glory.

2. About his presence, he is, or dwelleth in this place; Here I was shortned in my way in the night, and here I have found Jehovah, the glory of the Lord hath bin with me here this night.

3. About the certainty, surely God is graciously in this place.

2. His confession of his own ignorance or inadvertency, And I knew it not. Wherein he seem's to check himself that he was not aware of Gods appearance and discovery to him in that place, yet that hindred not God from giving out discoveries to him. He might perhaps conceive Gods apparitions were no where but at his fathers house, but yet now he seeth God travels with him, and appear's to him where he pleaseth.

Learn thence

D. 1. Comfortable awakenings as well as sleepings God commands for his beloved.

D. 2. Where sleep brings in revelations of God, awakenings give grace to make a right use of them.

D. 3. Jehovah visits the place of his Saints recumbency, at his pleasure.

D. 4. Where God so appear's, he makes it sure and indubitable to his servants that he is certainly there.

D. 5. Providential places of rest may prove the places of Gods glory appearing unto Saints.

D. 6. Gods servants may at unawares meet with Gods presence and not at first know it at all. Ver. 16.

2. Jacobs affection exercised is next related, here:

1. The impression made on his heart, Ver. 17. And he was afraid Sept. & C. same, that is, from the glory appearing in an extraordinary way his heart was smitten & fear began to work, yet within its bounds; & in order to Gods Worship, it was no unbelieving, distracting fear, but steered by faith.

2. The expression of it made by his tongue. Two ways.

1. By

1. By admiring expostulation, And he said how terrible is this place? Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein he expresseth the ground of his fear, and that was the wonderful dreadfulness of Gods appearance herein. The place was as other places over night, but after his dream and his awaking the glory of the Lord made it dreadful, though his appearance was in mercy.

2. By positive assertion concerning this place in two particulars.

1. This is not but the house of God, that is, no other but Elohim's house, Sept. to the same. It is no common place but a place wherein God is well pleased. Cal. His fear makes him thus to judge, this can be no other but the habitation of the almighty where I have bin entertained this night. House here is but the place of Gods special residence & appearance unto Jacob, not to inclose God but to entertain him; Prophetically also it may be spoken, pointing out the Church of God to come, which is called his house, not as if God were tied to places, for afterward, this was stiled the house of wickedness by God.

2. And this is the gate of heaven, Sept. same. And over against this place is the gate of heaven. Cald. So his affection carrieth him forth to expresse it. It is a metaphorical attribution to the place; but because that Jacob had a sight of God, and by such discoveries entrance is made into heaven, therefore fitly it may be termed the gate of heaven. So the Church of God is where he appeareth.

Qu. 1. How commeth Jacob to this opinion and affection, why doth he not take it as a dream without effect, and so slight it?

Ans. 1. Surely the Spirit of God ascertained him of the truth of his appearance in it, and that it was no common dream.

2. The impressions upon his Spirit were divine, therefore he was awed by the same, so to fear and so to speak.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Impressions of Gods presence in gracious appearances must raise an awfull fear in Saints enjoying it.

D. 2. The house of God is where his gracious and saving appearances are, even his Church.

D. 3. The Church where God appears is the very meane of seeing God, and entrance into heaven. Ver. 17.

3. Jacobs dedication unto God after his rising in the morning, whereabout we have to note.

1. His early stirring. And Jacob rose up early in the morning, Sept. and Cald. same. His sleep and waking being so comfortable he could not choole but be early stirring toward God.

2. His religious care to perpetuate the memory of this mercy explicated in a threefold action.

1. His erection of a stone for a memorial, And he took the stone which he had put for his pillow, and set it as a pillar, Which he put under at his head and set it for a title, Sept. and Cald. Herein he sheweth his desire not onely to be inwardly thankful, but to set an external monument of Gods appearance to him for after time; the words have no difficulty, here we read.

1. The matter of his susception, it was a stone, he took either one or more, which he had used for his pillow.

2. The use of it, he sets it for a pillar, a visible monument, only to deliver to ages to come a memorial of Gods mercies unto him. Not to make a superstitious relique of it as the Papists do.

2. His unction. And he poured oyle upon the head of it, Cald. same. top of it. Sept. The words are easy. If it be inquired whence he had the oyle? It is most probable he carried it which him from home. If, why he powred it on the stone? It is answered, not for superstitious consecration, but on it, as an Altar, as providence now directeth, he powred it as a thank offering or peace offering, such as he had, to God. Ver. 13.

3. His nomination of his monument, And he called the name of the place Beth-El, but truly Luz was the name of the city at first. Cald to the same, Lam-maus was the name, &c. Sept. corruptly, and made of two words Lam and Luz joyned together. Herein are recorded.

1. Jacobs act, putting a new name upon the place, not for superstitious dedication, but for commemorations sake, as may appear from after events; for, however, providentially this became the house of God, which he appointed; as well as accepted; and afterward sent Jacob to worship there; yet when Idols were set up there, God turn's the name to Beth-aven the house of iniquity. So Jeroboam made it by his Calf, 1. Kings. 12. 28. Hof. 4. v. 15. God is not tied to places as carnal minds conceive.

2. The name of the place or city adjoining before this time. It was called Luz. But now upon this occasion it is stiled Bethel.

Quest. 1. Were not Luz and Bethel two distinct places? Jos. 16. 2.

Ans. There was a twofold Luz. Judg. 1. 23. 36. That which was distant from Bethel was not this spoken of, but another city built in the land of the Hittites, by a man, whom the tribe of Joseph spa-

Ver. 19.

red. This was it which was distant from Bethel.

Quest. 2. Was not this called Bethel before?

Ans. It was there mentioned by way of anticipation, Moses speaks of places as called in his time, not in Abrahams. This was the first naming of it.

Quest. 3. Did Jacob rightly in all this, and is it imitable?

Ans. 1. His action is a providential answer of Gods present appearance, not invented upon his phantasy, therefore no will-Worship.

2. So farre imitable is it by us, as to make us mindful of mercies and raise spiritual monuments to Gods praise, the outward expression ceaseth with all the administrations carnal of that time.

Quest. 4. Is this stone anointed, typical to Christ anointed with the holy Spirit & power?

Ans. 1. The Spirit doth not apply it so, therefore not safe for man to make it so.

2. The Messiah is said to be noted by it with the Hebrewes.

3. Christ is called a stone, an anointed, elsewhere.

4. Allusion to this may not be amiss, but concluding it a type is not warranted.

Learn thence.

D. 1. True piety to God is active and early at work to praise him.

D. 2. The hardest pillow which giveth mercy to us, should be an occasion of remembering God.

D. 3. Saints mercies should be Gods monuments.

D. 4. Thank-offertings such as we have, and God requirereth, are due to God. A little oyle of grace, is a fit present for him.

D. 5. Providential naming places, by mercies received, is good and imitable.

D. 6. Justly is that called the house of God where the Lord appears.
Ver. 19.

4. Jacobs devotion or vow to God now followeth, wherein we have to note three parcells.

1. The work generally reported, And Jacob vowed a vow saying, Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein are,

1. The title of his work, it is a vow, or promise solemnly made to God in prayer. Pf. 6. 6.

2. The expression of it by word of mouth, he made it; for sometimes it may be only in secret thoughts.

2. The ground or occasion of this work repeated, which was Gods former promise to him, which though read by ours conditionally, yet may be read by the letter positively. When God, &c. In the whole we have mentioned 4 points of Gods promise foregoing.

1. His presence, When Jehovah Elohim shall be with me. If the Lord God, &c. Sept. If the Lord will be for my help. This was promised. Ver. 15.

2. His protection, And shall keep me in this way which I am going. Sept. and Cald. same. This was promised also. Ver. 15.

3. His provision, And shall give me bread to eat and raiment to put on, Sept. & Cald. same. This was in that large promise of inheritance. Ver. 13. All this. Ver. 20.

4. His safe return to his father, And I return in peace to my fathers house, Cald. same. With safety, Sept. This was also promised. Ver. 15.

3. The vow itself. Wherein Jacob devotes three things to God, and all expressly due unto him.

1. He voweth himself to God, Then Jehovah shall be to me for a God, Sept. same.

— The word of the Lord shall be to me for God. Cald. This expression is sometime used as a promise from God to man, but here it is a vow from man to God, and it is as much as if Jacob did vow himself to be all to God, and for him; Jehovah shall be to me for God, that is, to love him, fear him, Worship him, and honour him as his all. Ver. 21.

2. He voweth an house to God when God shall accomplish his desire, And this stone which I have set for a pillar shall be the house of God. — To me the house of God, Sept. — Shall be where on I will serve before the Lord. Cald. That which he voweth is that the place where he set up the stone, should be remembered by him to be the place of Worshipping God, which he calleth Gods house; now upon that account it is filed Gods house, because of Gods appearance to him. Thither God sent him afterward to build an altar, minding him of his vow.

3. He voweth homage unto God in paying his acknowledgment, And of all which thou shalt give me I will tithe the tenth to thee, Sept. same. — One of ten I will separate before thee. Cald. Tithing I will tithe to thee. This did Abraham pay to Melchizedek, who was in Gods stead; and this Jacob voweth to God, as due homage, to give God the tenth of all which God should give him.

Quest. 1. Was this vow of Jacob laws full?

Ans. It was doubtles, as the first vow we read of, so a just and a good act.

1. For

1. For the matter of it, no other but what God required and accepted, viz.

1. Inward Worship, in himself.

2. Outward Worship, in the place.

3. Tribute to God, as Lord of all.

2. For the form of it he made it in faith upon Gods promise, for thereunto he hath respect in all.

3. For the end of it, which was the glorifying of God for all his goodness promised.

Quest. 2. Is this vow exemplary and to be followed by us?

Ans. Yea, observing all the like grounds and ends, it doth concern us to imitate Jacob.

1. To vow to God only.

2. To vow nothing else but what God commands, and may be pleasing to him.

3. Matters neither forbidden nor commanded, to take heed of laying snares upon our souls.

Quest. 3. Are men bound to pay the tenth of all to God?

Ans. Yea, even till now. 1. Nature oweth God all.

2. It is Gods law morall positive to have the tenth. For Abraham and Jacob must needs have their portion determined by God.

3. To God therefore for all his uses here below, the tenth portion of every mans estate is due. The Levitical tenths were ceremonial and ended with them. But this tenth is morall given before the law.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. Gods promises, and appearance to his, may well require their vows to him.

D. 2. Vowes to God must follow his promises, not precede by conditioning with him.

D. 3. Gods presence, provision, protection, and safeguarding his own, is just ground of vowing soules to him.

D. 4. It is just to vow mans self in inward worship to God, as the Lord promiseth himself to him.

D. 5. It is righteous to vow outward worship to God in time and place, as he desireth.

D. 6. It is mans duty to vow and pay the tenth of all his estate to God for the uses he hath appointed. V. 22.

CHAP. XXIX.

IN part of the former Chapter from the section beginning at Ver. 10. the history of the Church in Jacob began, of whom we have read, of his departure from his Fathers house, and Gods special providence toward him; in part of his way even unto Bethel.

In this Chapter the history proceedeth, wherein we may note these generall heads.

1. Jacobs journey and arrival to the end of it. Ver. 1. 14.

2. Jacobs Covenant with Laban to serve him. Ver. 15. 20.

3. Jacobs marriage, with Labans grieve. Ver. 21. 30.

4. Jacobs sed by Leah his wife. Ver. 31. 35.

In the first general these particulars occur.

1. His safe progress to the place of Laban.

2. His providential espying a well and partly with the shepherds. Ver. 2. 8.

3. His meeting with, and saluting Rachel. Ver. 9. 12.

4. His entertainment with his uncle Laban. Ver. 13. 14.

The first of these carrieth in it these particulars.

1. His progress, And Jacob lifted up his feet, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Here.

1. The term of connection may be noted. And or then, that is, immediately after Gods appearance to him, and his ingagement made to God; this quickens and encourageth him unto his journey, when he hath God, and Christ, Angels, and promises with him.

2. Jacobs act under providence, he took up his feet. Which ours read he went on his journey, but the phrase original seem's to carry in it alacrity, agility, and speed in his way, having had such a good nights lodging and comfortable viaticum. Pf. 74. 3.

2. His arrival, And went, or came to the land of the sonnes of the east. Cald. same. The land of the east, to Laban the son of Bebaul, the brother of Rebeccah, the mother of Esau and Jacob, Sept. Herein note.

1. His continued motion, he went or walked on, or perused going.

2. The term unto which he reached, the land of the sonnes of the east, so was that of Laban via. Misopotamia from Canaan. Job. 1. 3. Isai 42. 2. Gen. 12. 1.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Gods gracious appearances to a soul may well encourage it to go any whither whither where God would have them.

D. 2. Incouragements from God and ingagements to him will make a manspeed in the way where God calleth.

D. 3. Providence bringeth an obedient soul safely to the place appointed for him.

D. 4. Providence sendeth to every part his servants to raise his Church. The east is not exempted. Abraham from hence, Job in this place were eminent, and now Jacob is sent to it. Ver. 2.

2. The next particular obvious is Jacobs providenciall guidance to a place & persons discovering his approach to his journey's end. Wherein we have to note.

1. His providential happening upon the place, so herein are related.

Ver. 2.

1. His discovery which he maketh, And he saw & beheld a well in the field, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Where we read these things made out to his eye.

1. A well in the field or plain, whether he came, such as was needfull, but it seemes rare in that country, by the gathering to gather unto it, so his Fathers man met Rebekah at a well. Providence so directs. Some note also Christs meeting the woman of Samaria at a well, and allegorize the well of salvation by it; but we are in the history of Jacob.

2. Three flocks of sheep, And behold there were three flocks of sheep lying by it. These are also allegorized by the Hebrews to be the Church lying by the well of salvation, Priests, Levites, and Israel, but we keep to the letter. The reason of their being there is added; For out of the well they watered the flocks.

3. A stone, And a great stone upon the mouth of the well, doubtles to preserve the water and keep from hurt or damage any cattell, or other, that might fall in. Ver. 2.

2. A description of the custome of the place in 4 particulars.

Ver. 3.

1. And there were gathered there all the flocks; that is, they used to bring them together all about the well at one time.

2. And they rolled the stone from the wells mouth; that is, some, or all the shepherds together, because it was great.

3. And they watered the sheep, that is all their flocks in the troughs, which were made to hold water for that purpose.

4. And they returned the stone upon the wells mouth to its place, doubtles to secure their waters and to preserve it pure, this was the custome of that place, so to expect one another and help to publick advantages that might redound to all.

Learn thence.

D. 4. Preservation of publick commodities for life & comfort, is that which nature will teach men. It is unnatural to destroy. Ver. 3. 4. 5.

2. His discourse with the shepherds is related, whom he found upon the place, and it is taken up in 5 in discourses between them and him.

Ver. 4.

1. About themselves, wherein.

1. Jacob inquires, And Jacob said unto him, my Brethren whence are ye? Sept and Cald. same. Wherein.

1. The inquirer, Jacob a traveller.

2. His compellation, full of love, my brethren, such were the salutes of Jacob to strangers.

1. Of their knowledge, herein.

1. His

Ver. 5.

1. His question, And he said unto them, know ye Laban the son of Nachor? Cald. same. Sept. Achor. Herein we see he inquireth of Laban as son to Nachor, who was immediately the son of Bethuel, yet known at that time to be issue of Nachor whose name was more eminent, so that the city bore it.

2. Their answer, And they said we know him, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Wherein we perceive, Nahor, Abrahams brother, was famous in that place, and that by their language there remained some impressions of the true religion there, which Nahor professed, though mixed with corruptions. Here God calls Jacob upon some that knew how to direct him. Ver. 5.

Ver. 6.

2. He inquires of his welfare.

1. He speak's, And he said to them is it peace to him? Cald same. Sept. same. Is he in health? under the notion of peace, he inquireth of all his welfare, that which was desirable to such relations.

2. They answer.

1. To his question, And they said peace. Or as Sept. He is in health, all is well with him.

2. To his further satisfaction shewing him the approach of his daughter, And behold Rachel his daughter cometh with the flocks. Came with the sheepe of her Father, Sept. Cald. to the same. Here providence pointeth out another comfort to Jacob, sending out Rachel at this instant, and busy in an honest calling, in bringing the sheep to water. So by steps Jacob is comforted after his soar travel. Ver. 6.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Providence maketh questions, meanes to the satisfaction of his.

D. 2. Sonnes are best known by the most eminent of their ancestours.

D. 3. Nahor and his descent, with their way & religion, were known in Syria. Ver. 5.

D. 4. It is but natures dictate to inquire of the welfare of related friends.

D. 5. Providence orders peace to others, that with them his servants may have peace.

D. 6. Providence orders meeting of friends and comforts, which man cannot project, and doth little think of. Here Jacob meets Rachel. Ver. 6.

1. His proposal, wherein.

Ver. 7.

1. He notes the time of the day, And he said, behold yet the day is great, or there is much day, that is, it is early yet, and not to evening, Sept. and Cald. Much day. It seemeth it might be somewhat past noon.

2. He notes the season of the pasture of their flocks, It is not time that the cattell should be gathered together, Sept. and Cald. to the same. It was not folding time which was neer even.

3. He adviseth them, Water ye the flock and go and feed ye, i. e. The flock, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein though a stranger, yet he speaketh to the profit of them, to whom he was unknown, advising good, for them and their flocks. Ingenuity doth all this. Ver. 7.

2. Their reply, wherein they shew the reason why they did not presently do after Jacobs advice. Wherein note.

Ver. 8.

1. The cause is given from their impotency, And they said we cannot, Sept. and Cald. same. This is carried unto a double sense.

1. Of power natural, we cannot, that is, we have not strength enough with us to do it.

2. Of power moral, which notes just leave and liberty, we cannot of right do it, until the rest come. The former seemeth rather to be intended, by the proofs following, yet a truth may be in the second also.

2. The proof of the reason.

1. From want of their company; Until all the flocks be gathered together, Cald. same. Until all the shepherds be gathered together, If it be meant of shepherds, then it proves the want of strength, but if of flocks, it proves their moral inability, that they must not prevent one another.

2. From the motion of the stone, And they roll the stone from the mouth of the well, Sept. and Cald. same. This argueth want of help before; it may also carry in it consent and agreement between them.

3. Their concession to Jacob when these things are done, Then we water the sheep, Sept. and Cald. to the same. The term of connection is best read here a term of order, then we water. Thus they return a reasonable account without snarling at a strangers advice.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Providential meetings may justly occasion providential advice from strangers to others.

D. 2. Time and business should be rationally managed to the improvement of both. Ver. 7.

Z z

D. 3.

D. 3. Ingenuity taketh not amiss occasional advice from strangers.

D. 4. Ingenuous men, if they follow not counsel, will give their reason.

D. 5. Impotency to duty, justly may excuse it.

2. The manner of her approach, With the sheep which were her fathers. Sept. and Cald. fame. As a shepherdesse she cometh, such it seemes was the simple fashion of these times and countries.

3. The reason of her so coming, For she was feeding them. She was a shepherdesse.

Note here.

D. 1. Gods good hand sendeth the mercy somtimes to his servants while they inquire about it.

D. 2. The eminent in his Church God hath called from the lowest condition in the world.

D. 3. It is not unbecoming the greatest ladies to be found in honest labour. It was not to Rachel. It sutes the mother of the Church to be a shepherdesse. Ver. 9.

3. Jacobs carriage to her upon her approach in three particulars.

Ver. 10.

1. In his action and undertaking for her, where we have.
1. The occasion of it, And it was when Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mothers brother, and the sheep of Laban his mothers brother. Sept. and Cald. fame. upon sight & discovery of these he bestires himself.

2. The action itself, And or that Jacob went neer, and rolled the stone from the wells mouth and watered the sheep of Laban his mother's brother. Sept. and Cald. fame.

1. His readiness in moving.

2. His paines in rolling away the stone.

3. His kindnes in watering his uncles sheep appear, so providence directs to do toward his future entertainment. The Rabbins are fabulous about the strength of Jacob in rolling away the stone; but no need of fables. Whether by himself, or with the help of others he did it, no matter; but probably it was by himself. Ver. 10.

Observe we.

D. 1. Discoveries of such as are neer in the flesh is enough in nature to move for doing them good.

D. 2. Readines and pains to shew kindnes unto friends in the flesh becommeth both grace and nature.
Ver. 10.

2. In his salutation. Wherein.

1. His external expression is related, Ver. 11. And Jacob kissed Rachel, Sept. & Cald. fame. This expression was doubtles natural, and a signal of affection inward; which however abused by some to shame, yet it is used as a sincere signal of natural affection, and commanded for spiritual uses also.

2. His internal affection and moving of bowells toward her, And he lifted up his voice, and wept, Sept. and Cald. fame.

1. The motive of this affection seems to be joy, where the heart was overcharged with the concurrence of so many good providences together, in the happy meeting of those whom God intended to make one flesh, and a visible fountain of his Church, though yet unknown.

2. The nature of the affection, it was melting and pouring out the soul in teares, and that not silently, but with exclamation & extended voice, eminency of Gods goodness thus stirred up vehemency of affection.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Suitable expressions of affection to dear friends is becomming both grace and nature.

D. 2. Inward motions send out true signals of sincere affection.

D. 3. Joy in unexpected good befalling Saints may melt them into teares.

D. 4. Eminency of providences concurring, may stirre up vehemency of affections, even to transports.
Ver. 11.

1. In

3. In his narration and discovery of himself unto her, wherein we have.

1. His report in two particulars.

Ver. 12.

1. In his relation to her Father. And Jacob told Rachel that he was her fathers brother, Sept. fame. That he was the son of her fathers sister. Cald. A brother to her father is the Hebr. as the custom of speaking was among kindred.

2. In his explication of himself, And that he was the son of Rebeccah, Sept. and Cald. fame. This explicates in what degree he was her fathers brother, even his Nephew and her cosen + german.

2. Her reception of it, And she ran and told her father, Cald. fame. According to those words, Sept.

1. She received it joyfully.

2. She declareth it to her father effectually.

Quest. It is inquired whether all these carriages are related in order as they were acted?

Ans. 1. It is thought by some that the order is the writers as here expressed, and not the actors.

2. Yet no unseemlines was it, if things were acted as here related, onely it is conjectured by some that he revealed himself, first and then saluted her, and acted for her as reported, no inconvenience either way.

It instruct's us.

D. 1. Self discovery is proper, when God sends friends to meet at unawares.

D. 2. Ingenuity gladly receiveth the manifestation of neer friends in the flesh.

4. The last providential event in his arrival is his entertainment with Laban. V. 13. 14. Wherein.

1. Labans carriage, and herein.

Ver. 13.

1. The occasion of Labans respect, And it was as Laban heard the hearing of Jacob his sisters son. The name of Jacob, &c. Sept. Cald. as. Hebr. upon the very first newes by Rachel.

2. His speed to him, And he ran to meet him, Sept. and Cald. fame. Natural affection was stirring and speeding him; when he heard he made haste to see him.

3. His salutation of him, And he embraced him, and kissed him, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Both expressions of much natural affection to him. So bowells work now; though afterward he dealt very hardly with him.

4. His entertainment, And he brought him in unto his house, Sept. and Cald. fame. There to repose himself and abide with him all the time which God appointed. Hitherto affection was quick, & entertainment free.

2. Jacobs discovery of himself more fully then unto him, And he declared to Laban all these words. All his words of matters, Sept. Cald. as. Hebr. that is, he doubtles acquainted his uncle,

1. The occasion of his coming from home so naked.

2. Gods presence with him in the way.

3. All the affaires of his fathers family which were convenient, by which he might ascertain Laban, that he was indeed his sisters son. Whereof there was but need, seeing he came not into Syria so attended as his fathers servant had done before him; which might have bred jealousies in Laban. Ver. 13.

3. Labans reply unto his satisfaction.

1. In word, And Laban said unto him Ver. 14.

surely thou art my bone and my flesh. Of my bones, &c. Sept. Thou art my kinsman and my flesh. Cald. Herein he acknowledgeth natural interest and nearnes to comfort him.

2. In deed, And he abode with him a month of dayes. Cald. fame. And he was with him, &c. Here was a suitable dealing with him for present as with his own flesh and bone; however afterward he turned unnatural.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Nature turns not away the ear from the tidings of neer kindred to shew them kindnes.

D. 2. Even nature will make speed to salute and entertain with kindnes kindred in the flesh.

D. 3. It is but equal to declare relations to friends, and providences from God to satisfy friends unknown. Ver. 13.

D. 4. Nature acknowledgeth neer kindred to be flesh and bone to itself.

D. 5. Hospitable entertainment is but suitable to a mans own flesh and bone.

D. 6. It is mercy for Jacob to be acknowledged, in his pilgrimage, the flesh and blood of Laban, how much more to be the flesh and bone of Christ. Eph. 5. Ver. 14.

2. The next general head of this Chapter is Jacobs Covenant with Laban to serve him. Ver. 15. 20. Wherein note.

1. Labans reasonable proposition unto Jacob. Ver. 15. Herein.

Ver. 15.

1. The first mover, not Jacob to aske, but Laban to give, And Laban said unto Jacob. Or then, after a months experience of him in his family, Sept. and Cald. same.

2. The reason of this motion, which was, as he conceived, the unreasonableness of Jacobs serving him for nought, Because my brother thou, shouldst thou even serve me for nought. — Because thou art my brother thou shalt not serve me in vain, or for nought, Sept. Cald. as Hebr.

1. The expostulation may be resolved into a negative as the Gr. doth, thou shalt not serve me for nought; so farre Laban speaketh justice, that the labourer is worthy of his hire.

2. The seeming reason of such free service, because of kindred, shouldst thou labour for me in vain because thou art my brother? that was his Nephew as hath bin noted. This might be a pretence, he is my Nephew, he may serve for nothing, but this was unreasonable in Labans account: nay because a brother and yet will serve me, he deserves the more. Unreasonable is it that such a servant should labour for nought.

3. His motion itself, Declare to me what shall be thy wages, Sept. and Cald. same. He puts it unto Jacob to demand his hire what he will. Tell me what I shall return as wages for thy service? With what a self-seeking mind Laban thus bespeaks him, is easily to be guessed by his after dealings with him, yet with this covetous self-seeking man this principle is granted, that every labourer, especially a neer kinsman should not serve & take paines for nought. Thou art my flesh & my bone & shouldst thou serve me for nought? Yet as Jacob complains at last he would have sent him away empty, unless God had better provided for him.

1. Occasionally is a narration of Labans progeny in daughters, which is reported.

1. Generally, And to Laban were 2 daughters, Sept. and Cald. same. Here is the number.

1. The subtilty of the man, And Laban said it is better that I should give her to thee than that I should give her to another man. Sept. and Cald. same. He answeres not positively, I will give her to thee, though Jacob takes it so for granted, but it is better that I should do so; and yet what a cheat he put upon him afterward, is evident in the history, see both subtilty with Jacob, and iniquity to his daughter to sell her for a servant.

3. His reason why all was so easy, In his loving her, or because he loved her. Sept. and Cald. to the same. This was reason with respect to Rachel, but with respect to God conscience of duty, and the fear of God kept him in this frame of spirit all the time.

3. The next general head in this Chapter containes the history of Jacobs marriage, Ver. 21. 30. Wherein are.

1. Jacobs just demand of his wages.

5. Jacobs consent to a new motion. Ver. 28.

6. Labans performance at last. Ver. 28. 29. 30.

In the first of these we have to consider these particulars.

1. Jacobs demand, And or then Jacob said to Laban, give me my wife. Ver. 21. Give me my wife, Sept. supplieth, Cald. as Hebr.

1. The demander is Jacob, that had done his articles of Covenant faithfully, and now desires his wages.

2. The demanded, or party of whom he makes demand, Laban an hard and deceitful Master, as well as uncle.

3. The demand itself, give me my wife, according to Covenant. Wherein.

1. He acknowledgeth the fathers right.

2. He desireth but the fathers promise which he was bound to perform: he walks regularly in seeking his wife.

2. The reason of his demand in present,

Because my dayes are fulfilled, Sept. same.

— The dayes of my service or bondage. Cald. As if he should say, I have performed my Covenant and finished my 7 years service, therefore now it is just for you to perform your part and give me Rachel to wife.

3. The end of his demand, And I will go in unto her, or that I may. — I will. Cald. — That I may go in, Sept. This end was cohabitation and enjoyment of her as a wife; as she was his espoused wife by Covenant before, the time of contract being expired, now he requireth her in marriage and to enjoy her as a wife.

- D. 5. Conjugal love may well desire conjugal enjoyment in Gods time. Ver. 21.

To the second, Labans guilful dealing with Jacob upon his demand; wherein we may note.

Ver. 22.

1. His solemn invitation of friends to the wedding. And Laban gathered all the men of the place, Sept. and Cald. same. that is doubtless all his neighbours and friends inhabitants in Charran, not all the citizens simply. Such were former customs to celebrat marriage with such solemnity.

2. His consummation of the marriage. And he made a feast, Cald. same. And he made the marriage. So Sept. Wherein.

1. By the phrase of making the feast, is implied the marriage, or actual giving of Rachel unto Jacob to wife in the presence of those witnesses and his accepting her. As the 70 do paraphrase.

2. By it is noted their general rejoicing which the bridegroom and bride, which custom was continued to Christs dayes and after; mourning is no fit carriage for a bridegroom day, but feasting. And in Gr. notes both.

It teacheth us.

- D. 1. Solemn invitations of friends to marriages for witnesses & helps of good to the married, are according to Gods will.
- D. 2. Marriage is most seemly completed in a congregation, and with publick solemnity. Laban gathered, &c.
- D. 3. Feasting and rejoycing are most proper for the times of marriage. Ver. 22.

Ver. 23.

2. His fallacious dealing. Wherein we may note.

1. The time of acting this deceit, And it was in the evening, Cald. same. And it was evening, Sept. In the day time he pretended Rachel as the bride, but at night he sheweth Jacob a trick. Night is the fittest time for dishonestly.

2. His preparation to it, And he took Leah his daughter, Sept. and Cald. same. This noteth his attiring her with a vail and conducting of her undisturbed, so he fitted the matter to deceive.

3. His resignation of her into Jacobs possession, And he brought her to him, and he went into her, Sept. and Cald. to the same. See both a supposition of Leab and a deprivation of Rachel from her husband, & a provision of Jacob to uncleannes. Ver. 23.

4. His assignation of a servant to his daughter, And Laban gave unto his daughter Leah, Zilpah his maid for an hand-maid for her, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein.

1. His respect to his daughter is declared, not to bestow her without some attendance, therefore he appoints her an hand-maid.

2. Probably it might be such a maid as might help on his own fallacious dealing with Jacob. Masters and servants are usually combined in such stratagems of deceit. However.

To the third, which is Jacobs challenge upon Laban, wherein also we have to note.

1. The discovery of Labans falsehood, and herein.

1. The season, And it was in the morning, Cald. same. And the morning was, Sept. This is the reason of revealing things hidden in the dark; when the light ariseth, then faces are discovered.

2. The discovery of the person to Labans raproach; her shame, and Jacobs trouble, And behold she was Leah, Cald. same.

— It

— It was Leah, Sept. Herein appears Labans wickednes, and Jacobs vexation to perceive how he was deluded.

Quest. How could this be hid till the morning?

Answer. 1. Subtily might be used in her silence or voice, thereby to deceive Jacob.

2. Inadvertency with Jacob not suspecting such false dealing; no drunkenness as some argue.

3. Providence ordering all these affairs so determines it, that sooner it was not discovered.

3. Jacobs challenge or sharpe contest with him about this matter in 3 questions.

1. Why hast thou done this to me? Sept. & Cald. same. What is this which thou hast done? It is an interrogation of indignation charging him with such an unnatural act, that never was heard of from a father to a child; or from a man of any honest profession to a neighbour, what is this which thou hast done? It is monstrous, it hath no parallel, horrid deceit.

2. Did not I serve with thee for Rachel? Sept. and Cald. same. This is a question of conviction, was not my Covenant to serve for Rachel? Can you deny it? O false man, that should so shamefully abuse his Children, and breake Covenant.

3. And why hast thou deceived me? Sept. same. Why hast thou lyed to me. Cald. This is a question condemning him, as if in plain terms he should say, thou art a cheater and hast deceived me of my wife, and broken Covenant, and caused other wickednes, how or why couldst thou do this?

- D. 5. Service for Rachel should have Rachel for its reward.
- D. 6. It is grosse falshood and deceit to deny covenant-reward, and adulterate it with worse. Ver. 25.

4. Labans apology for his fast to Jacob followeth. This is made up of two notorious shifts. Ver. 26, 27.

1. The pretense of the custom of the place, And Laban said it is not so done in our place to give the younger before the first-born. — It is not so in this place, and to give the younger before the elder. Sept. — The left before the greater. Cald. See the best of his excuse for the bale prostration of his daughter, and treacherous dealing with Jacob; which cannot lessen his fault before God or men.

1. What custom of man must prevail against providence, if God call the younger to marry before the elder?

2. If such a custom were, why did he not tell Jacob so, before he made Covenant for Rachel? This therefore is but a meer dishonest shift.

3. Such custom, were it so, did not allow him to thrust a wife upon any, against his will, it was therefore abominable treachery and wickednes. Ver. 26.

2. The proposal of a way for satisfaction to Jacob.

1. He proposeth to Jacob to accept of Leah to wife, Fulfil thou the 7 of this. That is, seven dayes of solemnizing that marriage and so acknowledge Leah for thy wife, which is carried in the phrase, Sept. and Cald. to the same. The phrase used notes only seven; years or dayes are not expressed, but must be understood as the truth of the thing related requieth. The Geneva translation reads 7 years, but doubtless without ground, for considering the birth of the children and the barrenness of Rachel, she must needs be Jacobs wife before the second seven years completed. It is therefore here truly read 7 dayes, or a week, which was kept to solemnize marriages in feasting, among those eastern nations. Herein he impleth an unlawful thing, to take one that was not his wife.

2. He promiseth, And we will give thee also this, or there shall be given, &c. Cald. same. — I will give, &c. Sept. that is, after thou hast taken Leah and acknowledged her for thy wife, then this, even Rachel, shall be given to thee also for a wife. This he supposeth will hide his fault, and satisfy Jacob, if he may have Rachel at last, though it be with Leah also; that which he intended not. A subtle fetch of a deceiver.

3. The condition of this promise also; For the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years. Cald. same. — Work which thou mayest work, Sept. Here he sheweth himself what he is, and at what he aims, covetousnes, oppression for self-gain, is that which sets him on worke in this designe, wrong to daughters, oppression to sonnes, do not stick with him, so he may get gain and enjoy service without wages. D. 6. Covetousnes & oppression make wicked men carelesse of what injuries they do to children or others. Ver. 27.

Ver. 28.

5. Jacobs consent, And Jacob did so and fulfilled her week. Sept. and Cald. to the same. i. e. Jacob accepted Leah for his wife, and kept on the marriage-solemnity for 7 dayes as it was proposed.

Quest. Did Jacob well in taking Leah thus?

Ans. Surely. 1. To take a wife against consent, and treacherously imposed, is not right.

2. Yet his consent afterward might make the marriage legitimate.

3. In fine Jacob cannot be excused from infirmity in it, but that he did offend, however the hand of God over-ruled it.

6. Labans performance followeth at last, wherein.

1. Labans work in a double gift.

1. Of his daughter to Jacob, And he gave unto him Rachel his daughter for a wife to him. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Here at last he performs his promise when he had bound Jacob to more servitude, and he accepted Leah.

Ver. 29.

2. Of a maid to his daughter, And Laban gave to Rachel his daughter Bilhah his hand maid for an hand maid to her. Ver. 29. Cald. same. — Ballen, Sept. This is all her dowry expressed, only a maid-servant to attend her, so you have Labans performance.

2. Jacobs injoyment, wherein are related to us.

Ver. 30.

1. His second marriage, And he went in also unto Rachel. Sept. and Cald. same. It is the phrase which denoteth full marriage when man and wife cohabit and take actual possession of each other, so did he to Leah before.

2. His affection unto this wife, And he loved also Rachel before Leah. — More than Leah, Sept. Cald. Upon her, first his affection was set, which made his 7 years service seem but little and light; to her his heart goeth out more than to Leah.

3. His submission to Labans terms, And he served with him yet seven other years. Sept. and Cald. same. So humble Jacob yeeldeth to an unjust and wicked Laban, and suffers oppression rather than contend with him.

Quest. Was double marriage, and that of two sisters lawful?

Answer, 1. It is expressly against Gods law from the beginning.

2. What extraordinary dispensation God might give in this case is not expressed, as in other cases he hath done it, of these wives & their hand-maids the tribes of Israel arose which made up the Church of God.

3. It is faulty by the law, and therefore not to be imitated by us. Ver. 30.

D. 5. True affection will abide, and abound where it hath a solid rooting.

D. 6. Honest soules desire to suffer wrong in hardest service rather than contend with wicked Rulers. Ver. 30.

4. The last general of this Chapter containeth the history of Jacobs issue by Leah, even 4 sonnes. In the order whereof we have to note.

1. A memorable marke upon the cause of this issue and the motive unto its worke. Ver. 31.

2. A special relation of 4 births or issues in the verses following to the end.

In the former we have to observe these particulars.

1. The cause impulsive, or the occasion which now God taketh to shew his power. And Jehovah saw that Leah was hated. — Ver. 31. And the Lord seeing, &c. Sept. — And it was manifest before the Lord. Cald. 1. Here-

1. Here is reported an act of Gods providence, He saw, that is he looked on, observed and regarded Jacobs carriage, and Leahs case; all was open to his eyes.

2. The object or matter of this providence, that Leah was hated, that is, not simply, but comparatively, she was as hated, in respect of the love expressed to Rachel; So this expression of hating is used, Deut. 21. 15. Though this were just upon Leah for joining with her rather in that wicked designe of prostrating herself, yet after Jacob had accepted her, other carriage had bin due as to a wife; on this God looketh now as a failing, and that with respect a recompence to Leah.

2. The cause efficient of this fruit or issue, And he opened her womb. Septuag. same. — And he gave her to conceive. That is a fit paraphrase to explain that which is styled the opening of the womb.

1. The cause of it is Jehovah. 2. The effect is the fruitfulness of the womb; which God giveth to Leah for easing her burden and working her favour in the eyes of her husband.

3. The amplifying of this blessing on Leah by Gods denying of it hitherto to Rachel. And Rachel was barren. Sept. and Cald. same. Here was Jacobs love most, and here God sends barrenness as yet; how much she complains of this evil is evident. Chap. 30.

D. 2. Gods providence may be regarded of them who are neglected by men.

D. 3. Undervalued and hated mercies may, under Gods ordering, prove most fruitful to men.

D. 5. The most regarded by men may be disrespected upon some accounts with God.

D. 6. The most lovely mercies in mans eye, may prove barren, and unfruitful to him. Ver. 31.

In the second head we have the history of 4. births or sonnes from Leah successively.

1. Of Reuben, Ver. 32. Wherein we have to consider.

1. The conception and birth, And Leah conceived and bare a son. Cald. same. — To Jacob. Sept. Here is a double effect of Gods opening the womb.

1. Conception; she received this power now; though she had miscarried in her behaviour before.

2. Bearing; she bare or brought forth a son, here is the perfecting of birthing; God framed the fruit of the womb, and brought it forth in safety.

2. The nomination of the birth, And she called his name Reuben. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein she seemes to hold out the mercy to view, see a son; though I am hated and undervalued, yet see how God hath pleaded, see a son. In the name of the child she holds forth Gods work and issue given by her, and his token of respect unto her.

3. The reason which she giveth of the name, For she said because Jehovah hath seen my affliction or looked on mine affliction, my humbling. Sept. — My injury is manifest before the Lord. Cald. The reason of the name then is to make a memorial of this sweet providence; So some interpret the name Reuben, the son of him that seeth, &c. Jehovah and his providence are here alone considerable to be kept in remembrance by this name of the first son.

4. The inference which she maketh of it, Therefore or, for now my husband will love me. Sept. and Cald. same. So she collects from Gods providence to her, and the fruit of the womb produced, which is one of the strongest bonds of love between man and wife. So she comforts herself against fore-past unkindnesse.

Note we thence.

D. 1. Gods causation is alwayes with effect; if he opens wombs, conception and birth shall be.

D. 2. Conception and birth God may give to Leah before Rachel, to the hated, before the beloved wife.

D. 3. Soules despised by men and regarded by God, should make conscience of revealing Gods mercies to them.

D. 4. The son and fruit of the womb hath bin looked on, and should be, as a monument of Gods respect.

D. 5. Gods providence or seeing the affliction of his, should persuade them to look to him, and shew his work.

Aaa D. 6.

D. 6. Sonnes and fruit of the womb are strong pledges for natural love between man and wife; especially when God makes them signals of his respect. Ver. 32.

2. The birth of Simon, in the history whereof, are.

1. Leahs second conception & bearing as was expressed before; therefore need no further opening. Onely it is the second.

Ver. 33. 2. Her conceived ground or reason of it; Wherein.

1. The force of the reason, And she said because Jehovah hath heard that I was hated. Sept. and Cald. to the same. Herein is her conjectured ground of her second fruitfulness, because God had taken notice and heard, that she was yet undervalued and hated; that is, not so well respected, as her relation might require.

2. The effect of this reason (as supposed.) Therefore hath he given me this also. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. God is acknowledged the Author, he hath given.

2. The additional mercy, This son.

3. The freeness, it is a gift.

3. Her nomination of the son now given to remember this providence also, And she called his name Simon, that is, Hearing, Sept. and Cald. same. The action is no more here mentioned but the imposition of the name; The use was to remember Gods gracious hearing of her in her prayers, when she was undervalued by man; and that in her nearest relation.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Double fruitfulness can God recompence to the double disrespect of men. So to Leah.

D. 2. It is suitable for soules undervalued to consider how God heareth mens expressions to them.

D. 3. When God heareth and helpeth his, it is convenient to name our mercies hearing. To keepe Gods hearing in our remembrance. Ver. 33.

3. The birth of Levi, whereabout are related.

Ver. 34. 1. Leahs iterated conception and bearing, as before.

2. Her hopeful persuasion of her husbands cleaving nearer unto her, And she said, now this time will my husband be joyned unto me, because I have born unto him three sonnes. Cald. same. My husband will be to me, or for me Sept. Herein,

1. Her hope conceived of her husbands joyning his heart and affection nearer to her, being persuaded by these providences of God.

2. The reason of her hope; her bearing three sonnes to Jacob, which was a threefold cord to tie his heart unto her.

3. The naming of this son, Therefore she called his name Levi. Sept. and Cald. same, either as an argument of the near conjunction desired by her, or as a monument of what, in greater measure, was vouchsafed to her; but it seemeth rather that she puts this name as an earnest of more union of her husbands heart. Well may it shadow out the office and worke of that tribe to come, which was joyning God and his Church by their ministry.

D. 2. Children are joyning mercies between man and wives; so many Children so many cords to bind them together.

D. 3. Eminent conjunction between man and wife in their affections, should be remembred, as well as caused, in Children to Gods praise. Ver. 34.

4. The birth of Judah, about which are here declared.

1. Leahs fourth conception and birth, as before.

2. The use which she maketh of it, And she said, this time I will confesse Jehovah. This I will confesse to the Lord, Septuag. and Cald. to the same. A special sweet use of all this fourfold blessing to turn it to the praise of God.

1. The time or season, and

2. The worke are here expressed confession and praise to the Lord. Thus, upon the fourth son, she is enlarged to confesse the goodness of Jehovah, who had given her that was despised, four sonnes, and the beloved none. A good use of fourfold mercie.

2. The nomination of this son from her own work, Therefore she called his name Judah, Sept. and Cald. to the same. She turn's her praise into a monument in her sonnes name; that, upon sight of him, her praise to God might be quickned.

4. A providential stop upon her from bearing, And she stood from bearing, or ceased, Sept. and Cald. to the same. Here is a note of eminent providence, that upon her betaking herself to praise, God should put put a stop upon her from bearing in some time, although afterward God blessed her with more increase. But this the Spirit of God eminently observeth.

2. A new compact with Laban for wages, Ver. 25. to Ver. 36.

3. A notable success given to Jacob in his service, Ver. 37. to 43.

In the former general, we have the history of Jacobs issue by four women.

1. By Bilhah, Ver. 1. to 8.

2. By Zilpah, Ver. 9. to 13.

3. By Leah, Ver. 14. to 21.

4. By Rachel, Ver. 22. to 24.

In the first of these we have again to consider.

1. The occasion of Jacobs having seed by Bilhah, Ver. 1. 2.

2. The giving of Bilhah to him as a wife, Ver. 3. 4.

3. The fruit begotten of Bilhah, two sonnes, (1) Dan, Ver. 5. 6. (2) Naphtali, Ver. 7. 8.

1. The occasion of Jacobs having seed by this woman, was a sharp contest between him and Rachel; wherein are obvious.

1. The onset by Rachel, Ver. 1. And herein.

1. The cause of it, thus expressed. And Rachel saw, that she did not bear or bring forth to Jacob. Septuagint. same.

Not brought forth from Jacob, Cald. Others to,

1. The term of connexion calleth us to looke back, This was upon the evidence of Leahs fruitfulness in four sonnes reported before; after this was evident, and all this while, Rachel barren; hereupon her spirit begin's to work.

2. The matter here connected, is Rachels observation of Gods dealing with her sister and herself.

1. The act of observation, Rachel saw, that is, perceived and considered within her self; doubtless with trouble and discontent of Spirit; as the sequel declareth.

2. The matter of observation.

1. Supposed, her sisters fruitfulness in bearing four sonnes.

2. Expressed, her own barrenness, that she bare not unto Jacob. She perceived, that to her beauty God had denied fertility; that her sister despised was fruitful, and herself beloved was barren. This works upon her corruption.

2. The effect, that issueth from this her observation, which may be observed to be twofold.

1. Toward her sister, And Rachel envied her sister. Septuag. and Cald. same. The word used here sometimes signifieth good zeal, but here, the violent passion of envy, which cannot endure to have any preferred in the account of God or man, before it. Such was Cains envy to Abel, and in some degree this of Rachel to her sister; though her own sister, in whose comforts she should have rejoiced; this is one bad fruit of Rachels evil eye.

2. Towards her husband, And she said to Jacob, give me sonnes, and if not, dead am I. Cald. same.

a son, and if not I will dye, Sept. This speech ariseth also from her evil eye upon Gods providence toward herself and sister.

1. The speaker is discontented and envious Rachel.

2. The bespoken, is innocent; holy and loving Jacob.

3. The speech containeth two heads.

1. A demand, give me sonnes; as if she had said, thou hast given Leah four sonnes, give me sonnes also.

2. A motive to it, If not I am dead, kill me if you will give me no children; for me to live childless, better I were dead; in all which are observable.

1. Peremptoriness to her husband, so to set on him.

2. Impiety against God, to ascribe his work to man, and ask children of Jacob.

3. Intemperancy against herself, as I shall dye. Ver. 1.

2. The reply of Jacob, Ver. 2.

A a 2 Wherein

Wherein are observable.

Ver. 2.

1. His affection discovered about it, And burning was the anger of Jacob against Rachel. — And Jacob was angry with Rachel, Sept. — Cald. as Hebr.

1. The subject affected, Jacob a man sincerely addicted to honour God, and could not indure any injury against him.

2. The affection itself, anger against sin expressed towards God, and it is anger heightened, he was hotly angry.

וירא

3. The object whereupon, Rachel, not as to her person but for her sin in her carnal, envious impious, and discontented speeches against God and her husband.

2. His expression, which giveth the reason of the former affection in two respects.

1. Of his own station. And he said, in the stead of God I? Or, am I for God? Septuagint. — Doest thou ask sonnes of me, oughtest thou not to ask them from before the Lord? Cald. A good paraphrase. Wherein,

1. He exalts God, who is like unto him?

2. He vilifies himself, who, I give children? alas what am I to do this?

3. He reprove's Rachel; ah foolish woman, doest thou come to me for sonnes? Go to God.

2. Of Gods present execution of his wise providence on Rachel thus expressed, Who hath kept back from thee the fruit of the womb. — Who hath deprived thee of the fruit, &c. Sept. — The offspring of thy bowels or womb. Cald.

1. He acknowledgeth Gods prerogative, he alone can open and shut wombs.

2. Gods just hand, upon himself and her, that he had kept back and forbidden the fruit of the womb.

3. Her folly and sinfulness, that she should open her mouth once to complaine of that which God hath done. Ver. 2.

2. After this contest and Rachel silenced, she to salve all, and quiet her self, motions unto Jacob Bilhah for his wife, wherein we have to note.

1. Her counsel and design. Ver. 3. These particulars herein occur.

1. Her offer, [and overture to him, And she said, behold my hand-maid Bilhah, Septuagint, and Cald. same. Here she holds out a bait for Jacob.

2. Her advice and counsell. Go in unto her, Sept. and Cald. same. That is, take her to wife and enjoy her for.

3. Her reason is twofold.
1. Her hoped fruitfulness. And she shall bear upon my knees, Septuagint, and Cald. same. That is, resting upon my knees, as the custom was of Dames, who had children from their maids.

2. Rachels supply of children this way. And I also shall be builded by her. —

— And from her I shall have sonnes, Sept. — And I will be nurse, and I shall receive sonnes, &c. Cald. — I shall be sonned by her. So the word for son.

sonnes, commeth from the word to build. Her meaning, she is my maid, & her children must be mine, and so I shall have seed one way, though denied to my self. Ver. 3.

Secondly. Her action, wherein occur.

Ver. 4.

1. Her giving her maid to her husband. And she gave unto him Bilhah her hand-maid unto wife. — Septuagint, and Cald. same. As Sarah did before in a like case; the fact is clear, but the right is disputable; so much as was in her to do, she freely consent's and giveth her hand maid into her husbands bosom to be a wife.

2. His accepting her offer and advice. And Jacob went in unto her, Septuagint, and Cald. same. That is, Jacob enjoyed her as a wife, and performed an husbands duty to her. Ver. 4.

Quest. It is questioned, whether this were justly done by Rachel, & well accepted by Jacob?

Ans. 1. Neither can be justified by the law and institution of God from the beginning.

2. That it should be a lustful project, only to satisfy fleshly pleasure, it is not probable to conceive.

3. That some extraordinary dispensation from God was in it, for raising the twelve tribes of Israel, is most rational to conceive, whose providence we know work's good by the irregularities of his creatures. No more can be said to justify them, for customs and humane ends and such like are too weak to hold out against the express law of God.

3. The next issue to this third marriage, is the first which Bilhah brings forth to Jacob; which were two sonnes.

1. Dan. of whom is reported.

1. His conception and birth. And Bilhah conceived and bare to Jacob a son. Ver. 5.

The maid of Rachel, Septuagint. — So the Cald. Here is nothing but conception and birth reported. Ver. 5.

2. Rachels collection from this providence, is threefold.

1. And Rachel said, God hath judged me. — Cald. same. — Judged for me, Sept. So she gathers, though naturally I have no child, yet by adoption I have obtained; and so God hath judged for me, not that I am by barrenness cast off from him. It is likely Leah might judge her otherwise.

2. And hath also heard my voice. — Septuagint, same. — And hath received my prayer. Cald. It is likely Rachel in her way did call upon God for giving her seed this way; and the appearance of it is judged by her to be Gods hearing.

Quest. Was this prayer of Rachel good? Answer. 1. As for children it was a lawfull prayer.

2. As to the way to have children by another, is evil.

3. Yet God beareth; and 'tis probable his over-ruling hand, did appoint a return in mercy, though in such cases usually God beareth in wrath.

3. And hath given me a son. — Sept. and Cald. same. This was the real hearing and answer of her desire; so she glorieth, this is from God to me.

3. Rachels naming of the child. — Therefore she called his name Dan. Sept. and Cald. same. This she doth to remember Gods judging for her, as she presumed. Ver. 6.

2. Naphtali, of whom we have here recorded.

Ver. 7. 1. His conception and birth. And Bilhah, Rachels handmaid, conceived again, and bare a second son to Jacob. Septuag. and Cald. fame. Here is nothing of difficulty; only the same Bilhah a second time conceived and bare.

Ver. 8. 2. Her animadversion hereupon is twofold.

1. Her contention for this son thus expressed, And Rachel said, wrastlings of God have I wrestled with my sister.

God had helped me, and I am compared with my sister. Sept. God hath received my prayer, when I intreated in my supplication, I desire that I might have a son as my sister. Cald.

In these, her strivings to outstrip her sister in founness, were great.

1. By irregular means.

2. By prayer pretended. These are called wrastlings of God, not for the goodness of them, but their greatness. So Cedars of God are filed.

2. Her prevailing, I have also prevailed. And I have had power. Sept. Which also is granted to me. Cald. so far she prevailed to have two adopted founness, for four natural to Leah.

3. Her nomination of the child. And she called his name Naphtali. Cald. fame. Naphtalim. Sept. The name signifieth my wrestling; which therefore she imposeth as a memorial of her wrestling and prevailing for another seed this way.

2. The next seed which Jacob is here said to have, was by Zilpah, handmaid to Leah, where about we have to note.

1. The giving of her also to wife unto Jacob. Ver. 9. Herein note.

1. The occasion of it is recorded. Ver. 9. And Leah saw that she stood from bearing. Ver. 9. had staid from bearing, Septuag. Ceased to bear, Cald.

1. The connection sheweth, that this act of Leah followed that of her sister, and what she now doth, was in imitation of and competition with her sister; one evil follow's hard upon the other.

2. The matter connected which is the occasion of her following action. She perceived that she had staid from bearing; therefore willing to out-run her sister in her way, she make's haste to multiply by another. It may be demanded here.

Quest. How long had Leah desisted from bearing?

Ans. Considering the time of her former bearing, and the age of Judah and others, it seem's not to be much above half a year, that she found herself not with child, and yet she is so hasty, as upon this to vie with her sister, by her maid also to multiply seed.

2. Her action. And she took Zilpah her hand-maid, and gave her to Jacob for a wife. Septuag. and Cald. fame. This was of the same kind with the act of Rachel before, so it seemeth she prevailed with Jacob.

Quest. Was this well done in giving, or taking by either of them.

Ans. Surely no.

1. It was against the rule.

2. Leah had no excuse, for she had born four founness (and afterward more.)

3. What overruling hand God had in it is left upon his score; he might dispense with his law, and order this way of bringing forth the tribes of Israel: but regularly it is not excusable.

2. The fruit begotten of this Zilpah in two founness.

1. God,

1. Gad, of whom here we read.

Ver. 10. 1. His birth, And Zilpah Leahs handmaid did bear unto Jacob a son. Cald. fame. Conceived and bore, &c. Sept. Herein is clearly related the birth of the first seed from Zilpah.

2. The collection made by Leah from it, And Leah said with a troop. I have good fortune, Sept. Prosperity commeth, Cald. The letter here is variously rendered, some reading as one word ל with a troop; others divide it into two, as. ל — ל — ל A troop commeth; no great difference will this make in the sense, for if a troop be with his birth, then it must come. But others vary the meaning of this word Gad, some read it fortune, that is, good (as men speak) or prosperity, others make it the name of a constellation which they call Jupiter; and our simple astrologers account it a lucky star; as if Leah had consulted with that, but it is irrational; the general course of interpreters read it a troop; either with respect to four founness before, or to more following after, which futech with Jacobs prophecy of him. Gen. 49. 19.

3. The nomination of this lad, And she called his name Gad. Sept. and Cald. fame. This was to contend with her sister in number of children; and sheweth her desire to have a troop of them; such the name noteth. Ver. 11.

2. Of Ascher, about him we have recorded.

Ver. 12. 1. His birth, And Zilpah, Leahs handmaid, did bear a second son unto Jacob. Cald. fame. Conceived, &c. Sept. No more is here remarkable then before; the former was born about the 88th year of Jacob, and this the 89th.

2. Leahs animadversion upon this also, And Leah said, with my blessedness, for the daughters will bless me, or call me blessed. And Leah said, blessed am I, for the womb will count me blessed, Sept. Praise shall be to me, for the women will praise me.

1. She concludes a kind of happiness to herself in this seed by her maid; so, men call the things that please them.

2. Creature-esteem, praise or blessing is that which satisfieth weak soules much, it being the utmost of their desires, sometimes. The virgin Mary useth this expression to better purpose. Luk. 1. 48.

3. The nomination of this child also, And she called his name Ascher, that is, Happy. Sept. and Cald. to fame. This nomination as to herself, might be, to mind her of her own comforts this way under temptations, or any outward disrespect; but as to the son it might carry something in it propheticall, according to that of Gen. 49. 20.

1. The occasion. Ver. 14. 15.

2. Leahs injoyment of Jacob. Ver. 16.

3. The fruit which God added. Ver. 17. to 21. In the first, the circumstances making up this occasion are these.

1. Reubens acts, which are three.

1. And Reuben won in the days of wheat harvest, Sept. and Cald. fame. Reuben was Leahs first born, and now about five or six years of age, and he went out as children use into the fields, to the reapers to his childish pleasure; their wheat harvest was accounted about our May.

2. And he found mandrakes in the field; many vain conceits are about these things which Reuben brought. The Sept. read, apples of Mandragoras. The Cald. fabrochin rendered Mandragoras; but Capt. 7. 13. By the Cald. rendred balsum. Some conceive them a fruit, others onely flowers, the word is onely used here, and Cant. 7. 13. Where they are said to give a smell. The word notes amiable things, such as were desirable, whether flowers or fruit; such the child found, it seemeth as providence ordered.

מנדקין

3. And he brought them to Leah his mother, Sept. and Cald. same. So children are wont to do: when any thing of such sort commeth to th. in hand; and it seem's he brought them in the sight of Rachel.

2. Rachels request about them, And Rachel said unto Leah, give me I pray thee, of thy sons mandrakes. — Sept. and Cald. same. She was taken either by sight or smell, that her appetite was very strong after them, as it seem's by the event; therefore she intreat's her sister for small a thing.

Ver. 15.

3. Leahs reply is churlish enough, — And she said unto her, Is it little, that thou take my husband, but to take also my son's mandrakes? — Cald. to same. — And Leah said, Is it not enough for thee that thou hast taken my husband? Wilt thou take also my sons mandrakes? Wherein.

1. She chargeth her with injury past in keeping Jacob from her, is it little? Nay it is great wrong done me in that.

2. She checks her present desire, wouldst thou have my sons mandrakes also? Is this the amends of the former wrong? In summe, she denieth her. Such debates among sisters fall out by their irregular carriage, which were the necessary consequents of polygamy.

4. Rachels return, full of weaknes, yet so ordered under Gods providence; And Rachel said, therefore he shall lie with thee this night, for thy sonnes mandrakes. Cald. same. — Let him sleep, &c. Sept. Herein.

1. Is implied that Rachel injoyed most of Jacobs company, and had greater command in his affections, that she taketh on her thus to dispose of him.

2. Is expressed her womanish, weak passion to part with an husband for a flower or the like toy.

Quest. Was it lawful for a wife to sell her husband?

Answer. 1. No, look upon marriage singly and regularly.

2. But in that state of polygamy, then presumed to be lawful (however evil it was) it cannot be judged wicked for one to consent to the other for mutuall injoyment. Ver. 15.

2. Leahs injoinment of Jacob, wherein we have.

1. Jacobs return from his dayes labour and imploiment thus recorded, And Jacob came out of the field in the evening. Sept. and Cald. same.

Ver. 16.

1. Here is supposed his daily labour, he had bin in the field looking to the flocks, &c. Such honest imploiment he used daily.

2. Here is expressed, his return to rest after his labour, which God ordained for man; the night for rest, as the day for labour. Psal. 104. 23.

2. Leahs care and earnest desire to have him, expressed.

1. In her going to meet him, And Leah went out to meet him, Sept. and Cald. same. Rachel did not so, though the best beloved; Leah doth it though less regarded.

2. In her speech to him, And she said, thou shalt come in to me, for hiring I have hired thee with my sonnes mandrakes. — I have hired, &c. Sept. — With a reward I have hired, &c. Cald. Herein observe.

1. Her claim; it was of his company for that night, either by desire, come in to me, or by confident interest, thou shalt come in to me, that is, to abide with her.

2. Her reason, for she had hired him of her sister with her sonnes mandrakes, & so Rachel was satisfied, therefore he must come in to her.

2. Expressed; Gods gracious dignation, in hearkning effectually unto her, and giving her the desire of her heart, which was yet to make her fruitful.

3. Leahs observation hereupon, And Leah said, God hath given me my reward, who my self gave my maid to my husband, most read because I gave. — So Sept. and Cald.

Ver. 18.

Yet that she should urge this as the reason of Gods hearing her, because she did that unlawful act; is not reasonable for her to do, nor probably, was her meaning. For hire here most naturally answer's the hire of her mandrakes, unto which it seemeth to look. The knot lieth in rendring the word WON which most take as a particule causal; but I conceive, here it is rather a term of order, as if she should say, God hath given me this hire, after I gave my maid to my husband, when I thought I should have no more, yet upon the hire of my husband God hath heard and given me this.

4. Her naming of the son, And she called his name Issachar. — Cald same. — Septuagint adde, which is a hire or reward. — Which beareth to remembrance, both the hire she gave for her husband, and Gods hire returned unto her. Thus she maketh a memorial of providence; which is good, Ver. 18.

It is rare to have the genealogie of Daughters in this sacred History; but this seems to be noted for the following relation about her; whether Jacob had more daughters it is not determined; but most probably he had no more; for no mention is of any, either in his line, or in his youngings into Egypt, where the soules are numbred.

Learn from it.

- D. 1. Daughters upon record are Gods mercies as well as sonnes.
- D. 2. Providence sends them for special ends into the World.
- D. 3. Gods judgment or right proceedings are observable in daughters as well as sonnes, and to be remembered by them. This in the name. Ver. 21.

4. Jacobs issue by Rachel is lastly here recorded, where about we have to note.

1. The great cause of her unexpected fruitfulness after so long barrenness expressed in three acts of God.

Ver. 22.

1. Gods remembrance of her, And God remimbred Rachel, Sept. fame. And the remembrance of Rachel came in the sight of God, Cald. This is spoken onely more humano; Man seems to let slip out of mind, such, to whom they give not, what is desired in their own times; so when mercies desired come not; men apprehend that God forgets them: Here therefore it is said, that God remimbred Rachel, in his first act of mercy toward her conception; Gods remembrance is an actual performance of good desired unto his creatures.

2. Gods audience of her, And God heard her, Sept. to fame. — And received her prayer, Cald.

1. Here is supposed Rachels prayer; that she was still crying to God about her barrenness, to remove it; though she was foolishly hasty with Jacob.

2. Here is expressed, Gods audience & acceptance, God heard her, that is, to accept her, and to grant her desire.

3. Gods performance to her, And he opened her womb, Sept. fame. — And gave her to conceive, Cald. This was the mercy longed and prayed for; to have a fruitful womb; after long delay, God was pleased to grant this in his best time; and made her fruitful, ver. 22.

Secondly, The effect produced thus registered, And she conceived and bare a son, Sept. and Cald. to fame. No more in this than the former.

3. Rachels observation hereupon, And she said, God hath taken away my reproach, Septuag. and Cald. fame. Wherein she observeth.

1. Evil removed, reproach of barrenness, which naturally was a defect, but among the people of those times, accounted a reproach on women.

2. The emotion of it, taken away now it was utterly by her unexpected fruitfulness, and that after a more rare manner; to heal her after so long a shutting up.

3. The cause of all acknowledged is God; that is the mark aimed at, that his name may be praised in it, Ver. 23.

4. Rachels nomination of her son, And she called his name Joseph, saying, The Lord adde or shall adde another son to me, — God hath added to me another son, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Note herein.

1. The imposition of the name, she under her husband names him; the name itself notes addition, He shall adde.

2. The reason of imposition, which the Septuagint. make historical, as past; but not truly. It is in the future, and therefore read as promise, God will adde, or as a prayer of faith; the Lord adde another son; and so consequentially a predication of another seed, to fill up the number of the tribes, Ver. 24.

- D. 1. Providence keeps back mercies sometimes, that creatures may take notice of his remembrance as last.
- D. 2.

D. 2. Gods goodness remember's those sometimes in mercy who have bin regardless of it, and him.

D. 3. Soules sometimes hasty in complaining, yet by grace may turn to praying. So Rachel.

D. 4. Gods ear is ready to hear, and hand to help such praying soules.

D. 5. Gods prerogative it is, to open and shut wombs, Ver. 22.

D. 6. God makes the barren woman bring forth sonnes and keep house, at his pleasure, Tsal. 113.

D. 7. Barrenness in some cases may be a reproach.

D. 8. God alone removeth that reproach from his petitioners, V. 23.

D. 9. Gods taking away reproach, and adding fruit, should be mentioned and remembered with all thankfulness.

D. 10. Thankfulness for one good is a sweet ground to pray and hope for more, Ver. 24.

Secondly, the next generall head of this Chapter containeth the new compact or agreement upon wages between Laban and Jacob, for his longer abode with him and service of him, from Ver. 25. to 36. Wherein we have to note.

1. The occasion of it, Jacobs desire and offer of return into Canaan. V. 25. 26.

2. Labans desire and offer to him for his stay, Ver. 27. 28.

3. Jacobs exception to Labans offer, Ver. 29. 30.

4. The agreement between them, V. 31. 32. 33. 34.

5. Labans performance with Jacobs service, Ver. 35. 36.

In the first of these we have to observe.

1. The time of Jacobs offer, thus stated, And it was, when as Rachel had brought forth Joseph, — Sept. and Cald. fame. This notation of the time sheweth.

1. That Jacob had faithfully finished the term of fourteen years service with Laban for his wives; before this time, we find him not grumbling, nor throwing off the yoke, but patiently bearing all injuries, and faithfully serving out his time.

2. That after the birth of this son, Jacob was aged 92 years; and yet labouring in honest imploiment according to his strength & at this time was it but just to look more to his owne family.

1. Jacobs demand from Laban which is two fold.

1. For a just dismissal, at his term expired. And Jacob said unto Laban, Dismiss me, and I will go to my place and to my country, Sep and Cald. fame.

1. The matter of his demand is just, which was freedom after the term of his service was compleat.

2. The manner of it was ingenuous, he goeth not away rashly, but rationally and equally, demands his liberty by acquainting Laban with his desire.

3. The end of this demand, which was his return to his own place and country; this was not Beersheba onely but Canaan; and this he desired to visit in faith; for so he calleth it his own, as given by promise, not for his nativity; and herein his parents were desired to be seen by him. Ver. 25.

2. For a just compensation unto all his service. Give my wives and my children because I have served thee for them, and I will go, — Cald. fame. — For whom I have served thee, Sept. We may read here.

1. Meekness in desiring.

2. Justice in requiring but his own, even the fruit of his labours.

3. Ingenuity and freeness of Spirit, he would be gon to his own and not trouble Laban.

3. The pressing reason of this demand at this time, For thou hast known my service, which I have served thee, Sept. and Cald. to fame. Wherein.

1. He appealeth to Laban for the justice of his demand.

2. He secretly presseth his hard service, thou knowest wel enough I have earned my wages, and served hard service for my wives and Children, therefore now let me go; I have deserved my liberty from any further service. Ver. 26.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Men of Jacobs Spirit use all fidelity, patience, and constancy in their duties unto the full appointed time.

D. 2. Fidelity doth not subject men to eternal servitude.

D. 3. It becommeth Jacobs children after faithful discharge of duty, ingenuously to desire their liberty.

D. 4. It is but just to desire dismissal from mans service, to move to the free hold which God giveth unto his. Ver. 15.

D. 5. It is equal for faithful servants to require Covenant recompence for their service, as well as dismissal from it.

D. 6. It is honorable to be so faithful in service, as to make the hardest Masters judges of the same. Ver. 26.

2. Labans reply followeth with his desire of Jacobs longer stay, Ver. 27. 28. Wherein we have to note.

Ver. 27.

1. Labans desire expressed, And Laban said unto him, I pray thee if I have found grace in thine eyes. So the speech is elliptical, our translators adde, tarry, which is doubtless his meaning. — Sept. and Cald, same.

1. The condition of his desire is here only expressed, If I have found favour before thee; as if he had said, if you love me Jacob, by all that love, a father may have from his son, I now intreat you.

2. The desire itself is silenced by the former passionate expression; which form of speaking sheweth it to be more importunate and earnest than if he had said only I pray tarry.

2. The reason of this desire is expressed. I have divined or guessed, or by experience learned, that Jehovah hath blessed me for thy sake. — נחשת From a serpent. — חזקוני I have verily divined, as by birds, God hath blessed by thy entrance unto me, Sept.

I have had experience. Cald. Herein we have the confession of a covetous oppressor, he desireth his company only for his own gain.

נחשת

1. His own act of observation is expressed, I have learned by experience, the word notes a kind of auguration, or divining by serpents, as they were wont in those corrupted times & places; some say by birds, Sept. Others by idols, but it matters not; he acknowledgeth his own observation and experience in the thing, which way soever he had it.

2. The matter of observation, that Jehovah had blessed him for Jacobs sake; which confession thought were passionate and earnest as to Jacob to move his stay, yet it was light and hypocritical in respect of God, whose name here he takes in vain; as such worldly hypocrites use to do. God hath blessed us, that is in outward store, as they, blessed be God for we are rich. So Laban saith, I am the richer by thy labours for me, therefore pray stay still with me. Ver. 27.

Ver. 28.

3. His offer, seconding his desire thus expressed, And he said expressly name thy wages unto me and I will give. — אגרת — Distinguish or distinctly appoint thy wages, &c. Sept. — Set or appoint. Cald. This seem's a free offer, to make Jacob his own carver for wages; but it is the subtilty of a covetous Master; he knew well enough what he had deferred for fourteen years service, besides his wives, and what was fit to allow him and his increased family, but that he is not willing to give, and therefore would rather trust Jacobs ingenuity, who he thought would not ask to much. Here are obvious.

1. His offer to Jacob, name thy wages, but subtilly.

2. His promise, I will give what ever thou wilt have; but that is spoken falsely, for he changed his wages many times: yet such fair words he giveth for his own ends. Ver. 28.

D. 1. Providence sometimes causeth wicked Masters to seek the favour of good servants.

D. 2. Covetous masters use all importunity to continue with them profitable servants.

D. 3. Self ends in riches make wicked men earnestly desire Gods Servants to be with them.

D. 4. Wicked worldlings account riches all their blessing.

D. 5. Such rich men ascribe their blessings to Gods name, but all in vain.

D. 6. God wrests confession sometimes out of the mouth of the wicked that they are blessed for the righteous sake. Ver. 27.

D. 7. Covetous masters pretend to make fair offers to enslaverighteous servants the more by them. Ch. 31. 7.

D. 8. Such wicked ones are free to promise but false in performing. Ver. 28.

3. Jacobs exception to Labans motion followeth. Ver. 29. 30. Wherein we have to observe his appeal to Labans own knowledge and conscience in some things, and his objection thereupon against his stay. First, his appeal to Labans conscience is in four things.

Ver. 29

1. Concerning the greatness and goodness of his service past, And he said unto him, thou knowest what or how I have served thee, and how thy possession hath bin with me, which was his cattel as it is rightly paraphrased, — And Jacob said to him thou knowest the service which I have served thee, and how many were thy cattel with me, Sept. — And how great thy cattel were with me. Cald. Herein Jacob maketh his own conscience judge of two things.

1. Of

1. Of the hardness of his service, Thou knowest what and how I have served thee; My hard labours night and day thou knowest full well.

Ver. 30. 2. Of the success of his labour, Thou knowest thy cattel or possession with me, were all well in good condition, it is not hid from thee, how all prospered under my hand, Ver. 29.

Ver. 30. 2. Concerning the smallness of his estate before Jacob came to him, For little was it which was to thee before me, — Small things were they which thou hadst before me, Sept. and Cald. That is, in my sight or before my face, that I could see at my coming to thee. Herein is but a due memento of what he was, and had before his service, which he was ready to forget.

לפני

3. Concerning the increase now made, And it is broken out or grown into a multitude, Sept. and Cald. to the same. This he propoeth also to Labans conscience, how much he was increased by his labour, and yet what little recompence he had now made him. Natural conscience might strike him, that he should gain so much by him, and recompence him so little.

4. Concerning the author or cause of this increase, And Jehovah hath blessed thee at my foot, — Sept. same, — For my sake. Cald. Herein he puts Laban upon more serious thoughts of God, from whose blessing all this good was: And he mindes him of two things here.

1. Of the cause principal, Jehovah indeed hath blessed thee, and this thou knowest, and shouldst more seriously acknowledge it.

לרגל

2. Of the cause instrumental, It was at my foot; which is an emblem either of motion or labour; to this sense, Jehovah blessed thee by my coming to thee, or rather by my travelling and labouring for thee among thy flock; so the foot notes labour and industry. Deut. 11. 10. So Jacob puts the matter to Labans conscience to judge whether it were fit for him to abide in his service. Secondly, his objection after all this suggested, followeth, And now when shall I also work for my house? Cald. same. — When shall I make for my self an house? Sept. This is a question of reasoning, to convince, how unjust the matter was which Laban desired: Wherein he suggests to a covetous father and master.

1. That his house and family was increased.

2. That his service had bin hard, and fruitless to himself.

3. That it was time and just for him to labour now for his wives and children; and all this was sufficient ground for him to deny his abode further in Labans service. It was the dictate of God & nature for every man to provide for his own household; and therefore high time for him unless he should be worse than an infidel, 1. Tim. 5. ver. 8. Ver. 30.

Learn hence.

D. 1. It is just for honest servants to except against the hard demands of cruel masters. So Jacob.

D. 2. Great and good services may be pleaded to hard and ungrateful masters, by such servants. V. 29.

D. 3. Covetous grippers may be minded of their former low and needy conditions.

D. 4. Present prosperity of wicked worldlings may be shewed to convince them of their ungratefulness.

D. 5. Righteous souls may justly mind Hypocrites of the blessing of God upon them to a real apprehension of it.

D. 6. Honest servants may resist Gods blessing by their labours to unjust masters.

D. 7. It is just by the law of God and nature that every man should make timely provision for his own, Ver. 30.

4. Now followeth the agreement between them. Wherein.

Ver. 31.

1. Laban urgeth him to set his own wages, And he said, what shall I give thee? Sept. and Cald. sattie. Herein appears the importunity of a covetous man for his own advantage; tenderness of his relation as a father moveth him not, to offer good to Jacob and his family; but covetousness suggests to him to make his bargain as well as he can for his own gain; he knew Jacob a plain simple man would ask no great things, therefore he subtilly leaveth it to him.

2. Jacob answereth him, and that these two ways.

1. By denial, And Jacob said, thou shalt not give unto me thy thing, — Sept. and Cald. same. In this reply, Jacob doth not deny to have a reward for his paines, which might maintain his family, but he denieth to have any from Laban by contract with him; he knew his deceit and unjust dealing, and would not trust him; he therefore peremptorily denieth, thou shalt give me nothing; I will have no wages of your setting.

2. By proposal, which he maketh. 1. General, If thou wilt do for me this Bbb 3 word word or thing, I will return, I will feed, I will keep thy flock. — I will again feed and keep thy sheep Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Herein.

1. His proposition general, if thou wilt do for me this thing, that is, the same as afterward he expresseth.

2. His promise hereupon of further service, I will return, that is, find pasture for your flocks, And I will keep them, save them from rapine and spoil, by ravenous beasts and such like. Ver. 31.

2. Specially, wherein he expresseth his mind fully concerning his wages, which he would expect rather from God, than from Laban, here occur.

1. His demand, wherein he proposeth to Laban.

Ver. 32.

1. The separation of his flocks, I will pass thorough all thy flock this day, removing from thence every lamb, speckled and spotted & every brown lamb among the sheep (or black) and the spotted and speckled among the goats. — Cald. same. — Let all sheep pass by to day & separate thou every brown sheep among the lambs, & every white & speckled among the goats, Sep. The expression is concise, & therefore somewhat obscure, the plain meaning is, that Jacob desires by him and Laban the flocks might be viewed and severed; all the brown, speckled, and spotted, were to be set together, and put to the keeping of Laban and his sonnes; but all the rest, white or fully black, should be under Jacobs hand, & this division being made, Jacob proceed's to make his desire known.

2. His desire is thus expressed as the condition of his further service, And it shall be my reward. — Sept. and Cald. same. This also is brief, and the larger meaning of it is, Not that all the speckled and spotted, which were then in the flock should be his wages; but such as afterward should be so brought forth, by the flock which was of white and black under Jacobs hand. These which God in his providence should send, Jacob desires to be the reward of his future service; which was not in Labans power to hinder or further, for who could make an hair white or black? Therefore Jacob sheweth him, that he expected his wages from God, & if he sent none, he would have none. V. 32.

2. The reason or end of this demand, which in general is the prevention of future envyings, complaints or false dealings of Laban, which Jacob had much cause to suspect; this is made out two waies.

Ver. 33.

1. By Jacobs justification in this kind of wages, And my righteousness shall testify on me, or answer for me in the morrow day, because, or when it shall come as my wages before thy face. — Sept. and Cald. same. And my righteousness shall hear me, &c. As much as answer for him. Sept. — When thou shalt come upon my reward. Cald. That is to view, and see what my reward shall be this way. In all this Jacob pro-videth for justifying his innocency and upright dealing against Labans quarrells in after-times, which he both feared and found.

1. The matter of his justification is righteousness, that is, his just demand of reward, being no other than from providence.

2. The act of justification, it should answer for him all Labans actions.

3. The time, tomorrow, that is in after-times of dispute, if they come.

4. The end of this justification, that is, as to his wages in the sight of Laban himself, so that he might be forced to say, that he had given Jacob not so much as a lamb for all his wages, but that God gave him all.

2. By his acknowledgment of just condemnation if any thing else were found with him for his wages, Every one that is not speckled nor spotted among the goats, and brown among the sheep, it is taken with stealth by me. — Sept. and Cald. to the same. The summe is, if any other but party coloured cattel were owned by Jacob, Laban might charge him with theft for any such, and so proceed against him. Ver. 33.

3. Labans consent followeth, which Ver. 34.

make's up the agreement fully, And Laban said behold, I would it might be according to thy word. — Cald. same.

Let it be according to thy word, Sept. Herein the readiness of a covetous wretch, who never lived upon Gods promise and providence, is visible, he thought a small portion of party coloured could issue from a white flock, and therefore sticks not at the matter, but easily condescends to Jacob in his motion for wages. Ver. 34.

Quest. It is questioned, with what Spirit Jacob made this demand; either of subtilty or simplicity.

Ans. Doubtless upon the whole account of this transaction it must be concluded that he was acted herein by the Spirit of God; who had purposed this way to justify Jacob and condemn Laban for injustice.

Now Learn from it.

D. 14. Covetous hearts beguile themselves when they work by sight to accomplish their own ends, not eyeing God. So Laban. V. 34.

5. The last point of the agreement is the execution, in Labans performance, and Jacobs service. Ver. 35. 36.

1. There is reported Labans action for accomplishing this agreement. Which is here threefold.

1. The separation of the flock, as was desired, wherein.

1. The agent with his act, Laban himself, And he removed. — He separated, Sept. and Cald. He did it himself and would not trust Jacob. Laban separated.

2. The time punctually expressed, In that very same day. — Sept. and Cald. same. He delayeth not a moment to prosecute so good a bargain, as he thought he had made, and so it was in reason.

3. The object of this separation, The hee-goats that were ring - striped, &c. — Sept. Cor.

rupt. — Party coloured in the fact, Cald. Herein Laban dealt exactly, and this one word is put in more than Jacob expressed before, which is, ring - striped, that is, such as had any circles of black or white about their feet, which oftentimes fall's out by blinding the cattel, if any such mark was so much as about the feet of any, all them Laban removed. So he doth.

2. The disposition of them to the hands of his sonnes, And he gave into the hands of his sonnes, that is, all the speckled cattel, Cald. same. — And gave by the hands of his sonnes, the flock alone, or by it self. — Sept. Herein also he dealt wisely, when he had thoroughly purged his flocks, he commits to the keeping of his sonnes, who were of their fathers temper, to look to Jacob narrowly. So God useth the care of men to manifest more his owne providence, Ver. 35.

3. The distinction of place, which now he maketh between himself with his party coloured flock, and Jacob with his flock of a single colour. And he set away of three dials between himself and between Jacob, Cald. same. — Between them and Jacob, Septua. Herein see the care of a worldly man; for thus he makes sure, there shall be no mingling of the flocks, & so Jacobs wages should arise out of no more than the single coloured flock; which he thought could be but little. Yet all this sollicitousness of this covetous man God orders so, that his providence may more eminently appear to be good unto Jacob for all his sufferings.

2. Here is related the close of all, which is Jacobs service thus recorded, And Jacob was feeding the flock of Laban, which remained. — The sheep of Laban, Sept. tuag. and Cald. Here is a short record of Jacobs after-service, which was for the term of seven years more; though not here mentioned. In all which time he did faithfully serve Laban, and take care of his flocks as before, Ver. 36.

D. 8. Honest Jacob-like soules faithfully discharge their duties, unto their hardest governours. So Jacob. Ver. 36.

3. Now followeth the last general of the Chapter, containing the success of this agreement unto Jacob, under the good providence of God. Herein note, Ver. 37. 1. The means which Jacob useth for his own advantage; and that is a threefold artifice.

Ver. 38. 1. His peeling of rods, and making white to appear between the bark, and then laying them in the troughs of water, that when the cattel came to drink, they might conceive.

Ver. 39. 1. His action in this is considerable, Ver. 37-38.

2. The success of this, Ver. 39. The sheep did conceive, that is, grew hot in natural desire, when the very seed was formed, and brought forth ring-straked. &c.

Ver. 40. 2. His setting of the parti-coloured lambs before the other cattel, when they ingendred at other times, then drinking; that so they might see the various colours and conceive the like. Ver. 40.

Ver. 41. 3. His time observed of putting these rods, when the cattel were in their strength, as at the spring coupling, and not the autumn. So is it rendred by some; and thence came it to pass, that the stronger were Jacobs, and the feebler cattel Labans, Ver. 41-42.

Ver. 43. 2. The issue of all this artifice, And the man increased mightily, mightily, &c. God was pleased to give such success, that in the space of six years, poor Jacob became mighty in wealth. So God did for him.

Quest. 1. Was not this a fraudulent way which Jacob took to advantage himself?

Ans. No, for however mention is not made here, yet after it appeareth, that God shewed him this way, Chap. 31. 11. It was Gods just act.

Quest. 2. Was such conception natural, or miraculous?

Ans. 1. Partly it was natural, that phansy may make real impressions upon the fruit in conception. This is evident, in women as other creatues.

2. Partly it was miraculous and mostly from the power of God to fix the phantasies of so many cattel upon such objects in conception. No created power could do this. Herein therefore God pleaded for Jacob against Laban, and rewarded him, as afterward it is all ascribed to God.

CHAP. XXXI.

Hitherto we have had the history of the Church in Jacobs person and family, from the time of his departure from Canaan to Padan-aram. Now followeth the history of his return to Canaan and providences attending in the way, a part whereof we have in this Chapter recorded, which is taken up in three generals.

1. The flight of Jacob, from Ver. 1. to the end of Ver. 21.

2. The pursuit of Laban with his contest, Ver. 22. to 42.

3. The Covenant between them & departure, Ver. 43. to 55.

In the first general, these particulars occur.

1. The

1. The motives of his removal, Ver. 1. 2. 3.

2. The consultation thereabout with his wives. Ver. 4. to 16.

3. The execution of their counsels in departing. Ver. 17. to 21.

First, as to the motives of his removal they are of two sorts.

1. Occasional, Ver. 1. 2.

2. Causal, Ver. 3.

1. The occasional motives were two.

1. The reproaches of Labans sonnes. Ver. 1. Hereabout we have to note.

Ver. 1. The spreading of this fame, and the coming thereof to Jacobs eare, And he heard the words of Labans sonnes saying, Cald, same. Jacob heard, &c. Sept. Herein occur.

1. The term of connection, which is read by some as adverbative, but, by others as a note of time, afterward, or then, by others as copulative, knitting this history to the precedent; all are good, for, it is connected in order of time to follow after the agreement for wages with Laban, against whose expectation, this estate was cast upon Jacob; and however at first, he seemed more than ordinarily free thereunto, yet now he and his sonnes are troubled at it, therefore adverbatively also may it be read, but he heard, that is notwithstanding the former agreement.

2. The extent of the fame, it came to Jacobs eare, either by others, or by hearing of the taunts from Labans sonnes. He heard their words, &c.

2. The matter of the fame, wherein Jacob is charged.

1. With notorious theft thus expressed, Jacob hath taken away all that was our fathers. Sept. and Cald. to same.

This crimination was fastned on Jacob, and published by them, to make Jacob odious. The falshood whereof might appear, both by the former agreement made between Laban and Jacob, and by the inability of Jacob to make one hair naturally white or black; therefore the whole charge rightly must lye upon God, who alone had power to make this difference among the flocks. Yet this is made the iniquity of Jacob.

2. With self exalting upon the ruine of others. And of what was our fathers hath he made all this glory. Sept. same.

All this substance or riches. Cald. So the terme is translated, riches, Prov. 3. 16. Ch. 8. 18. Herein Jacob is charged to be self-seeking and vainglorious, and that to the visible prejudice of his father; that he had gotten a magnificent estate, and all either cheated or wristed from Laban. Ver. 1.

Ver. 2. 2. The disrespect of Laban to him discovered in the frowncs of his countenance, And Jacob saw the face of Laban, and behold, it was not with him as yesterday and the day before. Cald. same.

as yesterday and the third day, Sept.

1. Jacobs observation, he looked and considered Labans carriage; as was but reasonable upon so free and clear agreement.

2. A discovery of Labans return unto him, And behold it was not with him, as yesterday, and the day before, which is in time past, Laban smiled heretofore and was very chearfull toward Jacob, while the bargain was making, but when he seeth what God had done for Jacob, he groweth discontented, and lowres upon him; as if he would brow-beat him out of his agreement. This with the former was a just occasion for Jacob to think of removal from him. Ver. 2.

2. The causal motive which made him go indeed is Gods command made known unto him, And Jehovah said unto Jacob, returne unto the land of thy fathers, and to thy kindred, and I will be with thee. So Sept. To the land of thy nativity, and my word shall be for thy help. Cald. Herein we have.

1. Gods command to warrant his removal, Jehovah said to Jacob.

1. The connection of this is with the injurious carriage of Laban and his sonnes, immediately hereupon he is warranted to be gone.

2. The authority injoyning, Jehovah, who had guided and rewarded him hitherto.

3. The command itself, to return to the land of promise, to his father and friends thereabiding. This causeth Jacob to goe, and not the former by themselves.

2. Gods promise to, and encouragement of him, And I will be with thee. The Caldee paraphrase cleareth this to be the presence of Gods grace, my word shall be thy help; so God engageth himself to help him in his departure, and journey, and abode in the land of promise; and if God be with him, it matters not who is against him. Ver. 3.

1. Labans censuring & oppression of him And your father hath deceived me or lied unto me, and hath changed my wages ten times or courses. Cald. same. — Reward of ten lambs, Sept. Herein he sheweth a most unworthy return to such mighty service.

1. In Labans lying and false dealing; though he had so freely granted him the wages which providence should pay him, yet afterward wickedly to deny them to him.

2. The multiplicity of his deceit and oppression in changing his wages ten times, that is, very many times & that in the space of six years: Num. 14. 22. Job. 19. 3. Some conceive ten a certain number, and those at so many seasons of bringing forth; the former is more probable. This was most unufferable injury.

2. Gods vindication of him, wherein is related.

1. Gods care of Jacob generally, But God hath not given him to doe me evil. — Wherein he asserts.

1. His vindicator, the almighty God.

2. His vindication, that he did not give Jacob into Labans hand to hurt him.

Quest. Was it no hurt to Jacob to change his wages so often.

Ans. It was in Labans intent, but God turned it to good, for what ever Laban changed, God made that good to Jacob, as followeth.

2. In special, his vindication is set down, in two particulars exprest by Laban, when he changed Jacobs wages: the agreement was that it should be of speckled, ring straked, &c. but Laban seeing in some time that so many of those sorts were brought forth, now he will make his bargain again. Whereof we have two instances.

1. If he said thus, the speckled shall be thy wages, then bare at the cattle speckled, Sept. and Cald. to fame. That is, Laban being discontented with the former portion of providence, now he telleth Jacob, he shall have no more but the speckled, for his wages, and then God made all speckled.

2. And if he said thus, the ring straked shall be thy wages, then bare at the cattle ring-straked. — White, Sept. spotted. Cald. So Laban would do, when he saw no ring-straked brought forth, then Jacobs wages should be of them, and then God made all rings-straked. ver. 8.

3. The conclusion of this recorded, Ver. 9. And God hath taken away the cattle or possession of your father, and hath given it unto me, Sept. fame. — And the Lord hath separated of your fathers cattle. Cald. Here Jacob concludes the eminency of Labans injurious dealing, by Gods pleading with him.

4. Jacob imparteth to his wives the discoveries of God unto him, mainly concerning two things.

1. The contriving of his wages.
2. The call of him to his removal. The former, is ver. 10. 11. 12. Wherein are to be noted.

Ver. 10.

1. The manner of discovery. It was by dream, as God had appeared before to him and his fathers, And it was in the time of conceiving or warming of the cattle, and I lifted up mine eyes, and I saw in a dream, — Cald. same. — I saw with my eyes in a dream. Sept. Here may be noted.

1. The season of Gods discovery, or appearing providence, even the time of the cattle conceiving, probably every time, or at least some of those seasons.

2. The manner of discovery, It was, that which was then usually the way of divine warnings even by dream.

2. The matter discovered, And behold she he-goats leaping upon the cattle, ring-straked, speckled and gristed, or hail-spotted. — Goats and rams, upon the ewes and she-goats, white, particoloured, and sprinkled with ashes. Sept. — Cald. same. Hebr. The matter made known was, That providence had ordered the matter against Labans plot, and effectually wrought, that the portion allotted to Jacob should increase, which no earthly power could do; whence it appears that the artifice used by Jacob was also Gods discovery. Ver. 10.

Ver. 11.

3. The author of this discovery to him, And the Angel of God said to me in a dream. Sept. and Cald. same. This Angel is styled. Ver. 13. the God of Bethel, which was surely God in Christ, and no other was the author of the dream or artifice, which Jacob used.

4. The end of discovery, which was the comforting of Jacob against Labans hard dealings, which he doth,

1. By calling to him, Jacob, — Sept. double the call. — Cald. as Heb. God calleth him by name to comfort him and Jacob replieth, And said behold me, — What is it? Sept. — Cald. as Heb. In both Jacob is prepared for comfort, and he ready to receive what God will shew him. Ver. 11.

Ver. 12.

2. By shewing him Gods providence in making all that Laban excepted to engender, And he said, lift up now thine eyes, and see all the he-goats leaping upon the cattle ring-straked, speckled and gristed — Cald. same. — He-goats and rams, &c. as before, Sept. Herein God sheweth him all was ordered by his own hand for Jacobs good, against Labans wrongs. This the Lord sheweth him.

5. The reason of this discovery, which is, Gods observation of all the injuries done to Jacob by Laban. For I have seen all that Laban doth unto thee. Sept. same. — It is manifest unto me, &c. Cald.

1. The observer is God the Judge.

1. The encouragement, which God giveth him, by a special description of himself, I am the God of Bethel — I am the God who appeared to thee in the place of God. Sept. — Who appeared to thee in Bethel. Cald.

1. The subject, 1, noteth the Angel spoken of before, it was therefore the Angel of the Covenant, God in Christ.

2. The attribute, The God, or that God of Bethel. Wherein is asserted.

1. That he was the true God, even God almighty.

2. That he was not a God as known in Padan Aram by Laban, but as revealed to Jacob

Ver. 13.

Jacob in Bethel, twenty years before, wherein two things are to be noted concerning God then appearing. Chap. 28.

1. That he was the God of Providence, ruling all things in heaven and earth according to his own will; set out by the ladder, and the intercourse of the Angels between heaven and earth.

2. That he was the God of Promise, not forgetting what he had spoken to Jacob; but at this time to be in readiness, to perform it; So that, the God of Bethel, is not, with respect to the terrene place, He is tied to none, but to the promise made there to Jacob: Not the God of Luz but of Bethel.

2. The engagement laid and taken upon Jacob there, Where thou annointedst the pillar, where thou vowedst to me a vow. — Pillar to me. Sept. — Vowedst before me, &c. Cald. Herein is.

1. To be supposed that God guided Jacob to this dedication and vow, and so allowed it, and laid this service upon him, which was but answerable to Gods providence and promise to him.

2. expressed, what Jacob did, which was, the engaging of himself for ever to serve that God who appeared to him at Bethel. Which is set out.

1. By his dedication of the place; in appointing the pillar, and naming it Gods house, binding himself thereby to return from Syria into the land of promise to serve God.

2. By making his vow, which was to worship God in that place, and give the tenth of all to him, therein giving homage, and acknowledging himself truly the servant of the most high. This God brings to his remembrance, being twenty years past, since this engagement was made.

3. The injunction for his present removal, Now arise, go out of this land, and return to the land of thy kindred. Sept. & Cald. same. Upon the former encouragement and engagement, this injunction is but reasonable; as if God should say, Jacob. I was thy God at Bethel, when thou travelledst from thy fathers house to Syria, I appeared to thee there, and went with thee in thy way; and now thou rememberest the vow of worshipping me in the place which I chose, arise therefore, now the time is come for thy return to Canaan the land of thy nativity. He injoyne's.

1. Preparation for it, arise.

2. Prosecution of it, Return, with thy family thither to serve me. This doubtless was a distinct vision from the former about his wages, for that was in the six years of service, when the cattle conceived, but this at the end of that term, when God would have him return; for his Covenant of serving Laban this last time, expressed no term of expiring; therefore God points the time which should be best.

2. Now followeth the reply of Jacobs wives unto all these proposals made by him unto them, wherein we have to note.

1. The replies, Then answered Rachel and Leah, and said unto him. Sept. and Cald. Ver. 14. to the same. Wherein note.

1. The order of reply; after Jacob had acquainted them with the mind of God in all his discoveries.

2. The consent of both in answer, however they jarred many times in other things; here God overpowered their spirits, to bring to pass his ends; each for themselves and both together, give one answer.

2. The reply itself, which comprehends in it.

1. Some considerations rehearsed, which are three.

1. That no portion was to be expected from their Father by them, Is there yet for us any portion or inheritance in the house of our Father? — Cald. same.

Any part of inheritance in the things of our Father? Sept. The affirmative question is to be rendered negatively, we have no portion, father to expect; what then should keep us here from consenting to thee? Ver. 14.

2. That their Father had dealt with them rather as strangers and bondwomen, than as his own daughters; Are we not counted of him strangers? for he hath sold us, and eating Ver. 15.
Ccc 3 he

he hath eaten up also our money. Sept. and Cald. fame. Herein they discover.

1. Their charge of unnaturalness upon their Father, he accounts us no other than strangers, not as his daughters.

2. Their proof of it, in two acts of his.

1. That he had dealt with them as bondwomen and sold them, For he hath sold us. As if they had said, he hath bin so far from giving portions to us as a father, that he sold us as bondwomen for service, like a tyrant.

2. That he had consumed their substance, And eating he hath eaten up all your money; that is, most cruelly and injuriously for fourteen years together, all that our labours might have gotten, hath he taken it away and devoured it for himself. Ver. 15.

Ver. 16.

3. That God had regarded them and their children as Jacob had related, For, or therefore, all the riches which God hath taken away from our Father, that is for us and our sonnes. Cald. fame. Riches and glory, Sept. The illative seemeth best to give this as the reason of Gods dealings with Laban, because our Father hath bin so cruel, therefore hath God taken wealth from him and hath given it to us: as Jacob before. Here they consider.

1. That God had seen Labans injuries.

2. That he had judged for them against him, in making such provision for them: therefore their hearts were the more ready to yeeld unto Jacobs motion.

Secondly their answer in full concession, And now all that God hath said unto thee, do thou. Sept. & Cald. fame. Herein,

1. They suppose the ground, that God had called Jacob.

2. Upon this and the former considerations, they consent freely, doe as God hath said, we are for thee. This seem's to excuse them from rash charging of their father, or any profaneness in former expressions, for as much as thus they yeeld unto Gods call. Ver. 16.

3. The act of preparation, he rose up, that is, in the strength of God he bestirred himself towards his removal, not discouraged with any other difficulties.

2. His sonnes and wives, with whom were taken in also the two other women given to Jacob by Rachel and Leah, who bare sonnes to Jacob. And he lifted up, or set his sonnes and his wives upon camels.

This no doubt, was the end of his journey which God proposed to him, to come to his Father's house where God was better known, and to the land of promise which the Lord had given him. ver. 18.

2. Labans action is here observable.

19. And Laban went to shear his sheep. Sept. and Cald. fame. This passage is providential; that when God would dispatch Jacob towards Canaan, without disturbance, he orders affairs to them who otherwise would hinder. The connection of Jacobs preparation, & this Labans avocation from observing him, is to be noted: It was so ordered by God that he should be three dayes journey from Jacob and employed in other of his own affairs, when Jacob provides for his escape.

3. Rachels action is here recorded. And Rachel had stolen the Teraphims which were her Fathers. The idols. Sept. The images. Cald. The agent here is Rachel, not well purged yet from her native superstition.

2. The act is injurious, she stole, which was an unjust taking of others goods, forbidden by God.

3. The object, is set out by the matter, and the owner, the matter is called Teraphims, many times mentioned by the Prophets, but here is the first mention we have of them. They were doubtless means whereby Laban worshipped the God whom he acknowledged; afterward he calleth them his Gods. The matter of them probably was precious, gold or silver; the form most like was of men as may be gathered from the same word used. 1. Sam. 19. 13. 16. Others think them to be of some other shape whereby they consulted with Devils. The owner of them was Laban the Father of Rachel; from whom especially she ought not to steal.

Quest. Why did Rachel steal these?

Answ. Some make it a pious theft, as if she intended hereby to keep her Father from idolatry, but that is not probable; an other way would then have bin taken with them. Doubtless Rachel is not to be excused, either covetousness of the matter, or superstition which was natural, or both, might put her upon this action, or els that he might not consult them to discover the way Jacob took in his flight.

Quest. Did she well in it, or is it to be excused?

Answ. Doubtless no, for Jacob condemneth it as an act to be abhorred when he replied to Laban, with whomsoever, &c. Let him dye. ver. 32. So then this was wickedly done. ver. 19.

4. Jacobs action in departing; where are to be noted.

1. The manner of it. And Jacob stole away the heart of Laban the Syrian, in that he declared not to him that he was flying. He hid it from Laban. Ver. 20.

Laban the Syrian, &c. Sept. and Cald. 1. Here is an action charged on Jacob also, and that is stealth, Jacob stole the heart of Laban; Rachel stole his Gods, and now Jacob steal's his heart; but this is far honestier than that: The meaning is made out two ways.

1. By adding a preposition, he stole from Laban's heart, that is, without his knowledge or unawares to him he departed.

2. By noting a figure in the terme [heart,] put for that which the heart of Laban desired, viz. more service from Jacob and wealth by him; this by departing he deprived him of. The Septua. and Cald. rather incline to the former.

2. The interpretation of the action which succeth best the former meaning; in that he discovered not to Laban his purpose of departing, or flying, or escaping from him; the reason whereof he intimates afterward, was partly his fear, but his warrant was the call of God, Ver. 20.

2. The actual remove and departure of him.

Ver. 21.

1. His onset, And he fled himself and all that was his, Sept. and Cald. fame. This relateth his first motion from Syria. Under the call of God, he leaveth nothing behind.

2. His progress, And he arose and passed over the river, Sept. fame, Cald. which divided Syria and Canaan. The way was surely pointed out of God, which now he taketh.

3. His posture to his journey end, And he set his face towards mount Gilead, And he halted to mount Gilead, Septuag. Cald. as Hebr. It was a famous mountain in some part conterminat with Lebanon, supposed in all pertaining to it, to contain 50 miles, with a fruitful country that bore its name, the Land of Gilead, Deut. 34. 1. Here it is so named by anticipation, for the reason of this name followeth in this Chapter. Moses writes of it now as it was called in his time. This flight was, Anno Mundi 2266. Anno Diluvii 610. Anno 158. of Isaac, Anno 98. of Jacob.

Quest. Did Jacob well in flying thus? AnsW. Yea, 1. The call of God put him upon it. 2. All circumstances considered, it was but just for him to secure himself thus, from the fraud and cruelty of a wicked man, V. 21.

2. The next general head of the Chapter is Laban's pursuit of Jacob and contest with him, from Ver. 22. to 42. Wherein we have to note.

1. Laban's pursuit and overtaking Jacob, Ver. 22. 23. 24. 25.

2. Laban's charge and threatening, Ver. 26. to 30.

3. Jacobs answer to all, Ver. 31. 32.

4. Laban's search made, Ver. 33.

34. 35.

5. Jacobs just apology and reproof, Ver. 36. tot 42.

In the former of these do occurre these particulars.

1. The tidings of Jacobs flight, V. 22. Ver. 22. brought to Laban, And it was told Laban on the third day that Jacob was fled. Laban the Syrian. Sept. No difficulty is here in the latter, onely two notable things about this providence are worth observing.

1. The tidings, that God ordered the matter so, that Laban should come to the hearing of Jacobs departure, whether ordinarily, or by some envious person to seek Jacobs trouble, it matters not.

2. The time of this tidings coming to Laban, and that was on the third day; no sooner would God let him hear it, because he should not hinder Jacob; and then he sends him word, that he might try Jacob. Wisdom and goodness appear in this.

Learn from it.

D. 2. Tidings of mercy to Saints may come to the wicked soon enough to try them. Ver. 22.

2. Laban's pursuit to the overtaking them, wherein note.

1. His

Ver. 23.

1. His preparation for associates, And he took his brethren with him, Cald. fame. His sonnes and brethren. Sept. Hereabout observe.

1. The undertaker, Laban, at this time moved with rage against Jacob, full of thoughts to pursue him and be avenged, either by reducing him to slavery or destroying him and what he had; such a frame of spirit is presumed now to be in Laban, and no less doth he discover, but that God bridled him, and kept him back from his purpose.

2. The parties here associated, are set out under the name of brethren, who were doubtless, of his kinned, neighbors, fellow citizens, whom he call's in to his help, for revenge upon Jacob; and these doubtless armed, and fitted for such an enterprise.

3. The ingaging of these, it is said, He took them, that is, either by command ingaged such as were under him, or by false pretences perswading others, that Jacob was a thief, deceiver, sacrilegious person, had stolen his Gods, such as they all worshipped, and so had reproached their religion; doubtless by such suggestions as these he raised his troop now to pursue them.

2. His prosecution, And he pursued after him the way of seven dayes, Sept. and Cald. fame.

1. His motion is here to be noted, he followed after him, that is, in such a motion, as his fury and thoughts of revenge could suggest, speedy enough, subtle enough, cruel enough, to the terrifying of Jacob.

2. His continuation of it, the way of seven dayes, or seven dayes journey. Some variety there is in numbring these dayes and journeyes, upon this doubt, whether Laban pursued from the place of sheep-shearing; or whether first he went home, and gathered his company and harnessed himself for pursuit. The last is most probable and then the seven dayes journey must be reckoned from the time that Laban set forth from Haran; so that it was three dayes, from Jacobs departure, before Laban heard, and three dayes of his coming to Haran, which were six; wherein Jacob had bin travelling, and seven dayes after this did Laban march, before he came to Jacob, which was the thirteenth day, of Jacobs motion.

3. His overtaking of him. And he overtook him; In the mount Gilead. Sept. and Cald. to fame. He comprehended him, not by laying hold on him, but fetching him up in his way, and coming within sight of him. Herein are.

1. His approach, God let him march on so far with his troop, in his rage, and now at the seventh even, to pitch within sight of Jacob; which was doubtless an hard temptation to Jacob, and all his family to see such a pursuer.

2. The place is mentioned mount Gilead; in what part of the mount either were pitched, is not mentioned, neither is it of that moment; but hitherto is Laban come with a mind full of rage; and his seventh night rest he taketh here, wherein God meets him.

1. The manner of it is described. And God came to Laban the Syrian in a dream of the night. Septuagint. fame. The word came from the face of the Lord, &c. Cald.

1. The approacher is the almighty God.

2. The approached is Laban a poore angry creature; led by the lawes of his own lust and country.

3. The manner of approach is by dream; but such as was divine, wherein God left such impressions, that soules knew it was from God; and to wicked men hath God so appeared as to awe them for the good of his.

2. The scope of it. And he said unto him, take thou heed lest thou speak with Jacob from good to evil. Cald. fame. That thou speak not evill, &c. Sept.

1. The authority charging, Gods word.

2. The matter charged, wherein.

1. Menacing, take heed, look to your self, you are a dead man if you obey not my word.

2. Command, speak not from good to evil with Jacob, which in general imports, not a word to hurt him, much less to express an action; some conceive it to this purpose, neither speak good by flattery, nor evil by reproof, to draw Jacob back again to Padan-Aram; which he did forbear, how ever he speak's not without reproof.

2. Jacobs pitching his tents. And Jacob had pitched his tent in the mount, Sept. and Cald. same. Whether this was before Labans approach or after, it matters not; it is likely Jacob pitched all the tents, and ordered his company so as to keep themselves from harme.

3. Labans pitching neer the same place, And Laban pitched with his brethren in mount Gilead. Settled or placed his brethren in mount Gilead. Sept. and Cald. Doubtless this was somewhat neer, whence they came to parly the next morning.

2. Now followeth Labans contest with Jacob, made up of expostulation, menacing, and charge of injury done by Jacob unto him. ver. 26. to 30. Herein note.

Ver. 26.

1. His expostulation about his fact generally, And Laban said unto Jacob, what hast thou done? Sept. and Cald. same. This is but a general challenge upon the whole; knowest thou what thou hast done?

2. About his fact specially in two points.
1. Pretended wrong to him, And hast stolen my heart, or from my heart. Why hast thou run away privily, and hast stolen me? Sept. And hast concealed from me? Cald. The phrase was used before, it note's private withdrawing, or secret bereaving Laban of his heart, or his desire. Why hast thou so done to steal from me?

2. Pretended wrong to his daughters. And hast led away my daughters as captives by the sword? Sept. and Cald. same. This is falsely pretended, for they went voluntarily; yet willing to pick a quarrel, thus he questions with him, as a man-stealer. He forgets, that they were wives to Jacob. v. 26.

3. About the reason of his fact, wherein we have.

1. A pretended crime. Wherefore didst Ver. 27.

thou hide thyself to fly, and hast stolen me, or from me, and didst not tel me? All this is left out in the Sept. Why didst thou go away secretly, and concealst and didst not declare it to me? Cald. In all this Laban expostulat's about the reason of Jacobs secret departure from him, insinuating that he had no cause so to have done; and surely then had he bin to blame if he could shew no reason, but he giveth sufficient afterward.

2. A pretended reason for such expostulation. And I should have sent thee away with mirth, and with songs, with timbrel and with harp. And if thou hadst told me, I had sent thee away with mirth, and musicians, &c. Septuagint. Cald. as Hebr. Here we have an hypocritical pretence of that, which was never intended; but something he must have to make his queries plausible. He that grinded him and them at home, would hardly have sent them away with so much honour. Ver. 27.

4. About the aggravation of his fact Ver. 28.

from some unnaturalness, in keeping a Father from due respect unto his children, And hast not suffered me to kiss my sonnes and my daughters? Cald. same. And I was not counted worthy to kiss, &c. Sept. Herein he thinks to load Jacob with sinning against the law of nature, and yet when he had his sonnes and daughters at home, he was so far from kissing them; that he used them as slaves, and oppressed them.

Secondly. His charge upon all, Now thou hast plaid the fool in doing all this. Thou hast done foolishly. Sept. and Cald. This is his plain charge, that Jacob had done wicked in all this matter of his departure; folly and wickedness, are synonymous here; thou hast acted wickedly in all this. Ver. 28.

D. 8. Wicked and foolish men are very forward to charge the innocent with doing wickedly. Ver. 28.

Thirdly. Labans menacing of Jacob is the next thing observable in this contest, Ver. 29. Wherein we have to note.

1. His bragg or boast of what mischief he could do to Jacob, It is in the strength of my hand to do with you hurt. so Cald. And now my hand is able to afflict thee. Singular. Sept. The very letter is, My hand is unto strength or power to do evil with you. Herein note the genius or disposition of the man, to expreis his revengesfull desire, though God had rebuked him, note.

1. The matter of his boasting, that he had strength and power, when alas he could do nothing against God; however he had armed men with him.

2. The readines he was in, his hand was up to his power to put it out against Jacob, and his.

3. The scope of all this boasted of, to do evil or hurt, or mischief unto you all, it is in the plural, that is, to destroy Jacob and his family. His hand was to power, but not to justice to do so.

2. His curb, which he is not ashamed to acknowledge though to his own condemnation, But the God of your Father the last night spake unto me, saying, keep watch of thyself, from speaking with Jacob from good to evil. Cald. same. Yesterday spake to me, saying, keep thy self that thou speak not evil with Jacob. Sept. wherein we have to note.

1. The power confessed, which held his hand, the God of your Father; see the man, your God, not mine, yet Laban doubtless confessed the same God in being abstracted, but not the same in will and worship as Abraham, Isaac, & Jacob had; therefore he stiled him, the God of your Father; wherein yet he grant's, that the God of Jacobs Father was stronger than his God, and better too; for his God let him go on to revenge, but Jacobs God kept him of: where also is a malicious complaint, had not your God curbed me I should have caught you for flying away.

2. The curb imposed, he spake to me last night, and threatned me to look to my self, and not to speak with Jacob from good to bad; he hath over-awed me, that I cannot do what I would. See, a vile man bewraying himself, so God wrestled this confession of his mouth; the phrases here were opened before. In summe the charge of God upon him was to doe Jacob no hurt in word or deed. 4. Labans postulating crimination of Jacob about facitledge. Ver. 30. Wherein we have.

1. A dissembling confession recorded, Ver. 30. And now going thou art gone because longing thou didst long after thy Fathers house. Cald. same.

Now therefore he go's for with desire thou hast desired to goe to thy fathers house. Sept. This is a dissembled concession of departure; as if he had said; said; you are eagerly departed, and have strongly desired your Fathers house, let it be so, let that pass; see the expressions of a forced spirit, be it so, patience perforce.

2. A most lying charge, wherefore hast thou stolen my Gods? Sept. same, — My fear, Cald. Wherein we have to consider the charge.

1. In the act, which was stealing, whereof Jacob was not in the least measure guilty; yet he is bold to lay it to him in his question, as if he had said, you pretended it was for love to your Fathers house, you would depart, but your intent was to play the thief. Why did you steal?

2. In the matter of this stealth, no less than his Gods, so he saith, my Gods, that which went under the name of Teraphim before Laban put's under the name of the true God. Elohai: the same name whereby God was known to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. See the idolatrous spirit of the man, to frame God after the images of men, and persuade himself, that these were the right way of apprehending and worshipping God; which was the religion of all his armed troop, that followed him; and probably this was the greatest argument of persuading them, to ingage with him, even for their Gods and Religion. How Laban could be so stupid, as to call them Gods, as if he thought, the work of his hands, could be God, it is not to be thought; but he giveth the name of God unto the representations which his invention made of them; a metonymical expression, where the figum is called the signatum. Little help then have the Popish Idolaters hence, because they say, they do not call their images Gods; grant it; yet they make the same use of them, which is to worship God by them, as their Doctors affirm; which indeed is to falsify God, and make him so their God, and no other, than he, that will be worshipped by these lies. Ver. 30.

3. Jacobs answer followeth to all these expostulations and charge of Labans. Ver. 31. 32. Wherein is observable a double answer to his charge.

1. Against stealing away Labans heart; or his furtive departure, wherewith Laban accuseth him, he replieth ver. 31. Herein may be noted.

1. His allegation of the just ground for his secret departure. And Jacob answered and said to Laban, because I feared; Cald. same. — The Sept. leave out I feared. Here he renders the very reason of his secret withdrawing as it concerned him with respect to Laban. He might have urged his call from God to return, to stop his mouth, but as to Laban, he replieth, it was his fear that moved him to this concealed flight, under Gods call.

2. His allegation of the reason of his fear, For I said, least thou take away by violence thy daughters from me, or from with me. — Cald. same. — And all my things, or possessions. Sept. These particulars are considerable in the reason of his fear.

1. His own apprehensions, I said, that is, I thought, and reasoned, and determined with my self.

2. The matter of these thoughts, and that was Labans violence, least he should spoil him of his wives, being acquainted with the subtilty and cruelty of Labans dealings before time. This he simply urgeth in apology for himself; which was a just plea as unto him. The Sept. add his goods also, least he might be spoiled of them, but that is not expressed in the Hebr. He sheweth his main care was of his wives, and children, and his fear thereupon least evil should befall them. Ver. 31.

Secondly, Against stealing Labans Gods. Ver. 32. Wherein.

1. His confident concession to him. With whomsoever thou findest thy Gods, let him not live. With whom thy Gods are found, he shall not live before our brethren. Sept. Only this they read in the second place. Hebr. in first. — Let not the place abide, wherein thou shalt find thy God. Cald. 1. The search of all his stuff, for find Laban could not without searching, where they should be.

2. The just doom of death, upon any that should be found guilty of that fact in stealing such things for idolatry; herein he fully voucheth his own innocency and abhorrency of such a fact, but rashly subjecteth others unto danger.

11. His plain honest offer to an arbitration of their brethren, for taking away Labans groundless suspicion, of any wrong that Jacob might do him.

Before our brethren discern thou for thee, what is thine with me, and take it. Cald. same.

— The seventy add, and he knew nothing with him. Herein he offer's.

1. The judges, the men of Labans company, whom he calleth Brethren in kind respect.

2. The trial before them, search, discern, and know thou whatever is with me, that belongs to thee.

3. The judgement, let them determine it for thee, and take it to thee; and let me suffer in judgment.

111. The reason of his confidence, and offer so freely made. But Jacob knew not; that Rachel had stolen them. Rachel his wife, &c. Sept. — Taken them. Cald. Herein Jacobs ignorance of the sin of Rachel causeth him rashly to give her over to death, which he would not have done, but would some other way have purged his family, had he bin conscious unto such a fact. Wherein we may read.

2. For motion, he went up and down from one to the other with much activity.

3. For trial, he handled and felt every thing he suspected; he came, and he went out, he searched or felt, and searched, &c. These four words shew, what a stir he made to find his lost idols.

Ver. 34.

1. Her hiding of them is described. And Rachel had taken the Teraphim & put them in the Camels furniture. Sept. & Cald. to fame. Herein is her first project to conceal her theft.

2. Her posture, when Laban came to search, she sat upon them. Her self by her posture becomes a greater covering.

3. Her pretended excuse to her Father, in which.

Ver. 35.

1. Her petition is discovered. And she said to her Father, let it not be anger in the eyes of my Lord, that I cannot rise up before thee. Cald. same. — Take it not heinously my Lord. Sept. Wherein her theft put's her upon an Hypocritical desire to her Father, to deceive him.

However by this pretence, she elude's her Fathers inquisition, who sought the occasion of hurting innocent Jacob, and of taking occasion of reproaching him.

providence orders her sin at this time to frustrate Labans wicked intentions toward Jacob.

5. The last thing in Labans pursuit of, and contest with Jacob, is Jacobs defence of himself and reproof of him. Ver. 36. to 42. Wherein note.

Ver. 36.

1. Jacobs disposition or frame of spirit in doing what followeth, after Labans search And burning wrath was to Jacob. Jacob was angry. Sept. Cald.

1. The subject is Jacob, a man of much patience formerly, yet now provoked.

2. The passion attributed to him anger, wrath, burning displeasure, which is here spoken of him.

Quest. Was this anger good and lawful in Jacob here?

Ans. It is conceived by some to be so, as arising from that reproof which God gave Laban, which might be a cause of Jacobs displeasure with him also, to be angry where God is angry. Yet by others it is condemned as evil, arising from the sense of Labans crimination, & search which he had made amongst his goods, but it may very well be cast between both, for it was partly good so far as it was on Gods side, and against sin to maintain innocency; and partly evil so far as it looked toward self-injuries, and was grounded upon a mistaken confidence of the innocency of his family, whereas guilt was among the men in stealing, though he knew it not. It seemeth no less to carry something of rashness, to burn in displeasure and expels it to them, that might be provoked to do mischief, as Laban and his company were intended.

2. Jacobs dealing hereupon with Laban And chode with Laban, that is, pleaded; strove, contended with him in angry words out of this heat. Cald. same.

He fought. Sept. That is, with words. It noteth in all the terms, a very hot and sharp dispute, that Jacob now undertakes, after Labans hot pursuit of him, and searching of his stuff. This doubtless was the fruit of his passion, and therefore must carry some mixture of evil and infirmity, though it were fully deserved by Laban. The wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God; something then of failing might be herein.

3. Jacobs defence for himself, which is perfected in these particulars.

1. In quitting himself from the charge of theft. Ver. 36. 37.

2. In minding Laban of the good done by him. Ver. 38. 39.

3. In pleading his hard labours for all. Ver. 40. 41.

4. In charging Labans injustice done and intended. Ver. Part. 41. 42.

5. In producing Gods testimony for him. Ver. 42. The first part of his Apology containeth two heads.

1. His expostulation general with Laban, concerning any fault that he could charge on him, which deserved such a violent pursuit of him. This he offer's in a double question.

1. What is my transgression, or trespass? my unrighteousness? Sept. and Cald.

2. What is my sin? (Sept. and Cald. to same.)

3. The ground of these expostulations, Because or that thou hast hotly pursued or followed after me. Here Jacob expresseth, that Laban did in all heat of heart or spirit, persecute Jacob to revenge himself for pretended injuries; but withal suggest's in his two questions, which are to be resolved negatively, (and unto which Laban could make no reply) that, there was not a fault for twenty years, that Laban could lay to Jacobs charge, for which he should pursue him: some make the first word note sin of omission, and the second sin of commission, and so the meaning to be, that Jacob had neither omitted duty, nor committed evil, which might deserve this persecution. Ver. 36.

2. His expostulation special, whereof occur.

1. The ground of it, Whereas or because thou hast felt at my vessels or my kins old stuff. Sept. and Cald. to same. So Laban had done upon Jacobs offer to clear his own innocency from stealth, and he did it to the purpose, handling and feeling every vessel and piece piece of household stuff that his covetousness could suspect. Hereupon Jacob questions in special.

2. The query itself, What hast thou found of all the vessels or stuff of thy house? Sept. and Cald. same. This question supposeth nothing found, yet put's Laban to it, to consider whether he were able to produce any thing for making good his charge against Jacob for theft.

3. The scope and drift of this question. Set it here before my brethren and thy brethren and let them judge between us two. Convince, &c. Sept. or reprove between us both, whoever is in fault. Cald. as Hebr. This Jacob drives at to clear his innocency before competent witnesses and judges: Wherein he demands.

1. The production of the stolen.

2. He appeal's to judges of his side as his own, such as came with Laban, as well as they who were with himself.

3. He submits to the judgment of all, if he had offended in any thing. Let them reprove and judge me if I have wronged thee, if not, let them justify me and condemn thee. ver. 37.

2. The next head of his Apology, is a mention of all the good he had done for Laban, which little deserved such returns. Wherein note.

1. The term of duration. These twenty years have I bin with thee. Sept. and Cald. same. All these years he spent in the faithful service of Laban, upon what account, it is declared hereafter.

2. The success of these twenty years service set out in three events.

1. The safe production of his cattle according to their kinds. Thy ewes and thy she-goats have not cast their young or bin abortive. Sept. and Cald. same. This was no small mercy, that for Jacobs sake, not an ewe should miscarry for twenty years together.

2. The faithfulness of Jacob in preserving them. And the rams of thy flock I have not eaten. Sept. and Cald. same. That is, Jacob did not devour his flock, but preserve them. Evil shepherds do otherwise, destroy all to enrich themselves. ver. 38.

3. The freeness of Jacob in answering all cross providences, though the Law required it not.

1. In case any of the flock was torn by wild beasts. The torn I brought not to thee, I bore the loss, or made recompence for the fault, or made it good; I bore the punishment of it my self. Sept.

What was wanting of the number, thou requiredst that of me. Cald. This Laban exacted against the law. Exod. 22. 13. And yet this Jacob was content to pay that Laban should be no loser.

2. In case of their being stolen. Of my hand didst thou require it, stolen by day or stolen by night. I bore the loss of thefts by day, and thefts by night. Sept. I kept by day, and kept by night. Cald. In this also, was the cruel exaction of Laban, and yet hereunto the submission of Jacob, to seek the prosperity of Laban. Now all this considered, should Laban return nothing but violence, and evil for good? This was unnatural. Ver. 39.

Ver. 39.

3. The next head of Apology is the hard labour which Jacob underwent for Laban, which was ill required by such an envious and cruel pursuit of him. Hereabout we have to note.

1. The greatness of his labour, set forth here.

Ver. 40.

1. By his day-labour, I was by day, the heat consumed me. So Cald. I was burnt up with the heat of the day. Sept. Two assertions are here.

1. I was in the day, a defective speech, thus supplied, I was feeding; keeping, ordering the flock.

2. The heat consumed me or eat me up, that is, his spirits were wasted, labouring in the sun, sweating out his life; he fat not idle by day.

2. By his night-paines, in two expressions.

1. And the frost in the night consumed me. And with the frost of the night. Sept. The frost fell upon me by night. Cald. Here he sheweth his hard toil to rise in cold frosty nights, and to look to the flocks, enduring the sharpest cold as well as the greatest heat to prosper Laban's flocks.

2. And my sleep fled from mine eyes. So Sept. and Cald. The summe is, that many restless nights he had in caring for Laban's flocks; his solicitousness thereabout, oftentimes broke his sleep; yet all was he willing to undergoe for Laban, little then had he deserved such persecution. V. 40.

Ver. 41.

2. The continuance of his labour thus expressed, This to me were twenty years in thy house. I am, or was in thy house. Sept. I served thee. Cald. This term of years was long, and mentioned Ver. 38.

3. The price of his labour I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle. Sept. and Cald. same. He had not a wife but what he purchased by seven years labour, and so fourteen years he served hardly for them; therefore they were his own; he stole not away Laban's daughters, as charged before, nor had from Laban a sheep, goat, but what he hardly laboured for, and earned.

4. The next head of his defence, is the hard dealings of Laban with him, notwithstanding all this his grievous labour for him, charged on Laban.

1. In respect of time, what he had done. Thus recorded, And thou hast changed my wages sometimes. Cald. same.

Thou hast deceived my wages often lambs. Sept. This injury Laban had done him already, very many times, breaking his bargain, abating his wages as much as he could, and changing them as he thought for the worst still; otherwise change for better were no injury or matter of complaint. Of this was it spoken. Ver. 7. And here he justly urgeth it for his defence in leaving Laban's house. ver. 41.

Ver. 42.

2. In respect of his purpose to undo Jacob utterly if he could, Except the God of my Father, the God of Abraham and the fear of Isaac had bin with me, surely now hadst thou sent me away empty. Sept. to same. And he whom Isaac feared had bin for my help, &c. Cald. All this verse is read by some under, Nisi, as being elliptical and making an apologetis. I am. But no need of it, for the sentences are distinct. This justifieth Jacobs departure, and condemneth Laban for his malicious pursuit. Wherein we have.

1. A supposition, if God had not helped me;

1. The subject of supposition, God, described. (1) The God of his father. (2) The God of Abraham. (3) The fear of Isaac, objective, the God whom Isaac feared, as Cald.

2. The attribute supposed, If he had not bin with me, that is, for my help, to give me my wages; as he did, in making still the cattle of that colour which Laban allowed.

Secondly a position express, Thou hadst now sent me away empty; that is, stript me of all, and sent me away a beggar. This was Laban's spirit.

5. The last thing in his defence, he bringeth in God as a witness for him, which is the strongest of all. My affliction and the labour of my hands God hath seen, and rebuked yesternight, rebuked thee, &c. Sept. My affliction and labour, &c., was manifested before the Lord, &c. Cald. Wherein is.

1. Gods respect to Jacob, God saw, and observed all Jacobs faithful labours, and sorrows endured in Laban's service; and God took notice, so as to preserve, and reward him fully.

2. Gods respect to Laban, he rebuked, and chode him in the night season, and charged him to do no hurt to Jacob; now when God appears blaming Laban, and comforting Jacob. This must needs justify Jacob in all the charge laid on him by Laban. Ver. 42.

3. The last general of the chapter now followeth, which is the covenanting between Laban and Jacob. Wherein we have to consider.

1. The occasion of it, Ver. 43, 44.

2. The making of it with its circumstances, ver. 45 to 53.

3. The consequents of it, ver. 54, 55.

1. The occasion of this Covenant-making is Laban's reply and motion, ver. 43.

44. Wherein.

1. His answer, or reply occurs, And Laban answered and said to Jacob, &c. Sept. and Cald. to same in the whole, about which note.

Ver. 43.

1. The manner of his answer, it is subtil, prevaricating, not one title against anything that Jacob had urged for his own defence; as a man struck in the head, and self convicted, he hath not a word to speak for himself, against what Jacob had pronounced; but waveth all and turneth his speech another way.

2. The matter of his answer taken up. 1. In an arrogant proud assertion painted with dissimulation enough, These daughters are my daughters, &c. All is mine. Wherein.

1. His bragg of propriety.

2. His hypocrisy in owning daughters and children whom he desired to destroy.

3. His iniquity, in making Jacob as if he were beholden to him for all, when it was Gods dowry.

2. In a cunning expostulation with him, And to these my daughters, what shall I do this day, and to their sons which they have brought forth? As if he should say, they are mine, I dare not hurt them, good I would do for them, thus the terror of God and guilt of conscience drive him from his former fury to pretend a little natural affection, which was by sin almost worn out.

Ver. 44.

2. His motion to Jacob therein, And now come let us strike a Covenant, I and thou, and let it be for a witness between me and thee.

See the wolf turned to a fox; being under such restraints by the hand of God, he now will become a Covenanter with Jacob for peace; who was but now a bloody persecutor, yea and is first in the motion of it. This giveth occasion to Jacob of his following work. Ver. 44.

1. The agent, Jacob, the party most injured, yet most ready, to pass by, and to entertain peace and secure it with an injurious man.

2. The work. Whereof is reported.

1. The immediate act, he took a stone, such doubtless as was at hand in the place.

2. The ultimate, which was the end of his taking, And raised it or set it up as a pillar; such was the custom of those times, to have some visible token of mens agreements; the grounds of it are in part mentioned afterward. This seemeth to be set as a middle stone raised up to some height above the rest. Ver. 45.

2. The accessories who assist, about whom note.

Ver. 46. 1. Their invitation to it, And Jacob said to his brethren gather stones. Sept. and Cald. same. As he is first himself, so he incites others toward the work of peace; therefore calleth he them to help as to the visible signal, to erect it.

2. Their action herein, And they took stones and made an heap. Sept. and Cald. to same. ovlaktaw. That is, they gathered stones and built round about the pillar which Jacob erected, to make it stand fast and indure; not to be easily shaken down.

3. The mutual communion kept thereupon the work when it was finished, And they did eat there upon the heap. Sept. Cald. — Eat and drink, Sept. But in relating this, there is a prolepsis, for this was not done until the whole Covenant was finished. Ver. 46.

1. The nomination by Laban, And Laban called it, Jegar-sabadutha, that is, the heap of witness. Sept. and Cald. same. Thus Laban speaketh in the Syrian tongue; though himself was of the family of Heber, yet he turned Syrian in language, as well as Religion and manners.

2. The nomination by Jacob, And Jacob called it Galeed, which notes the same, as before, the heap of witness. — Cald. same. — birds magrov. Sept. Jacob keeps the language of the Church. Ver. 47.

3. The reason of this name given by Laban, And Laban said, this heap is a witness between me and between thee this day, therefore was the name of it called Galeed. Cald. same. — birds magrov. — Sept. Herein note.

1. The proposition of the use of this heap of stones, This heap is a witness, &c. It is a metonymical and sacramental speech, to this sense, this is the signal or token of witness, for indeed God himself properly was witness, as afterward. Now this heap in use was but a signal.

4. The addition of another name to this pillar by Laban, wherein also we have to note.

Ver. 49. 1. The name imposed Mitspah, which signifieth a watch-tower or beacon; now this name also doth Laban leave upon the heap; and in after-times near to this were built two townes, bearing the name of Galeed and Mitspah. Numb. 26. Josh. 13.

2. The reason of this pretended, because he said, the Lord watch between me and thee when we shall be hid, each from his neighbor; that is, one from another. — Cald. same. — And the vision which he spake, the Lord look between me and thee, because we shall depart one from another. Sept. Herein.

1. The fair pretence of a malicious spirit calling in God to fee.

3. The Articles of the Covenant now follow, which are taken up in two heads here expressed.

1. Concerning Labans daughters, which were Jacobs wives; here in we have to consider both the Articles, and the attestation.

1. As touching the articles, we have to note the form of them, they are delivered conditionally, if, and if, which importeth a negative charge, and if Jacob should forget it, no less is laid upon him than Gods animadversion for it.

2. The matter of these Articles are twofold.

1. Against afflicting his wives who were Labans daughters. If thou shalt afflict my daughters, that is, in any kind to grieve or vex them, by carriages unfurtable to an husband; great care Laban would seem now to have of his daughters. — Cald. same. — in tamand. Sept.

2. Against taking any other wife besides them, they surviving, And if thou shalt take wives besides, or unto or over and above my daughters. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein he bind's him from Polygamie, unto which by his wicked designe, he had formerly perwaded him. See the shape of an Hypocrite, great charge's he layeth on others and yet guilty of breaking them himself; great care he had sold as slaves before, yet now he presseth Jacob of whom there was no cause of fear, that he must not wrong them.

2. The attestation by which he presseth this charge, is expressed two wayes.

1. Negatively, There is not a man with me. Sept. and Cald. same. His meaning herein is,

1. There is no man now with us meet to witness, for all were alliance or kindred upon one side and other.

2. There may be none with us when we are parted, to see injuries done to my daughters, and require them; yet let not this work security in doing evil.

2. Affirmatively, See God is witness between me and thee. Sept. same. — That the word of the Lord is witness, &c. Cald. Herein he puts him hard to it.

1. To see & consider & assure himself.

2. God is set against him, if he should break this article. The almighty God is witness, and he will require it, and judg in this case if thou do wrong. Ver. 50.

Ans. God doubtless properly and truly is the only witness, who will see right done; but these stones and heaps are sacramentally or signally witnesses, being set up as visible monuments to keep matters in remembrance.

2. The article itself drawn up mutually.

1. That I will not pass to thee over this heap for harm.

2. And that thou shalt not pass over this heap and this pillar to me for harm, Sept. & Cald. to same. See here the solicitous care of a guilty soul, inculcated for his own safety, he knew what he had done and deserved and fearing retaliation, he is very solicitous, with many words to make himself secure from harm; when alas Jacob had no thought of hurt, and therefore here useth not a word for his own security, but condescend's freely to Labans motion. 2. The power sworn by, is God, whom he stileth the God of Abraham, and he was the same in being as God by whom Jacob sweareth, but falsified in Worship, in that he is called the God of Nahor and Terah, of whom its said by Ioshuah, that they worshipped other Gods. 3. The conclusion of this sad stage now followeth in a more amicable treaty; two events are the issue.

1. Jacobs entertainment, and feasting of Laban and his brethren, wherein, occur to consideration.

Ver. 54. 1. His provision made for them, And Jacob slew a slaughter in the mount, that is, of beasts fit for food. Sacrificed a sacrifice, so Sept. and Cald. where ours read, Jacob offered a sacrifice. But the words used note any common slaughter of beasts for meat, and in this place it is most meetly so taken from the invitation following; which is thought, that Jacob would not invite idolaters to his sacrifice, but only to eat and drink in civil communion. It is likely therefore mutton and kid he did provide. Such as take it for sacrifice, make it to be another confirmation of the Covenant; but this act is not mutual between them, only Jacobs free expression of his kindness to his brethren.

2. His invitation of them, And he called his brethren to eat bread, Cald. same. Sept. read only called.

1. The inviter Jacob, full of affection.

2. The guests, Laban and his company whom he stileth brethren.

3. The invitation, to eat bread, that is, partake of all his provisions made for them. Such return's grace makes to its enemies.

3. Their acceptance and friendly communion, And they did eat bread and lodged all night in the mount. They slept. Sept. and Cald. CHAP. XXXII.

Hither to we have had the history of the Church continued in Jacobs motion from Padan-Aram to mount Gilead, whether Laban pursued him, and where he departed from him. Now it is carried on in his progress unto Canaan. Chapters, 32. 33. 34. 35. Wherein many memorable passages are recorded before he came to Hebron unto his Father. In this present Chapter we have recorded several notable providences, unto his meeting with Esau.

1. His onset from Laban, with the event. Ver. 1. 2.
2. His message to Esau with the answer. Ver. 3. to 8.
3. His refuge by prayer to God. V. 9. to 12.
4. His present prepared and sent to Esau. Ver. 13. to 23.
5. His wrestling with God. Ver. 24. to 32.

Ver. 1. In the first we have to consider.

1. Jacobs motion from Laban, And Jacob went on his way, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The term of connection sheweth this to be immediately coupled with Labans departure, Laban returned and then Jacob went forward in his journey; this therefore might have bin put to the former Chapter, with this first and second verse; the seventh section of the Law beginning at the third verse according to the Hebrewes.

2. His motion, whereabout may be observed.

1. The mover Jacob, now freed from Labans stop.

2. The motion, he walked forward, according to the state of all those parties and retinue which he carried with him.

3. The course wherein he moveth, His way, that is, his as appointed of God, for it was Gods way primarily, he commanded Jacob to return; it was his obedientially as submitting unto God, and directed by him; in this way he goeth on.

2. Jacobs friends that presently mett him, And the Angels of God mett him, — And looking up he saw the camp of God incamping him, and the Angels of God mett him. Septuagint. Cald. as Hebr. Wherein note.

1. The subjects spoken of, Angels of God so called not onely for their office which was to be messengers, as sometimes men are called who are sent of God, or by men, as, ver. 3. But for their nature, they were true Angels ministring spirits, which stand about the throne of God ready at his word to execute his will towards them that are heirs of salvation; these from God are sent now to visit Jacob, after his conflict with Laban, and before his meeting with Esau his brother, of whom he was more afraid.

2. The matter spoken of them, they mett Jacob, they appeared comming towards him, to wait on him, and conduct him in his way, unto which God had called him. The word noteth the falling upon any to kill them sometimes, as Judg. 8. 21. But sometimes to put in by way of intreaty. Gen. 23. 8. Here it must needs be taken for a friendly meeting or falling upon Jacob in his way; such as friends use to express, for comforting and encouraging others in their way. These and God with them do thus go forth to meet Jacob and guide him homeward. Ver. 1.

3. Jacobs sight and judgment of them And Jacob said when he saw them, the Camp of God is this. Sept. same. The host before God are these. Cald. Herein occur to note.

1. Jacobs sight, he saw them, doubtless with his eyes, as going along in his way; and therefore they must needs appear in some visible shape, and it is likely they appeared as an army; horse and foot; horses of fire and charrets of fire, as. 2. Kings. 6. 17. Thus they appeared pitching camp about Jacob in his way.

2. Jacobs judgement passed on them, This is the host of God, here the word is singular. — Afterward it is plural. Now Jacobs judgment upon this unexpected occurrence is according to truth and as it appeared to him, and was found by him. This was one of Gods Armies, by which he defendeth his, and offend's his enemies; and such an host was this; that one of these heavenly Spirits, in a short time dispatched. 185000. Of the Assyrian Army Isa. 27. 36. Yet an Army of these are sent to attend on Jacob.

4. Jacobs memorial which he maketh of this meeting, in leaving a name upon the place. And he called the name of that place Machanaim Machanaim. Camps. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr.

1. The imposer is Jacob, he whom God favored in sending such friends to meet him, he cannot forget such a mercy at such a time.

2. The imposition, an act of gratitude, leaving with the name a memorial of the providence.

3. The name itself imposed Machanaim, which is looked on as in the plural number, noting two hosts or Armies, upon which, vain conceits have bin made by the Jewes; viz. That one army of Angels were tutelaries for Syria, and they brought Jacob so far, and then another host of Angels which were tutelaries for Canaan, mett him, and conveyed him along thither; but this is a meer phansy. Others think, the Angels were one Army, and Jacobs company another; and these made two. But, this Jacob speaks of them that mett him, and by reason of them, and not of himself and his own company. It is more plain and simple that he speaketh plurally, to note the great strength God had sent him, and thereupon to leave a monument of praise. Others conceive, two they might be, either in front or rear, or on left and right side; but no need of any such critical exposition. This became afterward a name of a city where the Priests inhabited, as is presumed about this place. Ios. 21. v. 38. This is not restrained to Jacob but allowed also to the Church of God to have such a guard. Cant. 6. 13. Ver. 2.

D. 4. God with his Angels appears to comfort his, after conflict with their adversaries. Ver. 1.

D. 5. God sometimes affords his visible help unto visible troubles for his Saints support.

D. 6. Gods Angels are Gods mighty host indeed, and that in the judgment of the Saints.

D. 9. It is proper to Gods saved ones, to leave memorials of Gods strength in saving them. Ver. 2.

2. At this second head noted in this Chapter, beginneth the section of the Law, according to the division with the Hebrewes, but is not distinguished with great letters as others be. It is called Vaischlae. From the first word, And he sent; and it is continued to the 37th Chap. According to which division, the two former verses belong to the Chapter foregoing, as indeed they depend upon the matter related therein. But to take it according to its place in this Chap. It is the second head, from the third to the end of the 8th verse. Wherein we are to note.

1. Jacobs mission unto Esau. Ver. 3. 4. 5. Herein first. The party sending, And Ver. 3. Jacob sent. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The terme of connection is to be noted as annexing this act of Jacob to his condition immediately foregoing: Jacob had the Armies of God attending him, and he rejoiced doubtless in their appearance; his faith made his gratulation upon that account, and he was doubtless at present above fears of any dangers that might meet him in his way: immediately now upon this he sends away to Esau; to what purpose will appear hereafter.

2. The subject spoken of is Jacob, accepted with God, & in confederacy with him.

3. His act is a mission, or dispatching an expresse.

Secondly. The parties sent Messengers; מַלְכֵי. — Angels. Hebr. It is the same word as Ver. 1. But here it noteth onely office. Some have vainly therefore conceived, that Jacob sent those Angels of God to Esau; but it is vain.

1. Jacob had no power to send them.

2. Such messengers, if Esau had seen them, would have stoppt his course. It is therefore plain messengers. Cald. — Sept. omitt's the word.

1. These messengers were men, either his servants or friends; such he sendeth.

2. The order of sending them, before his face, that is, before himself to visit Esau; before he come to him.

Thirdly. The party to whom he sends, to Esau his Brother. Sept. and Cald. same. To him from whom twenty years before he fled, who had vowed the death of him, and yet his brother, not onely of the same womb but of the same time; he of whom he bought the birth-right, and from whom he got the blessing; therefore it is rationally conceived he sends to him to feel now his temper.

Fourthly. The place whether he sends them, To the land of Seir, the field of Edom.

— To

Fourthly. The place whether he sends them, To the land of Seir, the field of Edom.

— To

— To the region of Edom, Sept. and Cald. It was the portion of the land that Esau chose, and it was possessed formerly by the Horites, and had its name from Seir the father of them. Seir is called a mountain, some eminent part, and Edom note's the country, or region wherein Seir was, whereof more is to be spoken. Chap. 36. 6. Some think it was called Edom afterward, and here is mentioned by prolepsis.

Quest. how did Jacob know that his brother dwelt there?

Ans. There can rationally be no doubt but that intelligence passed in the compass of twenty years between Syria and Canaan; though all passages are not related; and now Jacob being to pass that way into Canaan, whether of necessity or choice, thither he sends to Esau. Ver. 3.

5. The message which he sendeth his brother by them, and it containeth three special heads.

Ver. 4.

1. He chargeth them to give his due salutation, thus, And he commanded them saying, so shal ye say to my Lord Esau, so saith thy servant Jacob. — Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The power charging. Jacob the master of those messengers, and he sets on his word by command.

2. The charge itself, Say to my Lord Esau, Jacob is thy servant; and saith thus as followeth.

Quest. Was this truly said of Jacob? Or if so, well? Did he not deny Gods oracle?

Ans. Gods oracle was not denied, for.

1. It mainly concerned spiritual dignity, which he giveth not to Esau.

2. As to the temporal it was intended for Jacobs seed, rather than his person. Mal. 1. 2.

3. What Jacob saith, was in truth, honoring Esau in his own earthly peace and territories, which was lawful. He was Lord of Seir though not of Canaan.

2. He commands them to give his declaration to Esau.

1. Concerning the space of his absence. I have sojourned with Laban, and tarried until now. — Sept. and Cald. same. This he declares that Esau might know his being with his uncle, and his long stay there among strangers, with his present desire now to put an end to it, and visit his own kindred, it might also mind him of his sad departure; and after so long a time to move natural bowels. Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

2. Concerning his present state and possessions, And I have ox, and ass, sheep, and servant, and maid servant, Sept. and Cald. plural. — I have oxen and asses &c. As it must be. In summe he saith, he had much wealth; and this not in way of boasting, but to let his brother know, he came not for want to him, onely desired to visit him, and pass by his place onward to his country. So did the seed of Jacob, bespeak the children of Esau, when they came out of Egypt to their own country. Numb. 20. 14, &c.

3. He chargeth them to shew his right intention, And I have sent to tell my Lord to find grace in thine eyes, Cald. same.

To my Lord Esau, that thy servant may find, &c. Sept. In these the end of his message is declared, viz. Brotherly love and to conciliate him, acknowledging his earthly dignity in his place, which God gave him. His end is good to seek peace with all, and keep it; and so under providence to passe safely in his way to his desired place. Ver. 5.

D. 1. Gods appearance to his Saints for help, forbids not reasonable duties to wicked men. From connect.

D. 2. It is just and rational to prevent enraged and wicked men, with real messages of kindness.

D. 3. It's Gods will, that all sorts of men should be duly intreated in their own place. Ver. 3.

D. 4. It's rational that masters give messengers their charge and instructions for their service.

D. 5. It is suitable to Gods will, that Saints who have preeminence in heavenly things, should yet acknowledge Lords below.

D. 6. Long absence, and hard service declared, is a rational ground to persuade tenderness in natural relations. Ver. 4.

D. 7. Saints as they boast not of their own, so they dare not hide Gods blessings.

D. 8. Gods Saints in desiring peace with the world, desire not to be burdensome to them.

D. 9. It is just for Saints to seek peace with the wicked, and to keep it in outward things. Ver. 5. Jacob sues for it from an Esau.

2. The answer of Jacobs messengers; with the issue of it. Wherein we have to note.

1. Their return to him, And the messengers returned to Jacob saying, Sept. and Cald. same. Ver. 6.

same. No difficultie here; it is plain that they whom Jacob sent to Esau, came back from Edom to him again.

2. The account of their business and journey given him. We came to thy brother to Esau, and also he is coming to meet thee and four hundred men with him. Sept. and Cald. same. Two things they give account of.

1. Their accels to Esau, and that doubtless they did their message sent by them in all parts of it.

2. Tidings of Esau's coming with four hundred men and them armed now to meet him; which could not but be somewhat strange and terrible. ver. 6.

Secondly. The issue of this with respect to Jacob, in a double event.

Ver. 7.

1. The stirring of his affection, And Jacob feared greatly, and straight were upon him. Cald. same. — He was in doubts. Sept. Herein though he were a Saint, he sheweth himself a man subject to fear. It is foolish what the Jewes feigne, that he was guilty of Labans idolatry, and his guilt begat his fear, it is evident that Jacob hated his idolatry, however forced to dwell with him; doubtless, former dissensions raised these fears, which were agreeable to mans nature, though he had very great cause by Gods appearance to live above them.

2. The betaking of himself to a prudent action hereupon, And he divided the people that was with him, and the flock and the oxen, & the Camels into two bands, Sept. and Cald. same. This action is prudent to prevent the damage that might be by a military troop, which he heard was coming against him; therefore he so ordered, that he might secure something under Gods providence. Ver. 7.

Ver. 8.

3. The reason of this action thus expressed. And he said, if Esau come to the one company and smite it, then the company which shall remain, shall be for escaping. The second shall be to be saved. Sept. — Cald. to same. Herein we may see.

1. He supposeth Esau to come as an enemy to destroy.

2. Hereupon he casteth that he would be too strong, and smite the first troop.

3. Yet he casteth about under providence to save some, therefore put he them into two troops at a distance, that the danger of the one might be a warning to the other, so judging in his sense and reason, he wisely determin's; though none of these evils came on him, by Gods good hand preventing them. Ver. 8.

D. 6. Fears in Saints are not so violent, but that they rationally provide for their safety under them.

D. 8. Military order in setting troops in place, is not unbecoming Saints. Ver. 7. Genes. 14. 15.

D. 9. Gods armles do not quiet Saints sometimes, when sense worketh on outward danger.

D. 10. Smittings of some by enemies are reasonable warnings for others to escape. Ver. 8.

3. The next head is Jacobs refuge; which he taketh up in God, by prayer. Ver. 9. to 12. Wherein are eminently considerable.

1. The due representation of God, the object of prayer. Ver. 9.

2. The low dejection of himself, the subject of prayer. Ver. 10.

3. The prayer itself, Deliver me. ver. 11.

4. The grounds moving to this are two.

1. His own fear of Esaus cruelty, Ver. 11.

2. Gods Covenant and ingagement. Ver. 12.

In the first, God is eyed by him three ways.

1. In his relation, to his fathers thus, And Jacob said, O God of my father Abraham, O God of my father Isaac, Sept. and Cald. same. Ver. 9.

1. The term of connection here is considerable, it connect's closely faithfull prayer to fear, and recourse to God with mans own care for safety.

2. The way of his apprehending God, as in relation to Abraham and Isaac, his fathers, and truly he is a God gracious and graciously Covenanting with man in them for blessing, it carrieth in it, that name, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. So from relation he is bold to call upon him, Isaac was my father, and the Lord was his God, and Abraham was my father, and the Lord also was his God, and gave them his Covenant, and I am heir to them, even to inherit their God. So if we transfer it to Christ, God is his Father, and we are his, coheirs with him to enjoy all the fathers right for happiness. A sweet apprehension of God in the hour of tentation, and prayer.

2. In his sovereignty over himself, and command upon him, O Jehovah who saidst unto me, return unto thy country and to thy kindred! Run back to the land of thy nativity, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Herein God is set forth.

1. In the name of his being, and as cause of all being, Jehovah, even the name of making good his word. Exod. 6. 2. In the special warrant or word of command which he laid upon Jacob, for his present expedition toward Canaan. Jehovah had commanded him, therefore he eyeth him as not leaving Jacob in his obedience; thou hast bid me go to my fathers house, and wilt thou not go with me? To this purpose is it mentioned in this place.

3. In his promise specially made of God to himself upon obedience to this command, And I will do good or deal well with thee. I will do good to thee, Sept. and Cald. Herein he eyeth God in promise, which prevented this tentation.

1. The weight of the promise, I will do thee good, (1) Privatively, delivering him from evil in his way, that might he intended by men or devils, so God had done already from Laban; so he engageth to do in all his ways. (2) Positively indowing him with all blessing compassing him about with loving kindness and mercies every where in his way.

2. The dependance, it is annexed unto Gods command for obedience; do thou return Jacob as I command, trust me, I will do thee good in every kind. Ver. 9.

D. 6. Special faith evidencing and applying promises is very necessary to effectual prayer in tentation. Ver. 9.

2. Jacobs disposing himself as the subject of prayer is now also to be weighed, wherein occur.

1. His self abasing, I am little beneath all the mercies, and beneath all the truth which thou hast done to thy servant. Let it suffice me from all the righteousness, and all the truth, which thou hast done, Sept. My deserts are less then all mercies and benefits which thou hast done. Cald. Wherein.

1. The subject diminished, Jacob, Gods favorite, heir together with Abraham and Isaac of the same promise, yet he thus emptieth himself, a servant.

2. The things under which he abaseth himself, two.

1. All mercies, viz. Those flowings of Gods goodness and grace to him, ever since he was; choosing him by his oracle, and conveying birthright and blessing on him, with all the abundant favors of which God made him sharer in his life time. The good with the universality is to be conceived, all his bread and clothing, &c.

2. All truth, that is, Gods fidelity in his Covenant and the event of it in making good to Jacob all that he had promised unto Abraham and Isaac. The sure effect of all that truth of God in making him to inherit the blessing is here carried.

3. The term of diminution, it is expressed comparatively, I am little before, or beneath, as more properly, as much as to say, I am less than all; a poor servant of thine, not worth the bread which he eateth, nor the cloths he weareth, less than all mercies and fruits of the promise.

Quest. Was this a true expression, that Jacob was less then all? Was he not better then the beasts, and those things which God gave him?

Ans. In mercy are to be considered.

1. The matter or effect itself, as the blessings of life enjoyed, as bread, &c.

2. The formal part of mercy which is Gods love, and goodness in the event. So Jacob professeth himself, not less than the beasts or bread, but the mercy in it; that which is mercy is far above poor soules, that there can be no deserving it from God, as Cald. Less he was, both in desert and being.

2. The reason of this self humbling is double.

1. Taken

1. Taken from his own poor condition, For with my rod or staff I passed over this Jordan. With this my rod. Sept. I passed alone. Cald. In this expression, he acknowledgeth his own former poverty, his nothingness, having but a staff for his journey, when he was sent from his fathers house to Padan-Aram. He was a poor pilgrim, and went to be a servant. So he remembers his poor and low estate: his passage over this Jordan he mentioneth, either as now seeing it, and pointing at it from some part of mount Gilead: or else calling it now at present in his mind. The whole sheweth, what a poor creature Jacob was, and therefore he could deserve nothing at all from God.

2. Taken from Gods gracious dealing with him at this time. And now I am for two bands or am become two companies, two troops. Cald. same. I am become into two Camps. Sept. This was his present estate by the mercy and truth of God that he came back again to Canaan, full, as Lord of two bands; for so great was his possessions and his company, that they were fain to divide for a more convenient march, and progress in their journey. So he makes his greatness to be from mercy, and himself nothing. ver. 10.

3. The prayer itself now followeth in the entrance of the 11th. Verse, Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau. Cald. same. Septuagint. omit me, questio.

1. His petition is for deliverance, that is, to be prevented by Gods timely help from the evil feared.

1. The matter desired, safety.

2. The subject to be saved, himself and all his with him.

3. The danger whence, cruelty of Esau suspected; expressed twice.

1. From the hand of his brother, an envious one he was, and therefore most wickedly intended.

2. From the hand of Esau, who was a cruel hunter, and had vowed the death of him; a Brother, and a bloody one, now in power, is a terrible danger.

4. The reasons of this prayer moving to it.

1. His fear that was upon him. Because I fear him. Sept. and Cald. same. Whereof a double object.

1. Danger to himself, Least he come and smite me. Sept. same. Cald. omits (me.) Esaus assault and smiting on himself suspected, raised this fear.

2. Danger to all his, least he smite also, the mother upon the children. Sept. and Cald. same, which notes the utmost of cruelty. Hof. 10. 14. Destruction without mercy. ver. 11.

2. His faith in Gods Covenant in two parts futable.

1. Concerning himself, And thou hast said, in doing well I will deal well with thee. So Cald. Sept. Ed. et non.

Wherein he takes hold of the promise of personal security; thou hast promised well to me, therefore deliver me now.

2. Concerning his seed, And I will set thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered, or multitude. Sept. and Cald. same. This promise was made to Jacob, as well as to his fathers. Gen. 28. 14. And now he plead's it; that seeing his children were in danger as well as himself, God would now remember his promise to his seed and save them. Ver. 12.

4. The next general in the Chapter, is Jacobs prudence, after he had intreated God, to attempt the appeasing of his brother by a present, the relation whereof is from ver. 13. to ver. 23. Wherein.

1. The preparation of his present. Ver. 13. 14. 15. And herein we have to note.

1. Jacobs stop after prayer, And he lodged there that same night. And he slept. Sept. and Cald.

1. The term of connection is orderly and to be observed, and then, afterward it is rendered, that is, soon after he commended himself to God by Prayer, having implored his presence and salvation he lieth down.

2. His posture, he lodged, lay down to rest, and slept.

3. The point of time, in that very night, when the messengers brought him tidings of his brothers marching toward him, and he thereupon had poured out his soul to God, in that time he quieted himself and slept.

2. Jacobs work, upon his waking, viz. his setting apart a pacifying gift for Esau, expressed here.

1. Generally, And took of that which came to his hand a Mincab or pacifying present for Esau his brother. Took gifts of what things he brought, Septua. of things which he had in his hand. Cald. Wherein.

1. The subject seeking peace, Jacob, in his faith, and not without his fear, after he had fought God, he applieth himself lawfully to win man, even a cruel man.

2. His act, he took, that is, set apart an dordered.

3. The object or matter, both in the things themselves, such as he had; next at hand, not gold or silver but cattle, and in the formality of it, a Mincab it was, the word is used for an offering to God, for making peace, and here used for a pacifying present unto man.

4. The subject, cul, to whom this is aimed for peace, Esau, Jacobs brother; a violent man, yet not to be slighted by the innocent, under Gods providence. Ver. 13.

2. Specially expressed, Two hundred, &c. Here the matter and number are recorded, which make up the worth of the present, in order thus.

1. Two hundred she-goats, twenty he-goats.

2. Two hundred ewes, twenty rams ver. 14.

3. Thirty milch camels and thirty young ones.

4. Forty cows and ten bulls. — Sept. and Cald. same.

5. Twenty she-asses, and ten he-asses, ver. 15.

In all, the present consisted of 550 head of cattel.

Some think thirty more; if the camels young were thirty more, as is probable; though the numeral term be but once mentioned.

It was a present fit for Jacobs condition; and worthy to be accepted by a Prince. Gods blessing on Jacob; and his bounty to his brother is very observable.

3. The reason of all this, And he said I will appease his face with the present going before me, and afterward I will see his face, peradventure he will accept my face. Sept. and Cald. to same. Where we see his reason is prudential; to deal with a man of blood according to his temper, not without license from God neither.

3. The execution of his orders, Ver. 21. 22. 23. Here.

1. His present is dispatched the same day, And, then, or so, the present passed over before his face. Cald. same.

His gifts, Sept. That is, while he looked on, every drove in it's order passed over the brook afterward mentioned; so he seeth that gon, before he moveth his family to go on in his journey; prudence is in this orderly dispatch.

2. His stop a little hereupon, And he lodged that night in the company. Slept that night in his camp. Sept. and Cald. In the course of the history this was not the night spoken of before, but another, even the next following that day wherein he had dispatched his present. Success in victory in other undertakings. Ver. 25.

2. The other part of the success is Jacobs blessing obtained at last, in the description whereof note,

Ver. 25. 1. The combatants yielding and desire of distinction, And he said, let me goe for the morning riseth. Sept. and Cald. to the same, note here.

1. His request, And he said let me goe.

1. The petitioner, the party vanquished, God wrestling with Jacob as a man; who had pinched him in his hip, and shaken him in his faith; put him to distress, & grieved him; yet he is ready to give over first.

2. The desire itself, let me go, send me away, I will wrestle no more with you, you are too strong, set me loose now. It is conceived by some, that those expressions in the Prophet, He wept and made supplication to him, were the Angels words to Jacob; and if so, they shew the prowess of Jacob, the yielding of God very much unto him; but, these words are not so proper to the Angel, but belonging to Jacob. Yet here is a very great condescension, that God should intreat a poor creature to let him alone. Exod. 32. 10. So grace doth at last to the tempted, yield to them as overcome by them.

2. The reason of his desire, For the morning riseth.

Quest. Why should the Angel, or God give over for the approach of the day?

Ans. 1. It may be conceived, that God would not be discovered to any, but Jacob at this time, in his present appearance. 2. The morning is the time for escaping out of temptation. 3. God was resolved that Jacob should go out conquerour with the day. All this is of grace also.

2. Jacobs refusal or holding out against him, And he said, I will not let thee goe, except thou blest me. Sept. and Cald. to same.

1. The party refusing, poor tempted Jacob, yet mightily believing.

2. His peremptory holding of God by faith and strength of arm; go thou shalt not, thou hast lamed me, and pushed hardly at me, but yet I will hold thee, though thou kill me.

3. The reason of his confidence, and stiff keeping of God, who he now perceived was in the lists with him; he would wrestle out a blessing before he give over, though he strive in the day for it, as well as in the night. Blessing doubtless here is the confirmation of all the promises to him, and the present comfort and reviving of his Spirit against those further fears which were like to meet with him. Ver. 26.

D. 5. The morning of Gods love endeth the wrestlings of the night.

D. 6. Faith holds God to it in the hardest trials.

D. 7. Faith shrinks not for a pinch on the thigh for discouragements by sense in the hour of temptation.

D. 8. Blessing, faith will have from God in all temptations or it will not leave him. Ver. 26.

3. Gods expostulation with Jacob about his name. Ver. 27. And he said unto him, what is thy name? And he said Jacob. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The inquisitor is God, who asketh of his Antagonist his name.

2. The replier is Jacob, who giveth his name readily.

Quest. Why doth God inquire after his name?

Ans. 1. Not from an ignorance of it, for providence ordered him that name. 2. To mind Jacob, what he was before under this name.

3. To take occasion this way to change his name, and make known his blessing thereby.

4. Gods actual blessing of him in the alteration of the name, wherein we have to note.

1. The change of name.

2. The reason of it. The former is expressed.

1. Negatively, And he said, thy name shall not be called Jacob any more. Sept. and Cald. same.

2. Affirmatively, But Israel shall thy name be called. So Sept. and Cald.

Quest. Was he not called Jacob afterwards?

Ans. Yea doubtless, therefore we must understand.

1. That this name notes Jacobs condition under it, now that is as expressed, he was accounted a supplanter of his brother, when he took him by the heel, but then could not prevail; now faith God it shall be no more so with thee, to be so accounted a weak supplanter.

2. If we take it of the name itself, it must must not be understood simply, that he should not be called Jacob, but not so much in use. Some conceive therefore that Jacob is mostly used in the Prophets to note the Church in a low condition. Psa. 44. 4. Jer. 30. 7.

Quest. What is carried in this new name Israel?

Ans. 1. A sure evidence of his present victory over God.

2. A full indowment with it to be overcoming temptation still. God gives no empty names.

3. A sweet assurance of his prevailing over his brother Esau.

2. The reason of this name imposed, For as a Prince thou hast bin with God and with men, and hast prevailed. Thou hast power with God and art mighty with men, Sept. ——— For thou art a Prince before God, and shalt prevail with men. Cald. This reason may be.

1. From that past, that Jacob had got victory over God and Laban.

2. From the state of Jacob present, and that was a mighty wrestler in faith against temptation.

3. From that which was to come, in his conflict with tears about Esau, &c. Wherein God honours him for his past victories, and encourageth him for time to come. Ver. 28.

Ver. 29. 5. Jacobs inquisition more narrowly after his Antagonist, And Jacob asked, and said, shew me, I pray thee, thy name. So Sept. and Cald.

1. The inquisitor is Jacob.

2. The matter of inquisition, the name of God, the Wrestler with him, to be made known.

3. The form of inquisition, however humble, yet was it too curious, as appeareth by the answer taking him of from such inquiries.

6. Gods close with Jacob.

1. Curbing his inquiry, Wherefore is it, that thou dost ask after my name? Sept. and Cald. same. This question stops Jacobs further inquisition. No more of that now, Jacob; you have seen and felt enough of me now; my name is not now further to be known.

2. Blessing him, And he blessed him there. So Sept. and Cald. Here is the sweet close of all this wrestling, God blesteth Jacob though he pinch him, and sends him away with it as a lawrel on his head. The compass of this blessing, doubtless, was not only confirmation of him against fears of his brother, but the securing of all good in Gods Covenant temporal and eternal. ver. 29.

3. The last particular observable about Jacobs wrestling is the use made of all in the issue, and that is twofold.

1. By Jacob himself, which is thanksgiving unto God, and making a gratulatory memorial of the providence which met with him in that place. Ver. 30. 31. Wherein we have to note.

1. The monument itself, which was the new name imposed on the place. And Jacob called the name of the place Peniel. Cald. same. ——— Of that place. Eisd. 1. Sept. No difficulty in the terms.

1. The imposer is Jacob, having bin by grace tempted and made victorious.

2. The name imposed, The face of God, of El.

Ggg

3. The

3. The imposition is an act of worship, expressing his thankfulness unto God; he nameth it not Israel by his own name given him, but Peniel, as if he should say, it is the face of almighty God, and his favour to meet me in this place, and to wrestle with me, and blest me: So Jacob transferred's all to Gods grace, or the light of his countenance: it is called Peniel also in the next verse; the Seventy read, the shape of God. So Jacob named some mercies before, Bethel and Mahanaim. Gen. 28.

2. The reason of this name imposed, twofold.

1. His vision of God, Because I have seen God face to face. Sept. and Cald. same. This is the denominating reason, as to the name of the place, wherein occur as observable.

1. The subject of this privilege, poor Jacob. I have seen; I less than the least of mercies, I tempted, I hardly put to it, and pinched, yet I.

2. The privileged itself, I have seen Elohim face to face.

1. The privilege is sight or discovery of God, Jacob saw, that is, had sensible experience of Gods apparition to him; for at this time it was an apparition to sense, and yet in grace also; wherein faith had its proper and powerful work.

2. The manner of this privilege, face to face, which was a special way of appearance to him, full of grace, to humble him, and yet make him conqueror.

Quest. How could Jacob say, that he saw God face to face, seeing the old Testament-discovery was but dark, and the N. Testament face to face?

Ans. The answer may be.

1. That the phrase of seeing face to face as it notes clearness of discovery, is to be understood.

1. Secundum quid, in some respect, & that, as compared with Jacobs time, and theirs of the old Testament, who had such privileges; face to face noteth a clearer discovery of God to them, than to any other of their time.

2. As compared with Gospel times wherein God speaketh by his own son unto men; so it truly said we see God with open face, when they saw him but darkly.

3. As compared to the last dayes revelation of God, when we shall see him as he is; in which respect the Apostle saith that Christians see but darkly in a glass, in comparison to what they shall see of God hereafter. Now Jacobs sight was face to face, that is, far clearer than any other had of God in their time. Again, the sight of God may be considered.

1. As taken by sense, such was Jacobs, and so might be more clear then ours at this day, when God vouchsafeth not such appearances.

2. As taken by faith from his will revealed by his Son manifested in the flesh; So we see God with open face more than Jacob.

2. The other reason is his own safety, And my soul is delivered. Is saved. Sept. and Cald. That is, from death, and being swallowed up by Gods glory.

Quest. How could Jacobs soul be in danger? Did not Gods face give life and salvation?

Ans. For answer, we must know, that this was not onely Jacobs fear, but many others of the Saints in that time, and succeeding; as of Gideon & Manoah. Jud. 6. 22. Cha. 13. 22.

Gods appearance therefore is twofold.

1. To fight, and so if God should let out himself to creatures, no man could see his face and live, as he told Moses. Exod. 33. 19.

2. To faith, as he revealeth himself in his word to be gracious to whom he will, and so his appearances give life. Jacob spake of the former, which the Angels cannot indure. Ver. 30.

3. The events consequent which are two.

1. The sun-rising on him, And the sun arose upon him as he passed over Peniel. When the face of God passed away. Sept. Cald. ver. 32. as Hebr.

1. This is not onely to note the time of the day, but a special signal to Jacob of further comfort; which is, that God made the very sun that morning to arise for special comfort unto Jacob, that however he had a conflict sharp enough and sorrow in the night, yet the morning should revive him; therefore is it noted specially, that it did not onely arise unto the world, but it arose upon him, as if it were only, for his comfort that day.

2. The very motion of Jacob, hath some interest in this mercy, he was even then passing over Peniel, that is, the brook Labbok, over which he had conveyed his family before; and the sun cheareth him in his way.

2. His own halting upon his former dis-joynting, when he wrestled, And he halted upon his thigh. Sept. and Cald. same. This note's the signal of his conflict, and taught him humility in his victory. How long thus he halted is not revealed; but it is probable that his halting appeared not as a deformity, when he met Eſau. Onely God made him carry the mark of grace in his halting; as he doth to his Saints in their afflictions. Ver. 31.

Ver. 23.

1. Their practise, Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the sinew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day. Of the sinew which withered. Sept. and Cald.

1. The subject, the sonnes of Jacob in the flesh.

2. The practical use of Jacobs halting, was hereupon not to eat of any part of the thigh of any beast, which was so near to that member hurt in Jacob.

3. The continuance of it, even to the day of Moses, yea and no less do the Jewes observe it to this day.

2. The reason of such practise, Because he touched the hollow of Jacobs thigh in the sinew that shrank. The breadth of Jacobs thigh, &c. Sept. and Cald. Gods act upon Jacob, is the occasion of this practise with Israel, that they looked on that place in all beasts, as unclean or accursed, that might not be eaten.

Quest. Was this practise of theirs lawful and justly gathered from Gods hurting Jacobs thigh?

Ans. The judgments of interpreters are divided about this.

1. Some think it was Gods command to Jacob, and therefore his to his children.

2. Others conceive it a voluntary observation of men without any warrant from God, which grew into great superstition in after-times.

3. Of the rise of this there is no express mention; onely here we read of the occasion, whereupon the Israelites are said to put this in practise. It seemeth therefore rather to be the invention of some after-ages, and the institution from this history, than any ordinance of God to them: for however some abstinence from creatures were enjoined under that pedagogic of Moses, yet of this there is no mention; so that more probably it was a voluntary observation of some foolish adorers of antiquity; as was also that of Jacobs well: Muscul. Iohn. 4. Ver. 32.

CHAP. XXXIII.

Hitherto we have heard the providence of God towards the constitution of his Church, Jacobs family, even unto his return from Padan-Aram, and his approach to the borders of the promised land; this Chapter giveth us an account of such providences as were manifested at his meeting with Eſau: the blessing whereof accrued to the Church, then in it's infancy of gathering.

In the whole two general heads are considerable, first the history of the meeting of these brethren. Ver. 1. to 15.

Secondly, the history of their parting and sitting down, ver. 16. to 20.

In the former we have recorded more specially.

1. Jacobs discovery of Eſau.

2. His prudent ordering his family, Ver. 1. 2.

3. His man-like march in the front. Ver. 3.

4. Their mutual meeting and embracing. Ver. 4. 5.

5. Their conference together in many things. Ver. 5. to 15.

First, Jacobs discovery of Eſau is thus expressed, And Jacob lifted up his eyes, and saw, and behold Eſau came, and with him four hundred men. Sept. and Cald. same. No difficulty is here in the terms.

1. The order of the history is carried in the term of connection. (1) Which may be here Ggg 2 a note a note of time and order. Then, after he had passed Peniel, and overtaken his family and had bin comforted by God with a blessing, shortly after, or thereupon, going forward, he looketh before him.

2. The matter related, is a new brunt of trial in the discovery of Esau, and with him four hundred men: such a sight must needs affect Jacob, and put him now upon preparations to break thorough. Though God had honored and comforted him, and promised prevalence over men, which faith might evidence to that establishing of his Spirit; yet the sight of an army might put nature to work, by feare and passion; thus may we suppose it to be with Jacob, between hope and fear, from faith and sense; he faint's not at the sight, but in prudence ordereth his affairs, to best advantage. He saw his five droves past Esau without hurt, and faith evidenced the face of God; therefore he was not daunted at the sight, but proceed's.

2. Jacobs disposing of his family, wherein note.

Ver. 3.

1. He gives to each their charge, And he divided the children unto Leah, and unto Rachel, and unto the two handmaids. — Sept. and Cald. same. The sense is plain, he gave to Leah her children in charge, and to Rachel hers, and to the handmaids their children, which they had born to him, to each their own. Ver. 1.

2. He appoints their order in motion, And he put the handmaids and their children foremost, and Leah and her children after, and Rachel and Joseph hindmost. —

Firſt. — After. — Last, Sept. — Concubins and their sons in the head, before, Cald. This order might be partly prudential, and partly affectionate, setting that last which he loved best, and so placing them for more safety; or that Esau might know each by themselves, and his Rachel and Joseph especially. Ver. 2.

3. Jacobs leading in the front, wherein we read.

1. His action as to his family, And he passed over before them. — Went before them, Sept. and Cald.

1. The subject of motion, Jacob, an husband, father and governor.

2. His motion, he went on his way, he retreated not.

3. His order, he went first and in the head of his family, either to keep of harm, or procure favour for them all.

2. His action upon his approach to Esau, And he bowed himself to the ground, severall times, until he came neer to his brother — Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The subject, Jacob, who had victory with God.

2. The action, bowed himself by way of reverence and acknowledging subjection, he bowed to the ground even to prostration.

3 The object, Esau his brother whom

Gods oracle declared to be servant unto him.

4. The iteration of this reverence, seven times. It may be a certain number put for uncertain; yet it may be also that number was observed in those parts, as three times bowing with us, but often he did bow and express reverence.

Quest. How could this stand with the truth of Gods oracle?

Ans. Very well; for,

1. That mainly aimed at Spiritual dignity.

2. It concerned more their seed than their persons.

3. It was an acknowledgement of Esau in his own territories, not in the land of promise, which was Jacobs. And this was well consistent with the oracle. Ver. 3.

D. 11. Victory with God take's not away humility to men.

D. 12. Multiplied reverence is but but needful to procure benevolence from Esau. Ver. 3.

4. The next particular is their mutual congress or meeting. Wherein we have to note.

1. Esau's actions, which are these considerable in him.

Ver. 4.

1. His speed, And Esau ran to meet him. Sept. and Cald. same. Not to hurt him, as we shall see, but God so turned his heart, that he who was glad of his departure, run's to meet him at his return.

2. His embracing him, And he embraced or hugged him. He took him about. Sept. Cald. An expression of closing of mind and heart with him; he clasped him in his arms.

3. His further expression of love, And he set on his neck. (Sept. and Cald. same.) An action of an indulgent brother, as it was of Joseph to his; bowels seem to be melted.

4. His larger discovery of kindness to him, And he kissed him; the Sept. puts this before the former. — Cald. as Hebr. This naturally is the token of dear respect of Fathers to children and brother to brother. Critics note this word extraordinarily pointed, noting much love.

2. Their mutual action each to other, And they wept; both wept. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Here nature works in both, hearts melting toward each other; grudgings are laid aside, and tender bowels now taken up by Esau to poor Jacob, which he cannot but answer with the like. Ver. 4.

D. 5. Where greatest danger is feared, God turns it to greatest love.

D. 6. It is natural for brethren good and bad, to melt in tears upon providential turns and meetings. Ver. 4.

5. The last thing considerable in this meeting is the conference between Esau and Jacob, which, as here related, was upon 3. heads.

1. Concerning his family. ver. 5. 6. 7.
2. Concerning his present state ver. 8. to 11.

3. Concerning his journey. Ver. 12. to 15. In the first of these we have to observe these particulars.

1. Esau's question concerning his company, And he lifted up his eyes, and saw the women and the children, and said, who are these to thee? Cald. same. — What are these unto thee? Sept. reading וְהָיָה for וְהָיָה. Note herein.

Ver. 5.

1. The occasion of his question, the sight of the women and children, upon whom it is probable after the embracing of his brother he looked with a courteous and favorable eye.

2. The question itself, when he saw these women and children following Jacob, though he might conceive that they belonged unto Jacob, yet he knew not in what relation they stood; therefore he inquireth who are these unto thee? that is, in what relation stand they unto thee? This the reply supposeth.

2. Jacobs answer to him, And he said, the children, which God hath graciously given to thy servant. The children, wherein God hath had mercy on thy servant. Sept. — Hath given, &c. Cald. Wherein.

1. The relation acknowledged, they are my children, born of these mothers.

2. The mercy acknowledged, God hath graciously given me them, or in mercy bestowed them: here his piety is professed to God before his brother.

3. His humility still expressed towards Esau, naming himself his servant. So answereth he truly to the querie, piously to God, and humbly to his brother. Ver. 5.

3. The orderly address of them all towards Esau.

1. And the handmaids came neer, they and their children, and bowed themselves. — Ver. 6. Cald. same. — And worshipped, Sept. They did obeisance respectively. (1) The accels. (2) The reverence noted in all. ver. 6.

2. And Leah also came neer and her children, and they bowed themselves. — Ver. 7.

Worshipped, Sept. Here is the second address as Jacob had set them, of whom is reported (1) Their approach, (2) Their obeisance.

3. And after Joseph came neer and Rachel, and they bowed themselves. — Cald. same. — Rachel and Joseph, and worshipped, Sept. All this doubtless was acted by Jacobs order, to make his family orderly to humble themselves, as himself had given example. The address and the end of it with respect to Esau is here only mentioned; that he might have no offence from Jacob or from his. Ver. 7.

2. The next part of their conference is about the present, sent before by Jacob, and met by Esau. Wherein.

Ver. 8.

1. Esaus question about it, And he said, what is all this troop, to thee which I meet? Cald. same. What are all these to thee? All these bands, &c. Sept.

1. The inquisitor here, is Esau.

2. The question for the matter of it was about the several parcells of the present which Jacob sent by his servants unto Esau.

3. The scope of the querie, was not to know what he knew, that they were Jacobs, but to know his meaning offending such a present to him. So it is well read, What meanest thou by these?

2. Jacobs answer, wherein he plainly satisfieth his brother of his intent therein, And he said to find grace in the eyes of my Lord. Cald. same. That thy servant may find grace in thy sight, Sept.

1. The answerer is Jacob.

2. The answer, the plain truth, it was to express Jacobs respect to Esau, and to gain favour with him at his return. Such tokens of love are rationally useful to engage affection, love to work love. Ver. 8.

Ver. 9.

3. Esaus reply to him hereupon, And

Esau said, much is to me my brother, let be to thee, which is with thee or thine.

Sept. same. Many things. Much good do thee what is thine. Cald. Where.

1. The replier, Esau, the first inquirer.

2. The reply, not of pride or scorn, or undervaluing, but of a free natural spirit; not desiring to take from his brother that which was his, having enough of his own; he was not of that covetous Spirit as Laban was. These moral qualifications are herein set out.

1. Modestly in refusing what he needed not.

2. Contentation with his own.

3. Freeness of Spirit in desiring others also to enjoy theirs. Ver. 9.

4. Jacobs instance yet upon him. Wherein are observable.

1. His vehemency in pressing this on Esau, in these expressions.

shine eyes, then take my present from my hand. Take the gifts by my hands. Sept. Cald. Here we have.

1. Supplication to accept.

2. Ingagement, If I have, &c.

2. Takes I pray thee, my blessing, which is brought unto thee. My blessing. Sept. — My gift. Cald. Herein appears.

1. Earnestness.

2. Humility.

3. Freeness and goodness, they were blessings where-with God had blessed Jacob, and wherewith he desired to bless his brother.

3. And he was urgent on him, or forced it upon him. Cald. same.

1. Isidore Sept. In summe. By all importunity he pressed his brother to accept his present. This Moses relates of him.

2. His reasons of this instance of his, which are two.

1. The good which he had found from Esau, that might makethus much pressing For therefore I have seen thy face, as though I had seen the face of God, and thou wast pleased with me. As if one seeth the face of God, and thou shalt bless me. Sept.

As if I had seen the face of Princes, &c. Cald. In summe, Esaus kind respects and unexpected favour kindled this flame of love in Jacob to make him so urgent with him. That Esau should fall upon his neck and kiss him, from whom he expected the most cruel usage, this enlargeth Jacobs heart.

Quest. But how doth Jacob say, that he saw his face as the face of God, Did not this lessen God, and heighten Esau.

Answ. 1. The phrase is common with the Hebrewes to express any matters of eminency by the name of God; so it is no more but that he found great favour with him.

2. Yet

2. Yet if God be taken properly, the sense may be, that Jacob saw Gods face in Esau's, that is, Gods favour in turning the heart of Esau to him. No lessening of Gods glory is herein, but he ascribed all to him.

2. The good which himself had received from God, whereof.

Ver. 11.

1. The cause is recorded, Because God hath bin gracious to me, God hath shewed me mercy. Sept. and Cald. The summe is, God hath graciously dealt with me, and should I not express somewhat to thee?

2. The effect which came to Jacob hence, And because all things are to me, or I have all things. Sept. and Cald. same. Esau had much and that which sufficed him, but Jacob had all; therefore he urgeth his brother to take his blessing.

3. The issue of this conference is Esaus acceptance, And he took it. (Sept. and Cald. same) That is, he yeilded to his brother Jacobs importunity, and accepted his pacifying present or blessing. Ver. 10, 11.

D. 18. Brotherly conference is the way of winning upon men of bad spirits. All this between Jacob and Esau, is by loving parly. Ver. 11.

3. The next head of conference is about their journey, wherein occur observable.

Ver. 12.

1. Esaus profer the first time, And he said, let us journey and go, and I will go before thee. Lifting up (i. e. our feet) let us go on straight way, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Note

1. Esaus readiness of reply when Jacob had bin so urgent with him and had overcome him with kindness, he labours to return good for good and now invites him to his own place, as it appeareth by Jacobs answer: and herein, not to hinder Jacob any longer in his way, he moveth.

1. For an onset, let us set forward or journey along, willing to help his brother forward in his way.

2. For a sociable travelling, let us goe, that is move on, the right way, as Sept. Which seemeth to be to Seir.

3. For himself to be the guide and leader, I will go before thee; as a leader in the way and protector in the same. Ver. 12.

2. Jacobs return to this offer by way of modest refusal, wherein we may observe.

1. His preface by way of apologie, wherein he offers to Esau, some considerations well known to him, wherein note.

1. His continued appellation, my Lord; he he still continueth reverential expressions.

2. The matters of his refusal of his brothers offer, subjected to his cognifance. My Lord knoweth.

1. That the children are tender. —

More tender or very tender. — אֲנֹכְהֶם. Sept. The eldest not six years old.

above 13 years of age, the yongest about

2. And the flocks, and the herds (the sheep and the kine) with yong are with me.

Sept. same. — Giving suck,

Cald. These also were part of Jacobs care, and Esau saw them with him.

3. And they wil over-drive them, or knock them on, in one day. — If therefore I should pursue them one day, Sept. — If they should weary them in one day, Cald.

The summe is, that Esau knew to keep a sociable peace with him, they must needs drive hard, or els keep him to his prejudice perhaps to go fo softly with them.

4. And all the sheep will dy. — All cattel, Sept. — Cald. same. Hebr.

Esau knew this also, that it would be no less than danger of death to the flocks to keep company with him, Ver. 13.

2. These things premised, now he maketh his prayer, Let my Lord, I pray thee, pass over before his servant. — Let him goe before, &c. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. In summe his prayer is, that Esau would go before and keep on his pace, without any further staying for him and his troop upon so slow a march, that he could make. It is but a reasonable request as things really stood with Jacob at this time.

3. Jacobs promise, And I will lead on softly, to the foot of the work which is before me, and to the foot of the children until I come to my Lord to Seir. — And I shall prevail in the way according to the leasure of the going before me, and according to the foot of the little children, &c. Sept. — According to the going of the family, &c.

Cald. Wherein.

1. He resolveth to have respect in his movings to his family, children and cattle according to their severall capacities: not to overdrive them, but deal as a good shepherd and a tender father with them.

2. He promiseth for himself to come to Seir, and so accept of his kind profer.

Quest. Was this excuse of Jacob real, and not rather pretended having no mind further to trust Esau?

Ans. It is thought by some, to carry some such frivolous pretence, and a kind of an officious lye; but there is no clear reason for such a conjecture;

and besides, it is uncharitable to charge sinnes upon the Saints, which are not charged by God. Moreover, all that Jacob saith was true, and a very reasonable cause of his modest refusing to march after Esaus going.

Quest. Did he not dissemble in promising to goe to Seir and went not?

Ans. 1. A man may really purpose and promise, that which God will not let him doe.

2. It is no where said that Jacob did not go to Seir, though all his family and stuff were pitched in another place.

3. It is most probable that Jacob himself did go to Seir, though it be not here written: Or if he did not, upon other intimations from God, it was not lying nor falsehood to be charged on him: Ver. 14.

otherwise, but that his brother desired to leave them for a guard.

4. Jacobs reply to this also, And he said, wherefore is this? Let me find grace in the eyes of my Lord. Cald. same. — It is sufficient, that I have found grace, &c. Sept. Note herein.

1. A modest refusal, because there was no need. Wherefore should it be so, seeing it is troublesome to you and needless to me?

2. An humble desire, let me find grace, that is, let my desire be granted, and leave none, which will be a token of grace to thy servant; and herewith he satisfieth Esau from any further urgency.

Quest. Why did Jacob refuse this company?

Ans. 1. He had now neer finished his journey.

2. Gods armies with him and providence over him was better.

1. Esaus motion is related, And Esau returned on that day for his way to Seir. Sept. & Cald. same. Here is a short relation of Esaus parting from Jacob; wherein.

1. The connection. (1) Which knits this unto Jacobs humble excuse, he desired his brother neither to trouble himself nor his company, as to stay for him, so Esau was intreated; and he takes his leave.

2. The act related, his departure, wherein.

1. The subject, Esau reconciled, pacified and changed.

2. His motion, returned with his company.

3. The time, that very day.

4. The way he take's, that which led to his home.

5. The term intended; Seir his own place. In these nothing is obscure, only the providence of God to Jacob is herein sweetly manifested, to remove his fears and quiet his heart, Esau meet's with him kindly, and parts with him again in much love. Ver. 16.

2. Jacobs motion is here recorded, which is twofold.

1. To Succoth whereabout three things are spoken.

1. His motion to it, And Jacob journeyed to Succoth. Departed to Tabernacles. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. Here.

1. The subject, Jacob freed of his fears, upon Esaus meeting and parting.

2. The motion, he journeyed, or marched on, with all his retinue.

3. The term of motion or first stage, Succoth; not so called before Jacob came now thither, but so stiled in the dayes of Moses who wrote this; yet by way of anticipation is it related, for the reason of the name is afterwards given.

2. His work at this stage, And he built for himself an house, and, or his cattel he made booths. Houses. Sept. — Shaddowing places, hovels, Cald. Here.

1. His provision for himself wife and children, he raised and built little cottages, for his present necessity, after a long journey.

2. His provision for his cattel, he made booths or hovels to shelter them; such as were fit to be within doors.

3. The original of naming this place; Therefore he called the name of the place Succoth. Cald. same. — Booths. Sept.

This was the first naming of the place, from Jacobs pitching and building tabernacles on it. Whether Jacobs motion hither were a breach of promise to his brother, I have given resolution before; no more need's to this. Ver. 17.

2. His motion to his second stage, wherein note.

1. The motion itself, and therein.

1. The mover Jacob, rising now from Succoth, where it is probable he was streitened; how long he staid there is not revealed; but conceived by some about a year and half.

2. The term of his motion, He came to Shalem a city of Shechem which is in the land of Canaan, in his coming from Padan-Aram. When he came from Melopotamia of Syria. Sept. — Came safe. Cald. A difference there is among interpreters about this word Shalem, whether it be a proper name or a common adjunct. Some read, Jacob came safe or in peace to the city of Shechem, which they make the name of it from the chief therein. Plan. Lubb. Jun. Answ. Others make Shalem a proper name of that city where Shechem Hamors son lived. The matter is not of that moment, but either may be received without loss of faith; they that understand it a proper name, make two names of the same place; and if Shalem be the name, it is not that which was Jerusalem, but that Salem where John baptised. Joh. 3. 23. Fourty miles distant, as is said by some. They that make it appellative or common, read, Jacob came in safety, he and his unto the city of Shechem; rational are both; but by most is it taken as the proper name of the place. This is said to be in the land of Canaan, and to be the second stage of Jacob in his coming from Padan-Aram to his own country.

Secondly, His pitching there, And he encamped before the city, or pitched tent. Sept. same. — And he abode before the city. Cald. In summe, there he set is station, over against the city for some time of abode, after he had made his purchase; until God called him to Bethell; upon some sad afflictions befalling him there about his daughter Dinah. Ver. 18.

3. His purchase, And he bought a parcel of a field, wherein he stretched out his tent at the hand of the sons of Hamor the Father of Shechem, for an hundred lambs. Of Emor the Father of Shechem. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. In which history may be noted.

1. The purchaser; Jacob, heir of the land in promise.

2. The purchase itself, a peece of ground, for a cottage and the pitching of a tent, which was no great thing.

3. The owners, the sonnes of Hamor Shechems father, these are the sellers of it.

4. The price, which was an hundred lambs, or sheep as some read, an hundred peeces of money with a lamb stamp on them; as we say, a hundred Angels, by the reason of the stamp, which was the signal of ten shillings: whether be here understood, it will make no great difference; if money, the value was then known; if lambs or sheep, the price may be guessed not to be great. Iol. 24. 32. Iob. 42. 11.

Ver. 19.

4. His special care of religion, when once he had a house; he now provides to worship as did Abraham his father before him, And he set up there an altar, and called it, El-Elohe-Israel. And he called upon the God of Israel. Sept. — & sacrificed upon it before the most mighty God of Israel. Cald. Herein we may note.

1. His constitution, it was of an altar.

1. His work, he made to stand, So Heb and Sept.

2. The matter of his establishment, an Altar, one only, the type of Christ. Ver. 20.

3. The place, there, even in Shechem. In this place did Abraham build an Altar to the Lord; and it is not said that Jacob built one here, but he established or made to stand, or repaired, that Altar which Abraham built; that which is considerable.

1. His appellation, He called it, God the God of Israel.

1. The imposer Jacob, whose name was now Israel.

2. The name imposed, which is metonymical, The God, &c. That is, the Altar of God, the mighty God of Israel, so Jim. well; by Sept. and Cald. This notes the medium of invocation, and sacrifice to God; this is evident that he doth it.

1. By way of monumental commemoration of what God had done for him, in changing his name to Israel.

2. By way of adoration & worshipping God aright in his family opposit to the Shechemites.

3. By way of commendation of the true religion, and altar-worship unto posterity: Brutish is the Popish collection hence, to name their images God; this wickedness never came into Jacobs heart, to conceive the Altar to be God.

Quest. Did not Jacob undervalue his right right from God to buy of them the ground, which God gave him by promise?

Ver. 19.

Answ. No, for 1. He had it now only in promise, and so had jus ad rem, not in re. 2. The time of possession was not come, but determined by God. 3. He kept Gods command in doing right, and buying rather to take it otherwise for present; and it was but a little space for a cottage; as Abraham bought enough for a grave.

Quest. How can this be true, that Jacob bought this parcel of land, when Stephen saith it was bought by Abraham? Acts. 7. 16.

Answ. This relation of Stephen, hath wrought much trouble to many how to reconcile it; seeing we read not of any purchase of Abraham, but only what he made of a burying place, and that was of Ephron. Gen. 23. It is therefore answered by most, that it was a slip of some scribe in writing Abraham for Jacob; which however God may permit, without just ground of suspecting the truth of scripture, yet it were good to remove this stumbling block more out of the way. I shall only offer this to consideration, why might not this be bought by both of them?

Gen. 12. 6.

1. It is certain Abraham built an altar there, which Jacob restored and established; it is just then, to think, Abraham had some right there; which probably he might have by buying.

2. All things done are not written, and yet were many things in those times continued by tradition. It is not unlikely that so Stephen might receive it, and name the first purchaser and not the second: this is not contrary to sound reason. Ver. 20.

CHAP. XXXIV.

IN this Chapter is continued the history of the Church, in several sad events upon Jacobs family while he sojourned near Salem, and was neighbor to the Shechemites. The general heads are three.

1. Dinahs ravishing by Shechem. Ver. 1. to 5.

2. The after-contract for marriage; from Ver. 6 to 24.

3. The doleful revenge by Jacobs sonnes. From Ver. 25. to 31.

In the former these particulars are considerable.

1. The occasion given by Dinah. Ver. 1.

2. The sin done by Shechem, with its consequents. Ver. 2. 3. 4.

3. Jacobs resentment of it upon his hearing. Ver. 5.

First, as to the occasion, therein we have to note.

1. The connection between this event, and Jacobs condition mentioned before; he had made a purchase, and was now set down; and settled his family; and established the Worship of God; now immediately after all this, the sad trial here mentioned did befall him; though Jacob thought that he was well settled, and fell upon a religious government of his family; yet he minded not his vow at Bethel many years after his return, which seemed to provoke God that he ordereth sad things to him now for his trial: So it is hinted, Chap. 35.

2. The subject giving occasion, Dinah, and

And Dina the daughter of Leah; which she bare unto Jacob. — Sept. and Cald; fame. She is here described.

1. By her name, Dina.
2. By her sexe, a daughter.
3. By her parentage, Jacob her father, Leah her mother: she was now judged to be about fourteen years of age, and probably a beautiful maid; who though educated in religion and the knowledge of God; yet becomes the occasion of reproach upon the Church, and of grief unto good Jacob and her mother.

3. The action occasioning it, Went forth to see the daughters of the land, — Cald. fame. — To learn of, or get acquaintance with the daughters of the inhabitants, the women of Shechem, Sept. וַתֵּצֵא לִרְאוֹת בְּנוֹת הָאֶרֶץ. — Brief is the account of this motion.

1. The action recorded, is, she went out, which seemeth to be thus circumstantiated.

1. Of her own head, without parents direction.

2. Upon her own confidence, having none with her to secure her from danger.

2. The end of this motion expressed, is to visit and see: or learn, and know the daughters of the land, and to be vain together with them. Wantonness and curi-osity together with wilfulness seem to steer her course, which are bad guides to yong soules, leading them unto mischief and misery. The time was some festival as Josephus conceive's.

- D. 1. Sad occurrences may be ordered to Saints while they sit by Gods altar. Worship is not without trial.
- D. 2. Religious care of God misplaced doth not exempt parents and children from sad tentations. Jacob Worshipped by Shalem, not at Bethel.
- D. 3. Mothers sinnes providence may hit in daughters miscarriages.
- D. 4. The children of Saints, and specially daughters, may be occasion of great affliction to parents.
- D. 5. Wilfulness and wantonness ease on yong soules to their own mischief, and grief of parents.
- D. 6. Vnuly appetites to know the fashions and vain courses of others, bring many soules into grievous snares.
- D. 7. Vain sights and spectacles in revells and wanton garbs may occasion losse of purity. Ver. 1.

2. The sin acted upon this occasion is the stupration of Jacobs daughter; whereabout we read.

1. The person by whom this was done, Ver. 2; Shechem the son of Hamor the Hivite, Prince of the country. — Sept. and Cald. fame. He is noted.

1. By his name, Shechem; a lascivious youth, as it appeareth by his carriages.

2. By his relation, he was son to Hamor, and that Hamor was chief or Prince of his country; one that should have better nurtured his son. His place and dignity addes something to the sin.

2. The acts of this unclean and wicked gallant, threefold.

1. Precedaneous, unto his violent corrupting of her, which however related in order of the text, yet reason will shew us their order naturally, as they were acted.

1. And he saw her, That is; eyed her with lustful desire, she coming into such a concourse, there she is espied to be preyed upon; the eye work's to wickedness, from a lustful heart.

2. And he took her, Sept. and Cald; fame. That is, either by fraud or force laid hold on her to get her into his house, or some place convenient for his unclean designe.

2. Present acts of filthiness mentioned here, are two.

1. And he lay with her. — He slept with her. Sept. and Cald. Here was one beastly act of a lustful youth, to force her unto unclean gesture.

2. And he afflicted her or humbled her, That which is expressed he desired her; he ravished her most villanously; reason may perswade, it was an act, which Dinah, as she could, resisted, but now God leaveth her in such places of evil. Well was it stiled an afflicting of her. — Humbled Sept. — Oppressed, Cald, Ver. 2.

3. Consequential acts were such as followeth this violent polluting of her; some whereof may be conceived in measure to go before the act of pollution, but notwithstanding they may follow after no less; these are four.

1. And his soul cleave unto Dinah the daughter of Jacob. — And he attended to the soul of Dina, &c. Sept. — And his soule took pleasure in Dina, &c. Cald. This note's the vehement prosecution of lust, that nothing would separate him from that which he desired, he was glued, his very soul and all, by lust unto Dinah.

2. And he loved the damsel, Cald. fame. — The virgin. Sept. Here is lust burning still after its first firing, his love was adulterous wholly, she was swallowed up with carnal delight.

3. And

3. And he spake to the heart of the damsel. — And he spake to her according to the mind of the virgin to allure her. Sept.

— He spake comforts unto the heart, &c. Cald. That is, by all fleshly complements, promising marriage, & all the pleasures of the flesh, so he moveth her further to become his wife. It may be also that all these were preparatory to perswade her unto the former act, as some conceive; yet were they also continued after. Ver. 3.

4. The last act consequent is his dealing with his father for the injoyment of her. And Shechem spake unto Hamor his father, saying, get me, or take me this maid so wife. Sept. and Cald. fame. Had this bin the first undertaking, it had bin better; but now he desireth it as a lustfull man, wherein yet are observable.

1. His address to his father, he acknowledged his authority in this; though it may be for wickedness, they were like father and like son.

2. His desire of Dinah now in a more reasonable way for a wife; though hurried to it by brutish lust, which makes it sinfull. Thus far, Shechems unclean attempts. Ver. 4.

- D. 1. Great mens children are not usually the best; but vile and debauch. So Shechem the son of a Prince.
- D. 2. Sonnes of great men are apt to think they may sin by authority; being not restrained.
- D. 3. It is a dangerous thing for an innocent damsel to come under the eye of lascivious men.
- D. 4. Lustful sight of beauty moveth hearts to take hold of opportunities to enjoy it.
- D. 5. Lusts hold fast of its prey, will certainly cleave with it, humble, and afflict it. Ver. 2.
- D. 6. Lust layeth out the very soul of man upon its prey desired.
- D. 7. Unclean love is the usual fruit of violent and injurious lust.
- D. 8. Lust will speak to the heart of any, whome it may tempt unto unclean injoyment. Ver. 3.
- D. 9. Brutish lust cannot deny the parents right in ordering children unto marriage.
- D. 10. Lust itself will desire Gods ordinance of marriage for its own vile ends. Ver. 4.

3. Jacobs resentment of this foul act done upon his daughter, Ver. 5. Wherein we have to consider.

1. The intelligence of it which came to him, And Jacob heard that he had defiled Dinah his daughter; Sept. addes, Sychem son of Emmor. — Was polluted. Cald.

1. The subject of reception of this sad newes, is Jacob a gracious father, hating iniquity, who had nurtured up his daughter unto better hopes, now declining thorough age, and subject to griefs.

2. The meanes of his intelligence, it was by some report, quickly flying abroad of such a fact done so eminently, and by such a person, the city rung of it, and therefore it must quickly come to Jacobs tents.

3. The matter reported to, and heard by Jacob, and that was sad, the ravishing and defiling of his daughter by Shechem; newes sadder in that kind could not be brought unto him; a poor innocent maid, violated and deflowred.

Secondly. The absence of his sonnes at this instant, when these sad tidings took Jacob solitary, & none by him to sustain or counsel in such a case, And his sonnes were with his cattel in the field, Sept. and Cald. fame. They were in their calling, not dreaming of such wickedness.

3. Jacobs demeanour under this sad newes, And Jacob held his peace, until they were come. — He was silent. Sept. and Cald.

1. His posture or carriage is silence; no doubt mother and other relations at home with Jacob heard of it; and were all weeping & mourning & complaining upon so sad an event, but Jacob sit's still, and was silent.

1. It notes deep oppression of spirit.

2. Quietness and calmness under such a providence.

3. Consideration and studying the hand of God in it, what his mind might be; not meditating evill.

2. The term of time wherein he was thus afflicted, until his sonnes came home; with whom he might converse about it. Likely it was, some messenger might speed to them, and cause their return sooner than ordinary. What he did communicate to them from his own Spirit is not recorded; but doubtless nothing of wrath or revenge; which we see he laments when it was taken by his sonnes. Ver. 5.

D. 2.

D. 2. Reports and hearing of evil especially in dear children strike's deep, thorough ears, to the hearts of parents.

D. 3. Shechems violence upon Dinah, or of wicked men upon the daughters of the Church, is very sad.

D. 4. Such evils may befall relations, while they are honestly employed, and think not of it.

D. 5. Silence in grieving, considering, and bearing such providences, becommeth Saints.

D. 6. Silence of grieved spirits may well be broken off, when such are present whom they may consult for ease. Ver. 5.

Secondly. The next general now followeth, which is an after contract for marriage, from V. 6. to the end of Ver. 24. Wherein these particulars occur.

1. Hamors address to Jacob. ver. 6.

2. Jacobs son's coming to meet him. ver. 7.

3. Hamors motion to them. V. 8. 9. 10.

4. Shechems motion for himself. Ver. 11. 12.

5. The reply of Jacobs sonnes. Ver. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17.

6. The acceptance of the condition required. Ver. 18. to Ver. 24. — To the first, Hamors address to Jacob, And Hamor the Father of Shechem, went out to Jacob to speak with him. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein may we note.

1. The subject of this address Hamor shechems Father; His name, his condition as a Prince, his relation as a Father to that violent adulterer are considerable: It would have better become him to have done justice, for such violence, than to palliate the wickedness of his son; yet see respect of persons, destroyeth justice.

2. His address, he goeth forth of his city to Jacob, about this business, so farre he condescends for his own ends.

3. The end of his address, to speak with him about the procuring Dinah to wife for his son, so labouring to satisfy the offence.

Note from it.

D. 1. Wicked parents are indulgent to wicked children to cover their wickedness and sins.

D. 2. Respect of persons and relations turn's judgment backward in wicked rulers.

D. 3. Wicked powers may condescend to the weaker righteous, to palliate their wickedness.

D. 4. Injurious persons offer wrong first, and treat of peace afterward. Ver. 6.

To the second. Jacobs sons coming and meeting him, And the sons of Jacob came out of the field, when they heard, and the men were grieved, and wrath was upon them vehemently, because he had done folly in Israel, to lie with Jacobs daughter, and so should it not be done. The men were pricked, and it was very doleful to them, because Sychem had done a filthy thing in Israel, &c. Sept. Ignominy or baseness was done in Israel, and so it ought not to be done. Cald. Note.

1. Their motion, they came from the field home to their sad and oppressed Father, probably being sent for upon Hamors coming to Jacob. Reuben being now 22. years old, Simeon 21. Levi. 20. Judah. 19. All sonnes of Leah, the four first.

2. The occasion of their motion, having heard of this sad newes concerning their sister.

3. Their affection is twofold.

1. Grief for the suffering of their sister.

2. Wrath against the violence of Shechem, they were burning in anger with him.

4. The reason of all this their trouble because he had done folly in Israel.

1. The sinner, Shechem, a lustful youth.

2. The sin he had done, folly, the word is often used for uncleanness, which was extreme folly for the adulterer, pursuing therein his own slaughter, and ignominy, and reproach upon Gods people, among whom this evil should not be committed. Pro. 7. 22.

3. The place where this was done, Israel, the name of Gods Church in the time of Moses; & this is the first place where this is expressed as an aggravation of this sin, that it was done in Israel in the Church of God, or against Israel or the Church of God.

5. The law which maketh this fact so sinful, So it should not be done. Doubtless though Moses speaketh it as a law from God by him, yet it was given to the Church from the beginning. Deut. 13. 17. Jacob and his sons knew this law, which did aggravate the fact. Some take this as spoken by Jacobs sons, and so they must be minatory; this shall not be so done among us, we will not endure it; Israel shall not suffer it unrevenged; but they seem to be added by Moses.

Note hence.

D. 1. Sad newes of misery on relations tions calling for help may take men off from their employments.

D. 2. Grief is a duty for evil done to, or by, any of our relations.

D. 3. Anger against sin committed is but due, if it be expressed orderly.

D. 4. Men though in the Church, are apt to be transported in wrath beyond bounds.

D. 5. Uncleanness added is the greatest folly that can be expressed. Pro. 7. 22.

D. 6. Pollution of any members in the Church of God is an aggravated folly.

D. 7. Jacobs daughter to be defiled, it is a sad and grievous reproach.

D. 8. The Law of God expressly forbids such unclean attings. Therefore are they exceeding sinful in the Church. Ver. 7.

To the third, this containeth Hamors motion for his son, unto Jacob and his sonnes, wherein note.

1. His declaration by way of preface. And Hamor spake with them, saying, Shechem my son, his soul hath cleaved, or is afflicted to, or well pleased with your daughter. Sychem my Son hath chosen with his soul your daughter. Sept. Your daughter hath pleased the soul of Shechem my son, Cald. In which we may consider.

1. The person declaring, Hamor, the Prince and Judge, who should have done judgment and not covered sin.

2. The parties to whom, Jacob and his sonnes, injured and grieved persons.

3. The manner of declaring, by speech and conference with them.

4. The matter declared, which was, the violent affection of his son to Dinah; he is bent in love even with his soul unto your daughter; It notes the transporting of him in affection to her. It is used to set out the love of God to his people. Deut. 7. 7. In all this there is not a word to declare his sonnes sin, or craving pardon for it, but only so much as may cover his villany, and periwade them of the intire affection of his son to Dinah.

2. His motion, which is twofold.

1. Special for his son, Give her to him, I pray you, for a wife. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The manner of it is humble and petitionary, I pray.

2. The matter of it for marriage, that his son might have Dinah to wife. All this was to cover wickedness, and to save the former violence by such pretended satisfaction. Ver. 8.

2. His motion is general as to affinity Ver. 9. between Jacobs family and his people, And joyn marriages with us, give your daughters to us, and take ye our daughters unto you, Sept. and Cald. to same. Impugnandum Sept. Here his motion is to mixe his people with Jacobs family, that they might become one, carried in those mutual transactions of giving and taking daughters. So he useth general overtures of union, to bring about special aimes or ends. Ver. 9.

3. His reason or motive here suggested to them, which is a pretence of their own commodity by this ingagement, and that various ways.

1. A settled habitation, And ye shall sit down with us, or dwell with us, (Sept. and Cald. same) As if he should say, it must needs be tedious to you to be in an unsettled condition as you have bin, grant me this motion, and here you may sit down and dwell with us, and move your tents no more, which is more comfortable.

2. Liberty of making use of the whole territory, And the land shall be before you, or at your faces, to turn which way ye will in it. Behold the land is broad before you, Sept. Cald. as Hebr. The phrase notes freedom to go up and down as they pleased with their flocks.

3. Free trade and converse with the inhabitants, Dwell and compass it, or negotiate and trade in it. Dwell and merchandize, Sept. and Cald. It notes travelling up and down for negotiations sake to buy and sell, and get gain.

4. Power of inheriting as naturalized, And get firm possessions therein. And possess therein. Sept. Cald. In summe he offers them all freedom with his own subjects according to the power he had, that he might ingratiate himself and make his petition feasible. Thus for the father, Ver. 10.

To the fourth, this carrieth shechems motion unto Jacob and his sonnes for himself. Ver. 11. 12. Wherein.

Ver. 11.

1. His desire of favor in general, And Shechem said to her father and her brethren, let me find grace in your eyes, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The sister here is Shechem, that vain fellow, who had abused Dinah, having deflowered her, he now intreateth her relations, and sits upon father and friends for their good will.

2. The parties intreated, Jacob and his sonnes, so neerly related to Dinah, and grieved about her.

3. The suit itself, which is to be accepted with them, that such grace might be granted from them, as might answer his desires.

2. His profer in order to gain his request, exprest,

1. Simply. And what ye shal say unto me I will give. So Cald. — We will give, Sept. In these he labours to buy out favour for covering his foul attempt.

1. He puts them to their demand, say with what price I shall purchase this favour, let me know your mind.

2. He promiseth satisfaction, I will give it or grant it, that I may have my lust, and your favour to enjoy it. Ver. 11.

Ver. 12.

2. Amplified exceedingly, Multiply upon me exceedingly dowry and gift, and I will give according as ye shal say unto me, (Sept. and Cald. same.) Here the lustful youth discovers the heat of his own passion.

1. In laying himself at their feet, to lay what burden of dowry or gift, they would demand to expiate his offence, and enjoy his carnal desire; see how faintly lust offer's for its end.

2. In promising to satisfy the utmost demand, I will give it. Prodigal lust! Some law there was upon inticing afterward to this purpose, but none for ravishing. Exod. 22. 16. 17.

3. His request from them in special, And give yeme the damsel to wife; Sept. and Cald. same. His desire is,

1. For their free grant, give ye now what I have taken already.

2. For his own enjoyment, let me have her to wife; here and in nothing els he doth acquiesce, such is the satisfaction of brutish sensual lust. Ver. 12.

Learn.

D. 1. Lustful men may crouch to such as they have offended to get favour from them.

D. 3. Lust maketh men profuse and prodigal to have their pleasure, though to their own undoing.

D. 4. Lustful creatures would buy out their offences though not confesse or bemoan them.

D. 5. Lust agreeth to give men their demands that it may enjoy its own.

D. 6. Lust acquiesceth onely in the enjoyment of its desired evil. Ver. 12.

To the fifth, this containeth the answer of Jacobs sonnes to Hamor and Shechem, whom it is probable Jacob had intrusted, to make answer. Wherein is recorded for observation.

Ver. 13.

1. The manner of their reply. Ver. 13. And the sonnes of Jacob answered Shechem and Hamor his father with deceit, and they spake because they had defiled Dinah their sister.

Spake to them, &c. Sept. — Spake in wisdom, or wisely. Cald. Herein we may note.

1. The form of their answer, it was guileful; that is, their whole reply was framed to deceive the Suitors, to pretend a possibility of marriage upon terms but intending nothing less; nay to lay a designe thereby to take away their lives, as the event sheweth.

2. The reason of this deceitful answer; they spake, that is, either among themselves, or, they spake so deceitfully to Hamor mor and Shechem, because he had defiled their sister. This wrought revengeful thoughts in these brethren, which they could not better execute, than by concealing it under a fair treaty. The Cald. read, they answered wisely: but by the Serpents wisdom.

2. The matter of their reply, which stands in three particulars.

1. In a necessitated denial to them as they were, and that urged by Gods Law. V. 14. Wherein we may note.

1. The denial pleaded, And they said to them, we have not power to doe this word or thing, to give our sister to a man, to whom there is a foreskin. Symeon an Levi said to them, &c. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Herein they speak truth, though with a purpose to deceive.

1. The repliers here are the same sons of Jacob, yet the Seventy name Symeon and Levi: it is likely they might be most forward in speaking as they were in acting.

2. The matter of reply is the denial of their sute unto them as now they were, which they exprest under an impossibility laid upon them, we cannot do this thing which you demand, to give our sister unto a man uncircumcised; doubtless they could not do it by the law of their religion, which God gave them by Abraham; for justly is it presumed, that what Moses wrote afterward was given to the Church with the law of circumcision. And however both Isaac and Jacob did take wives from the uncircumcised, it was Gods special direction, but they gave no daughters to the uncircumcised because they could not, that is, by right; or the law of God, they had no power to grant it. Id possumus, quod jure possumus.

2. A further reason of this denial, because this were a reproach unto us, Sept. and Cald. same. A good reason it was, from such as were professed members of the Church, for it is a reproach to them to act contrary to the ordinances of God; so far they speak true, though with a mind to deceive.

2. In a conditional consent. Ver. 15. 16. Wherein.

1. The condition is proposed, Onely in this will we consent unto you, if ye will be as we are, that every male of you be circumcised. Cald. same. — We will be like and dwell with you, &c. Sept. The words are easy, an universal circumcision of all with them is the condition proposed, answerable to the law; their sin in making this condition is not small, as will hereafter appear.

2. Their promise and profer upon this condition performed. Ver. 16. Which is in three particulars.

1. Then will we give our daughters to you, (So Sept. and Cald.) In summe, then ye shall have our sister, and we will give others of our daughters to you and your people.

2. And we will take your daughters to us. Sept. and Cald. same.) That is, to be our wives, as ours shall be yours.

3. And we will dwell with you, and we will be for one people. One kindred. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Here they give consent to people with them; neither justly with Gods leave, nor faithfully in their own intentions.

3. In a peremptory resolution, this condition being not granted, wherein are exprest.

1. Their answer supposed, And if ye will not hearken to us to be circumcised. Sept. same. — Yeild to us. Cald. This they purpose as an overture to a final determination, if you will not yeild to the condition proposed.

2. The resolution taken up, which is twofold.

1. Then will we take our daughter. (Sept. and Cald. same.) That is, either demand her by right, or take her by force, for it seemeth, all this while she was in Hamors house.

2. And we will be gon, that is, we shall be strangers to you as we have bin, and depart without any further parly with you. This they pretend to draw them on.

Quest. 1. Was this answer of Jacobs sonnes lawful?

Ans. Surely no, but altogether sinful upon these accounts.

I. The principle of it is guile and fraud, altogether inconsistent with true religion.

II. The matter of it is sin and impiety. 1. To offer Gods seal to them that were not in Covenant.

2. To set Gods seal to humane agreements and Covenants.

3. To make religion herein a cloak for their villany.

III. The end of it was their intended perfidious and cruel dealing, to subject them to their revenge, not to gratifie them in their desire.

Quest. 2. Was it not well for Jacobs sonns to perswade them to be profelytes by circumcision?

Ans. 1. They did not aim at their conversion in it but destruction. 2. Circumcision though it were good, in its due place and relation to Gods Covenant, yet it became vile when it degenerated. 3. Reception of sacraments by Pagans is a most horrid profanation of them. These sonnes of Jacob therefore did wickedly in offering circumcision unto such, or perswading them thereunto.

Quest. 3. Was all this done without Jacobs?

Ans. It is so safely to be presumed.

1. It seemed that being over charged with sorrow, he left the negotiation unto his sonnes.

III 2. His

2. His detestation of their counsel and fact afterward, in this chapter.
3. His cursing of the chief actors for the future shew it Gen. 49. 5. 6. 7.

1. The acceptance of the terms proposed. Ver. 18.

2. The speed for performance by Shechem. Ver. 19.

3. The speech of Hamor and Shechem to the citizens. Ver. 20. to 24.

4. The concelion of the people to their motion. Ver. 23.

To the first, the acceptance of the terms proposed thus related, And their words were good in the eyes of Hamor, and in the eyes of Shechem the son of Hamor. The words were pleasing before Hamor, &c. Sept. and Cald. Where note.

1. The parties accepting, father and son; the name of the father signifying an affe, he giveth a sign of his brutishness in this; and a title afterwards of a child given to Shechem, notes him to be transported like a foolish child; both are hurried by their lusts.

2. The matter accepted, the words of Jacobs sonnes, which was the motion for their circumcision, an hard condition, in itself, but harder in the design, which lustful men could not discern.

3. The acceptance itself, the words were good to them, that is, they very well accepted them without pause or reply again unto any particular: what will not lust yeild to, though most unreasonable? Lat-civis null'a religio est quidvis perpet aut admittere, dummodo aff. eius expleant.

Note hence.

D. 1. Sinful lust maketh like father like son.

D. 2. Lust is pleased with the hardest terms for self enjoyment.

D. 3. Lust make's men yeild to their own ruine without deliberation. The greatest evil seemeth good. Ver. 18.

To the second, the expedition made for performance, especially by the lustful youth that that was most concerned in it, wherein we have to note.

Ver. 19. 1. The proposition of his speed, And the youth or childish fellow delayed not to perform the word or thing. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The subject spoken of is Shechem, under the name of a boy, child, or foolish youth.

2. The matter spoken of him, he delayed not to do the thing, perform the word for a general circumcision of the males, which was proposed by the sonnes of Jacob; the doing of the thing here was not his own circumcision, for that was to no purpose, unless all the males were brought under it; he therefore now speeds to get them together, and to persuade them to it; that they might be all circumcised as well as Hamor & Shechem on the same day, he delayed not to perform this.

2. The reason of his speed, which, as expressed, is twofold.

1. His inordinate love to Dinah, Because he was delighted in Jacobs daughter. — כי הוא יגע, &c. For he had layen with, &c. Sept. — Cald. as Hebr. Delight of lust in the object of it, make's him to speed to the full enjoyment of the same; lust needs no spurrs.

2. His exemplariness unto the men of the city, he hastens to draw them after him, And he was honored above all the house of his father. — Most honorable of all his fathers house; Sept. Cald as Hebr.

1. His honour and repute is set as exemplary, he was among his people of the greatest repute and honour, none of his brethren in his fathers house like him, therefore he knowing his interest in the hearts of the people speeds to persuade them to gratify his lust, and yeild to the means of their own destruction. Ver. 19.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Childish fooles hasten to the stocks and slaughter, and consider it not.

D. 2. Lust needs no spurrs, but haste's all it may to enjoy it's pleasure.

D. 3. Lust made honorable in persons, become's most exemplary to lead others into the snare. Ver. 19.

To the third, this containeth the persuasive speech of Hamor & Shechem to the men of their city, herein.

Ver. 20. 1. Their address to the assembly, And Hamor came and Shechem his son unto the gate of their city. — Sept. and Cald. same. It is probable they had summoned a court, and called the men together, and now Hamor their Prince and his son, give them meeting: the gate was the place of assemblies, & transacting matters politick, as to the common-weal; and thither they come to meet with the assembly. Deut. 17. 5. Ruth. 4. 1. 11.

2. Their form of declaring their business which was the occasion of their convocation, And they spake to the men of their city saying. — Sept. and Cald. same. They opened their business by word of mouth; both of them in order declaring and urging the same matters unto their people. Ver. 20.

3. The matter of their speech, which containeth.

1. A preface ingratiating the men about whom they were to speak, These men they are peaceable with us, Sept. and Cald. same. They begin their speech from the commendation of their neighbors, Jacob and his family; these are all men of peace, of good and quiet conditions who are come to be our neighbors; ye need not fear nor suspect them, nor any hurt from them; it was a commendation of some of them a little too soon, who afterward made the contrary to appear; but yet 'tis rhetorical, to gain favour to them who may pleasure it.

2. A proposition of some demands about them.

1. For their cohabitation and commerce, Therefore let them dwell in the land and trade therein. Sept. and Cald. same. This Hamor had offered Jacobs sonnes, and now persuade's his people to yeild thereunto, that he might make it good. The reason satisfactory to this is added, For the land behold is large of hands or spaces before them.

Is broad, Sept. — Spacious and broad: Cald. That is, ye will have no streining by them, room enough there is, that ye may grant this to them.

2. For their affinity, Let us take their daughters to us for wives, and let us give our daughters to them. — We will take, &c. Sept. Cald. Herein they persuade their citizens to make affinity with them; and come into kindred: and this the young man presseth upon his own account, to get his wife first, Ver. 21.

3. An offset of the condition which Jacobs sonnes had made subrilly to them, Only in this will the men consent to us to dwell with us, to become one people, in that every male with us be circumcised, as they are circumcised. — So Sept. and Cald. Thus they propose the condition as they had it from Jacobs sonnes, this might seem an harsh and strange condition to their people, to bring them under such a penalty; therefore it needeth something to render it to them desirable.

1. The condition, circumcision.

2. The rule of it, as they had it. Ver. 22.

4. An argument to make this take with them, Their cattle, and their substance, and every beast of theirs, shall they not be ours? Sept. and Cald. to fame. Here we have.

1. The medium, by which they persuade, by this we shall bring them under and make them and theirs ours. Which was,

1. Treacherous; for they pretended to Jacobs sonnes, that they should have all in the land as his own people, and here they persuade their people, they shall be enriched with their spoiles. God make's the deceiver be deceived.

2. We have the persuasion concluded, Only let us consent unto them, and they will dwell with us. Cald. fame. Let us be like them. Sept. In summe, from this pretended argument of gain, they labor to bring in a deluded people into the same danger with themselves. This will be nothing to loose a superfluous skin, and we shall gain them and all they have. ver. 23.

D. 1. Lustful rulers bring all under them into evils with themselves.

D. 4. Lust will commend any by whom it may be gratified, though it find the contrary.

D. 5. Self-seeking Princes, will persuade people to any thing for their own ends.

D. 6. Wicked powers pretend lawful affinity to be made, when they aim at sinful lust. Ver. 21.

D. 8. Lust is content to symbolize in the hardest duty external of religion, to enjoy its desire.

D. 9. Lust desires to unite with any people, who gratifie its desires. Ver. 22.

D. 10. Pretence of gain, and spoil, and advantage, is a fit bait to bring seduced soules to consent to lust.

D. 11. Rulers in sin, will never leave until they bring their people to consent with them to evil. Ver. 23.

To the fourth, This containeth the peoples yielding unto the swafory speech of their rulers. Wherein.

1. Their concession by consent, And Ver. 24; there hearkned unto Hamor and Shechem his son, all that went out of the gate of his city.

Heard, hearkned, obeyed, Sept. & Cald. to fame. That is, all the male inhabitants subscribed to their motion, that it should be as they had proposed.

2. The execution or performance of their grant; And they were circumcised every male, all that went out of the gate of his city. That is, all in one day, as appointed, cutt of the superfluous foreskin, so that they were all together fore and wounded; thus are a wicked people drawn on to act provocation, and to leave themselves wounded and prepared for slaughter.

Note from it.

D. 1. Wicked people easily yield to wicked rulers to gratify their lust.

D. 2. It is usual for all to follow the example of rulers to sin. Regis ad exemplum totus componitur orbis.

D. 3. Universal consent in evil, is permitted, where universal destruction is intended. Ver. 24.

3. The last general containeth the guiltful and cruel revenge taken by Jacobs sonnes upon the Shechemites for the injury done to their sister. Herein note.

1. The execution of this revenge. Ver. 25. to 29.

2. Jacobs contest with his sons. Ver. 30.

3. Their reply. Ver. 31.

In the first, which is the execution, we have to observe.

1. The season of it, And it was in the third day, when they were fore, or grieving, with the wound of circumcision.

When they were in pain. Sept. When their paines were strong upon them, Cald.

1. The day was the third after the circumcision.

2. The state of them in that day was very painful, so that they were very unable to resist: why on the third day they should be forer, physicians give their reasons, which are valid as to some wounds, but questioned whether so in this; yet this is clearly said, all the circumcised here were very full of pain on this third day, which is the time laid hold on by the executioners. Josephus omits this foreness, and suggests drunkenness, &c.

2. The executioners of this revenge, And the two sonnes of Jacob, Simeon and Levi. Dinahs brethren took each man his sword. Sept. and Cald. fame. Where we have.

1. The parties mentioned.

1. By name Simeon and Levi. The two middle sonnes of Leah.

2. By relation, brethren of Dinah, that is, by father and mother.

11. Their arms, they took each their sword, instruments of death they carried with them.

Quest. Were onely these two in the action?

Ans. Surely we read afterward, there were others at the plunder, and however these two are mentioned as eminent for wrath and revenge in this matter, yet improbable it is, they would set upon a city by themselves, the very women being able to beat back more than they: It is more safely conjectured, that these were ring-leaders, but others of their brethren and servants were with them in this exploit, as well as in taking the spoil afterward.

3. Their assault of the circumcised, And they came upon the city in confidence or boldness.

Undaunted, securely, Sept.

City where he dwelt confidently.

Cald. That is upon Hamors city, they fell on without the least demurr, with violence, and confidence, incited doubtless by sin, but ordered by God.

4. The execution done, in two great effects.

1. Murder, and that twofold.

1. General upon all the males of the city, And they slew every male, (Sept. and Cald. fame.) That is, all that by guile they had made fore by circumcision. Ver. 25.

2. Special, And they killed Hamor, and Shechem his son with the edge of the sword, and took Dinah out of Shechems house, and went out, Sept. and Cald. fame. Wherein.

1. The slaughter, of father and son.

2. The rescue of Dinah their sister, who had occasioned all this. This cruel revenge is upon her score, Ver. 26.

11. Plunder; in the description whereof we have.

1. The actors. The sonnes of Jacob. Here the rest of the brethren of Dinah are expressed, elder and younger, fit for such attempts; and rational it is, that they who would help to spoil, would help to kill. These and other servants of their family doubtless were combined unto such an action as this.

Ver. 27.

2. Their act, which was spoiling, expressed thus.

1. They came upon the slain. Upon the wounded, Sept.

To the spoil of the slain. Cald. That is, to strip them, and take their riches from them.

2. And spoiled the city, because they had defiled their sister Dinah. Sept. and Cald. to fame.

1. Their act is a fruit of covetousness, to fall on spoiling, as the other was of cruelty.

2. The reason, they charge the fact of Dinahs ravishing on the city; which how justly they do, it doth not appear. Ver. 27.

3. Their sheep, and their oxen, and their asses, and what was in the city, and what was in the field they took. Sept. and Cald. to fame.

Ver. 28.

Ver. 29.

Here is a more special inventory of their spoiles, they take all in city and field, either in stable or abroad. Ver. 28.

4. And all their wealth, and all their little ones, and their wives they led captive, and spoiled, and all that was in the house.

All their bodies, (sometimes used for slaves) and all in their houses, Sept.

Houses. Cald. as Hebr. Here we have further cruelty.

1. In captivating wives and children.

2. In spoiling all their wealth within doors and without. Ver. 29.

So is here related a short history of a great cruelty, and bloody revenge.

Quest. Is this fact of Jacobs sonnes any way excusable?

Ans. This fact is considerable in a threefold respect.

1. With respect to God, who doubtless ordered all this in the hands of sinful men; so it is very just, however it may seem cruel. God knew their wickedness, former as well as latter.

2. With respect to the Shechemites, they were vile and abominable sinners; many of them, if not all, knowing of this fact of their Prince and applauding it, rather than reproving or mourning for it. There they can but justify God in it.

3. With respect to Jacobs sonnes; so it was a treacherous & bloody practise, condemned by Gods Spirit in the mouth of Isaac, both herein the following verse, and afterward in his propheticall Testament before his death. Gen. 49. 5. 6. (1) Lying & treachery was in the designe, (2) Cruelty and cry of blood to the highest, by men not called to take vengeance, (3) Covetousness and stealth abominable, (4) Oppression in captivating the widows & fatherless; all which shew their abominable sin; which is enough to prove that book of Judith false, she imputing all this to Gods moving of Simeon her father, whereas the Spirit of God condemneth their act as horrid, Judith. 9. 2.

Learn from it.

- D. 1. Treachery and cruelty watch their season exactly to effect their designs.
- D. 2. Guileful cruelty hath it's method first to weaken men and then to kill them.
- D. 3. Anger and revenge ordered under providence may make two prevail against thousands.
- D. 4. Corrupt nature meditates revenge to vindicate injury done unto relations.
- D. 5. Revenge goeth armed with instruments of cruelty to execute its designs.
- D. 6. Cruelty, uncontrolled by God, goeth out with security and confidence to ruin cities.
- D. 7. Bloody revenge spareth none that either have provoked, or may resist it.

- D. 12. A few revengeful Spirits, are apt to gather many unto them.
- D. 13. Bloody minds are covetous as cruel, set upon spoil.
- D. 14. Injury and provocation is usually urged by oppressing spoilers as just ground for their avenge. Ver. 27.
- D. 15. Rapine of goods God sometimes orders to avenge ravishing of innocents.
- D. 16. Unsatisfiable is covetous revenge when it comes to spoil at its will. Ver. 28.
- D. 17. Revenge spareth neither sex nor age under its power.

D. 18. Wealth within doors as with-out, the sword, take's up when it hath commission. Ver. 29.

2. The next particular in this last general is Jacobs resentment of his sonnes act in this bloody revenge, which was very irksome to him, as appears in his contestation with the ringleaders in this tragedy. ver. 30. Wherein he expresseth.

1. His anger or displeasure against the fact, And Jacob said to Simcon and to Levi, ye have troubled me to make me sink among the inhabitants of the land, among the Canaanites, and among the Perizites. — כי אתם נשאתם אותי, בין כנענים בין מזרחים. That ye have let enmity between me, &c. Cald. Herein we have to note.

1. The party affected, Jacob the Father of these violent men, in whose power alone it was to have ordered them, but they without him pursue their rage; he therefore as being neglected by them, and not consulted with nor obeyed in this matter, but finding their violence outrageous and wicked, thus bespeak's the two Captaines of this rout at their return.

2. The parties to whom he expresseth his sad apprehension of this cruel deportment; they were the two chief, that had led on the rest, Simcon and Levi; these were named as notorious in the fact, and so they are herein Jacobs reproof, but not exclusively to others, who might have their hand in it.

3. The charge laid upon them, which sheweth his displeasure against them, and it is twofold.

1. Ye have troubled me, ye have made me hateful. Sept.

1. The parties charged are his sons, so good fathers have cause to do sometimes, to wicked children.

2. The charge is, that by this bloody act they troubled him, this is, two ways.

1. Inwardly, they made his soul hoary, vexed, tossed with sad thoughts, and indignation at such a fact.

2. Outwardly, and so they troubled him by making him the mark of trouble, at whom all the neighboring people would aim, to lay trouble and revenge upon him and his; such apprehensions did wrack and vex him.

2. The next charge is the issue of the former, and the demonstration of it, ye have made me sink among the inhabitants, &c. This is a borrowed expression from carrion or dead corpses corrupted, which send such odious favours, that make men abhor them; and hence sin is said to be a stench, and make men sink before God and men. So the cruelty, rage, covetousness, and horrid wickedness of Jacobs sonnes, made him sink; that is, be of an evil favour, as a deceitful, bloody man, and therefore to be abhorred by them. And so much the worse, that this should be done by the children of the Church, toward them that were without, the Canaanites and Perizites; this maketh religion itself and the professors of it to sink, when such wickedness is done by them, as is not among the heathen.

Ver. 30.

2. His fear is discovered, And I, men of number, and they will gather themselves against me, and smite me, and I shall be destroyed and my house. — אני אדם רב ומתקבצין עלי וימיתו אותי ויחריבו את ביתי. &c. Sept. People of number. Cald. Herein he declareth what his fear is, will befall him and his upon their outrage, from the inhabitants; wherein we have.

1. The occasion of his fear expressed, I being men of number, that is, soon or easily numbered, which is here a paraphrase of few, such as were in his family; who compared to all the inhabitants of the country may well be stiled few or easy to be numbered, when they were many and not easily numbered. The word — here, notes man in common, all sexes and ages.

2. The matter of his fear, which is a three-fold evil gradual.

1. And they will gather together. viz. the inhabitants against me; all the Canaanites & Perizites, will joyn together against me.

2. And they will smite me, slay me as ours read, unto which doubtless the limiting tends. סורקו אותי Sept. Slaughter to himself is feared, as if he had bin the Author of all this revenge.

3. And I shall be destroyed, I and my house. אני ודעתי יחרבו. I shall be worn out, I and my house. — I shall perish, and the men of my house. Cald. Here ruine and destruction universal to his whole family is feared, from the Canaanites, upon this provocation of his sonnes in the murder of the Shechemites. Thus Jacob resent's this fact here, but curseth it when he made his Testament before his death. Gen. 49-7.

Quest. 1. How could Jacob detest this fact, when he own's the getting of this portion of land, by his own bow and sword? So he seemeth to call their arms in this achievement, his own. Gen. 48. 22.

Ans. 1. It is not expressly but probably onely gathered, that it was this portion of Hamor spoken of: because Shechem is used, which is a common name for a portion, as well as a proper name of a place.

2. Others understand that. Gen. 48. Prophetically spoken, not historically, which is an hard reconciliation.

3. Some think Jacobs money was called his Arms, because money answereth all things. Eccl. 10. 19. but this is an unusual speech to Jacob.

4. In fine, it is the best way to take the letter plainly, and then, if this portion of land were meant, which is not extra litem, doubtless it might be taken by Jacob afterward; seeing all actions are not recorded, that were done; but this is certain Jacob abhorred to call the cruelty of Simcon and Levi his bow and sword, for he curseth them.

Quest. 2. Why did not Jacob charge his sonnes more plainly with their offence against God and men; in corrupting religious rites, and making use of them to destroy men?

Ans. 1. Surely these were the causes of Jacobs trouble, therefore he was angry with them.

2. We have here but a brief of Jacobs expression to them, doubtless he spake and did a great deal more.

Quest. 3. Why suffered he the captives women and children to be held, if he abhorred the fact?

Ans. 1. It is not right to conclude, that Jacob consented to their captivity, because his action is not recorded.

2. It is more like to truth, that they were dismissed, and left to their own place, for we read of none, that went with Jacob to Bethel but his own family.

Quest. 4. Why should Jacob fear of killing by the Canaanites seeing he had Gods protection?

Ans. 1. Gods protection was promised to Jacob and his in the way of their obedience to his will.

2. The violence done was a sin against God and man, which wrought fear.

3. Possibly this fear also may be numbered among Jacobs infirmities.

D. 13. Fear of danger may arise under the promise of Gods protection, when souls obey not God. Ver. 30.

Ver. 13. 3. The last particular is the reply of Jacobs sonnes to their father, And they said, should he deal with our sister as with an harlot? Sept. — xētrōtōi. &c. Shall they use, &c. Sept. — Ought it to be done with our sister, &c. Cald. In this answer we may note.

1. The manner of it, it is by a bold, malepert, and slighting expostulation; shall he deal thus and we let him alone? shall we bear the dishonor of our sister as you do?

2. The matter of it is a medium to justify their own act, he and they have offered violence and stuprated our sister, and we are now avenged on them; come what will of it, no matter to us, we have done what we have done to take vengeance. So they speake who take no rule from God for it.

CHAP. XXXV.

IN this Chapter succeed's a change of providence unto the Church; exhibited to Jacob and his family; it was a sad tragical scene related in the former Chapter, where we left Jacob in a most sad and perplexed condition afraid of ruine from neighbors round about; but God leaveth not poor Jacob long in that distress, here he hasten's for his comfort and support as the former part of this Chapter doth make out. In the whole Chap. We have recorded various acts of providence towards Jacob and the Church with him, which will best be viewed in the several motions of Jacob here mentioned, which are four, and accordingly so many general parts are there of this Chapter.

1. Jacobs motion from Shechem to Bethel. ver. 1. to the end of ver. 15.

2. His motion from Bethel to Ephrath. ver. 16. to ver. 20.

3. His motion from Ephrath to Edar. ver. 21. to ver. 26.

4. His motion from Edar to Hebron. ver. 27. to vers. ult.

In the former general these particulars occur.

1. The cause of his motion. ver. 1.

2. Jacobs preparation of his company for motion. ver. 2. 3.

3. The obedience of all to his demand. ver. 4.

4. Their onset in the journey. ver. 5.

5. The arrival unto the place designed. ver. 6. 7.

6. The events befalling him there, which are two.

1. Deborah's death. ver. 8.

2. Gods appearance unto Jacob, ver. 9. to the end of ver. 15.

1. The cause of Jacobs motion now from Shechem to Bethel, is Gods command, given, ver. 1. Wherein.

1. The term of connection is observable which joyneth this unto the precedent sad estate of Jacob, And God, &c. It may be read as a term merely copulative, connecting the following encouragement to Jacobs foregoing fear, and it hath the force of the term of time, then, when Jacob was so perplexed, & full of sorrows & fears, shortly thereupon God speaketh to him.

2. The authority causing Jacob to move, is expressed, God enjoyneth him. Elohim, God said to Jacob, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. God himself is the author of this motion, he layeth this upon Jacob who was able to effect it.

2. The subject to whom, is Jacob, full of

Ver. 1.

of fears; who perhaps upon such a call might be ready to suggest, how shall I move? My way will be hedged up by enemies, to him God giveth this charge.

3. The manner of causation, he spake unto him, doubtless immediately as he was wont to do, whether by vision in the day, or dream in the night is not here expressed, neither matters it much, which way it was, certain it is God spake to him.

3. The injunction itself from God laid on him, wherein we have to consider.

1. The matter enjoined, which is in four acts.

1. Preparation, Arise. So Sept. and Cald. That is, get up, move your stakes, take up your tents.

2. Motion, Go up to Bethel. This command prevents his objection of dangers in the way; neither doth he injoy him onely to go thither but to ascend; not to much with respect to the situation of the place, as to his condition, he was low now, and that by forgetting his vow, and therefore time it was for him to ascend thither where he met with God.

3. Habitation, And dwell there. So Sept. and Cald. Go pitch your tents there; it is better than to sit still in Sechem; better to sit down with the God of thy Covenant there, than to abide here.

4. Adoration or Worship of God, And make there an altar unto God. So Sept. and Cald. — The use of this was to worship and to pay that vow to God, which he made in the day of his distress. Gen. 28. 22. He promised God to Worship him there, and that it should be his house; for thirty years before; and now had he bin ten years in the land of Canaan & yet not performed this vow. The Hebrews are too harsh to say, that for this sin his daughter was ravished; but likely it was the occasion of her ravishing, for had Jacob bin at Bethel, that evil might have bin avoided. God therefore in order to his comfort sends him to pay his vow.

2. The reason of this injunction, which was Gods former apparition unto him, Who appeared unto thee in thy flying from the face of Esau thy brother, Sept. and Cald. same. Which reason is made up.

1. Of the nature of Gods appearance, and that was a kind of visible discovery of his care over him making his Angels to take charge of him; and keep him in his way.

2. Of the time of this apparition, when he fled for fear of his life from Esau. So that then God saved him, and carried him into Syria, and now returned him full; and that Jacob should be mindless of his vow made at such a time, God seem's to hint it unto him; and to shew him withal, that he was as able to save him now as then, wherefore he commands him to Bethel; where he might meet with God indeed. Ver. 1.

D. 12. God alone command's, and makes way for the deliverance of his Saints from their fears. Ver. 1.

2. The next particular in the first general, is Jacobs preparation for his journey to Bethel in ordering his family for that work, where note.

1. Jacobs bespeaking such as were under his charge to move with him, And Jacob said unto his house, and all that were with him, Sept. same. — The men of his house. Cald. Herein also occur.

1. The term connecting. (1) Which some read onely copulative, And, some a note of time, then, as ours, some make it a term causal, wherefore Jacob said, &c. K k k All

Ver. 2.

All note the immediate connection of Jacobs obedience to Gods call, as being together with it in time, and the effect of it as its cause.

2. The subject bespeaking, Jacob, as called of God, he being over his family, calleth them as God called him.

3. The subject to whom he imparts his mind under two exprellions.

1. To his house or household as ours read, for so it must be meant of the men of his house as Cald. Continens pro contento. These most properly were his wives and children, and all born in his house; as we know the like account was to Abraham and Isaac. I should think it meet to confine the house unto these.

2. To all that were with him, that is, so with him as under his power despotical; for other power either military or tyrannical, I suppose is irrational to conceive as acted by Jacob; for he abhorred his sonnes act in subduing the Shecemits, and therefore it is most probable he would not lead captive whom they led captive; so that, by them who were with him to understand the Shecemits, seems to me unfutable to reason, if we observe.

1. What was Jacobs work at Bethel, to pay his vow and sanctify his family.

2. What agreement had this work with the Shecemits, whom God calls not to Bethel? Surely none at all.

3. Jacob carrieth no more here, but whom he brings into the house of God; & for that end he prepareth them. To understand therefore this universal all, of the captive Shecemits, there is no cogent reason; but rather it is meant of the servants whom he bought & were with him under charge.

2. The matter of his speech unto them, which is an authoritative charge or command.

1. For aversion from provoking evils, which is the first part of repentance, so he bespeak's them, Put away the Gods of the stranger, that are in the midst of you. Strange Gods from the midst of you Sept.

Idols of the people, &c. Cald. In these he chargeth on them the first part of repentance to depart from evil; it is specified only in one kind of sin, and that touching the worship of God, but under it, all other enormities attending false Worship are no less enjoined to be put away; he that is false to God in worship, cannot be true to man in righteous actions. So far therefore as is in his power he drives them of his family from sin, as to externals. These that are here called Gods, were images and reliques of Worship, which its likely some in his family had gotten from the people among whom they lived, some from Syria as the Teraphim of Laban stolen by Rachel, and some it is likely from the Shecemits, all were strangers, that were not of Abrahams family and did not Worship God, as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob did.

Quest. How was Jacobs family Gods Church when it was idolatrous?

Ans. 1. It was not so in the highest and best parts of it.

2. Neither is it likely that Jacob did suffer these to be worshipped in his house, but drew all to the altar of God with him.

3. It is probable they were kept of curiosity, and so might be an occasion of evil to them.

4. It is evident they were forbidden by Jacob.

2. For conversion to God, so far as he was able to bring them to it in outward things, exprest two ways.

1. Typically, And cleanse your selves, and change your garments. Sept. and Cald. same. These ordinances we read of in the law of Moses about receiving lepers and other unclean into the congregation, that they were washed in water, and put on new garments clean according to the law, which it seemeth God had enjoined his Church in these times, and so afterward were written in the law. These note spiritual cleansing and putting on fair linnen, viz. the righteousness of the Saints. Ezek. 36. 25. Heb. 10. 22. Rev. 19. 2. Iude. 23. Ver. 2.

1. Really and truly, And let us arise, and go up to Bethel, and I will make there an altar unto God. Let us make there. Sept.

Cald. as Hebr. In these may be observed the true term of conversion, God himself; in turning to whom these steps are orderly.

1. Preparation, Let us arise hence, as it was formerly commanded to Jacob by God, in this act Jacob joyneth himself with them, though not in the former, and so in the next.

2. Motion, And ascend to Bethel, that is, go up as God command's to his house and dwell with him, we have bin too long already in a low sinful condition, sojourning with the world, let us now move up to God.

3. Adoration or, true worshipping of God, And I will make there an altar unto God. Here is the utmost term of conversion noted, when the soul reacheth even unto God. More especially we may observe.

1. The hand ministerial, Jacobs, at Gods command.

2. The work ministered, building an altar, setting up true means of worship and committing unto God.

3. The use of it, which was to bring them to the true God, to have that experience of him which he had.

III. The reason of this injunction on them; the same which God in his call for matter, but a little varied by Jacob, viz. Gods goodness in two things.

1. In answering him in the day of his distress when Jacob called to him in flying from Esau. Sept. same. Receiv- ed my prayer in the time of tribulation.

2. In

2. In his protection of him, to Padan-Aram, in his abode there, and his return from thence thus far. All which sweet providences concerned Jacobs family as well as himself; & they lived in the strength of these providences at this day. Sept. He saved me. Sept. His word was for my help. Cald. &c. This is Jacobs call to his family Ver. 3.

3. The next thing is, the obedience of Jacobs family to his injunction, wherein we have.

1. Their rendition of all those superstitious reliques into the hands of Jacob. And they gave unto Jacob, all the Gods of the stranger, which were in their hand, and the ear-rings which were in their ears. Sept. and Cald. to fame. Idols of people. Cald. Herein we have to note.

1. The freeness,

2. The fulness of their answer to Jacobs call; as he answereth God, so they answer him; the matter which here they are said to give up, is exprest in two words.

1. All their Gods; that is, Images or the like, of such Gods as the strange nations worshipped.

2. All their ear-rings; such kind of monuments of superstitions began betimes, to wear them in their ears; as at this day the Papists have their reliques for their ornaments. So it was in that time, when Aaron made the calf, &c. Exo. 32. These doubtless were dear and precious to their carnal phantasies, yet they part with them all; doubtless, some overpowering act of God passed upon them.

2. Jacobs disposition of them, And Jacob hid them under the oak which was by Shechem. Cald. same.

And Jacob hid them וַיִּסְתֵּר יַעֲקֹב אֶת הָאֱלֹהִים וְאֶת הָאֵזָוִיטִּים תַּחַת הָאֵלֶךְ הַזֶּה בְּעֵץ הָאֹךְ, &c. and destroyed them unto this very day. Sept. Herein as to Jacobs act the words are plain, he buried these monuments of idolatry out of the way; his hiding was a burial; the place, under an Oak, a long standing tree; under such they used to bury as we shall see hereafter; therefore seemeth this to me to be as much as the eternal putting them out of the world. Some queries here call for reply.

Quest. 1. Why do they give them to Jacob, seeing he demands no more but to put them away?

Ans. 1. As his authority commanded that, so doubtless he would see it done. 2. He might require them though not exprest. 3. They could not better satisfy him of their obedience than by doing thus: Which also giveth just ground to think, that these were not new-come idolaters to Jacob.

cobs house by captivity, but such as had bin educated in the true religion, and therefore were now so soon persuaded.

Quest. 2. Why did they give him their ear-rings which he mentioned not?

Answ. 1. These were included under the cognizances of strange Gods. 2. Ingenuity was apparent herein, that they answered Jacobs desire both in them and in all their appurtenances.

Quest. 3. Why did Jacob bury them, and not burn them?

Answ. 1. This act seem's in its scope to put them out of the world as dead things. 2. He might utterly destroy them before he buried them, for ought that doth appear. 3. No mention is that ever they were fought after or returned by the parties, who gave them up. This therefore was sufficient. Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

4. The next particular is their onset in their journey, wherein are considerable by us.

1. The liberty of their passage, And they journeyed. Cald. same. And Israel removed from the Sichemites. Septuag.

1. The connection here is to be eyed, Jacobs obedience to Gods call & his families obedience unto his, as to repentance together with the buriall of those occasions of their sin went all immediately before, & now followeth immediately their motion; these things done, now they have liberty to move.

2. The parties moving are Jacob and his family.

3. The motion carrieth in it their free passage in their way to Bethel without let.

2. The safety of their motion, set out here

1. By the cause of it. And the terror of God was upon the cities that were round about them. Sept. same. From the face of God, upon all people, &c. Cald. In summe it is Gods extraordinary conculsion of neighboring cities that were enraged, and otherwise were apt to seek utmost revenge.

1. The curb upon them, The terror of God, that is, actively taken, that fear or affrightment which God by his immediate hand fixed on them; which he might do either by inward impulses on spirits, or outward visions, the way is not exprest, but the thing is asserted; Terrors came out from God.

2. The subject on whom this was, the cities, or people of those cities which did surround them; of these Jacob was afraid, and these God maketh to fear him; they all stood trembling and let Jacob pass quietly; because God troubled them. It is groundless, that some pursued Jacob and he beat them back again, and so terror came on them; for this take's the glory from God; neither is there a word of it.

2. By the effect issuing, And they did not pursue after the sons of Jacob. Cald. as Hebr. Of Israel, Sept.

1. Expressed we have a negative proposition, the nations did not follow, nor disturb Jacob, nor sought revenge upon his sons; they did not interrupt his journey.

2. Implicitly, it noteth that Jacob went on quietly, and safely under the good hand of God, until he came to his place appointed.

D. 5. Cities, yea all inhabitants stand trembling at the Church when God plead's for them.

D. 6. Revenge trembleth to pursue, when God rebukes it. Ver. 5.

5. The next particular is Jacobs arrival at Bethel, herein we have also to consider these things.

1. His access unto the place, And Jacob Ver. 6. came came to Luz, which is in the land of Canaan, that is, Bethel, he and all the people which were with him. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The parties arriving, Jacob and his family.

2. The place of their arrival, under two names,

1. Vulgar, and national given by the people.

2. Special, and singular given by Jacob, upon Gods appearing to him there; the former Luz, the latter Bethel.

3. Their access, thither they came. Ver. 6.

2. Jacobs work when he came thither; twofold.

Ver. 7.

1. Edification, And he built there an altar, Sept. and Cald. same. This answered Gods command, verse the first, and it carrieth in it, the use of the altar, which was the true Worship of God in Christ, and all the adjuncts and effects of the same; for it is senseless to conceive this altar built and the use of it not to be carried in it.

2. Nomination of the altar, wherein.

1. The imposition of the name, And he called the place El-Bethel. Cald. same. Bethel. Sept. And he built an altar to the mighty God of Bethel, as he had called that place. Im. But surely this hit's not the grammar, however it may not be amiss as to the sense. It is a sacramental appellation, wherein the name of God is put upon the place where he appeared. The ule was not superstitious, but religious, to be a monument of Gods praise.

2. The reason of this nomination in putting the name of God twice to it, which was at first reminded to Jacob by God, Because there God was revealed to him in his flying from the face of his brother.

For there God appeared to him, &c. Cald. of Esau, &c. Sept. There appeared to him the Angel of God, &c. Cald. Here is some controversy about the Syntax. Elohim being joyned with a verb plural, it is queried whether it note God here properly? And it is rendred by some Angels. Cald. There is no crime in this translation though some reproach him; for he might well build an altar to God, for the appearing of his Angells; but no necessity is of so rendring it, forasmuch as Elohim, noting God, is joyned with a plural verb. So we are then to take it, that in remembrance of Gods deliverance of him from Esau, and the vow which he then made, now he came to pay it, because God was revealed then so gratioously unto him. Ver. 7.

D. 6. The revelation of God by himself or Angels requireth Worship from his Saints to the utmost. Ver. 7.

6. The last thing considerable in Jacobs coming to Bethel, are the events there befalling him, and these were two memorable ones.

1. The loss of an old friend Deborah his mothers nurse. Ver. 8.

2. Gods appearing to him. Ver. 9. 15. In the former we have reported three things.

Ver. 8.

1. Deborahs death, And Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, died, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The connection is observable, which noteth, that soon after Jacob was come to Bethel, and paid his vow, this providential event mett with him.

2. The event itself, the loss of a good old friend, set out here.

1. By her name, Deborah.

2. By her relation, Nurse she was to Rebecca Jacobs mother, who it is likely might give her suck; she was sent with her when Rebecca was carried by Abrahams servant to be wife unto Isaac, Gen. 24. 59. And doubtless a tender woman she was to Jacob in his minority.

3. By her death, there she died in Jacobs family when he was returned unto Bethel.

Quest. How came Deborah to be in Jacobs family now, seeing that she was with Isaac?

Answ. Many conjectures are made, neither is any thing certainly spoken about it; but most probably it is conceived, that Rebecca being dead, either Jacob sent for her, or that she came in love to him, when he was returned unto Canaan. Scripture is silent of many such passages; yet may we guess that Jacob visited his father before this time, and had intercourse with his family, in which space Deborah came to him.

2. Deborahs burial, And she was buried beneath Bethel under an Oak. Sept. same. — In the plain of the valley. Cald. Werein.

1. Her burial is reported, she was interred, and laid out of sight.

2. The place generally noted under Bethel, or some distance from the place where Jacob dwelt.

3. The place singularly noted, under an Oak, so its expressly in the original, such a place as was fit to make a monument for her, where she might rest, he takes the place where providence orders her fall.

3. Deborahs lamentation by Jacobs family. And he called the name of it, the Oak of weeping. — Jacob called, &c. Sept.

— The valley of weeping. Cald. This naming of the place importeth these things.

1. How dear this good old matron was to Jacob and his family, she having bin so long in his fathers family and his own; accounted as a mother to him, she being no less than 50 years of age when Isaac was married and guessed to be about 180. now by some, but an old godly friend she was, who lived much desired and died much lamented by Jacob and his family.

2. How great the lamentation was, that it even named the place, weeping, to shew their sorrow for the loss of so gracious a matron.

3. How perpetually Jacob desired this providence to be in the remembrance of posterity, that so long as the oak stood, and the place continued, the memory of Gods providence in taking away Deborah might continue also. We have no mention of Rebekahs death or burial; the Spirit of God is arbitrary in relating such events.

1. The term of connection is not to be overpassed, which knits this comfortable event so close to that sad one precedent, Deborah his old friend depart's out of his sight, and God come's in immediately thereupon.

2. The event itself which is comfort to Jacob after several shaking troubles and griefs, given out in Gods gracious appearing unto him, wherein occur to note.

1. The object of this vision; God himself, all good, able to comfort Jacob, being almighty, as beneath.

2. The subject to whom it is made, poor Jacob, afflicted several wayes, by fears, and loss of creature-comforts, & the like.

3. The vision itself, it was a clear sensible discovery of God to eye and ear, not by dream, but by special manifestation to him waking.

4. The reiteration of it, Adhuc, amplius, &c. Which is to note, that it was another vision of God in Bethel besides that which he had when he fled from his brother into Syria. In all seven times.

5. The time is noted more plainly to specify it, which was in his return from Padan-Aram; this therefore must be distinct from the former, and near thirty years after; besides these two we read of many other apparitions of God to Jacob.

2. Gods benediction is here reported, the end of his appearing to Jacob, which is expressed.

1. Generally, And he blessed him. Cald. same. — God blessed him. Sept. Therefore he shewed himself even to bless him, that that is, to speak good and do good, further for him, in all kinds for this life and that which is to come, and this he doth effectually. Ver. 9.

2. Specially is this blessing here described.

1. In the sanction of his new name, given Chap. 32. And God said unto him, thy name hath bin Jacob, thy name shall not any more be called Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name; and he called his name Israel. Thy name shall be no more called Jacob, but Israel shall thy name be. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. In these is the first special blessing in reiterating the change of his name, which was first made upon his wrestling with God; Gen. 32. And now upon his victory over other assaults of fears from men, God revives the name imposed, and there withal the good intention in it; that he was now a Prince prevailing with God and over men. Herein these particulars occur to observation.

1. The author of this imposition of the name repeated, God said unto him, he that would make it good.

2. The mention of what his name and condition had bin, Thy name hath bin Jacob, a poor, low, supplanter.

3. The abolition of that name. Thy name shall not any more be called Jacob; this is not simply to be meant of the name, but with respect, this shall be less and laid as it were aside; but the main matter carried in it is the removal of that low estate and condition signified by Jacob.

4. The reimposing of his new name, but

Israel shall be thy name; with this, his prevalency, power and dominion is renewed.

5. The sanction of it by Gods own appellation, And he called his name Israel, and who can uncal him, or undo that which God hath done? This name and condition therefore is here established by God to Jacob. Ver. 10.

D. 5. Gods sanction alone settles the name and glory of his Saints.

D. 6. This sanction God repeats at his pleasure for his people. Ver. 10.

2. Another special blessing here bestowed, is in a commemoration of Gods sufficiency for him, as one God made out the same to Abraham, And God said to him, I am God Almighty, I am thy God. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. In this is the main and fundamental blessing, which God opened to Abraham before. Gen. 17. 1. And now confirmeth the same to Jacob. Herein note.

1. The assertion, Elohim is 'El-Schaddai, He is God almighty and al sufficient, for any; nothing is too hard for him.

2. The relation of this almightiness, supposed necessarily to Jacob, for to him is the blessing, and the Septuag. expresses it I am thy God. So that, this blessing is, the engaging of the almightiness and sufficiency of God to Jacob for his support.

3. Another special blessing which flowes from the former, is the promise renewed of a multiplied seed, Be thou fruitful and multiply, anations, and an assembly of nations, shall be of thee, and Kings shall come out of thy loins. Sept. same. — People and congregation of tribes, &c. And Kings who shall have dominion over peoples, &c. Cald. This was also first given to Abraham and Isaac, and is here confirmed to Jacob, wherein note.

1. The blessing of fruitfulness really bestowed, be fruitful, God speaks, and it is done.

2. The effect of this blessing expressed in three terms.

1. A Nation shall be of thee, viz. Israel.
2. An

וְיָסֵד 2. An assembly of Nations, which might be their several tribes: so the Jewes themselves are called Goyim, a name they use in reproach of Gentiles; or applied to a spiritual effect, it may note all nations called into Israel's God, which is of him as to promise of adoption.

3. Kings shall come out of thy loines, not onely a multiplied but a royal seed: This the Hebrews refer to Saul, &c. but it is more rationally to David and the King of Judah: Or if spiritually applied, it may note the Kings of nations coming in to Israel's God; for a truth there is in this. Israel is their father. Ver. 11.

D. 1. God in blessing Jacob and his Church layeth his owne omnipotency and al-sufficiency as the ground of all.

D. 2. Gods al-sufficiency by his gracious blessing is Jacobs in relation, and the Churches in him.

D. 3. All the fruitfulness of the Church is the fruit of Gods almightines both natural and spiritual.

D. 4. By Gods blessing on Jacob the seed of the Church shall be many and glorious.

D. 5. God hath named not onely one nation of Israel but many nations to be of Jacob natural and adopted.

D. 6. The seed of Jacob themselves, are nations accepted and blessed by grace as well others. Ver. 11.

Ver. 12.

4. The last special blessing is in confirming the inheritance promised, And the Land which I gave to Abraham and to Isaac, to thee will I give it; and to thy seed after thee will I give the land. Sept. same, To thy sonnes, Cald. Herein we have to consider.

1. The inheritance specified, that land which God had given to Abraham and Isaac, which was Canaan.

2. The entail made by God of it unto Jacob and his seed. To thee will I give it, &c. This is easy to understand in the letter, of the temporal inheritance; but the Spiritual must not be wholly excluded, typified by this land of rest.

Quest. How is this made good in the letter, seeing Jacobs seed do not enjoy it?

Ans. Gods promise faileth not; for, 1. He promised it upon condition of obedience. Deut. 28. They breaking with God, it was just to disinherit them. 2. Yet promises are, that in. Levitic. 26. 14. quities shall be turned away from Jacob, and a return shall yet be by a remnant. But this is Gods grace; the former was his justice. 31. 32. 33.

Note from it.

D. 1. The place first singled out for the Church of God to be gathered in, was Abrahams land, &c.

D. 2. Israel and his seed were intitled unto that place, as the Church of God, upon obedience.

D. 3. God points out this first place of his Church, that we might be certain of the state and condition of it. Ver. 12.

3. The last particular in Gods dealing with Jacob here is his discession from him, And God went up from him; in the place where he spake with him. Sept. same. The glory of the Lord, &c. Cald. Here we have the close of Gods appearing and blessing Jacob; this being done, God departs.

1. His departure is described, God went up or ascended; it is spoken after the manner of men for he that filleth heaven & earth can neither go up nor down, but in respect of the visible signals of his presence, as the cloud upon the tabernacle; so here it is likely was some visible token of Gods presence; the Caldees therefore saith, the glory of the Lord went up: In summe, God disappeared to him as to this manifestation.

2. The place of his departure, even that wherein he was talking with Jacob at Bethel: there God giveth him sensible comfort, and then leaveth him.

Learn here.

D. 1. God in the visible signals of his presence may appear and disappear unto his Saints.

D. 2. God in leaving his Saints, this way, goeth up higher than they, whence he may help them.

D. 3. Places of sensible enjoyment of God may be places of losing it.

D. 4. Saints must not expect to have visible or sensible appearances of God alwayes. Ver. 43.

2. Now

Ver. 14.

2. Now followeth Jacobs return of thanks to God which closeth the first general of his coming to Bethel from Shechem, which is exprest by three eminent signals.

1. His erection of a pillar, And Jacob set up a pillar, in the place where he talked with him, a pillar of stone. — Cald. אֵלָם, Sept. אֵלָם; an Eminent signal. In these also note.

1. Jacobs duty connected unto Gods discovery. And, that is, immediately God having finished this appearance unto him, Jacob is at his returns to God.

2. The work connected is one signal of Jacobs acknowledgment of Gods gracious aspect on him, and a memorial for thankfulness to him unto posterity. It comprehends.

1. The act, Erection, or constitution. 2. The object, a pillar, even a pillar of stone, this was but a signal of an heart-moment; it may be the same, that he set up at first, and at this time it might be fallen down; of which we read. Gen. 28. The matter of it being a stone, it notes duration.

3. The place where he set it, even where God did stand and speak with him, and in memorial of that gracious conference with him; wherein he speaketh to Jacobs heart for consolation.

2. His libation. — And he poured out a drink-offering thereon; and he poured oil thereon. Sept. and Cald. to same purpose. The scope of this action is, both to consecrate the memorial, and to be an Eucharistical offering to God. In Gen. 28. 18. No mention is of any thing poured out but oil. Here we have two expressions.

1. He poured a drink-offering, or an oil-offering; The Sept. שֶׁכֶּרֶת וְשֶׁחֶדֶן — This according to the law we find was of wine; Exod. 29. 40. Numb. 28. 7. It was called a pouring out, because it was of liquors as the mincha was of dry things: It is probable Jacob might do thus; and that in answer of his vow wherein he promised offerings and tithes.

2. He poured oil on it, as an unction for setting it apart as a memorial; not by any magical consecration, such as the Papists exercise in consecrating their places; and would ground it upon such examples as this, but foolishly and in vain. Ver. 14.

Ver. 15.

3. His nomination of the place, And Jacob called the name of the place where God spake with him, Bethel. Sept. and Cald. same. This is the third time we read of Jacobs imposition of this name upon the place and pillar, which imports, The house of God. The use of this also hath bin discovered to be monumental; not to tie God to places, but to acknowledge God in them, so long as he appear's therein unto his servants; of which hath bin spoken heretofore several times.

Quest. 1. It is queried, Was this stone the altar spoken of. Ver. 7?

Ans. 1. It seemeth clearly, this was another thing from the altar so lately erected, that was for sacrifice; this for a memorial.

2. It is probable to be the same monument spoken of. Gen. 28. And now readified upon this last appearance of God.

Quest. 2. Was not this place as holy as Jerusalem? Why was Ieroboam condemned, for renewing the use of it? 1. Kings. 12. 12. 13. Chapters.

Ans. 1. As to that time, wherein God appointed it, and accepted his true worship in it, there was no fault found in it; so long as it was under Jacobs use, first practised. 2. When God chose Jerusalem for the place and temple where he would appear, this & al places, ceased to be of that general & publick use; as to sacrifice, &c. 3. None of these places excluded from spiritual communion with God in any other. 4. When these places were superstitiously abused as they were, all God abhorred them. So Bethel became Beth-aven, the house of iniquity by Ieroboam, for which he justly was condemned. God forsook his Tabernacle in Shiloh, and laid waste his Temple at Jerusalem, when it was polluted with all abominations. No places now are distinguished, but onely for convenience of meeting: In all places God seeks for worshippers in spirit and truth. Ver. 15.

Learn from it.

D. 1. The Saints duty immediately must answer Gods discovery. This is just. So Jacob did.

D. 2. It becometh Saints to set up durable memorials of Gods appearance; then in stones; now in hearts.

D. 3. It is just to keep memorials of Gods sweet communications and speeches to mens soules.

D. 4. Wine and oyl-offerings, that is, cheerful thanksgivings are due to God upon his manifestations. V. 14.

D. 5. Nomination of places for Gods use, upon his direction and approbation hath bin lawful.

D. 6. In all places, even until now, where God will speak with men, it is fit to own God in them and to remember his name. V. 15.

The next general of this chapter contains the history of Jacobs second removal from Bethel to Ephrath, wherein we have to consider.

Ver. 16.

1. The journal recorded, And they journeyed from Bethel, & there was yet a little piece of ground to come to Ephrath. Cald. same. — & Jacob departing from Bethel pitched his tent beyond the tower of Gader, and it came to passe when he came neer to Chabratha to go to Ephrata, &c. Sept. Here the Seventy forsake the original; for however he came to the tow. of Gader, yet it was afterward in his motion from Ephrath. Ver. 21.

1. The connection here also is not to be overlook't. This motion is joyned with his late new habitation at Bethel, where he enjoyed much of God; yet hence he moveth, and as safely is to be presumed, he goeth not without Gods call, either special, or providential, seeing his fathers declining time might now move him to draw neerer to him; God doth not bind him to Bethel, nor is bound himself to places.

2. The journey itself is reported, wherein.

1. The term whence, of their motion, From Bethel, where he paid his vows, and was answered and comforted by God in his appearing.

2. The term whereunto, or the stage of this motion, was a place a little distant from Ephrath, a champion. There is much to do about the word, כנרת. The Sept renders it a proper name; but the Caldee and others render it a space of ground, some a mile, so that, the place of his pitching was in a champion, about a mile or such a matter from Ephrath.

3. The motion itself, They journeyed, or they went forward, even Jacob and all his family, according to the ability of the parties with him.

2. The events befalling Jacob at this stage.

1. Rachels travel, And Rachel travelled or bare child, and suffered hard things in child-bearing. — idusim. Sept. Aggravata est in partu suo. Cald. Here note:

1. Her present state, it was of labour or travel for child; nothing is spoken of conception before, and this is thought sufficient to be mentioned.

2. The difficulty of this condition, she was sorely oppressed in bearing, heavy paines and troubles were upon her, such as proved fatal. The bitterness of that sentence in ferrow thou shalt bring forth children, &c. — Ver. 16.

2. Her deliverance, where we have mentioned.

Ver. 17. 1. Her bitter paines again foregoing, And it was in her hard paines in her child-bearing. Sept. & Cald. same. Here are mentioned her last bitter throwes foregoing the birth; she suffered great torment in bearing.

2. The midwife's comfort in her pain, And the midwife said unto her, fear not. Cald. same. — idusim. Sept. Herein we may note.

1. The party comforting, the midwife, whose name is, from helping to bring forth; such as was designed to that office.

2. The party comforted, travelling and groaning Rachel, now full of paines and full of fears.

3. The consolation itself. Fear not, words of encouragement from pity and compassion, which becometh such persons in such conditions.

3. Her deliverance in the last words of the midwife, For this son also is to thee, Sept. and Cald. same. These are the words after her deliverance, for how els could the midwife know it was a son; and therefore clearly expresseth, that she was now delivered of this son, with the expiration of her soul. Ver. 17.

Thirdly. Rachels death is here recorded, whereabouts we have.

1. Something precedent, which was the naming of the child, and that we find two wayes declared.

1. By his mother ready to depart, And it was in the going out of her soul (for she died) And she called his name Ben-oni. The son of my travelling forrow. Sept. — The son of my grief. Cald. A grievous child to her. Wherein.

1. The season, a very little before her death, while she yet had time to speak, and under sense of languishings, for she expired shortly after.

2. The person naming was Rachel in the depth of her last paines, which wrought her death.

3. The imposition of the name, and she called his name Ben-oni, or the son of my forrow. This was in the present sense of her owne bitterness, not in affirming authority to leave the name upon the child; only declaring that it had cost her dear to bring him forth.

2. By his father; whose right it was to name him, And his father called him Benjamin. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein we have to note.

1. The imposer, Jacob the father of this son.

2. The name imposed, which import's, The son of the right hand; which may note, either the son of power as some, or the son beloved and deared, and set as it were at the right hand, as others. Psal. 80. 17. This was not to cross the mothers name, but rather to shew the endearedness of mother and child to him at this time; as if he had lost his right hand in Rachel, and yet it was restored in his son. — Ver. 18.

2. Her death accomplished, And Rachel died. Sept. and Cald. same. Her soul departed from her body as before expressed.

Fourthly. Her burial, And she was buried in the way to Ephrath, which is Bethlehem. Sept. and Cald. same. In these we may observe.

1. The last office of Jacob to Rachel, which was to interre her, she was buried doubtles by his care and appointment; and however no mourning is spoken of here, yet Jacob could not part with her without grief and bitterness; his respect to her afterward appears.

2. The

2. The place of her interment, was there about where she died. A providential visitation of her was eminent; for it's probable; Jacob meant to pitch his family before the time of her deliverance; but God ordered it otherwayes: in his journey she travelled and dieth; and hereupon her providential burial fell out; in the way to Ephrath there was she buried; not carried to Machpelah as others; it is likely dying in this condition, necessity made him speed the burial of her in that place. Jacob makes no difference in place of burial. The noted city adjoining hath two names Ephrath and Bethlehem. Neer this Benjamin was born, the only son born there in the land of Canaan to Jacob. Here also was Christ born; and here about, the poor infants were slain in the time of Herod; over whom their grand-mother Rachel is here brought in weeping because they were not. It was a place then memorable for great events. Mich. 5. 2. Matth. 2. 6. 17. 18. Jer. 31. 15. 19.

Ver. 20. 3. Jacobs resentment of this event in respect to Rachel being dead. And Jacob set a pillar upon her grave; that is the pillar of Rachels grave to this day, Sept. and Cald. same. Two things are here recorded of Jacobs work.

1. The erection, He set or established a pillar upon her grave. Herein we may consider.

1. The subject acting, Jacob the surviving husband of Rachel, deeply affected with the loss of a dear wife.

2. The act itself, where, 1. The work was but to set a pillar, or monument of remembrance upon her grave; which was doubtles of stone.

2. The use of it, which was to perpetuate the memory of Rachel, a monument of his love, and her desert.

2. The duration of it, That is the pillar of Rachels grave unto this day, Moses writes this in his time, and this continued to Sauls dayes. 1. Sam. 10. 2. And so it hath bin spoken of in latter times. No evil was in this act of Jacob. All this is reckoned to fall out in the 45th year of Rachel, in the 106 year of Jacob, in the 166 year of Isaac, & of the world, 2274. Thus far the history of Jacobs motion to Ephrath or Bethlehem. Ver. 20.

he removed from Ephrath, or Bethlehem to Edar. Wherein.

1. His journey is recorded to this third stage, And Israel journeyed, and stretched out his tent beyond the tower of Edar, Cald. same. — The Sept. leave out this verse wholly here, and mentions his pitching at Gader, Ver. 16. Herein note.
